NAZI FILMS

BY ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON, NOV.30-(AP)-THE ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN, JAMES E. MARKHAM, HAS GOT A BEAR--A NAZI BEAR--BY THE TAIL. AND HE DOESN'T KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH IT.

IT'S ALL ON ACCOUNT OF A BATCH OF GERMAN-MADS MOVIES THAT FLICKER UNEASILY IN THE CUSTODIAN'S POSSESSION.

ABOUT 1,150 OF THESE FEATURES, SHORTS AND TRAVELOGUES WERE TAKEN OVER, ALONG WITH A LOT OF OTHER GERMAN KNICKKNACKS, AFTER THE WAR STARTED.

THE QUESTION IS:

SHOULD THESE NAZI-MADE FILMS--ALL PRODUCED IN 1939 OR EARLIER --NOW BE RELEASED FOR CIVILIANS TO SEE?

EUGENE TILLEUX TOLD REPORTERS TODAY THIS QUESTION IS CAUSING MORE EXCITEMENT THAN ANY HOLLYWOOD KILLER-DILLER. TILLEUX, AS CHIEF OF THE COPYRIGHT SECTION FOR THE ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN, HAS DIRECT CHARGE OF THE MOVIES.

OFFHAND, TILLEUX SAID, NOBODY WOULD THINK THESE FILMS WOULD AROUSE MUCH INTEREST. THERE AREN'T MANY THEATERS IN THIS COUNTRY DEVOTED EXCLUSIVELY TO GERMAN MOVIES. DURING THE WAR THEIR NUMBER DWINDLED FROM 46 TO THREE, IN NEW YORK, MILWAUKEE AND CHICAGO.

THESE THEATERS HAVE BEEN OPERATING WITH A FEW FILMS RELEASED BY THE CUSTODIAN. BUT THE EXHIBITORS COMPLAINED THAT THEY NEEDED SOME FRESH, EVEN THOUGH OLD, STUFF. THEIR CUSTOMERS--MOST OF WHOM KNOW LITTLE OR NO ENGLISH--WANTED A CHANGE.

SO IT WAS DECIDED THAT ANOTHER GROUP OF THE GERMAN MOVIES SHOULD BE TURNED LOOSE. IT WAS SO ADVERTISED--AND THE CUSTODIAN CAUGHT HIS BEAR.

A WHAT-SHALL-WE-DO-ABOUT-IT MEETING YESTERDAY PUT ON RECORD SUCH DIVERSE ORGANIZATIONS AS THE DENTAL TECHNICIAN EQUITY, CHAPTER 101, OF NEW YORK CITY AND THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS OF BOSTON. THEY SAID NO, NO, NO.

SO DID REPS. PATTERSON AND HELEN GAHAGAN DOUGLAS, CALIFORNIA DEMOCRATS.

ON THE OTHER HAND, THURMAN ARNOLD, REPRESENTING THE AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION, SAID, RELEASE THEM BY ALL MEANS, ALL OF THEM. CIVIL LIBERTIES' VIEW IS THAT AN AMERICAN CAN TELL A NAZI RAT WHEN HE SMELLS ONE.

AN ADVISORY GROUP TOOK OVER THE QUESTION. BUT ITS REPORT PROBABLY WON'T BE READY FOR A WEEK.

IN THE MEANTIME, IF YOU HAVE AN OPINION, DON'T WRITE THE ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN.

HE'S GOT TOO MANY OPINIONS ALREADY.

COURT RULES HESS MUST STAND TRIAL WITH COLLEAGUES

Decision Is Made as Defense Tries in Vain to Break Testimony of General

VON PAPEN GAINS A POINT

DEC 2 1945

Keitel and Ribbentrop Counsel Unable to Discredit Account of Their Links to Crimes

Deluce

By The Associated Press.

NUREMBERG, Germany, Dec. 1—Rudolf Hess, self-confessed amnesia faker, was ruled fit to stand trial today, and then listened intently as defense attorneys failed to break down a German spy chieftain's testimony linking some of Hess' co-defendants with the worst horrors of Nazism.

NIGHT

British Lord Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence announced the International Military Tribunal's decision that Hess was "capable of standing trial," with no further medical examination necessary. Before the court opened, Hess had regaled his fellow defendants with the story of his lost-memory hoax.

Attorneys for Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, Hermann Goering and Joachim von Ribbentrop sought in vain to upset the story told by Maj. Gen. Erwin Lahousen, former officer of the German counter-intelligence, and first prosecution witness. General Lahousen had not mentioned Hess, and Hess' attorney put no questions to General Lahousen today.

Von Papen Gets Admission

But eight other German lawyers for three hours cross-examined General Lahousen, who declared yesterday that Hitler and the entire German High Command were responsible for atrocities on the eastern front.

The attorney for Franz von Papen, wily diplomat in the days of Nazi power politics, extracted from General Lahousen an expression of belief that von Papen "stayed on in a political capacity in order to exercise a mitigating influence" on Nazi policy.

Keitel's attorney, Otto Nelte, declared Keitel had denied General Lahousen's testimony that his client had ordered the assassination in 1940 of the French Gen. Maxime Weygand, and demanded written proof from General Lahousen.

General Lahousen replied that the order had been given verbally, but that he had been present "at a conference where Keitel asked me what happened about it."

The witness said that Keitel's orders to assassinate both General Weygand and Gen. Henri-Honoré Giraud never had been carried out by Admiral Wilhelm Canaris, Greek-born head of the German Army's counter-intelligence section, to which the witness was attached.

Keitel's Attorney Makes Slip

Keitel's attorney let slip an admission that the orders for the branding of Soviet war prisoners had been the "result of a terrible misunderstanding" at Hitler's headquarters. The attorney asked General Lahousen if such were the case, and General Lahousen replied that he did not know.

To von Ribbentrop's counsel, General Lahousen only reaffirmed that the former Foreign Minister had said in September, 1939, that Polish farms must be burned and Jews killed.

Goering's attorney strayed far from preceding testimony to inquire if General Lahousen had failed to report promptly the American landings in North Africa.

"Please don't make me responsible for my whole department," General Lahousen retorted. "This was not my affair."

Counsel for Ernst Kaltenbrunner, ailing former chief of Germany's criminal police, being tried in absentia, was stopped short in attempting to prove that his client had limited control over the Gestapo. General Lahousen recalled that he had met Kaltenbrunner only once—a day in Munich when two university students were executed for having distributed leaflets containing an appeal to the Army—and that Kaltenbrunner had spoken cynically of the students' fate.

General Lahousen denied knowledge of a protest that the attorney for Hans Fritzsche, chief of the German propaganda service, said his client had made in 1942 to Field Marshal Friedrich von Paul-

Hess Must Stay On Trial, War Court Rules

DEC 2 1945

NORGARD

Nurnberg, Dec. 1 (AP)—The International Military Tribunal ruled today that Rudolf Hess, who confessed he had been faking amnesia, must continue to stand trial with nineteen other Nazi leaders accused of war crimes.

DAY

Lord Justice Sir Goeffrey Lawrence, presiding, announced that no further mental examinations of Hitler's former deputy were necesary and that he was capable of standing trial.

Hess, who had read novels and paid scant attention to early portions of the trial, created a sensation yesterday when he told the court he had simulated loss of memory for "tactical" reasons and announced he would stand responsible for all his actions.

Talked With Others

Hess appeared much relieved by his confession and for the first time since the trial began engaged in lively conversation with other prisoners in the box just before the session opened.

Defense counsel got their first chance at cross-examination when the court recalled Maj. Gen. Erwin Lahousen, leading German army intelligence officer, whose testimony yesterday placed the blame for mass murder of Polish and Russian prisoners directly on Hitler and the High Command's chief of staff, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, one of the score of German leaders on trial.

Asked if he and other professed anti-Hitler military leaders knew the attitude of Franz von Papen, former German diplomat and one of the defendants, toward the Nazi war policies, General Lahousen replied:

"I recall that Canaris said they were negative." He referred to Admiral Wilhelm Canaris, German spy expert who was described as leader of a secret anti-Hitler military clique until his execution after the unsuccessful 1944 bomb plot against the Führer.

Heard Of Opposition

Lahousen, Austrian-born aide to Canaris, said that he had heard indirectly that Papen, like Canaris, had secretly opposed Hitler's war policies.

Questioned by Assistant British Prosecutor G. D. Roberts, Lahousen denied knowledge of the murder of 50 RAF flyers when they were recaptured after escaping from a German prison camp.

Keitel's attorney, Otto Nelte, in a long series of questions made little effort to dispute Lahousen's damaging testimony of yesterday concorning the high command's war-prisoner policy, but sought to gain admissions from the former intelligence officer that he had sabotaged Germany's war effort and was thus a traitor.

To this the Austrian-born general, who entered the Germany Army after Hitler's Anschluss in 1938, replied that he "stood for only what my conscience agreed with."

Austrian Military Leaders

Nelte unsuccessfully tried to gain an admission from Lahousen that Austrian military leaders favored the Anschluss, by which Austria was taken into the Reich.

Lahousen gesticulated vigorously as he declared that Keitel had demanded both military and political obedience from the army. Asked if the high command's fundamental attitude was military, he answered:

"It should have been, according to our opinion, but according to Keitel, Nazism came first. I don't know whether he got orders along that line, but certainly he ordered that, above all, our attitude must be National Socialist."

Political Viewpoint

Many of the army leaders felt, he added, that "everything was done from a political Nazi viewpoint and not objectively, from a military attitude."

Nelte declared that Keitel had denied Lahousen's testimony of yesterday that the high command chief had ordered the assassination in 1940 of French General Maxime Weygand, generalissimo at the time of France's defeat and later administrator for Marshal Pétain in North Africa, and demanded written proof from the witness.

"This order was given verbally by Canaris as coming from Keitel, but I was present at a conference and Keitel asked me what happened about it," Lahousen replied.

Never Carried Out

Lahousen said that orders from Keitel to assassinate Weygand and Gen. Henri Giraud, who later became the French leader in North Africa, were never carried out by Canaris. Greek-born head of the German Army's counterintelligence section.

Nelte asked: "If there was any plan to kill Weygand, how do you explain that he was later brought to Germany and was brought to a villa and given all military honors? How did it happen that nothing happened to him?"

Lahousen replied that the Nazi "attitude" varied and "some were highly thought of one moment and found in concentration camps the next"—an answer that Nelte reported "didn't hold water."

Nelte declared that Otto Abetz, German Ambassador to Vichy France, had conferred with Giraud after the French General's escape from a German prison and had asked him to return to voluntary imprisonment. Pointing out that d refused, Nelte rhetorically if it was not true that Keitel had declined to order him seized forcibly.

Ordered To Brand Russians

When Keitel's lawyer intimated that the order to brand Russian prisoners was "a terrible misunderstanding," Lahousen said he did not know that such was the case. Speaking of charges of mass executions of Polish prisoners in the Polish campaign, Nelte asked if it wasn't true that "the Wehrmacht had a different standpoint from the SS and SA troops?"

"Yes, at that time, it was true, I believe," Lahousen answered.

Taking over the cross-examination, Dr. Fritz Sauter, counsel for former Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, told Lahousen that Ribbentrop "in his capacity of Foreign Minister went to Keitel and pointed out that he—as protector of international rights—objected to the branding of Russian prisoners."

Report To The Police

The army officer merely replied that he didn't know about it.

Recalling Lahousen's testimony that Ribbentrop had declared in a conference with Hitler that Polish farms must be burned and "all Jews" killed, Sauter raised a burst of laughter in the crowded courtroom when he asked why such a matter had not been reported to the police.

"Why didn't Hitler make a report?" the Australian-born general reported sarcastically.

A dispute between American prosecutors and defense lawyers broke out when counsel for Reichsmarshal Herman Goering asked if the Nazi leader could personally question Lahousen. Justice Lawrence said that the tribunal would "retire" to determine whether the accused Nazi, as well as his lawyer, could crossexamine witnesses.

Protest From Jackson

Chief United States Prosecutor Robert H. Jackson strongly protested, declaring the trial "would be turned into a show" if the defendants themselves conducted the crossexamination.

"The defendants have the right to conduct their own defense but if they avail themselves of counsel, we submit that they are not entitled to be heard in person," Jackson said.

A few minutes later Justice Lawrence denied Goering's petition to crossexamine witnesses but said that the accused Nazis have the right to take the stand in their own defense and could also make statements at the end of the trial.

Gestapo Cooperation

Bringing the name of Canaris into the trial again Goering's attorney, Otto Stahmer, asked if it wasn't true that the German spy ring leader had "pleaded for closest co-operation" with Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler and had been warned by Goering that "he should not go so far."

"Yes," answered Lahousen, "but I know why. So as to know things."

Stahmer then asked why Lahousen failed to report American landings in North Africa. The general replied: "That was not my affair."

Asked if he had seen Storm Troopers used as guards for Russian prisoners Lahousen said: "Yes, I saw the SA actually kick Russian prisoners."

Fritzsche Appeal Claim

Under questioning by the counsel for Hans Fritzsche, deputy propaganda minister, Lahousen said he did not recall an appeal in 1942 to stop killing Russian prisoners which Fritzsche claims he made to Field Marshal Friedrich von Paulus, later captured at Stalingrad.

The court adjourned at 1.37 P.M. (7.37 A.M. EST) until Monday.

Fellow Nazis

Nuernberg, Dec. 1 (AP)—Gaunt-faced Rudolf Hess, childishly self-satisfied at getting the spotlight in the international war crimes trial, laid aside his novel today and amused his fellow Nazi defendants with his tale of faking amnesia before the world.

Hess had Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz and Erich Raeder shaking with laughter before the court session opened when he told them how he pretended loss of memory and partial insanity. All other defendants were absent yesterday when Hess made his sensational confession and most of them were convulsed with laughter when they learned of it for the first time today.

Followed Proceedings

Freed of further need of maintaining the absent-minded pose of a man who remembered nothing of the war years and his ruthless power as Hitler's deputy, Hess followed the court proceedings closely. Missing for the first time was the novel which he read during the opening days of the hearing.

Note To Hitler

Hess boasted of his skilled navigation on his mysterious flight to Britain four years ago when questioned briefly in his cell before the trial by Major Douglas Kelley, United States Army psychiatrist.

He confirmed reports that he had left a note to Hitler telling him he was going to appeal for peace in the hope of what he called saving civilization from Bolshevism. He told Kelley he wanted to make a direct appeal to Britain's King.

Goering Says He's Still Nazi; Would Follow Hitler Again

Hess Entertains

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 1 —(AP) Rotund Hermann Goering, on trial for his life before the International Military Tribunal, said flatly today that he was still a Nazi and that if he had a chance to try again he would "again support the fuehrer" as he knew him in 1933.

"As a representative of the system of government inaugurated by Adolf Hitler I stand ready to be judged," the former reichsmarshal said in reply to written questions presented through his attorney, Otto Stahmer, who also transmitted the reply.

"I consider myself a true paladin of my fuehrer. I was a disciple and a follower."

Stahmer indicated that Goering viewed with disapproval high placed German officials who sought refuge in the claim that they never were really Nazis.

To the question—"did you have any clashes with Hitler? If so, on what matters and when?"—Goering replied:

Lost His Place

"From 1942 on, radicals represented by Himmler and Bormann got the upper hand more and more and I receded into the background. It was not a question of my having any clash, but of losing the place I used to hold."

Goering in a subsequent statement elaborating on his relations with Hitler added this:

"During the years before the war we had few differences and these were purely minor matters, affecting details not principles. During the war, in the nature of things, differences ensued more frequently. After 1943 my influence with Hitler decreased and by 1944-45 practically disappeared. Our differences then were over foreign political, domestic and military matters."

"If you could start over again," he was asked, "would you support the fuehrer, the fuehrer prinzip (leadership principle) and National Socialism as postulated in Hitler's 26 points?"

He replied:

Naturally nobody ever stops learning. If I had to do it all over again, naturally, there are some things I would do differently. Fundamentally I would say the leadership principle and National Socialism were the only possible solution for Germany at the time. We had to get away from the multi-party system. In America, you have two parties. The British have two major parties. We, however, before 1933 had 20 odd parties. It just wouldn't work."

In a supplementary statement, he expanded on this:

"I should again support the fuehrer as I knew him when we took over reigning Germany," he asserted. "As to the leadership principle, I should of course not want it repeated with excesses but in its original moderate conception. Above all I should want to see incorporated an independent system of courts to which every citizen might take his troubles and where justice would be done him. As to the 26 points of the Nazi program, there is no party with principles to which every member subscribes in full. I, too, did not by any means subscribe to all. I am still a national socialist. I desire the elimination of multi-partisanship in politics. I am for community of our people (Volksgemeinschaft)."

DEC 2 19

Goering's present attitude on the tribunal's authority to try him was more mild than when, on the first day of the trial, he attempted to read a statement challenging its authority.

"Do you think the conduct of the trial has been fair thus far?" he was asked. "It is understood that you contested the authority of this court to try you. What kind of court do you think should handle this case and why?"

Says Court One-Sided

Goering: "I have the fullest and unreserved confidence in the members of the high tribunal as such. The President has conducted the proceedings in an exemplary manner and has shown that he stands objectively above all parties. This does not obviate the fact, however, that the court as constituted is one-sided, consisting as it does of members of the victorious nations only. I should have deemed truly international a court in which some neutrals and the loser were represented. It would be more equitable. But now that the court has spoken on this point, I bow to its decision."

In answering another question, Goering claimed he did everything he could to prevent the war. The question was: "Do you intend to summon defense witnesses? If so, whom?"

Goering: "Naturally I intend to request that certain witnesses be called, but it is too early now to indicate who they are to be. That depends on what the prosecution does and what turn the trial takes. One thing is certain, however, there are witnesses who can testify that I never desired aggressive warfare and, in fact, did everything possible to prevent the outbreak of this war."

In the courtroom, Goering has been the center of attention, nodding, laughing, grimacing and shaking his head at various points of evidence. He was asked: "It has been noted that from time to time, as a document is presented, you nod in apparent agreement. Does this mean that you agree as to the accuracy of the documents? That you agree with their contents?"

Goering: "When I nod it means that, of course, I agree, say, to the fact stated in a given document that I approved or participated in rearmament. Why should I deny it? The cannon, the airplanes, the guns were there weren't they? But I don't agree in the sense of the indictment, namely that I prepared for aggressive war.

"We have all earned the old Latin adage in school 'Si Vis Pacem Para Bellum' (If you want peace prepare for war). That's all I was after. Your President Truman, too, has stated that the United States must become strong militarily. But he denies all aggressive intent. We, too, armed only for the sake of a strong Germany. We realized people can be strong only if they have a strong armed force. That's what I deduct from those documents."

The last two questions dealt with the showing of horror films on Germany's concentration camps. Goering was asked "What was your reaction to the atrocity film shown in court Thursday?"

Was Horrified

He replied: "As every other human being, I was horrified. It is true that I started concentrations. But my purpose was a different one —I wanted to re-educate political recalcitrants and hold them until they became imbued with the concepts of National Socialism. From 1934 on, Himmler ran them. He carefully kept all of us away from them. I can truthfully assert that I had no idea such horrible things were happening there."

The last question was.

"Your policy in reference to Jews seems vacillating. You delivered strong anti-Semitic speeches, yet you and your wife are credited with having helped individual Jews. Just where do you stand in reference to anti-Semitism?"

Goering: "I was never in harmony with the manner and extent to which anti-Semitism was put into practice in Germany. I, therefore, helped where I could to prevent the worst injustices. I need but refer to Leo Blech to illustrate my point. (Blech had been conductor of the state opera under the Kaiser as well as under the Weimar Republic, and Goering continued him in office until Blech decided to emigrate to Sweden.) As to the economic measures taken against Jews after November, 1938, it was not my intention that Jews should be dispossessed altogether."

CLAIMS MADE FOR UNO SITE

Eight U.S. Delegations Appear Before Subcommittee

J. PARRIS

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—Eight American delegations appeared before a United Nations subcommittee today and offered territory for the permanent headquarters of the world-peace organization.

The delegations, heard in alphabetical order, represented Atlantic City, the Black Hills of South Dakota, Boston, Chicago, Denver, Newport, R. I., Philadelphia and San Francisco.

Bids from sixteen other communities were submitted by letter.

Secret Ballot Proposed

After the groups had spoken, Dr. Stoyan Gavrilovic, chief Yugoslav delegate to the United Nations Preparatory Commission and chairman of the subcommittee, said:

"These representatives have come in a state of friendliness and helpfulness and we appreciated it very much. We realize that you all have every desire—as you have shown here today—to do all that you can to promote the United Nations Organization."

A Canadian spokesman porposed that the UNO Preparatory Commission hold a secret ballot to decide which city should be chosen instead of balloting first on whether the organization should be located in Eurpoe or the United States—a matter still unsettled.

A motion to this effect, he said, has been submitted to the commission now in session and will be brought up for debate soon.

NIGHT

22 U. S. CITIES BID FOR UNO CAPITAL

J. PARRIS

London, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—Delegations from twenty-four North American communities — twenty-two in the United States and two in Canada—began presenting oral arguments today on the merits of their respective localities as a permanent site of the United Nations Organization.

DAY

DEC 2 1945

A sub-committee of the United Nations Preparatory Commission, receiving the delegations in alphabetical order, heard first from A. W. Phillips, representing the Governor of New Jersey, who presented the case for Atlantic City. Phillips explained the facilities of Atlantic City "without glamourizing our city," included a trans-Atlantic airport and what might be termed "an international island" for the permanent headquarters. The island referred to was Brigantine, N. J.

Ralph Bellamy of Rapid City, S. D., appearing in the interest of the Black Hills site, said his section was prepared to offer 100 square miles "tax free and independent of the sovereign State of South Dakota."

Boston's case was presented by Gov. Maurice J. Tobin of Massachusetts and Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Barnet Hodes, heading the Chicago delegation in the absence of Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who was forced by pressing business to return to the United States, said that his city, "understanding the world importance of the organization," extended "an earnest and warm welcome."

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—A subcommittee of the United Nations Preparatory Commission today began hearing deputations from more than a score of American and Canadian cities which are offering sites for the permanent UNO headquarters.

DAY

The sub-committee — most of whose members have declared themselves in favor of establishing the headquarters in the United States—began hearing the delegations in alphabetical order, starting with Atlantic City, N.J.

Delegates from Australia, Colombia, Cuba, Egypt, Iran, the Netherlands and Yugoslavia make up the subcommittee.

Trusteeship Issue Studied

LONDON, Dec. 1 (AP).—A member of the American delegation to the United Nations preparatory commission said today that Washington has been asked for instructions on the trusteeship issue which other delegates said involved the fate of American-won island in the Pacific.

The question of how far Russia should participate in deciding the future of such islands, it was reported, has been at the bottom of conference debates on the question of establishing a temporary trusteeship committee to administer former League of Nations mandates and captured territories.

Russia has opposed creation of a temporary committee on the grounds that no holders of mandates have come forward offering them for United Nations trusteeship administration, and hence the committee has nothing to do.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin suggested in an address tonight that the "common man" be allowed to vote in a "world parliament" on whether he wanted to go to war.

"The common man will not go to war," he said, "if he is given the chance to determine the issue."

Amery To Die December 19

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—The execution of John Amery, sentenced to death at Old Bailey Court after he pleaded guilty to high treason this week, has been provisionally fixed for December 19.

Amery, son of Leopold Amery, Secretary of State for India in Winston Churchill's Cabinet, was a Nazi propaganda broadcaster.

Sarah Churchill Out Of Military Service

London, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—Sarah Churchill became the second of former Prime Minister Winston Churchill's three daughters to leave military service when she was demobilized yesterday as a sergeant leader after four years in the Women's Auxiliary Air Force. She said she hopes to resume her stage career.

Mary, Churchill's youngest daughter, still is a junior commander in the Army Transport Service (equivalent to the Wacs). Diana, the eldest, served as an officer in the Women's Royal Naval Service (equivalent to the Waves).

German Ship in Britain

Vessel Is Reported Unloading Secret Machinery

LONDON, Dec. 1 (AP).—The British Press Association reported tonight that the Elisabeth, German cargo ship flying a German flag and carrying a German crew, arrived at Barrow-in-Furness, Lancashire, this week after a secret voyage from Kiel.

The agency said that machinery of an undisclosed kind is being removed from the ship by navy personnel and members of the staff of Vickers Armstrong, Ltd., all of whom were sworn to secrecy.

Official sources declined to comment.

Bandits, Terrorists Rounded Up In Berlin

Berlin, Dec. 1 (AP)—Berlin police, with the aid of Allied military police, rounded up a gang of 70 bandits and terrorists in an all-night gun battle around Anhalter Station as part of their efforts this week to smash the underworld hiding in Berlin's ruins.

The gang had been looting refugees and baggage cramming the station.

After resistance had been broken and remnants of the gang arrested, the police found 1,000,000 marks in cash, 200 pounds of butter and quantities of food and clothing which had been amassed to peddle to the black market.

The prominent members of this gang, police said, were former members of the SS and SA, and Hitler Youth toughs who had been responsible for a wave of robberies.

76 German Industrialists Seized by British in Ruhr

E. CHAMBERLIN

Iserlohn, Germany, Dec. 1 (AP). British security police, striking secretly last night and early today in simultaneous raids throughout the Ruhr, arrested 76 German industrialists, described by a senior British officer as "leading members of the most dangerous class in Germany."

Hundreds of British troops and special investigators staged the precision raids. The czars of Germany's multibillion dollar steel and iron industry, surprised in their luxurious mansions, face possible charges as war criminals.

Round Up Lasts Four Hours

The round up, which began at 11 P.M. and continued until 3 A.M. in Dortmund, Essen, Duisberg, Duesseldorf and other centers, caught the industrialists in circumstances ranging from drinking champagne to taking stomach pills before retiring.

One director of the August Thyssen steel works was found in a bedroom with the blond 24-year-old daughter of a baron.

So well planned were the raids that only seven on the original arrest list escaped. A British intelligence officer said it was only a question of time until these would be arrested and sent to an internment camp with the others or indefinite detention. Among those rounded up were eight directors and advisers of the vast Krupp works.

Preliminary To Reconstruction

The British spokesman said the raids constituted a partial application of the Potsdam policy that German militarism and nazism must be wiped out. Removal of the industrialists "from the world of affairs," he said, "is a necessary preliminary to the reconstruction of German society."

Volumes of documents and records of the whole gigantic Ruhr industry, which equipped Hitler's war machine, are in the hands of British and American intelligence experts, the officer said. After study has been completed he indicated some of the steel magnates would be charged as war criminals.

Most of the industrialists, described by the British spokesman as "a class making for war and the suppression of democratic liberties of the people," already were in bed when the raids started.

Expected Nuernberg

Werner Carp, millionaire director of the Guttehoffnunghutte steel combine at Düsseldorf, aroused from his sleep in a silk-sheeted bed, asked: "When am I going to Nuernberg?"

Eberhard Letixerant director of Socium Steel, refused to open the door of his castle, and a British soldier had to break in a side door. The soldier said the "luxurious mansion was like a hothouse. There was a big stock of coal in the basement and plenty of food and wine—so much it was like a shop."

Otto Meier, in charge of foreign sales for Mannesmann toolworks, dressed calmly while his nervous, trembling wife forgot herself and undressed before a blushing British sergeant.

Rat Poison Taken From One

A bottle of rat poison was taken from Walter Eichorst, another director of August Thyssen.

The British officer, explaining the arrests, said that money and influence of the German heavy industry set Hitler on his road to power and "without it he could not have succeeded."

"The weight of the German heavy industry was behind the Nazi party even before its accession to power," he said, "and the authority and destructive ambition of the party before and during the war years were to a very large extent derived from the existing strength and ambition of German industry."

Once the industrialists had given their support to Hitler, he said "the interests of German industry and of the Nazi party were inseparable."

"These men have not been arrested because they rose to high rank in the party," he declared. "Many of them did not. But the understanding between them and the Nazis was complete. Their removal will be welcomed by all enemies of nazism and will contribute to prevent the resurgence of the type of grasping nationalism for which they stood."

76 Reich Steel Leaders Are Arrested

Iserlohn, Germany, Dec. 1 (AP)—Seventy-six steel magnates representing Ruhr industries worth billions of dollars were arrested at their homes last night in a series of raids by hundreds of British security police and troops.

The raids began at 11 P.M. and were so thorough that only eight of the original list of 84 marked for arrest were not apprehended. Picking them up was only a question of time.

The industrialists were caught in circumstances ranging from drinking champagne to taking stomach pills before going to bed.

Work Director Embarrassed

A director of the August Thyssen steelworks was embarrassed when the British said they found him in a bedroom with the blond 24-year-old daughter of a baron.

Fritz Baum, manager of the Ruhr gas utility in Essen, was drinking champagne with his wife and two friends. Rat-poison pills were taken from Walter Eichorst, another director of the Thyssen works.

Dr. Karl Lipp, head of the purchasing department of the Hoesch steel combine of Dortmund, was given permission to play a bedtime lullaby on the violin to his son before being taken away.

None Resists

Most of the industrialists were in bed and all came quietly, police said. The arresting parties operated on information partly supplied by an American intelligence detachment at Duesseldorf.

Senior British intelligence officers said the magnates would be transferred to an internment camp in the British zone, where they will be interrogated and masses of documents relating to the Ruhr industries will be studied with the possibility of charging some of the men with war crimes.

Those arrested included such prominent figures in German heavy industry as Heinz Gehm, chairman of the Deutsche Ed Elstahlwerke; Walther Schwede, director of the Reichsvereinigung Stahlwerke, and Friedrich von Beulow and Dr. Edward Hudremont, directors of Krupps.

Also Arrested

Others rounded up included Rudolf Siederleben, managing director of Otto Wolff K.G.; Arthur Hennecke, director of Mitteldeutsche Stahlwerke and of Friedrich Flick K.G., and Dr. Guenther Henle, director of Kloeknerwerke A.G.

A senior British officer described the raids as part of the application, by the Allied Control Commission, of the policy of eradicating German militarism and Nazism.

The weight of heavy German industry was behind the Nazi party, even before its accession to power, he said, "and the authority and destructive ambition of the party before and during the war years were, to a large extent, derived from the existing strength and ambition of German industry."

SOME GERMANS CALLED THREAT

Continual Vigilance Needed, According To AMG

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 1 (AP)—An American Military Government report asserted today that a "dangerous and unhealthy element still exists in Germany, and that mechanized troops and armored cars were ready to deal with "any emergency that may arise."

"Despite enormous progress" in the de-Nazification program, certain Germans—particularly those indoctrinated as Hitler youths—are a constant threat demanding continual vigilance, the report said.

Hostile Incidents Localized

A growing boldness has been evident in deliberate attempts to sabotage the American de-Nazification program, it stated, and a disgruntled attitude toward the purge of Nazis from government and industries has spread even to clergymen as well as business circles.

"So far, hostile incidents and feeling have been localized and widely scattered, without trace of organized central direction," the report continued.

"The strongest residue of Nazi philosophy is present among younger people," with women retaining "more of the Nazi attitude than men; white-collar workers more than laborers, and nonunion members more than former members of trade unions."

Picture Of Germany Drawn

The report drew this picture of Germany, as of six months after its surrender:

"Despite enormous progress made so far, thorough de-Nazification of Germany is still not finished.

"Clear and unpleasant evidence" has been uncovered "that a section of the German population" still believes in the things Hitler stood for.

Bitterness Betrayed

"These Germans continue to distrust and hate democratic principles and institutions, although they are afraid to take overt action. Their reaction to the de-Nazification program has betrayed a combination of bitterness and despair, as they scramble to find loopholes through which to escape.

"Comprising many who were indoctrinated as Hitler youth, these Germans constitute a potentially dangerous and unhealthy element which must bear constant surveillance and watchful vigilance."

Lutherans Seek To Aid Germans

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 1 (AP). American Lutherans have applied to Washington for permission to extend relief to the Germans, Dr. S. C. Michelfelder, American representative of the Lutheran World Convention, said today.

"It is not a question of advocating a so-called soft peace," Dr. Michelfelder said in an interview, "but rather of granting aid to Germans who are not Nazis, so that they can help themselves."

An organization known as Lutheran Relief Inc., has already been incorporated in New York, he said, for providing aid to Lutheran churches throughout Europe. Restrictions, however, prevent sending anything to Germany, Finland, Hungary or Austria.

Need For Christianity

Citing the need for the "re-Christianization of Germany," Dr. Michelfelder said, "if we want to de-Nazify Germany, we must offer something better, and the church has got it."

"I think we can be humane and still just," he said. "We don't want to coddle the Germans, but we want the children to grow up to admire and not to hate us. You can't influence people politically or economically by a starvation policy."

Dr. Michelfelder, who is making a tour of Germany conferring with leading Protestant clergymen, said that 74 "Swiss barracks" have already been bought in Switzerland by the World Council of Churches for shipment throughout Europe—some to Germany—if the Army can provide transportation.

France To Vote Today On Nationalization Plan

Paris, Dec. 1 (AP)—France's Constituent Assembly will meet in special session tomorrow to vote on the proposed nationalization of the Bank of France and four major deposit banks amid indications the legislature may demand that additional banks be put under state control.

The Communist and Socialist parties favored extension of the nationalization measure to include an additional seven business banks and perhaps another deposit bank in addition to the four included in the project presented by General de Gaulle's Cabinet.

Business banks, differing from deposit banks, carry on extensive relations with banks abroad.

French Bank Plan Change Is Requested

Paris, Dec. 1 (AP)—France's three major parties submitted counter-proposals today to the Government's project for the nationalization of banks and credits.

Spokesmen for the Communists, Socialists and Popular Republican Movement (MRP) appeared before the assembly appointed finance commission and outlined various modifications.

The entire French press gave the Government proposition first place on its front pages today, but there was little editorial comment.

To Offer Amendments

Earlier, the MRP had expressed general approval of the Government plan and urged that its application to the four great "national banks" be speeded up.

Party members said they would offer some amendments to the plan when it comes up for debate by the Assembly tomorrow.

The program envisages the immediate nationalization of the Banque de France, whose shareholders would be reimbursed with negotiable bonds. Purchase of stock in the four other banks—Credit Lyonnais, Societe General du Commerce et de l'Industrie, Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris and Le Banque Nationale Poure le Commerce et l'Industrie—would be spread over a 50-year period, beginning January 1, 1947.

TROOPS REDEPLOYED

Paris, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—The United States Seventy-fifth and Seventy-ninth Infantry and Twelfth Armored Divisions, and part of the Thirty-sixth Infantry Division were on the high seas today headed home from Europe, while two others were in port areas preparing to leave and another planned to move to a port within a week. This was the redeployment boxscore:

Thirty-sixth Infantry—First elements at sea and remainder in the Calais staging area at Marseille.

Eighty-ninth Infantry—In the Le Havre staging area. Five thousand of its men will be shuttled to the United Kingdom on December 4 and December 7 on their way home, while the remaining 10,000 will be shipped directly from Le Havre at a date not yet fixed.

Ninetieth Infantry—Arriving today at Calais, with final elements due there by tomorrow.

Twenty-sixth Infantry—Scheduled to arrive at Calas from Camp Pittsburgh in the Oise base section of the first week in December.

Divisions alerted for shipment home but not yet moved up through the redeployment centers are the Twenty-ninth, 100th Eighty-fourth and Eightieth Infantry; Eighty-second Airborne, and Second Armored.

De Gasperi Opens Parley

To Form Italian Cabinet

Liberals Warn Against Bowing to Demands of Leftists

ROME, Dec. 1 (AP).—Foreign Minister Alcide de Gasperi today began attempts to form a new Italian government at conferences with Count Carlo Sforza, Vittorio Orlando and Ivanhoe Bonomi.

De Gasperi was invited by Crown Prince Humbert to form a government to succeed that of Premier Ferruccio Parri. Sforza, Orlando and Bonomi have been mentioned as possible ministers without portfolio in the new regime.

Meanwhile the Liberal party, which provoked Parri's downfall last week by withdrawing from his government, warned it might not participate in the new cabinet if the Leftists gained all their demands, particularly—that for the key Ministry of the Interior.

Polish Troops Leaving Italy

ROME, Dec. 1 (AP).—The first trainload of Polish troops who have expressed a desire to return home from Italy has left Caserta. The contingent, numbering 1,000, is part of 14,000 Poles scheduled to return home. The men served in the Polish 2d Corps, under the British 8th Army.

Nazi General Who Ordered Yanks Killed Is Executed

Aversa, Italy, Dec. 1 (AP)—German Gen. Anton Dostler was shot to death by a firing squad today for ordering the execution of fifteen American soldiers captured behind the German lines in Italy in March, 1944.

Dostler, the first German general to die for war-crime participation in Western Europe, was convicted in October by a United States court martial; which disregarded his defense plea that in ordering the executions he was carrying out the commands of higher officers.

Holding himself stiffly erect in the prisoner stockade the German general died without flinching before a firing squad of United States soldiers.

The fifteen American soldiers were captured and executed without trial after they had landed behind German lines near La Spezia in a daring raid to blow up a railroad tunnel.

Shouting "Long live Germany," the 54-year-old infantry general was tied to a post before the firing squad. Two minutes after twelve bullets pierced his chest, Dostler was pronounced dead by Capt. A. N. Liberman, of Bangor, Maine.

Others Executed

British Army Headquarters, Germany, Dec. 1 (AP)—Capt. Heinz Eck, Lieut. August Hoffman, Naval Surgeon Walter Weissphennig and three of the crew of a German submarine were executed yesterday by a firing squad for the killing of survivors of the British freighter Peleus, torpedoed in the South Atlantic in March, 1944.

They were sentenced to death by a British military court at Hamburg in mid-October.

French Mission in Moscow

MOSCOW, Dec. 1 (AP). — A French delegation arrived by plane today from Paris to discuss proposals for a trade treaty between France and the Soviet Union. The delegation will also present the French point of view on international control of the Ruhr and the Rhineland.

SWEDEN PRESSES GERMAN REMOVAL

1,300 Former Soldiers Placed Aboard Russian Ship

Stockholm, Dec. 1 (AP)—Thirteen hundred former German Army soldiers had been loaded on board the Russian transport Kuban at Tralleborg by noon today, and Swedish authorities pushed extradition of others of the 2,700 Germans, Balts and Poles being turned over to [illegible].

An Austrian captain hanged himself at Rinkaby internment camp where removal operations began this morning, bringing the two-day total of suicides among the internees to three. More than 100 have attempted suicide, while 500 others are suffering from the effects of a hunger strike which started a week ago in protest to an order turning the former soldiers over to the Russians.

In two of the four camps from which the men were being removed, Germans slashed themselves with knives, razors, and bits of glass.

It is uncertain when the internees in hospitals as a result of the self-inflicted wounds and the hunger strike [illegible] removed.

GROGAN GET. [illegible]ZE STAR

Public Relatio[illegible]fficer Lef Headquarters for Combat

VIENNA, Dec. 1 (AP)—Col. Stanley J. Grogan of Washington, an Army public relations officer, received the Bronze Star today from Gen. Mark Clark for heroic action on Sept. 11, 1944, near Pistoia, Italy.

Colonel Grogan, who preferred the front to his headquarters desk job during the Italian campaign, was ambushed by a German patrol while taking a party of correspondents on a tour. He took command of three armored vehicles in the area and engaged in a fight of several hours, finally driving the Germans into the hills.

The citatoin said:

"His heroic actoins were responsible for the safety of his party and the death and capture of several enemy soldiers."

Greek Premier Rejects Demand by Communists

Refuses to Broaden Regime to Include E. A. M. Men

ATHENS, Dec. 1 (AP).—Premier Themistokles Sophoulis today rejected a demand by the K. K. E. (Communist) newspaper, "Rizo Fastis," for inclusion of E. A. M. (Leftist) representatives in his new government. He said: "My government does not need broadening, as it has quite strong popular backing."

At the same time, a K. K. E. E. A. M. delegation under George Siantos, calling on Vice-Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos and Foreign Minister John Sophianopoulos, insisted on large-scale changes in the armed forces and asked removal of certain ministers, whom they accused of "showing no eagerness in supporting democratic solutions."

The Supreme Military Command ordered all persons held on charges of being involved in the 1943-'44 insurrectionist movements in the Middle East released from Athens milit[illegible] jails.

YANKS QUIT PILSEN; 300 TAKE BRIDES

PILSEN, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 1—(AP) American soldiers gave this city back to Czechoslovakia today after more than 300 of them had found Czechoslovak brides and there was a rush to the altar when departure became imminent.

The last marriage was that of Lt. Philip G. Palmer of Tucson, Ariz., to Olga Skala of Prague.

The American troops withdrew into Germany on schedule.

The Russian occupation army which is much larger and has further to go, is leaving daily and the prospect is that soon only Czech uniforms will be seen.

MARSHAL TITO GIVEN VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

BELGRADE, Dec. 1—(AP) The Yugoslav parliament today gave Marshal Tito a unanimous vote of confidence and refused the resignation of his cabinet, which he submitted as a formality following the creation of the Yugoslav federated republic.

NIGHT

Tito offered the resignation of his cabinet with the explanation that his government was responsible now only to the Yugoslav people, while the cabinet had been formed under an agreement between the committee of national liberation and the Yugoslav government in London.

Vladimir Nazor, president of the Croatian parliament, moved that the resignation not be accepted and instead suggested a vote of confidence.

Hungarian Food Crisis Reported

Budapest, Dec. 1 (AP)—Premier Zoltan Tildy told parliament today that Hungary had only enough bread supplies to last until the middle of January and said there was a similar shortage of fats and other provisions.

Tildy said everyone whose presence in Budapest was not imperative would be asked to move out into the country where the food situation is more favorable.

Albania To Vote Today Minus Negative Ballots

L. S. CHARGES

Tirana, Albania, Dec. 1 (AP)—Albanians will vote tomorrow for a constituent assembly in an election limited to candidates of Premier Enver Hoxha's National Democratic Front, with no negative ballots permitted.

NIGHT

On eve of the vote opposition leaders declared they had planned to distribute pamphlets criticizing the elections as undemocratic, but had canceled the plan because, they said, they were informed that any opposition action would result in "slaughter." Opposition leaders did not elaborate on how the information came to them.

Opposition groups said the pamphlets charged that Albania is dominated by Generalissimo Stalin and by Marshal Tito, of Yugoslavia, and that all the Democratic Front candidates were Communists.

Colonel General Hoxha and his entire Cabinet are candidates. The 120-member assembly will determine the future form of the Albanian Government and the method for selecting its head.

Albanian Election Pamphlets Withheld

Tirana, Albania, Dec. 1 (AP)—Leaders of the opposition to Premier Enver Hoxha's "National Democratic Front" told the Associated Press today that they had prepared pamphlets criticizing tomorrow's elections as undemocratic, but had withheld distribution after being informed that any opposition action would lead to "slaughter."

DAY

Opposition leaders said the pamphlets would have broadcast the accusation that Albania is completely dominated by Generalissimo Stalin and Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito, and the allegation that the "Democratic Front candidates are all Communists."

"Only One Ticket"

Albanians will elect a constituent assembly, but they have only the choice of voting for Hoxha's "National Democratic Front"—the only party on the ticket—or not at all. No negative votes will be permitted.

The opposition group charged that "terrorism, brutality and torture" are being inflicted on the Albanians in the suppression of freedom of speech and press.

Resignations Talked in Cairo

CAIRO, Dec. 1 (AP)—Three Egyptian Cabinet Ministers were said today to have threatened to resign unless Great Britain agreed to evacuate her troops from the country immediately. Makram Ebeid Bey, Minister of Finance, was reported to have threatened the resignations of himself, the Minister of National Defense and the Minister of Supplies.

PREMIER OF IRAN EXPECTED TO QUIT

Pro-Soviet Successor Seen; Russians Leaving Tehran

Tehran, Dec. 1 (AP)—The resignation of Premier Mahmed Hakimi in favor of a pro-Russian leader was rumored in government circles tonight after the Russians had begun a surprise evacuation of Tehran.

NIGHT

These reports said Hakimi would resign within a week and probably would be replaced by the pro-Soviet Ghavam Saltaneh, former Iranian Premier.

[In London the Iranian Ambassador said he had not heard of the resignation report, but he did not appear surprised. Of Saltaneh he said: "The Russians always wanted him in office."]

Russians Quit Railway Station

Russian troops completely evacuated the railway station, communications center and private billets, including the military headquarters, in a withdrawal from Tehran that began Thursday night.

The reports that Hakimi would resign followed the replacement of the Tehran mayor, Ghulam Hussain Ebterhaj, by the Minister of Posts and Telegraph, Mahmud Nahriman, described as a Soviet sympathizer.

Government circles said that four other officials would be replaced.

[The Iranian Ambassador in London said that the Leftists in Tehran, who "represent the Russian view, have always been dissatisfied with the mayor, always attacking him."]

Reply To Soviet Note Due Today

Hakimi was scheduled to reply tomorrow in the National Assembly to a Soviet note denying passage of Iranian troops to the northwest trouble grounds of Azerbaijan province. The Soviet note asserted that "fighting and bloodshed would break out" if Iranian troops entered the territory, and that the Soviet Government would be forced to bring in additional troops.

The note denied Russia was intervening in the political or economic affairs of Iran and described as untrue allegations that the Soviet Government had given help to the Kurds in the north.

Russians Deny Iran Charge

MOSCOW, Dec. 1 (AP).—Tass (Soviet news agency) dispatches today said that Russians in Iran had denied Iranian allegations of Soviet interference in activities in the northern part of the country and declared that the Soviet government at no time exercised any control over Iranian citizens.

Tass said the Russians charged that the Iranians had not lived up to the tripartite treaty of 1942 in several instances, especially in connection with maintaining order in Iranian territory.

Iranian authorities, Tass added, had interfered with the punishment and sentences of persons convicted of breaking the peace in the Soviet occupation zone, plundering Soviet property and even killing Red Army soldiers.

Explaining Soviet reasons for refusing admission of Iranian troops into the Soviet occupation zone, Tass said this was the Russian position:

"It should be taken into consideration that if additional Iranion troops were brought into these northern districts—troops additional to the Iranian military units and gendarmes already there—this will stimulate more disorders and perhaps even bloodletting.

"In this event the Soviet would be compelled to bring into Iran additional reinforcements to keep order and assure protection of Soviet garrisons."

TEHRAN EVACUATED BY RUSSIAN TROOPS

Quit Military Headquarters and Rail Station in Surprise Move—Negotiations With U. S. on Korean Barrier Opened.

Tehran, Nov. 30 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The Russians began carrying out a surprise evacuation of Tehran last night. The railway station, communications centers and private billets including the military headquarters were completely evacuated.

The Governor of Azerbaijan, appointed recently by the central Iranian Government, arrived in the provincial capital of Tabriz today from Tehran in a plane put at his disposal by Soviet authorities.

Meanwhile, the Iranian Foreign Ministry said the Russian note refusing passage of Iranian troops into trouble spots of northwestern Iran asserted that "fighting and bloodshed would break out" if Iranian troops entered the territory and that the Soviet Government would be forced to bring in additional soldiers.

Tass Confirms Text of Note.

[A Tass dispatch broadcast by the Soviet radio and recorded in London confirmed the Iranian text and commented that the Russian note declared the tripartite treaty of 1942 "was not always observed by the Iranian side in its part concerning the maintenance of internal order on Iranian territory." Expanding this statement, the broadcast said: "Behavior of some representatives of military and gendarmerie detachments by far not always contributed to the establishment of peace and order in the districts to which they went, and last year appropriate representations weer made to the Iranian Government on this matter."]

The note denied that Russia was intervening in the political or economic affairs of Iran and termed untrue allegations that the Soviet Government had given help to Kurds of that region.

Red Comment On "Order"

A Tass dispatch broadcast by the Soviet radio and recorded in London confirmed the Iranian text and commented that the Russian note declared the three-power treaty of 1942 "was not always observed by the Iranian side in its part concerning the maintenance of internal order on Iranian territory."

"Behavior of some representatives of military and gendarmerie detachments by far not always contributed to the establishment of peace and order in the districts to which they went, and last year appropriate representations were made to the Iranian Government on this matter," the broadcast said.

British Blame Indonesians in Atrocity Cases

Discover Four Mutilated Bodies in Shallow Grave; R. A. F. Pounds Artillery

Batavia, Java, Dec. 1 (AP)—British planes pounded again today at Indonesian artillery outside Ambarawa, while naval guns were reported shelling headquarters of the Nationalist forces besieging a big Allied internment camp there.

Meanwhile, the British announced discovery of the multilated, naked bodies of four Englishmen and possibly eighteen Indian soldiers in a shallow grave at Bekassi, 12 miles west of Batavia. An Indonesian woman said Indonesians had hacked the men to death.

Mosquito Bomber Down

The Dutch news agency Aneta said British warships in Semarang harbor shelled the Indonesian headquarters in the Ambarawa area. The RAF [illegible]ped gun positions from [illegible] Indonesians had pumped shells into Ambarawa crowded with rescued civilian internees and former war prisoners.

Aneta said one RAF Mosquito bomber had been shot down or had crashed near Bandoeng, with the bodies of its pilot and navigator found by Japanese troops near the blazing wreckage of a vehicle the plane had been ordered to strafe.

Reprisals Reported

In the southern part of Bandoeng, 75 miles southeast of Batavia, some Indonesians were reported taking reprisals against Europeans and Eurasians, the British said, and while the Indonesians have carried out a partial evacuation of the northern part of the city, some looting continues.

Approximately 1,000 internees were moved to the northern part of the town and 600 were transferred from another danger area north of the railway station.

British troops, supported by Indian-manned Japanese tanks, reopened the road between Bandoeng and Soekaboemi, encountering slight opposition in which five Indian troops were wounded.

The bodies discovered near Bekassi were believed to be those of survivors of a transport plane which crashed about eight miles from the burial scene.

An Indonesian woman who led the British to the burial spot said the men were led out of jail cells in Bekassi and hacked to death by about fifty Indonesians brandishing swords, knives and spears. The appearance of the bodies tended to confirm her story. Five Englishmen and twenty Indians were missing after the crash.

A released prisoner from Bekassi said here that he saw from his cell window four Europeans and eighteen Indians tied to stakes and killed with knives and spears last Sunday.

The Indonesians charged atrocities by the Dutch, and presented to correspondents a list of names and addresses of forty Indonesians they asserted were shot to death in Batavia Oct. 28 by Dutch troops working with Indian forces. The British said they had no confirmation, but added that their troops have orders to shoot Indonesians carrying arms without authority.

It was disclosed that Lieutenant General Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands East Indies, had succeeded in "breaking the ice" between the Dutch and Indonesians in Sumatra, and had arranged conferences which reportedly went well.

6 Bodies Of 22 Reported Killed Found In Batavia Grave

Bekassi, Java, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—Naked bodies, believed to be those of eighteen Indian soldiers and four Englishmen, were found in a shallow grave in this village twelve miles west of Batavia today.

The Dutch news agency Aneta said the bodies were those of the crew and passengers of a transport plane which crashed in Batavia's outskirts last Friday. An Indonesian woman, who had been held prisoner in the barracks where the men were confined, led a British unit to the burial spot, about fifty yards from the prison. She said four white men and eighteen Indians were brought here naked in trucks last Saturday evening. They were beaten that night, she said, and Sunday they were led to the nearby river bank, one by one, with their hands behind them. There they were individually assaulted by yelling men with "anything that would cut," the woman said.

Troops Reach Scene.

The woman, who had been imprisoned because she was married to an Amboinese, said she overheard a telephone conversation which indicated that an Indonesian general was informed about the prisoners and had ordered them killed.

British native troops, acting on reports that the missing airmen had been in Bekassi, sent a battalion with tanks, mortars, artillery and air support to the village from Batavia.

The British forced a dozen Indonesian youths to accompany the expedition and these were set to digging with shovels and pickaxes and within an hour had uncovered half a dozen torn and naked bodies, dumped one on the other, white flesh intermingled with brown. From the size of the mass grave, the British said they believed they would find twenty - two bodies as the Indonesian woman had said.

The plane which crashed carried five Englishmen and twenty Indians. Two dismembered Indian bodies were found near the plane. If the mass grave contains twenty - two bodies, the fate of the fifth Englishman is still to be determined.

The Indonesian woman told in Malay the grim story of the killings.

"The Indonesian police ran away when the truckload arrived —they were afraid of the Indonesian youths who were against the police when the Japs were here," she said.

"They (the youths) tied the prisoners' hands behind their backs. First they led out an Indian, took him to the river bank, and jumped on him while he screamed.

Killers Used To Be Butchers

"Next, they took an Englishman and killed him the same way."

"The men in charge used to be butchers and knew best how to handle swords. One tall Indian worked his hands loose and tried to fight, but he was killed quickly.

"Others told me Dutch men and women were killed here before I came, but these were the first I saw killed."

The woman, who had been imprisoned because she was married to an Amboinese, said she overheard a telephone conversation which indicated that an Indonesian general was informed about the prisoners and had ordered them killed.

British native troops, acting on reports that the missing airmen had been in Bakassi, sent a patrol to this village yesterday. They found it deserted, with only a Dutch youth and three Amboinese women in jail.

This morning a battalion with tanks, mortars, artillery and air support set out again from Batavia. They reached here without difficulty in midmorning.

The British forced a dozen Indonesian youths to accompany the expedition and these were set to digging with shovels and pickaxes. Within an hour they had uncovered six torn and naked bodies, dumped one on the other.

Other Bodies Believed There

From the size of the grave, the British said they believed they would find 22 bodies, as the Indonesian woman had said.

The plane which crashed carried 5 Englishmen and 20 Indians. Two dismembered Indian bodies were found near the plane. If the mass grave contains 22 bodies, the fate of the fifth Englishman is still to be determined.

Indonesian notices on the barracks bore the signature of Hadji Rian, local Indonesian leader, who, reportedly warned by telephone, left Bekassi two hours before the British arrived.

Marshall To See Chinese Factions

Chungking, Dec. 1 (AP)—An exhaustive report of China's fratricidal troubles will be submitted to General Marshall when he comes to Chungking.

There was speculation that the new [illegible]s Ambassador also [illegible] the Communist capital of Yenan to confer with Mao Tse-tung, Communist leader, and his commander-in-chief, Gen. Chu Teh.

Failing that, the Communist side will be presented by Chou En-lai, deputy Communist leader, cheduled to return from Yenan to Chungking within a fortnight.

Soviet Move Aids Chungking

It was learned that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek would be assisted in his discussions with Marshall by Premier T. V. Soong, and Foreign Minister Wang Shih-chieng.

War Minister General Chen Cheng also is expected to attend, and it was reported that Gen. Ho Ying-chin, commander-in-chief of the Nationalist Army, was coming here from North China for the talks.

Meanwhile, Chungking got a great lift from the official announcement of a new Soviet agreement under which the Russians will delay until January 3, their withdrawal from vital Manchuria.

Wedemeyer Noncommittal

This one-month postponement will give the Chungking Government time to send administrative personnel and troops into strategic cities of Manchuria ahead of Chinese Communists, who have been taking over areas as soon as the Russians retire.

It was not yet known whether the agreement would permit American forces to carry Nationalist troops into Manchuria by sea and air. Russians so far have opposed the entry of American forces into the territory.

Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of United States forces in China, was noncommittal on this report when questioned by correspondents in Shanghai.

Dispatches to Chungking said Nationalist troops driving along the Peiping-Mukden railroad had advanced to within about 85 miles of the city of Mukden.

Russia Agrees To Extend Stay In Manchuria

Month's Delay in Moving Out Will Let Chiang's Troops Take Control

Chungking, Dec. 1 (AP)—Russia has agreed to delay withdrawal of Soviet forces from Manchuria until January 3, the Chinese Government announced today.

The agreement will enable Chinese Government personnel to take over the administration of Manchuria and will permit Chinese Government troops to move in before the Soviet withdrawal is completed, the announcement stated.

Dec. 3 Date Changed

It was for this purpose, the Government said, that the date was changed. The Russians had been scheduled to withdraw December 3, but Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek feared that Chinese Communists—thick in Manchuria—would assume control if Soviet forces were evacuated that soon. Central Government troops have not yet been able to penetrate the territory in controlling strength.

Chinese Government troops now are driving toward Mukden. Dispatches reported the Nationalists advancing along the Peipin-Mutken railroad have reached a point 20 miles from Tahushan, 65 miles west of Mukden. They have not yet contacted Chinese Communist forces reported to have dug in near Tahushan.

Surrender Offers Reported

The dispatches reported alleged representatives of several Communist puppet forces approached Nationalist headquarters at Shinhsien with offers of surrender.

A semi-official Nationalist dispatch charged that some 200,000 Communist troops are preparing a four-pronged drive aimed at placing the strategic maritime province of Shantung entirely under Chinese Red control. The dispatch said Communist forces destroyed a sizable stretch of the Tientsin-Pukow railroad north of the junction city of Hsuchow as a preparatory move in the drive.

Official Chinese sources continued silent on reports that Russia had demanded joint control of Manchurian mining, power and other enterprises in return for handing the area over to Chiang Kai-shek.

Unofficially, some sources said that even if strings were attached, the agreement would be preferable to seeing all of Manchuria come under domination of the Chinese Communists.

The agreement also is regarded here as making easier the task of Gen. George C. Marshall, new United States envoy to China.

It is bound to be a bitter disappointment to Communists, who at one time seemed to think they had Manchuria in the bag.

They already have withdrawn from Changchun, Manchurian capital, various sources reported, and Nationalist officials who fled from the city to escape the tightening Chinese Communist grip are ready to return.

The executive committee of the Democratic League—still more a vocal than a political force in China—today urged self-government for Manchuria and also announced it would seek establishment of a coalition government in China.

A spokesman said the league opposed mediation by any single power, but saw no reason why the United States, Russia and Britain should not jointly mediate China's internal dissension.

Drive at Mukden Gains

CHUNGKING, Dec. 1 (AP)—Chinese Government troops are driving toward Mukden in Manchuria. Dispatches reported that the Nationalists, advancing along the Peiping - Mukden railroad, had reached a point twenty miles from Tahushan, sixty-five miles west of Mukden.

Nationalists Take Chinhsien

CHINHSIEN, China, Nov. 26 (Delayed) (AP).—Chinese Nationalist (central government) troops seized this old Manchu city of 200,000 population today after killing 200 Communists and capturing 700 more.

[The original announcement of the capture of Chinhsien, railway city 100 miles inside Manchuria, said it fell without opposition.]

Fighting in seveer cold of 10 below zero, the veterans of the Indo-China campaign under Lieutenant General Tu Li-ming captured the city at a cost of twenty wounded. The Nationalists had expected the Chinese Communists to put up a strong defense of the city, but instead most of the garrison, estimated at 40,000, took to the hills.

The three bridges across the Shaoling River had been blown when Tu's forces arrived. The troops waded out on the ice to gain the high earthen embankment on the other side. The Communists had mounted machine guns along the embankment, but the well trained Nationalists knocked them out quickly.

The Nationalists closed in from three sides. Part of Tu's troops entered the old walled city and the New Town built by the Japanese. Then the Communists attacked from the rear.

The Communists in turn were set upon by the local militia, which no one suspected even existed.

The opposition troops, whom Tu maintains are not Communists in the strict meaning of the word, appeared to be unorganized and fled. A few stopped by the telephone exchange building in the heart of the modern city and blew it up.

Senator Stewart's Son Explains Return Mix-Up

Denies Father Had Hand in Order to Leave Hawaii

HONOLULU, Dec. 1 (AP).—Eighteen-year-old Seaman Second Class Paul T. Stewart said today that his father, Senator Tom Stewart, Democrat, of Tennessee, had "absolutely nothing to do" with issuance of orders for his return to the United States for reassignment.

Honolulu, Dec. 1 (AP)—Eighteen-year-old Seaman Second Class Paul T. Stewart said today that his father, Senator Tom Stewart (D., Tenn.), had "absolutely nothing to do" with issuance of orders for his return to the United States for reassignment.

Young Stewart's pending return for reassignment was reported by Stars and Stripes, army newspaper, which said he was recommended for a Norfolk (Va.) assignment, although he lacked twenty points of being eligible for return.

"I'm perfectly willing to stay right here and serve out my time," Stewart said. "I don't know anything about how I was selected for return. All I know is that a group was named to go back home and I was one of them. I don't know why they picked me.

Navy's Explanation

"The Stars and Stripes threw it into me pretty hard and threw it onto dad, but he didn't know anything about it until reporters asked him."

(In Washington, the Navy Department explained that orders had been sent to the Waipio Amphibious Training Base in Hawaii where Stewart is stationed, to transfer a certain number of men in certain ratings to Norfolk. The orders did not name any individuals, a spokesmans said, and the fact that Stewart was in the list made up at Waipio was inadvertent.)

May Cancel Transfer

At Waipio, an officer who asked that his name not be used said that until "someone in higher authority" cancels the transfer, Stewart will remain in the group to be sent to Norfolk.

(A navy spokesman in Washington said that the Waipio base commander had authority to substitute someone else for Stewart if he desired.)

Jap Diet Refuses To Fire War Leaders

DEC 2 1945 LANDSBERG

Tokyo, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Japanese House of Representatives rejected today a demand that wartime leaders of the Diet resign, and Premier Baron Kijuro Shidehara urged "calmness" in the Government's own investigation of war responsibility.

Shunting aside a Liberal party resolution calling upon Diet members who helped bring on hostilities to resign without delay, the House gave overwhelming approval, Kyodo news agency said, to a Progressive party resolution blasting all who joined "militarists and bureaucrats" in promoting the war. Of Diet members, however, the resolution asked only that they "silently reflect upon their past deeds."

Urges Caution In Judging Others

Shidehara told the House of Peers today that "it is a grave matter to try to judge others. Those who were responsible for the war have committed serious blunders, but in so doing they had no intention of betraying their country. We must deal with the question with tolerance and calmness."

Investigatitons to be made by the Cabinet's war inquiry commission into the causes of war—and of defeat—will clarify the entire situation, Shidehara said.

On another question asked from the floor, as to whether Japan's new democracy shall be modeled after that of Britain or the United States, Shidehara remained silent.

Japanese radio listeners heard the first broadcast ever made from the Diet today. It turned out to be a heated wrangle over details of election-law revision.

Radio Tokyo promised more later.

Japan's revived Communist party today opened its first rally in 20 years—while a demand was voiced in the House of Peers for legislation forbidding agitation for elimination of the emperor system. Elimination of the Emperor is a major Communist party plank.

Kyodo news agency said that the public was barred as 500 carefully identified delegates were admitted to the first session of the two-day Communist Congress.

Emperor System Defended

In the House of Peers, Giichi Matsumura condemned political parties which advocated elimination of the imperial system, adding "I desire a rule to deal with them." The Justice Ministry replied that it would "not be suitable at the present time to deal by law with the Communist argument."

The Japanese Communists have held three previous Congresses, the last in 1926. All were underground sessions.

Diet members also came up with the idea of establishing blame not only for those responsible for starting the war—but also those who helped lose it.

In the House Liberal and Progressive party members declared blame should be extended to "those Diet members who failed to cooperate in the war effort during hostilities, thereby causing the nation to be defeated," Kyodo News Agency reported.

There was speculation that the whole ticklish matter might lead up to mass resignation of the Diet just before it is scheduled to be dissolved.

Progress In Conversion

There was progress, however, in the changeover of the beaten nation from a war to peacetime basis. With the dissolution of the war and navy ministries, the Government has decided to staff their successors, the first and second demobilization ministries, entirely with civilians. Previously there had been talk of retaining military staffs.

The Foreign Office was reported drafting plans for establishing a reparations bureau to execute Japanese payments to be assessed against Nippon. Simultaneously the Foreign Office planned further reorganization and streamlining in conformance with a recent MacArthur directive suspending diplomatic functions.

With an eye to alleviating winter suffering, Allied authorities granted the Japanese permission to use 4,000,000 pounds of shortcut silk fiber for manufacture of civilian clothing and blankets. The Nipponese plan to make underwear, suits, overcoats and blankets from the silk which will be mixed with cotton, wool and other textiles.

There was no action taken on release of Japan's balance of 46,000 bales of exportable raw silk which the Government hopes to exchange for imports, but headquarters directed immediate gradings of 33,000 bales of semifinished and finished raw silk which the Japanese want to use for export souvenirs.

DEC 2 1945

JAPANESE PEER WOULD ABOLISH PRIVY COUNCIL

BRINES

TOKYO, Dec. 1 (AP) An influential peer proposed today to abolish Japan's appointive and aristocratic House of Peers in favor of an elective chamber modeled after the U.S. Senate.

As the House of Representatives prepared to consider election law revision, Mitsuo Miyata, former Tokyo police chief, laid his drastic plan before the House of Peers.

Miyat declared that the privy council, which walls in the emperor, should be abolished and its powers of approving treaties and advising the Emperor turned over to an elective upper chamber of commoners.

The election revision measure as introduced by the government is limited to changes in methods of electing representatives.

The House of Representatives gave an overwhelming majority to a progressive party resolution assailing "the political, financial and cultural circles" who joined militarists and bureaucrats in leading the nation to war, Kyodo News agency reported.

It rejected, however, a liberal resolution calling for the immediate resignation of diet members who helped bring on hostilities.

Premier Shidehara was asked in the House of Peers if the government planned legislation or the creation of a special tribunal to determine the blame for the disastrous war.

The Premier said investigations which would be made by the cabinet's war inquiry commission would clarify the question.

The Communist party opened its first rally in 20 years in Tokyo, and as its 500 delegates gathered its principal plank—abolition of the Emperor system—was attacked in the House of Peers.

Without mentioning the Communists, Giichi Matsumura, a member of the Peers, condemned political parties which advocate elimination of the Emperor, saying they were damaging "the foundations of national structure."

Report On Relief Gifts By Jap Banks Ordered

Tokyo, Dec. 1 (AP)—In a search for concealed assets Allied headquarters today ordered 29 banks and companies, closed since September 30, to report all contributions in excess of 25,000 (about $1,700 United States) yen to relief or welfare organizations.

The action followed disclosure that the Manchuria heavy industry development company — described by headquarters as the economic brains of Japanese interests in Manchuria and closely connected with the Kwantung army—had contributed 300,000,000 yen ($20,000,000) to the Manchuria Refugee Relief Association at about the time fighting ended in August.

Japanese General Surrenders

TOKYO, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Kyodo News Agency said today that Maj. Gen. Masatake Kaburagi, former Chief of Staff of the Thirty-fourth Japanese Army in the Hankow area of central China, had surrendered at Omori Prison. He was on the Allied list of suspected war criminals.

Korean Factions Clash In Japan

DEC 2 1945

Tokyo, Dec. 1 (AP)—Kyodo news agency said today that ten persons were hurt Thursday in a fight with daggers, hooked poles and clubs when 30 members of the Communist-inclined Federation of Koreans in Japan attacked offices of the Federation of Youths for Promotion of Korean National Construction.

Members of the first group attacked the second because the latter is pro-Japanese, Kyodo said.

U.S. And Russia Confer On Bisection Of Korea

MYERS

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 5 (AP)—Koreans were given reason to hope today that the artificial boundary splitting their country into Russian and American halves might soon be abolished.

Negotiations between Moscow and Washington have started, Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge disclosed, looking to eliminate the military barrier which bisects Korea along the thirty-eighth degree of latitude. Russians occupy all Korean territory north of the line and Americans the southern section.

"I hope the negotiations will be successful," the United States 24th Corps commander said, "and will relieve as soon as possible the inconvenience and distress that the Korean people are suffering from this artificial division of their country."

Meanwhle, politics in the American half of Korea continues lively. Kim Koo, popular patriot-in-exile during Japanese rule, is conferring here with rival Korean leaders. He faces a difficult task in seeking to weld extemist right and left groups of Koreans into a politically united nation.

Japanese Hide Materiel; 20 Plane Engines Found

KYOTO, Japan, Dec. 1—Brig. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer of the Twenty-fourth Division spotted a piece of machinery through a break in the wall of a Japanese temple. Investigating, he discovered twenty new aircraft engines.

Moscow And D.C. Negotiating To Abolish Zones In Korea

MYERS

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 1 (AP)—Moscow and Washington are negotiating on elimination of the artificial barrier between Russian and American occupied sections of Korea.

Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge, United States 24th Corps commander, said today "problems to be negotiated include the opening of communications, unification of the economic life of Korea, and the exchange of goods and freedom of travel between the two zones.

Should Help Koreans

"I hope the negotiations will be successful and will relieve as soon as possible the inconvenience and distress that the Korean people are suffering from this artificial division of their country."

Russians occupy all Korean territory north of the thirty-eighth degree meridian—which crosses approximately halfway up the Korean peninsula—and Americans occupy the southern section.

Local Negotiations Fail

Hodge said that he previously had been authorized to negotiate with Soviet commanders in northern Korea, "but these local negotiations did not get any results, perhaps because the Russian commander didn't have as broad powers as I had."

Elimination of the thirty-eighth meridian division of the country admittedly would add complications to the already-complex Korean political picture, but it would at least provide a nation-wide stage for the party maneuverings.

Meanwhile, newly arrived Kim Koo, popular patriot-in-exile during Japanese rule, is conferring with rival Korean political leaders here. He faces a difficult task in seeking to weld extremist Right and Left groups of Koreans into a politically united nation.

Concealment of other military matériel has been reported, including large quantities of aircraft tools, parts for fabricating wings and fuselages and many nearly-completed wing sections hidden in a cotton mill at Imbari.

On Kyushu island, a Thirty-second Division demolition team is destroying fifty-five submarines equipped to launch piloted torpedoes. A detachment under Lieut. John W. Reynolds of Philadelphia found the submarines at Hikari arsenal.

Beheading Trial Completed

KWAJALEIN, Dec. 1 (AP).—The decision of an American military court as to whether ten Japanese officers must die for the beheading of five American airmen in the Marshalls probable will be handed down next week.

Trial of the ten for offenses committed on Mili Atoll in February, 1944, was completed yesterday on the eighth day, with the prosecution demanding the death penalty and the defense pleading "fair, righteous and impartial consideration."

AIDE TIES ATROCITY TO YAMASHITA 'NOD'

He Says Accused Indicated Approval for Killing of 600 Filipinos Without Trial

sized Japanese colonel with an owlish look testified at the war crimes trial of Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita today that the nonchalant hero of the "Tiger of Malaya" on one occasion sent 600 Filipinos to the firing squad without trial.

Perched on the witness stand, with his feet barely touching the floor, diminutive Col. Hideo Nishiharu said he headed the judge advocate general's department of Yamashita's command and one day reported to him that there was a large number of suspected guerrillas in custody whom the military police were ready to kill.

Nishiharu asserted that Yamashita merely nodded at this, which he took as approval for waiving any hearings or trials and turning the group over to the MP's.

So at least 600 out of the group of about 1,000 suspects then were loaded into trucks, taken to a cemetery and summarily shot, he said.

The colonel's testimony was in sharp contrast with Yamashita's repeated protestations from the witness stand this week that he neither ordered nor condoned nor even knew of any atrocities by Japanese troops of his Philippines command.

Witness Vague in Details

Nishiharu was vague when pressed for further details of this and other instances of Japanese brutality. He emphasized that he himself did not actually witness any executions.

Asked if he recalled the case of Mabel Juricha, an American woman who was executed, he asserted that he had never heard of it. But when prosecution counsel asked him if he remembered handling case "C10-12" — Japanese docket number for the Juricha file — he said he recalled it. That, however, was as far as he went. Further questioning extracted no additional information on the subject.

The colonel disclaimed any knowledge of the case of four American business men taken from Santo Tomas internment camp and later executed. He was exceptionally cautious in framing his replies to questions, and repeatedly came back with:

"I don't quite understand what you mean."

He was still on the stand when the court recessed until Monday.

YAMASHITA NODDED AND 600 WERE SHOT

SCHEDULE

Manila, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—At least 600 Filipinos were shot without trial when Lieut.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita merely nodded non-committally on being asked what disposition should be made of a group of suspected guerrillas, a Japanese colonel testified today.

The officer, Col. Hidee Nishiharu, called by the prosecution as a rebuttal witness at Yamashita's trial on war crime charges, headed the Judge Advocate General's Department of Yamashita's command. He said he told Yamashita that there a large number of guerrillas in custody, and that a military police officer had said they would be killed as there was no time left for trials. The witness added that he considered Yamashita's nod as approval for turning the prisoners over to the military police. The 600 were then loaded into trucks, taken to a cemetery and shot, Nishiharu said.

Yesterday Yamashita testified he had no knowledge of the executions for which he is being tried.

Capt. Manning L. Webster, of Pomeroy, Ohio, of the prosecution staff, asked Nishiharu if he recalled the case of Mabel Juricha, an American woman executed. The colonel denied ever hearing of it, but when Webster asked if he remembered handling Case "CIO-12"—Japanese docket number for the Juricha file —Nishiharu said he recalled the case. No further details were elicited.

The trial recessed until Monday.

Bamboo Game Slated For Manila New Year's

Manila, Dec. 1 (AP)—It's the Bamboo Bowl game in Manila New Year's Day.

Elimination play between football teams from eight army bases scattered from Okinawa to the Shouten Islands will decide the opposing elevens.

MANILA, Dec. 1 (AP)—Headquarters of Army forces in the western Pacific announced today that last elements of Ohio's Thirty-seventh Division sailed Tuesday from San Fernando, northern Luzon, aboard the U.S.S. General Howze, which is due in San Francisco Dec. 16. The division began moving homeward Nov. 16. Brig. Gen. Charles F. Craig of Nashville, Tenn., assistant division commander, will be aboard the Howze.

BRAZILIANS ELECT PRESIDENT TODAY

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 1—(AP) Brazilians, after a stormy political campaign which wound up with gunfire and violence in two cities, tomorrow will elect a president in the first popular election for a chief executive since 1930.

They will also choose representatives for a bicameral federal congress, a step marking re-establishment of the legislative branch of government which former President Getulio Vargas abolished in 1937 when he imposed a dictatorship on the country.

The freeist and most honest election in the history of Brazil has been promised by President Jose Linhares, who was drafted from his post as chief justice of the supreme court to rule the country after the armed forces ousted Vargas from office Oct. 29. The military charged that Vargas failed to guarantee the holding of elections.

About 6,000,000 of the nation's 7,613,339 registered voters were expected to cast ballots.

Canada Eases Tire Rationing

Ottawa, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—Rationing in Canada of all used and retreaded tires and virtually all truck tires has been lifted, Munitions Minister Howe said today.

Congress May Ask Hurley To Speak

DEC 2 1945

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—A proposal that Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley address a special session of Congress emerged today from a furor prompted by his sudden resignation as Ambassador to China.

The suggestion came from Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), as clamor mounted for a full-dress congressional investigation of the nation's foreign policy.

Referring to moves by four different committees to have the general testify about his accusations that "career diplomats" are undermining national interests abroad Mrs. Rogers said:

"The issue is of such magnitude, with the security of our country involved, that I think the General ought to tell the complete story to a joint meeting of the Senate and House.

"Also, as specified in my bill (introduced yesterday), Secretary of State Byrnes should supply Congress with all information he has about the sabotage of our foreign policy and why General Hurley resigned."

Will Talk Next Week

Just where the General will speak on Capitol Hill has not yet been decided, but it appears definite he will do some talking some place there next week. Informed of the bids for his appearance, he said:

"I am ready to appear at any public hearing that is afforded me by Congress. Now that the war is over the people are entitled to have the basic information to enable them to form intelligent opinions on American foreign policy."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee appeared to have the inside track for the General's initial testimony. Chairman Connally (D., Texas) has invited him to a Wednesday meeting.

Wants Open Meeting

Hurley said he is "committed" to attend this gathering, although he stressed he wants it to be an open session. Connally has scheduled it tentatively for a closed gathering.

Others bidding for Hurley's testimony include:

1. The House Committee investigating un-American activities. Chairman Wood (D., Ga.) said the group would hear the General "at his convenience." Wood declared, "We want any information he has about communistic or subversive elements in the State Department."

Hurley said Tuesday that "a considerable section of the State Department is endeavoring to support communism."

Military Affairs Committee

2. The House Military Affairs Committee. Chairman May (D. Ky.) said he would meet the General next week to discuss possibilities of his testifying about military problems in China. Six congressmen have introduced bills calling for immediate removal of American troops from that country.

3. The House Foreign Affairs Committee. Chairman Bloom (D., N.Y.) is out of the city but several members said they want Hurley to amplify before their group his remarks about foreign policy. Several senators said they favored a proposal by Senator Wherry (R., Neb.) for a special committee to investigate foreign policy. In the House, Representatives Gore (D., Tenn.) and Herter (R., Mass.) said they had received widespread support for their measure to have a special five-member committee look into the problem. Representative Merrow (R., N.H.) proposed a 23-member committee.

Russ Writer Assails Hurley

Moscow, Dec. 1 (AP)—Soviet Commentator Boris Yakovlev charged today that Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, former Ambassador to China, was a "mouthpiece" for American imperialistic elements seeking "inseparable domination of the United States in Asia and in other parts of the world."

Yakovlev's comment on Hurley's resignation was published in the newspapers Pravda and Trud, and was the first reaction in the Russian press to the current controversy over the United States diplomacy in China. The comment was not published in Izvestia or Red Star.

Imperialistic Maneuver

Hurley's blast at United States diplomacy in China, the commentator wrote, "is an original maneuver of the most impetuous imperialist circles who, under the flag of criticism of 'professional diplomats' and 'introduction of corrections' in the policy of the United States, not only defended the imperialistic policy of the referred-to circles, but also tried to hang it into the state leadership of the United States."

Yakovlev declared that Hurley's statement implied that "maintenance by the U.S.A. of the Atlantic Charter is a mistake."

Criticized Further

The former ambassador's contention that United States interests in China are being jeopardized by "colonial imperialism" and "Communist imperialism" was "invented by Hurley himself," the Soviet writer declared. He added:

"Thusly, by his own statement, Hurley appears as the mouthpiece for those imperialistic elements in the United States who intend to establish the inseparable domination of the United States in Asia and in other parts of the world."

[In Washington, an aide said General Hurley had no comment on Yakovlev's statements.]

HOPE IN UNO STATED IN TRUMAN LETTER

Dec. 7 Message to 'U. S. at War' Says Strife Will Recede as Organization Grows

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 — President Truman's preference for the United Nations Organization to the Big Three as an agency for dealing with world problems, expressed in a press conference on Thursday, was foreshadowed Nov. 15, when he said in a letter that unilateral action was a source of irritation that the UNO might eventually eliminate.

Resort to war as an instrument of policy, Mr. Truman wrote to the editor of the Army and Navy Journal, will move into the past along with barbarism and savagery as the UNO "becomes more and more the means for peaceful settlements."

On Thursday the Chief Executive said that no Big Three conferences were in prospect and that he was not in favor of such conferences and never had been, for such special meetings had paved the way for the downfall of the League of Nations.

Mr. Truman's letter of Nov. 15 was addressed to Col. John C. O'Laughlin, publisher of the service journal, who released it today. The Army and Navy Journal said that the letter would be printed in the fourth volume of its historical series, "United States at War," which will be published Friday, anniversary of the Pearl Harbor disaster.

DEC 2 1945

TEXT OF LETTER

The letter follows:

The global war was won by Allied unity. We are determined that that unity shall continue in order to assure enduring peace. The terrible struggle which cost us and the other members of the United Nations so much of our finest blood and treasure stirred humanity to its depths. As a natural consequence, old issues were revived and new ones created. To their adjustment we are addressing ourselves, and doing so with the realization that mutual dependence, understanding and tolerance must be the basis of our discussions, as they were of the common war effort. There is no doubt in my mind that the vital decisions the world is requiring will be made.

It is fortunate that as we are passing into the era of more deadly atomic and electronic weapons there is not only amongst the United Nations the will to peace but that they have devised a method and procedure to promote and protect it. In the United Nations Organization, the charter of which I was glad to welcome and the Senate to ratify, we have an agency charged with the duty of stopping aggression at its source and of intervening by an international police force, if and when necessary, in disputes that might lead to war. It is an agency also which through its Social and Economic Council will make for a wider distribution of the fruits of the earth, and thus improve the lot of mankind. Still in its formative stage, it already promises usefulness for the solution of problems that, unilaterally approached, might emphasize differences and thus provoke irritation in international relations. As we gain experience and as this agency becomes more and more the means for peaceful settlements, farther and farther the idea of war as an instrument of policy will recede into the background of barbarism and savagery.

Recalls Roosevelt Inspiration

While we vision this fair prospect for the world, we cannot, our country never will, forget the magnificence and power which we, together with our Allies, developed and displayed in achieving victory. In our own case, our armies, fleets and air forces with unexcelled valor participated in crushing our foes, our farmers toiled to produce record-breaking crops and our labor and management cooperated to provide the huge quantities of munitions for our fighting men and also for our Allies. We became in fact the Arsenal of Democracy which President Roosevelt inspired. As I look back over the period of self-sacrifice which began for us at Pearl Harbor and ended with the surrender, first of Germany and then of Japan, I see in it a divine purpose to prevent the slavery of mankind and to open the way to an era of peace in which the freedom-loving peoples of the earth will vie with each other to raise the standards of living everywhere, to promote social justice and to advance the arts and sciences to greater heights.

PEARL HARBOR SNAG CLAIMED

Republican Says Democrats Try To 'Hamstring' Inquiry

sentative Gearhart (R., Cal.) today accused the Democrats on the Pear Harbor investigating committee with "deliberately" unfolding the testimony in driblets to "hamstring a real investigation."

"They have accomplished their purpose," Gearhart, a committee member, told reporters. "They have turned this into a judicial body without any real investigative duty."

But Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) told a reporter that his mail has convinced him that "the American people are thoroughly satisfied with the way the committee and William D. Mitchell, its counsel, are conducting this inquiry."

Claims Access To Records Denied

"The doubting Thomases are beginning to believe that we are going to get all of the facts about Pearl Harbor and that is just what we are going to do," he declared.

Lucas expressed the opinion that the evidence thus far "indicates beyond a doubt that the various branches of the armed services were not co-ordinated sufficiently at the time of the attack so that all knew what the others were doing."

Gearhart complained that the committee members were being denied access to important records. He referred specifically to the testimony of witnesses who have appeared before as many as five groups concerned with the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Backed By GOP Colleague

"We should have all that before us to compare their testimony and we can't get it," Gearhart declared.

He got some immediate support from a Republican colleague, Representative Keefe, of Wisconsin. In addition, Representative Murphy, (D., Pa.) commented that he would like to have such records for comparison before cross-examining witnesses.

All three indicated they wanted, for example, all the testimony of Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, former chief of military intelligence, who has been a witness on the Pearl Harbor case five times. Miles told the committee that one of those instances included a little-publicized investigation made by Brig. Gen. Carter Clark.

"Top Secret" Information

"That one I never heard of," Keefe said. "We ought to have that and I'm going to demand that it be made available immediately."

Gerhard Gesell, associate counsel for the committee, told Keefe that the Clark report was in his hands but that it contained some "top secret" information on codes and how to break them which the Army didn't want to get out.

"That's just the thing we've been complaining about from the start," Gearhart commented to reporters. "They (the majority) spoon out to us what they want us to know and nothing more."

Committee Takes Holiday

He said he was not impressed by the groaning record of 600,000 words already built and joined in Keefe's demand for more.

The Clark report came up during Miles's testimony about decoding Japanese spy information before the attack on Hawaii. Miles will resume the stand Monday for further cross-examination on the role military intelligence played in the tense prewar period.

Captive Japanese Study United States Democracy

Selected Group Enrolled at Texas Prisoner Camp

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).—Japan will have several hundred future citizens with a "made in America" knowledge of the workings of United States democracy.

They are a select group of Japanese war prisoners at the Huntsville, Tex., war prisoner camp, who asked to be allowed to study American democracy and are being given their chance.

The experiment in education was disclosed today by the War Department, which announced that the selected Japanese would remain in this country longer than the rest of their fellow-prisoners, who are expected to be returned to Japan within the next six weeks.

The nucleus of the study is a group of twenty-five to thirty well-educated Japanese who are doing research and planning as to how American institutions and government would work in a Japanese setting.

When this phase is completed, their ideas and suggestions will be complied in articles to be distributed among the other several hundred Japanese at the camp. Their reactions will be noted as part of the conclusions of the research.

Honolulu Pre-Riot Request Cited

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—A Hawaii attorney general's report says four days before the recent bloody Honolulu riot a navy officer wanted to let sailors avenge themselves on city "hoodlums."

The report on the November 12 riot of sailors from the Honolulu naval air station was addressed to Gov. I. M. Stainback of Hawaii and presented here to the House Territories Committee today by Delegate J. R. Farrington.

Four Sailors Reported Beaten

Acting Attorney General Rhoda V. Lewis said in the report that an air station public relations officer advised the Honolulu police chief that four sailors had been beaten by hoodlums in a certain city area.

The report said the officer suggested that it would "be a good idea to let the sailors go out and clean up that gang."

"Chief (of police) Gabrielson told him absolutely no; that when a gang goes out there are always innocent people hurt; that the best thing to do would be to let the police handle it."

750 Sailors In Mob

After an extra patrolman had been posted nothing happened until four nights later, when 750 sailors marched into the area armed with sticks, clubs, rocks, bars and knives, the report said.

"The sailors in the mob told the police officers that two sailors had been killed that night, which was not the truth," the report continued. "The source of that rumor was not discovered."

Lewis said police records show responsibility for Honolulu fights rest about equally between service men and civilians.

Voices Opinion

He added:

"Furthermore, there is no evidence that, aside from the riot of the sailors, . . . anything has occurred which is unusual, considering the size of the city, the large number of men as compared with women, the free availability of liquor and the fact that since the surrender of Japan . . . many men of the armed forces have little to do except await transportation home."

Lehman Gives Facts on Staff Of U. N. R. R. A.

Says the 600 Dismissed in Agency's Tightening-Up Were Chiefly Europeans

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).—Herbert H. Lehman, director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, issued the following statement last night in connection with a story carried Thursday by The Associated Press from Herford, Germany, and subsequently corrected:

"It is unfortunate indeed that U. N. R. R. A., at this critical time, should have to defend itself against an erroneous press report from Europe which, it must be said in credit to the press association which carried it, was immediately corrected.

"The original dispatch, for which there was no foundation in fact, said that U. N. R. R. A. had 'dismissed, suspended or arrested more than 600 of its workers accused of diverting relief supplies into the black market.' The dispatch said further that 'a majority of the workers involved were Americans and Britons.'

Thorough Inquiry

"I have investigated the matter thoroughly. The facts are these:

"General (Sir Frederick A.) Morgan, chief of our operations in Germany, is now completing a reorganization. Over the last few months the services of 600 U. N. R. R. A. workers have been terminated for various reasons, including incompetency, illness, lack of adaptability, and other causes. These workers were chiefly European nationals, employed on the scene of operations, and not Americans and Britons.

"The unfortunate news dispatch, through some misunderstanding, linked this reorganization with the U. N. R. R. A. announcement that one U. N. R. R. A. worker of Czech nationality was imprisoned for theft and sale to the black market of coffee intended for displaced persons, and that thirteen other workers were suspended as the result of an U. N. R. R. A. investigation into charges of black-market operations.

"For several months a tightening-up process in U. N. R. R. A. operations has been under way. This has been done under my direction. U. N. R. R. A. officials in this country have been in constant touch with every move. I have assured Congressional committees that we have been replacing employees who have been found to be unsuitable with stronger personnel, now that the war is over and better-trained and more experienced workers are available to us.

New Appointments

"In line with this policy, Lieutenant General Sir Humfrey Gale, former administrative officer to General Eisenhower, has been appointed my personal representative in charge of the European Regional Office in London, and Lieutenant General Sir Frederick Morgan, former deputy chief of staff under General Eisenhower, has been made director of the U. N. R. R. A. displaced-persons operation in Germany.

"I wish to reiterate here a statement I have made many times, and which was also made by General Morgan from Herford, Germany: 'U. N. R. R. A. officials are doing everything in their power to ferret out any incompetence and dishonesty in the ranks. The overwhelming majority of the U. N. R. R. A. workers are honest, sincere and loyal, and dedicated to the care of the displaced persons who are innocent victims of the war.'

"I believe that the steps we have been taking and are taking to weed out unsuitable personnel and to stamp out black-market operations and theft so far as possible are evidence of the increasing effectiveness of the U. N. R. R. A. operations."

U.S. Officials Jab Producers About 'Hoarding Of Goods

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Government officials are confining themselves to verbal jabs on the ticklish question of whether manufacturers are withholding consumer merchandise to benefit from a January 1 tax cut.

The chiefs of at least two agencies have suggested that there has been some withholding and have deplored it.

One official said the barbs are intended to arouse public indignation to prevent any widespread delivery delays pending elimination of the excess profits tax at the start of the year.

This official said there is no other step the Government could take. There is no way to compel delivery of goods, he added.

The latest dig at producers comes from OPA Administrator Chester Bowles, who said in discussing reasons for the clothing shortage:

"I think . . . a most important factor is the tax situation.

"Companies can look forward to a windfall if they withhold shipments now and release them next year when the excess-profits tax is out of the picture."

"Public's Need Ignored"

Bowles added that "under the circumstances, the public's need for clothes seems to mean very little to some producers."

Earlier this week John W. Snyder, reconversion boss, said in a speech that "increasing reports are coming to Washington that some firms are holding up the flow of goods for which the markets are so hungry and which people need so badly."

Snyder declared that "damming up the flow of goods is increasing the pressure against controls that protect us from the threat of inflation, which is to no one's interest."

Inventories Checked

John D. Small, head of the Civilian Production Administration, has been investigating manufacturers' inventories but thus far has reported no evidence of any hoarding.

Aside from the tax motive Bowles asserted flatly that processors of cotton fabric for clothing "have been holding up deliveries" while waiting for OPA to decide whether they are entitled to a price increase.

Bowles acknowledged there has been a delay on this decision, but he said that "for a long time we were unable to get (processors) figures." He promised a ruling soon.

Gives OPA Viewpoint

Bowles also gave his reasons why OPA has been unable to reduce clothing prices six to seven per cent this year, a goal set by the agency last spring.

He said OPA'S plans were based on assumptions that the "volume of fabric shipment would be higher than it actually is and that the flow of material would be carefully guided to those types of clothes that are most essential and in the shortest supply."

Vet Aid In Surplus 'Racket' Alleged

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Two Federal agencies have been asked by a congressman to investigate a recent sale of Government equipment at Atlanta, Ga., where, he declared, there was indications of a veteran-aided "racket" in surplus property.

Representative Walter (D., Pa.), who said in a House speech yesterday that some veterans were using their purchase priorities to buy equipment for dealers, said that both the Justice Department and the Surplus Property Administration are investigating the Atlanta sale at his request.

Tells Deal As He Heard It

"I have been informed that a veteran at that sale got $500 from a dealer for exercising his preference and buying a $22,000 piece of equipment for $10,000. The dealer, I was told, subsequently put a price of $17,000 on it," Walter declared.

A ranking member of the House Judiciary Committee Walter said he is asking the Justice Department if such a practice is a conspiracy in violation of law.

In the meantime, he said, the FBI has been assigned to investigate the Georgia case.

In his House speech Walter, a veteran of both world wars, declared veteran preference on surplus property would be eliminated if veterans "permit themselves to become the tools of racketeers."

Mitchell, Lindy 'Vindication' Demanded

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) demanded today that the House Military Committee turn loose his resolution to give the late Brig. Gen. Billy Mitchell, prophet of air power, the posthumous rank of major general.

At the same time Representative Mason (R., Ill.) awaited reaction to his proposal that the rank of colonel in the Army Air Force Reserve be restored to Charles A. Lindbergh, whom Mason calls "the Billy Mitchell of this war."

"Shamelessly Bottled Up"

Wiley said the Senate had passed his resolution three times and "three times it has been shamelessly bottled up" by the House committee.

A suggested reason, he said in a statement in the Congressional Record, has been that the House group did not want to "cast any adverse reflections upon General MacArthur," who served on the court-martial which found Mitchell guilty of insubordination for his publicly expressed views on the administration of military aviation in the 1920s.

"This theory is 'all wet,'" Wiley declared, "because General MacArthur voted consistently against the court-martial verdict."

Quotes MacArthur Letter

He said he recently wrote MacArthur to confirm this and received a reply saying, in part:

"Your recollection of my part in his trial is entirely correct. . . . It would be ridiculous for anyone to say that any posthumous honors that might be granted him would be embarrassing to me. He was a rare genius in his profession and contributed much to aviation history."

The court-martial ordered Mitchell, then a colonel, suspended from rank and pay for five years. A presidential directive modified the pay penalty. In June, 1940, five years after Mitchell died, he was promoted on the retired list to brigadier general. However, the adjutant general's office said yesterday it had no record of any action to expunge the court-martial record.

Insists On Action

Mason, meanwhile, said that unless something is "done voluntarily" to "clear Colonel Lindberg" he would introduce legislation, probably in January, to accomplish the purpose.

Lindbergh resigned his commission in 1941 during a controversy with President Roosevelt over foreign policy.

Commenting on Mason's assertion that Lindbergh shot down "several" Jap planes while flying as a volunteer civilian instructor in the Pacific, Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Far Eastern Air Force, told reporters yesterday there was no record of it.

He added, however: "I think the thing for you to do is to ask Lindbergh."

Pacific Air Forces Becoming One Unit

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—The five air forces of the Pacific are being combined into an operational unit controlled by General MacArthur.

Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Far Eastern Air Force, told newsmen the new lineup is:

Fifth Air Force, in Japan and Korea with occupation troops; 7th Air Force, moves from Okinawa to its peacetime base of Hawaii; 8th Air Force, in Okinawa; 20th Air Force, the Marianas; 13th, the Philippines.

Order Of Lenin Conferred On Davies

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia, received the Order of Lenin at a ceremony at the Soviet Embassy last night witnessed by members of his family and Embassy officials.

The award was presented by Kikolai V. Novikov, Minister Counselor, for Davies's "successful activities" in contributing to the strengthening of friendly relations between the United States and Russia "and the growth of mutual understanding and trust between the peoples of the two countries."

BUTLER QUITS PEACE POST

Offers Resignation as Head of Carnegie Endowment

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace today announced the resignation of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler as its president. The announcement said the resignation, tendered at a meeting of the executive committee in New York yesterday, gave physical infirmities as the reason.

Dr. Butler, now 83 years old, also resigned as director of the division of intercourse and education, a post he had held since it was organized in 1911. Malcolm W. Davis was appointed acting director.

Dr. Butler became president of the endowment in 1925 when its first president, Elihu Root, retired. He shared the Nobel Peace Prize in 1931.

Heads Lumber Association

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).—C. Arthur Bruce, of Memphis, was elected president of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association at a two-day annual meeting in Chicago this week. The meeting closed with a testimonial dinner to J. Philip Boyd, former director of the lumber and lumber products' branch of the War Production Board.

Women Veteran Counselors

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).—A program to provide women counselors for women war veterans was announced tonight by the Veterans Administration. A number of counseling positions previously filled by men will be opened to women. They will be employed as contact representatives, field examiners, training officers, vocational advisers and adjudicators.

Women's Leaders Back Training

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs today endorsed President Truman's request for universal compulsory military training. They also urged continued price control.

'Over The Hump In Returnee Shipping, Services Say

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Senator Robertson (R., Wyo.) told the Senate that army and navy shipping branches have advised him they are virtually "over the hump" in providing shipping space for return of service men and women from Atlantic and Pacific areas.

Representatives of the service branches disclosed, he said yesterday, that in December there will be enough ships in Atlantic and Pacific areas "to lift all available men."

"You will note that I use the words 'available men,'" he said. "Availability of these men was based upon a report of the area commanders in the Pacific and does not necessarily mean the number of men who are eligible for discharge.

"The shipping administration is basing its efforts on the number of men reported as available by the area commanders. I think now that we are approaching the position where there is availability of ships, the number of men in the Pacific should be made available for the maximum amount of shipping that can be employed in returning them to the United States."

Robertson hopes to get the enlisted man's version of demobilization complaints in Paris next week. This, he said, is the main purpose of a trip he is taking to Europe on an airliner scheduled to leave here Monday. Army officers have agreed to assemble a "representative group" of 25 enlisted men from camps and embarkation centers for a direct parley with the Senator.

Terminal Leave Asked For Enlisted Personnel

Hearings Start Monday on Bill to Alter Regulations

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).—Congress will be urged Monday to give enlisted men of all services the same terminal leave privileges as their officers.

Hearings on a bill by Representative Dwight L. Rogers, Democrat, of Florida, to extend the leave pay to men in the ranks, will begin before a subcommittee of the House Military Committee. Officers now receive pay at the end of their service for all leave due them. Enlisted men do not.

Representative Rogers said he believes the regulations "unfair to boys who were fighting the same battle." His bill also would allow ninety days for enlisted men who have already been discharged, to apply for their back leave pay at near-by offices of their service branches, if his proposal becomes law.

ARMY RELEASING 15,000 DOCTORS

Washington, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—The War Department made ready today to release 15,000 doctors and 5,000 dentists from the service under a reduced discharge score.

The score for these medical officers went down from 80 to 70 points, or three less than the new critical total for other officers which became effective today.

In addition, medical personnel with forty-two months of service or who are 48 years old are eligible for discharge now. Some specialists in scarce categories, however, will be retained.

70 Is Discharge Score For Medical Officers

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—The War Department made ready today to release 15,000 doctors and 5,000 dentists from the service under a reduced discharge score.

The score for these medical officers went down from 80 to 70 points, or three less than the new critical total for other officers which became effective today.

In addition, medical personnel with 42 months of service or who are 48 years old are eligible for discharge now.

Some specialists in scarce categories, however, will be retained.

Marines Offer Two-year Hitch

Washington, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—For the first time in twenty-five years the Marine Corps opened its ranks today to youths who want to limit their hitch to two years.

Men 17 to 25 years old will be accepted without prior military service. Those aged from 26 to 31 who have been in the forces may re-enlist within a year. If they sign up after ninety or fewer days as civilians they will receive their old rank, the Marine Corps announced. Enlistments also will be acepted for the three and four-year terms which have been the rule since 1920.

Coast Guard Frees Reserves

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1 (AP).—Nearly 3,000 vessel officers of the Great Lakes shipping trade were back in full civilian status today after serving as reservists in the Coast Guard.

Disabled Vets' Day Urged

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—The President would be requested to issue a proclamation designating the first Sunday in December of each year as Disabled American Veterans' Day under a resolution by Senator Young (R., S.D.).

Venereal Rate Rose in Army As War Ended

Civilian Agencies Warned of Problems To Be Faced in Controlling Disease

DEC 2 194

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).—Sharp increases in venereal disease rates among American troops at home and abroad as fighting ended or diminished were reported today by the Army Medical Department.

The Army doctors said these were among the reasons:

1. Post-combat "let-down" and increased leisure.

2. Exposure to populations with high venereal disease rates.

3. Diminished fear of infection as a result of improved treatment procedures.

A report in the December bulletin of the Medical Department gave these figures:

In the European theater, the venereal disease rate rose from 62 cases a 1,000 men a year in May (V-E month), to 155 in August.

In the Pacific area the rate increased from five cases per 1,000 men a year in January to ninety-seven in June.

"In the Pacific," the report said, "the marked increase in the rate occurred as the fighting in the Philippines diminished and there was more opportunity for exposure."

In the United States the rate was forty-three cases per 1,000 men a year in May, and fifty-three in August.

"A further post-V-J Day increase (in the United States) is anticipated," the report said. "In the Army in the United States the increased rate is due primarily to infections acquired by returnees during the thirty to forty-five day period after reporting to reception centers and assembly points.

"These recent increased rates," it continued, "forecast the extent of the venereal disease control problem to be faced by civilian agencies in the immediate future. . . . In the next year several million soldiers will have been discharged, all in the age group with the highest expected incidence of venereal disease. The Army has taken steps to assure that the number of men discharged with infectious venereal disease will be held to a minimum.

"Civilian agencies must now be prepared to accept the major responsibility for the increased venereal disease burden by providing control programs of optimum effectiveness. Failure to do so will almost certainly result in increased civilian rates."

LABOR TALKS END WITHOUT DEFINITE GAIN

But Leaders See Some Hopeful Signs After Conference.

DEC 2

LEWIS'S ATTITUDE STUDIED

Management Maintains That Wage Levels Were Not in Discussion Scope.

Washington, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—Leaders of the National Labor-Management Conference, admitting that their gains had fallen short of their goals, today saw in its concluding deliberations some hopeful signs for the future.

NIGHT

Their statements, however, were overshadowed by speculation whether John L. Lewis's closing appeal for unity in the policies and leadership of the house of labor meant that he might return to the A. F. of L. The man who split off from the A. F. of L. to form the C. I. O. and then split off from the C. I. O. to run his United Mine Workers as an independent union told the labor delegates that they had worked at a disadvantage in the face of the management groups organized, efficient functioning while the labor groups quarreled.

Lewis declared that labor's division caused a "weakening in strength and in policies, and a failure sometimes to achieve all the objectives it might hope to attain." During one conference recess the United Mine Workers' leader went into an A. F. of L. caucus room.

Conference Battleground.

The conference became a labor battleground for a time in its final, full session late yesterday. A. F. of L. and C. I. O. offered rival resolutions calling for genuine collective bargaining and nationwide wage increases.

While labor disagreed, the management delegation voted against both resolutions and stuck to one of its own saying that wage levels were not the conference's business. In the end no resolution was adopted, not even the portions endorsing collective bargaining which all had contained.

The conference closed in disagreement on three major subjects, half its agenda. The split recommendations were on collective bargaining and observance of contracts, on management's right to manage, and on jurisdictional disputes.

Agreed on Arbitration.

Its chief accomplishment, in the view of most leaders, was agreement that arbitration or umpireship, instead of strikes and lockouts, should be the final word in grievances arising under existing labor contracts. This was one of three reports agreed on. Another was that the United States Conciliation Service should be strengthened, with an advisory committee representing labor and management.

The delegates also approved a permanent panel of top industry and labor leaders to continue the quest for labor harmony.

The meeting failed to produce any new machinery, however, such as voluntary arbitration or impartial fact finding, for the peaceful settlement of present strikes or future stoppages growing out of labor's demand for new contracts carrying higher wages to replace loss of wartime overtime earnings.

"The conference made very great progress," said the A. F. of L. president, William Green, "but not as much as we hoped it would make. Perhaps we can complete the work we undertook to do, sometime in the future."

Manufacturers' View.

Ira Mosher, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said: "We know now—and the public knows now—better than ever before what both labor and management believe to be their respective rights, responsibilities and functions. That is all to the good."

Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, declared that the important thing is to "continue to work together."

"I believe the results will be disappointing to the American people. In some respects they are disappointing to me as well. But that does not mean we should not go forward and see if we can resolve our disputes in a free society," he said. "We must try again, and seven times again, to be successful."

The C. I. O. president, Philip Murray, said: "I would not call the conference a failure. The decision to continue a committee to take up the unfinished business and meet from time to time to consider problems is a good omen."

Lewis said the conference had "educational value." He added that the reports agreed on "set forth a declaration of certain principles for the first time in a national conference, and that's something."

Murray lost his fight for indorsement of higher wage levels throughout industry.

House Members to Hear Labor View on New Bills

'Rump' Session Is Planned by Rules Group Head

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).—A special meeting of House members to hear the views of labor leaders on proposed labor legislation on which they have not yet been heard will take place Tuesday, Representative Adolph J. Sabath, Democrat, of Illinois, chairman of the House Rules Committee, said tonight.

Mr. Sabath and eight other House members, four Republicans and four Democrats, called for the "rump" meeting, he said, because labor wanted to be heard on measures reported out by the House Military and Judiciary Committees.

"We want to give the members desiring to hear those leaders who were denied previous hearings an opportunity to learn labor's side of this question," Representative Sabath declared.

The measures include amendments to the Smith-Connally war labor disputes act, which would suspend the collective bargaining rights for one year of any union which violated a no-strike provision in its contract and would prohibit a union from using its funds for political contributions. Also included is a bill reported out by the Judiciary Committee that would remove from the anti-racketeering act of 1934 an exemption for labor unions.

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, have been invited to appear before the meeting. About 400 invitations to House members have gone out, Representative Sabath said. There are only 435 members in the House.

UNPRECEDENTED ACCORD MAY RETURN WORKERS TO HALF OF FIRM'S PLANTS

Company Offer On Permitting Production Of Car Items For Its Competitors Is 'Generous,' Thomas, Of CIO Union, Tells Wilson

Detroit, Dec. 1 (AP)—CIO-United Automobile Workers agreed today to relax their strike against General Motors Corporation to permit production of parts for competitors of the giant automotive concern. A General Motors spokesman said the action might result in partial resumption of work in nearly half the corporation's plants.

The unprecedented agreement to permit some of the striking UAW-CIO members to produce car parts needed by G.M. rivals came from R. J. Thomas, union president, in response to a proposal by the General Motors president, C. E. Wilson.

In a letter Thomas told Wilson the offer was "generous" and came as a "welcome surprise," but he expresed belief there are "only one or two items on which G.M. production is an essential part of the picture for other manufacturers."

"I shall, of course, accept the offer," Thomas wrote.

Locals To Get Data

His letter gave no indication, however, of any retreat from the union's wage demands, which Wilson has assailed as "unreasonable."

Discussing the possibility that strikers returning to work on parts output might be asked to contribute portions of their pay to the union strike funds, a spokesman at International UAW-CIO headquarters said such a decision would be left to the local unions involved. He expressed belief some locals would take such action.

Noting that automobile-industry policy is "to have at least two suppliers and preferably more for each part or component," Thomas said he would seek to ascertain the dependence of other manufacturers on G.M. production, and the size of present stock piles.

After that, the Thomas letter said, the international union will "lay the facts before the various G.M. local unions which may be involved." The UAW-CIO head said he would communicate again with Wilson "as soon as the necessary data has been collected and analyzed."

Parts Plants Employ 40,000

Principal General Motors parts plants, a corporation spokesman said, employed more than 40,000 of the 175,000 workers now on strike in more than 70 factories.

How many of these would be affected by any partial resumption of production, he said, was impossible to estimate at present. Approximately 50 per cent of G.M. plants make parts in varying quantity.

The AC Spark Plug plant at Flint, Mich., produces, in addition to plugs, fuel pumps, which, the spokesman said, were used by about 90 per cent of the motor-car industry. It employs nearly 10,000 workers.

Other large parts producers in G.M. include the Delco-Ray and Guide Lamp units at Anderson, Ind., producing generators, starters and headlamps; the Saginaw Malleable plant, making cam shafts, at Saginaw, Mich.; the New Departure unit at Bristol, Conn., producing bearings; two Hyatt roller-bearing plants in New Jersey, and the Harrison radiator division at Lockport, New York.

First Break In Shutdown

The Wilson-Thomas agreement was the first indication of a break in the shutdown that spread through the nation's G.M. plants when the UAW-CIO struck November 21 to enforce demands for a 30 per cent wage increase within the corporation's present price structure.

Production of parts for competing manufacturers would coincide with the union's strike strategy of keeping other producers going while shutting down G.M. operations.

On the other hand, return of some strikers to jobs might result in individual situations where pickets would watch their fellow-unionists re-entering affected plants.

Wilson, who made the parts-production offer to the union last night, expressed belief it was "very unfair" for General Motors to be singled out for a "labor blockade."

TO SUPPLY COMPETITORS

Wilson Makes Unusual Offer to Aid Rival Companies to Stay in Operation.

Detroit, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—Acceptance of a General Motors proposal to reopen part of its strike-bound plants to produce parts and accessories for rival manufacturers was indicated today. High union officers who declined to be quoted said they expected quick assent to the G. M. offer which startled industry circles.

C. E. Wilson, G. M.'s president, made the unexpected move last night in a letter to the striking C. I. O. automobile workers' union, which withheld comment pending further study. DEC 2 1945

Increasing the proposal's importance—and therefore the union's reaction—was the dependence of most other car manufacturers on General Motors for essential parts. An industry spokesman had predicted a virtual shutdown of other automotive firms as a result of the G. M. strike.

The U. A. W.'s reaction was watched also in light of the union's announced strategy to "blockade" General Motors while assisting other producers in a hasty return to peacetime production. Whether acceptance of the proposal would weaken its firm strike grip on G. M. to an extent offsetting the advantages it would give competing firms was among the unanswered ques-

Union Called Unfair.

Wilson, in a letter to the U. A. W. president, R. J. Thomas, said he thought it was "very unfair" for the union to single out General Motors for its labor blockade. "Nevertheless," he added, "it has always been our principle to take care of our customers if there was any possible way to do it."

G. M., he said, is willing to ship any materials ready for shipment to other manufacturers and to operate all its parts and accessory divisions for the duration of the strike "exclusively on outside work—that is, on material required by manufacturers other than the General Motors' car, truck and body divisions." The management of each division, he explained, would call back to work the men required to do this "with the definite understanding that none of them will be asked to do any work not involved in the production and shipment of material for these outside manufacturers."

Walter P. Reuther, U. A. W. vice-president, declined immediate comment but a union spokesman said that Reuther told reporters at Washington Thursday that he was agreeable to shipment of finished G. M. parts to the Packard Motor Car Company to prevent a shutdown there.

The proposal came shortly after Reuther and G. M. officials had failed to reach an agreement at a meeting called to discuss the corporation's charge of illegal picketing at the struck plants. The company has refused to resume negotiations as long as supervisory employees are denied entrance and until the union modifies its 30 per cent wage increase demand. Reuther denied the illegal picketing charge and said, "We are not going to modify our wage demand as a condition for collective bargaining."

Negotiations With Ford.

H. W. Anderson, G. M. vice-president, will confer with the chief Federal conciliator, Edgar L. Warren and possibly with Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach at Washington Tuesday.

The motor union, meanwhile, invited a group of nationally known educators, churchmen, editors, businessmen and farm leaders to serve as a citizens' committee in the dispute, and held what it may consider an ace-in-the-hole in its negotiations with the Ford Motor Company. Invited by the union to meet here December 4 and 5 and study a "verbatim transcript of negotiations to date" were Presidential Adviser Bernard M. Baruch; Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise; Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh, (S. C.) News and Observer; Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the board of R. H. Macy & Co., New York

Also Dr. Arthur H. Compton, physicist; Clarence Avildson, chairman of the Republic Drill & Tool Company of Anderson, Ind.; Mrs. J. B. Caulkins, Y. W. C. A. president; Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, senior auxiliary Bishop of the Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago; Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution; C. F. Hughes, business editor of the New York Times; Murray Lincoln, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation; James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union; Albert Goss of the National Grange, W. W. Waymack, editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune; Actor Orson Welles, Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, of the New York area; Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and F. R. von Windegger, St. Louis banker.

Reuther said the meeting would be held because the press and radio had been barred, at General Motors' request, from negotiating sessions, and to show publicly "how far the union has gone in trying to obtain a fair settlement of the case."

The Ford negotiations were postponed from yesterday until Monday at the request of U. A. W.-Ford Director Richard T. Leonard, who said an important development had come up. The development is "so important from our point of view," he said, "that we can't reveal it, even off the record."

Rumors that Ford would grant a sizeable wage increase have persisted despite the company's rejection of the 30 per cent demand.

WESTERN UNION VOTE CALLS FOR A STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The National Labor Relations Board announced today that a majority of Western Union Telegraph Company employes had voted to strike. The board took a strike vote among the workers under the Smith-Connally Act. It announced these results:

Eligible to vote, 48,743; votes cast, 33,994; for striking, 28,701; against striking, 5,182; votes declared void, 111.

The Western Union division of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, American Federation of Labor, has expressed dissatisfaction with an arbitrator's award in a wage case. A 5-cents-an-hour increase was granted against a requested 15 cents.

JERSEY EXPECTS NO UTILITY STRIKE

Trenton, Dec. 1.—Gov. Edge today announced he has been assured by Edward Benz, president of the System Council, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, (A. F. of L.) there will be no strike of workers for the Public Service Electric and Gas Company, which would affect 80 per cent of New Jersey's population.

In a statement issued at the executive office, Edge declared that both company officials and union leaders have pledged there will be no withdrawal from arbitration on either side and that negotiations will continue until a settlement is reached. He further said he has received assurance from the union that no strike will be authorized in the meantime.

"There is a distinct difference between a labor dispute affecting the production of some ordinary commodity and one which deprives our people of a necessity of life which they cannot do without," the Governor said. "On this basis I am giving serious consideration to recommending legislation that will provide the machinery by which, regardless of any labor differences which might ensue, vital services and public utility facilities will be continued in operation."

A conference held yesterday at the state house between the companies and local unions failed to settled their differences.

The two-month-old strike involves 3,000 dye workers who are seeking a 25 cents an hour increase.

A management spokesman has charged the union with breach of the no-strike clause in the existing contract.

NORWICH, Conn., Dec. 1 (AP)—John McHale, president of local 36, Federation of Dyers and Finishers (CIO), said today that strikers of the United States Finishing Company had voted to return to their jobs.

The strike affecting about 650 workers was called Oct 9, and was part of a walkout involving 3,000 workers in Connecticut and Rhode Island.

UMW Strikers Accept A Proposal to Return

By The Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec 1—A proposal that striking members of United Mine Workers, District 50, return to their jobs at the International Nickel Company plant at Huntington and that management negotiate its differences with the union was accepted today by labor leaders.

William Blizzard, regional director of District 50, reported that his organization had agreed to the suggestion of Charles J. F. Sattler, West Virginia Labor Commissioner. Mr. Sattler said he had received no reply from the management.

Yesterday the State Supreme Court granted an injunction restraining UMW pickets "or others" acting in their behalf from barring "free access" to the plant, which has been idle for twelve days.

America, stated, however, "the fact that the one-week strike has ended as scheduled by no means is an indication the union has terminated its dispute with Ward's."

"This is only one of a series of victories we intend to win over Ward's," he said. "We shall press the fight relentlessly to improve the lot of the Ward worker and to obtain arbitration of union grievances."

Levy announced receipt of a new wage offer by Ward for employés in the retail store at Kansas City, Mo. The offer would increase minimum wages in the Kansas City store from 47 to 55 cents an hour, Levy said. The union has asked a nationwide 65-cent minimum.

Ward today placed newspaper advertisements stating every Ward retail store, mail-order house and order office throughout the United States "is open and in active operation."

Fir Strikers to Return

A. F. of L. Lumber Unions Accept 15-Cent Hourly Increase

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 1 (AP).—With more American Federation of Labor lumber and sawmill worker locals approving 15-cent hourly wage increases, most of the Northwest's strikebound fir operators prepared to resume production next week.

The agreement represents a compromise from the union's original 20-cent demand. The A. F. of L. estimated that most of the 30,000 strikers would go back to work.

However, pine-belt strikers—estimated by the union at 30,000—still are off the job. A wage increase there, if the A. F. of L. sticks to its original demand for an industry-wide minimum, would have to be more than 15 cents an hour. The 15-cent increase raised the fir minimum to $1.05, but pine premiums are lower.

DYERS END CONTRACTS WITH STRIKING UNION

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 1 (AP)—Three of seven struck Rhode Island and Connecticut dyeing companies have rescinded their contracts with the Federation of Dyers, Finishers, Printers and Bleachers of America (CIO). The concerns are the Acme Finishing Company of Pawtucket, the Appanaug Company of Warwick, and the Glasgo Finishing Company of Glasgo, Conn.

Ward Union Ends One-Week Strike

Chicago, Dec. 2 (AP)—Leonard Levy, CIO union official, said today the week-old walkout of Montgomery Ward workers throughout the country "has ended as scheduled."

Pickets were ordered removed at 6 P.M. today from all Ward properties affected.

9 Strike Votes Asked

BUFFALO, Dec. 1 (AP).—Strike vote notices involving nine companies in Niagara Falls have been filed with the National Labor Relations Board by the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, a Congress of Industrial Organizations affiliate, Meyer S. Ryder, regional N. L. R. B. director, said today. The union requested that the strike votes be taken Dec. 26 at the Carborundum Company, Electro-Metallurgical Company, National Carbon Company, Niagara Alkali Company, Niacet Chemical Corporation, General Abrasive Company, Chisholm-Ryder Company and Isco Chemical Company, and Dec. 27 at the Mathieson Alkali Company.

WARNS ON AUTO PRIORITIES

Ford Officials Stands on a First-Come, First-Served Principle

DETROIT, Dec. 1 (AP)—Reporting that abuse of informal "priority systems" for new-car sales had reached serious proportions, J. R. Davis of the Ford Motor Company warned the company's dealers today against any participation in what he called a "gray market."

Mr. Davis, Ford director of sales and advertising, said the abuses ranged from name-switching on the unofficial priority lists to payment of bonuses for transfer of cars after they left the dealers' hands.

The company has recommended that dealers permit no name substitutions on their lists and adhere to a first-come, first-served principle, that upward of 25 per cent of all new cars be allocated to veterans and that the now-abolished OPA priority lists be used to determine all "borderline" applications.

Hard-Coal Prices Up 5 To 65 Cents

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Prices for hard coal are up 5 to 65 cents a ton, depending upon grade and size.

The increase is effective today, but the OPA said some householders may not begin paying it until next week when dealers have received new schedules from the mines.

The price boost was ordered to restore mine operator's profit margins to the equivalent of what they were in 1942—19.9 cents a ton. This is the minimum fixed by the Government under price control.

The over-all average price increase amounts to 19 cents a ton. For the nine largest Pennsylvania anthracite producers the boost averages 11.6 cents, while for most other companies it averages 32 cents.

200 Scientists Advocate World Atomic Bomb Unit

Advice of Business Men

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 1 (AP).—A special international conference of the United Nations to regulate the future military use of the atomic bomb was propose in a resolution adopted by 200 of the nation's outstanding physicists, members of the American Physical Society, who ended a two-day conference today.

Dr. Alexander S. Langsdorf jr., of the University of Chicago, author of the resolution, said it will be presented to Congress as representing the conference's views and not those of the entire society and its 5,000 members.

A second resolution urged that the society enlist the co-operation of social scientists, business executives and statesmen to consider the "broad aspects" of atomic bomb control.

"Any international control dealing with military aspects of atomic power alone will be good only until a serious international quarrel arises," said R. L. Doan, former atomic bomb research executive of the Oak Ridge, Tenn., plant.

General and Privates Talk Over Pacific War

By The Associated Press.

BUTLER, Pa., Dec. 1—Pride in their Thirty-second "Red Arrow" Division overcame differences in the rank today for two privates and a general convalescing at the Deshon General Hospital here.

Maj. Gen. W. H. Gill, commander of the Thirty-second, met Pvt. William J. Murphy, 20, of the Bronx, in a hallway. The man who opened surrender negotiations with Japanese General Yamashita then sent a "command" invitation to Pvt. Tony Corovale, 20, of Franklin, N. J.

"The three of us got together," Murphy said, "and General Gill told us:

"The division has the longest combat record of any American division in any war—654 days. During the time 11,500 of our men received the Purple Heart. But we gave them more than we took. We accounted for 35,000 dead Japs during six campaigns.'"

3 DIE IN B-25 CRASH

Missoula Mont., Dec. 1 (A. P.)—Three Army flyers were found dead today in the wreckage of their B-25 Mitchell bomber which crashed on Miller Peak, twelve miles southeast of here last Tuesday. Capt. Amos R. Little, paradoctor who bailed out over the scene at dawn this morning with two United States Forest Service smoke jumpers, reported by radio that the men were killed instantly.

Aboard the ship were Capt. William C. Oeder of Missoula; Capt. Robert V. Peterson of Lincoln, Neb., and Sgt. John L. Brown of Rochester, N. Y.

Planes Seek Victims In Two Air Crashes

Portland, Ore., Dec. 1 (AP)—Aircraft cruised two widely separated sections of western Oregon today, seeking a Navy Ventura plane that vanished Thursday and three men missing from an army plane crash Monday.

Four men from the Monday crash were located by plane yesterday in the rugged southern Oregon coastal range about 50 miles northeast of Coos Bay. Five other survivors were rescued earlier.

Concentrated food, bedding and clothes were dropped to the four and to the ground party which reached the site before the squall. Three of the four men gave their names—via poor reception on a walkie-talkie set—as Lieut. John D. Clark, R. E. Kenneth and Corporal C. Bailey.

Farther northward, other search parties hunted the Navy Ventura, which, with six men aboard, disappeared Thursday.

Uniform Commercial Law Code Being Formed

Annapolis, Dec. 1 (AP)—J. C. Pryor, president of the National Conference on Uniform State Laws, informed Governor O'Conor today that the organization was preparing a uniform commercial code which it hopel all states would incorporate in their legislative enactments.

The Governor said that Maryland was represented in the conference by three commisisoners for the promotion of uniformity of legislation in the country. The three were: Attorney General William Curran, Judge Paul E. Mason, of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore city, and C. Walter Cole, Towson attorney.

Truman Bungling Offered As '46 Keynote

Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 1 (AP)—Representative B. Carroll Reece (R., Tenn.) has suggested "Truman bungling" as the keynote for Republican opposition to the national Administration in the 1946 Congressional elections.

He addressed a letter to the Republican Executive Committee of the Tennessee Third Congressional District. It was read last night at a precampaign meeting of the committee.

"I believe the tide is turning in our favor, and very definitely so," Reece wrote. "It has become increasingly manifest that Truman is just bungling along. He has been caught up with by the New Deal tide and is simply being carried out to sea and, what is most unfortunate to all, he is carrying the country with it."

Reece also is national Republican committeeman.

Admiral Greenslade to Retire

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1 (AP).—Vice-Admiral John Wills Greenslade, sixty-five, resources co-ordinator of the western sea frontier, will retire Monday after fifty years of Navy service, it was announced today. He served in combat service in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection, the Cuban pacification campaign and the first world war.

MOTORISTS TO USE SYNTHETIC RUBBER IN POSTWAR YEARS

NEW YORK, Dec. 1—(AP) American motorists can expect to roll on synthetic rubber for a long time.

From all indications this war-developed synthetic will last as long or longer than the natural rubber which went into tires and tubes before Pearl Harbor.

The people who figure out just what is going to be used by the industry have decided a pretty regular pattern. What it sums up to is this:

At this point there is no telling just what the situation is in the Far East. Only piece-meal reports have been available so far. No overall survey has been made to learn the condition of natural rubber plantations there.

But all indications point to the use of synthetic for years. Right now general purpose synthetic rubber costs around 18 1-2 cents a pound.

This compares with 22 1-2 cents a pound for natural rubber. It currently is parceled out by the Rubber Reserve Co. at that price, which includes shipping costs from the Pacific.

In the meantime a price of 17 cents a pound for natural rubber is understood to be agreeable to both growers and consumers at the point or origin in the Pacific. Synthetic is better than natural for some purposes and vice versa.

One of the reasons advanced for heavily continuing the use of synthetic is that it would keep America self-sufficient in her rubber needs rather than be dependent upon world markets.

In view of the fact that political disturbances are rampant in Java, American rubber manufacturers figure it will be a long time before imports get back to normal. Natural rubber comes from Malaya, Sumatra, Borneo and other places in the Pacific.

For this reason B. F. Goodrich Co., Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. United States Rubber Co. and Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. already have announced they are coming into the initial postwar years with synthetic tires equal to or better than natural rubber.

Current bottleneck in the United States is the lack of manufacturing labor to make tire and tubes.

The Rubber Manufacturers association figures there is a shortage of 7,000 workers and that tire production is running around 2,100,000 casings short of the monthly capacity of 6,000,000—or 35 per cent behind needs.

Lost One Fifth of Trees

W. E. Cake, head of United States Rubber's Scientific Research in the East Indies, said recently that his company had lost almost one-fifth of its rubber trees. He indicated plantations of some other American companies had been laid waste even more.

John W. Bicknell, managing director of the company's plantations, deftly parried a question as to whether his company would rebuild its far eastern plantations.

He said United States Rubber was sending a survey party of engineers and planters to find out the dollar damage and decide whether or not to rebuild the plantations in view of the inroads made by synthetic rubber on the nation's economy.

An international study group of rubber has just concluded a meeting in London. It was made up of American, British, Dutch and French experts.

Without making recommendations, the group agreed there would be a great rubber surplus for the next two or three years.

This would tend to make it appear that synthetic could fill a lot of needs unless natural rubber interests sharply reduced prices.

Lindbergh Nearly Shot Down

Army Officer Discloses Jap Attack on Fighter Plane Over Truk.

North Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 1 (A. P.).—Charles A. Lindbergh, who was stationed on Biak as a technician, narrowly escaped being shot down when he accompanied a fighter mission over Truk, Capt. Robert De Haven, 23 years old, disclosed last night.

De Haven said Lindbergh was with three flyers of the 475th Fighter Group when "they encountered Zeros and Lindbergh's guns jammed. Col. (Charles A.) MacDonald shot down a Nip who was drawing a bead on Lindbergh's tail. It was after this that Gen. George C. Kenney, Far Eastern Air Forces commander, ordered that Lindbergh not be permitted to fly combat missions."

De Haven described the incident as occurring a few days after a flight over Halmahera, "during which Lindbergh shot down a Nip." He identified MacDonald as commanding officer of the 475th.

Urges Promotion for Mitchell.

Washington, Dec. 1 (A. P.).—Senator Wiley (R.-Wis.) demanded today that the House Military Committee turn loose his resolution to give the late Brig-Gen. Billy Mitchell, prophet of air power, the posthumous rank of Major-General.

At the same time Representative Mason (R.-Ill.) awaited reaction to his proposal that the rank of Colonel in the Army Air Force Reserve be restored to Charles A. Lindbergh, whom the Illinoisan calls "the Billy Mitchell of this war."

Wiley said the Senate had passed his resolution three times and "three times it has been shamelessly bottled up" by the House Committee.

A suggested reason, he said in a statement in the Congressional Record, has been that the House group did not want to cast any adverse reflections upon Gen. MacArthur, who served on the court-martial which found Mitchell guilty of insubordination for his publicly expressed views on the administration of military aviation in the 1920s.

"This theory is 'all wet,'" Wiley declared, "because Gen. MacArthur voted consistently against the court-martial verdict."

He said he recently wrote MacArthur to confirm this and received a reply saying in part:

"Your recollection of my part in his trial is entirely correct. It would be ridiculous for any one to say that any posthumous honors that might be granted him would be embarrassing to me. He was a rare genius in his profession and contributed much to aviation history."

Greek Ship Carrying 28 GI's Taken In Tow

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Navarchos Koundouriotis, a Greek freighter carrying 28 returning service men, was under tow today after losing her propeller in high seas off the North Carolina coast, the New York Port of Embarkation announced.

The freighter, formerly the Liberty ship Cyril G. Hopkins, was scheduled to arrive here yesterday from Antwerp. The Third Naval District reported receiving a distress signal from the ship at 2 A.M. today and said a naval tug and a United States freighter had been sent to assist.

CONGRESS TO ACT TO CURB STRIKES

DEC 2 1945

Action Predicted as Result of Labor-Management Conference Failure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1—(AP) Failure of the labor-management conference to produce concrete machinery for settling industrial strife led to predictions tonight that Congress now would act on an anti-strike bill.

Rep. Michener (R-Mich.), a member of the House Rules committee which reported the measure to the floor last Wednesday, said he had opposed "action in Congress irritating labor or management" during the conference but that he now felt Congress should go ahead. Other congressmen had taken a similar stand.

Two of the bill's supporters, Reps. Howard Smith (D-Va.) and Cox (D-Ga.), told reporters they might seek a vote next week. The measure would impose heavy penalties on unions which violate no-strike clauses in labor contracts.

Not On Schedule

House leaders omitted the anti-strike bill from next week's schedule. But any member of the Rules committee can call it up on the floor. Cox and Smith are committee members as well as Michener.

Michener said he thought "a courageous statement" from the President would "obviate the necessity for anti-strike legislation at the moment." But lacking any signs from the White House, Michener said Congress should pass legislation at once to make labor "as responsible for its contracts and acts as is management."

The press officer of the labor-management conference, Fred C. Smith, predicted that "more strikes, more industrial upheavals of all sorts, strong government and congressional action" were almost certain to ensue.

Smith said in an interview that failure of the conference to produce "anything conclusive" signaled a need for stronger White House leadership to avert a labor crisis.

The meeting might have been saved, he said, had President Truman taken a hand when it bogged down instead of sticking to a decision that there should be no government interference.

"There is a difference," Smith said, "between guidance and interference."

He added that the industrial outlook raises a question "whether the government is to retire to a position of minor importance while selfish factions declare open warfare for the control of vital situations."

A member of the publishing house of Simon and Schuster and former vice president of American Broadcasting company, Smith attended all meetings of the conference's executive committee, closed to the press and most delegates.

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, a conference delegate who touched off a futile last-minute effort to get delegates together yesterday, said he felt Mr. Truman "would have to move in."

Start Fact Finding

Fact-finding machinery showed up today on the agenda of the 12th national conference on labor legislation.

The conference, called by Secretary Schwellenbach and including delegates from 41 states and the District of Columbia, opens a four-day session here Monday.

State labor administrators, Federal labor officials, and representative of organized labor will attend.

On the program for discussion is the "strengthening state labor departments by adequate state appropriations for the enforcement of state safety and health, wage and hour laws, and for fact-finding," the labor department announced.

Noting that the war's end posed many peacetime reconversion problems for Federal and state labor departments, Schwellenbach said in a statement that the conference would discuss Federal-state cooperation in labor legislation and its administration.

NUERNBERG, DEC 1-(AP)-RUDOLF HESS, PATENTLY PLEASED WITH THE SENSATION HE CREATED WHEN HE DECLARED HIS AMNESIA WAS A FAKE, PREPARED TODAY TO GO BACK TO THE COURTROOM WHERE HE AND 19 OTHER FORMER NAZI LEADERS ARE ON TRIAL FOR THEIR LIVES.

THE ONE-TIME NAZI GLAMOR BOY AND DEPUTY TO ADOLF HITLER, WHO BECAME ONE OF THE WAR'S MYSTERY MEN AFTER HE PARACHUTED INTO SCOTLAND IN THE EARLY SUMMER OF 1941, HAD HARDLY LEFT THE INTERNATIONAL TRIBUNAL'S PRESENCE YESTERDAY WHEN HE BEGAN BOASTING THAT HE HAD MADE PSYCHIATRISTS OF FOUR NATIONS "LOOK RIDICULOUS."

HESS, AIDE TO HITLER IN THE WRITING OF MEIN KAMPF AND ONCE SECOND ONLY TO REICHSMARSHAL HERMANN GOERING IN THE LINE OF SUCCESSION TO THE FUEHRER, APPEARED TO LOVE THE SPOTLIGHT WHICH SWITCHED SUDDENLY TO HIM AFTER HIS STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT.

MAJ. DOUGLAS KELLEY, A SAN FRANCISCO PSYCHIATRIST WHO HAD EXAMINED HESS, GAVE THIS INTERPRETATION OF THE GAUNT, DEFENDANT'S ANNOUNCEMENT:

"HESS' ACTION WAS A RETURN TO THE TYPICAL HYSTERICAL PERSONALITY HE HAS CONSTANTLY MANIFESTED. HIS AMNESIA WAS A DELIBERATE SIMULATION.

"UNDOUBTEDLY, AFTER YEARS OF PRACTICE IN A PURPOSEFUL FORGETTING IN ENGLAND, HE IS UNABLE TO RECALL CERTAIN EVENTS OF THE PAST, BUT IT IS OBVIOUS HE HAS BEEN USING AMNESIA AS A DEFENSE."

KELLEY SUGGESTED THAT HESS' OUTBURST MAY HAVE BEEN INSPIRED BY THE PRESENCE OF JUSTICE ROBERT H. JACKSON, THE AMERICAN CHIEF PROSECUTOR, THROUGHOUT YESTERDAY'S SESSION, FOR HESS IS BELIEVED SUFFERING FROM A "CONSCIOUS MALIGNITY" TOWARD JACKSON.

HESS' COUNSEL, GUNTHER VON ROHRSCHEIDT, DISCLOSED THAT HESS HAD PREPARED A STATEMENT FOR THE COURT AND PRESS TO BE RELEASED TODAY, THE FIRST TIME THE TRIBUNAL HAS HELD A SATURDAY SESSION. VON ROHRSCHEIDT ALSO SAID THAT HESS MADE IT PLAIN THAT HE "EXPECTS TO BE EXECUTED."

MEANWHILE, THE DEFENSE SQUARED OFF FOR ITS FIRST REAL CHANCE TO ATTEMPT TO FIND LOOPHOLES IN THE PROSECUTION'S CASE. THIS OPPORTUNITY WILL COME IN THE CROSS EXAMINATION OF MAJ. GEN. ERWIN LAHOUSEN, THIN FORMER AIDE TO THE CHIEF OF GERMANY'S MILITARY COUNTER-INTELLIGENCE.

YESTERDAY LAHOUSEN PINNED RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE SLAYING OF THOUSANDS OF RUSSIAN PRISONERS SQUARELY UPON FIELD MARSHAL WILHELM KEITEL, CHIEF OF THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND, AS WELL AS UPON THE DREDED NAZI SS (ELITE GUARD) AND THE SECURITY POLICE.

THE DRAMATIC ANNOUNCEMENT BY HESS, FOLLOWED A HALF HOUR OF LEGAL BATTLING OVER WHETHER THE FORMER HITLER DEPUTY SHOULD STAND TRIAL EVEN THOUGH HE SUFFERED TEMPORARILY FROM ANESIA. JUSTICE JACKSON INDICATED HE BELIEVED HESS WAS FAKING.

A BOARD OF PSYCHIATRISTS HAD REPORTED THAT HESS WAS "NOT INSANE" IN THE STRICT SENSE, BUT THAT HIS LOSS OF MEMORY "MIGHT INTERFERE WITH HIS ABILITY TO MAKE HIS DEFENSE."

HESS WATCHED, GRINNING OCCASIONALLY, AND THEN, WHEN LORD JUSTICE GEOFFREY LAWRENCE DECLARED THAT THE TRIBUNAL WOULD LIKE TO HEAR FROM THE DEFENDANT HIMSELF, LEAPED TO HIS FEET AND READ FROM A PIECE OF PAPER ON WHICH HE HAD SCRIBBLED A SHORT SPEECH.

"MY MEMORY IS AGAIN IN ORDER," HE SAID. "THE REASON WHY I SIMULATED LOSS OF MEMORY WAS TACTICAL. X X X"

VON ROHRSCHEIDT COMMENTED THAT "HESS IS A PSYCHOPATHIC CASE WITH A TREMENDOUS FEELING OF HIS OWN IMPORTANCE BUT HE'S DEFINITELY NOT CRAZY. X X X HIS GREATEST FEAR SEEMED TO BE THAT HE MIGHT BE DECLARED IRRESPONSIBLE."

NUERNBERG, DEC 1-(AP)-SHEPHERDED BY A GI, 33 WOMEN CORRESPONDENTS ASSIGNED TO THE NUERNBERG WAR CRIMES TRIAL HAVE COME THROUGH TWO WEEKS OF LIVING IN A CROWDED VILLA WITH A MINIMUM OF CASUALTIES.

CPL.MICHAEL A.GERARDI, WILLIAMSPORT, PA., BOSS AND HOUSEMOTHER OF THE VILLA, IS THE GUY THE GALS CALL FOR WHEN TEMPERS BECOME FRAYED. WITH ONLY TWO BATHROOMS AND ONE TELEPHONE IN THE PLACE, THE FRAYING COMES EASY.

TROUBLE FLARED THE FIRST NIGHT AFTER THE TRIAL OPENED WHEN A FRENCH WOMAN CORRESPONDENT GOT HER PARIS OFFICE ON THE LINE AND BEGAN DICTATING HER STORY IN A LOUD VOICE.

AS TIME AND HER STORY WORE ON, A BRITISH WOMAN CORRESPONBENT EMERGED FROM HER ROOM AND DECLARED:

"I WILL GIVE YOU JUST 15 MINUTES TO GET OFF THAT PHONE. YOU'RE KEEPING EVERYBODY AWAKE."

DEC 2 1945

TWENTY MINUTES LATER, WITH THE FRENCH LASS STILL GOING STRONG INTO THE PHONE, THE BRITISH WOMAN FLEW OUT OF HER ROOM. SHE YANKED THE TELEPHONE OUT OF HER COLLEAGUE'S HAND AND CLAMPED IT FIRMLY BETWEEN HER KNEES.

"I TOLD YOU!" SHE SHOUTED.

INSTANTLY EVERY ROOM IN THE VILLA ERUPTED WITH GIRLS OF ALL NATIONS IN CURLERS, PAJAMAS AND OTHER FLIMSIES CROWDING INTO THE HALL.

SOMEBODY SCREAMED FOR MIKE.

MIKE ARRIVED QUICKLY, AND PUT DOWN THE DISTURBANCE. THE TELEPHONE WAS BANNED FROM THEN ON FOR LONG DISTANCE USE.

THEN THERE WAS THE AFFAIR OF THE BATHTUB.

A GIRL REPRESENTING A PARIS NEWSPAPER DISCOVERED THE BATHROOM ENTIRELY DESERTED ONE NIGHT. OVERJOYED, SHE TURNED ON THE WARM WATER, WENT TO HER ROOM TO COLLECT HER TOWEL AND TOILET ARTICLES.

WHEN SHE GOT BACK THE DOOR WAS LOCKED AND SOMEONE ELSE WAS SPLASHING IN THE TUB.

DACHAU, GERMANY, DEC. 1-(AP)-JOHANN KICK, GESTAPO AGENT CHARGED WITH WAR CRIMES AT DACHAU CONCENTRATION CAMP, TOLD AN AMERICAN MILITARY COURT TODAY THAT HE HIMSELF HAD BEEN TORTURED BY U.S. SOLDIERS UNTIL HIS "ARM WAS PARALYZED."

THE FORMER NAZI CRIMINAL INVESTIGATOR SAID THAT AFTER HIS ARREST MAY 6 HE HAD BEEN BEATEN "THROUGHOUT A DAY AND NIGHT," KICKED, FORCED TO STAND AT ATTENTION "FOR MANY HOURS," FORCED TO KNEEL ON ROUND OR SQUARE OBJECTS, AND FORCED TO LOOK INTO A BRIGHT LIGHT FOR HOURS.

ASKED WHO ADMINISTERED THIS TREATMENT, KICK SAID:

"THEY WERE PERSONS WHO WERE WEARING THE UNIFORM OF THE ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES."

HIS CHARGES WERE MADE AFTER THE PROSECUTOR, LT.COL.WILLIAM DENSON, REPEATEDLY BROUGHT OUT DISCREPANCIES BETWEEN KICK'S WRITTEN AND ORAL STATEMENTS.

THE TRIBUNAL DENIED A REQUEST BY THE DEFENDANTS THAT THEY BE GIVEN THE RIGHT TO CONDUCT THEIR OWN EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

THE TRIBUNAL DECREED THAT ONLY DEFENDANTS WHO LACKED COUNSEL COULD PARTICIPATE IN THE QUESTIONING. ALL 20 DEFENDANTS IN THE PRISONERS' DOCK HAVE THEIR OWN ATTORNEYS, AS DO TWO OTHERS BEING TRIED IN ABSENTIA. THE RULING CAME AFTER U.S. CHIEF PROSECUTOR JUSTICE ROBERT H.JACKSON SAID THAT PERMITTING THE PRISONERS TO EXAMINE WITNESSES WOULD CONVERT THE TRIAL INTO A "PERFORMANCE."

DR.OTTO STAHMER, ATTORNEY FOR GOERING, EXPLAINED AFTERWARDS THAT HE MADE THE REQUEST FOR CROSS-EXAMINATION ON BEHALF OF HIS CLIENT BECAUSE "AS TEMPERAMENTAL A MAN AS GOERING FINDS IT NEARLY UNBEARABLE TO SIT THERE DAY AFTER DAY WITHOUT BEING ABLE TO OPEN HIS MOUTH. HE WILL EXPLODE IF HE DOESN'T GET A CHANCE SOON TO UNBURDEN HIMSELF."

STAHMER SAID THAT IN MANY RESPECTS GOERING WAS LIKE A BIG BOY, RELATIVELY EASY TO GUIDE BUT WITH "OCCASIONAL GREAT OUTBURSTS OF TEMPERAMENT."

THE GAUNT-FACED HOLLOW-EYED HESS, CHILDISHLY GLEEFUL OVER GETTING THE SPOTLIGHT AT THE TRIAL, TOLD HIS COMRADES BEFORE THE SESSION STARTED ABOUT HIS FAKING AMNESIA.

GRAND ADMIRALS KARL DOENITZ AND ERICH RAEDER SHOOK WITH LAUGHTER, AND MOST OF THE OTHERS CHUCKLED AS HESS RELATED THE STORY TO THEM.

WHEN THE SESSION OPENED HESS LAID ASIDE THE NOVEL HE HAD BEEN READING DURING THE OPENING DAYS OF THE TRIAL, AND FOLLOWED THE PROCEEDINGS CLOSELY.

TO MAJ.DOUGLAS KELLEY, U.S. ARMY PSYCHIATRIST, HESS HAD BOASTED OF HIS SKILLED NAVIGATION ON HIS ASTOUNDING FLIGHT TO ENGLAND IN MAY, 1941. HESS CONFIRMED REPORTS THAT HE HAD LEFT A NOTE FOR HITLER SAYING HE WAS GOING TO TRY TO APPEAL FOR PEACE IN THE HOPE OF WHAT HE TERMED SAVING THE WORLD FROM BOLSHEVISM.

ROME, DEC. 1-(AP)-FOREIGN MINISTER ALCIDE DE GASPERI INFORMED CROWN PRINCE UMBERTO TONIGHT THAT AN AGREEMENT HAD NOT YET BEEN REACHED BY LEADERS OF ITALIAN POLITICAL PARTIES ON THE FORMATION OF A NEW CABINET.

A COMMUNIQUE SAID DE GASPERI HOPED TO CONCLUDE HIS CONSULTATIONS WITH PARTY LEADERS TOMORROW. THE PLENARY SESSION OF THE COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL LIBERATION, WHICH WAS TO HAVE FORMALLY DESIGNATED DE GASPERI FOR THE PREMIERSHIP TONIGHT, WAS POSTPONED. THE SESSION TENTATIVELY WAS RE-SCHEDULED FOR TOMORROW.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE FOREIGN MINISTER SAID "THERE WERE NO FUNDAMENTAL DIFFICULTIES" BUT INDICATED THAT THE PARTIES STILL WERE DEADLOCKED ON DEMANDS FOR KEY CABINET POSTS INCLUDING THE MINISTRY OF THE INTERIOR. ITALY HAS REMAINED WITHOUT A GOVERNMENT FOR SEVEN DAYS.

DE GASPERI BEGAN HIS ATTEMPTS TO FORM A NEW GOVERNMENT BY CONFERRING WITH COUNT CARLO SFORZA, VITTORIO EMANUEL ORLANDO AND IVANOE BONOMI.

STOCKHOLM, DEC 1-(AP)-APPROXIMATELY 600 GERMAN MILITARY INTERNEES, INCLUDING 100 WHO ATTEMPTED SUICIDE OR SELF-MUTILATION, WERE HOSPITALIZED TODAY FOLLOWING A DAY OF VIOLENCE DURING WHICH THE SWEDISH GOVERNMENT BEGAN THE EXTRADITION OF 2,700 FORMER GERMAN ARMY SOLDIERS TO SOVIET TERRITORY.

THE OTHER 500 WERE SUFFERING FROM THE EFFECTS OF A WEEK-LONG HUNGER STRIKE. TWO OF THE DEPORTEES HAD SUCCEEDED IN TAKING THEIR OWN LIVES, SWEDISH AUTHORITIES SAID.

IN TWO OF THE FOUR CAMPS FROM WHICH THE GERMANS WERE BEING REMOVED TO A WAITING RUSSIAN SHIP AT TRALLEBORG, WILD SCENES WERE ENACTED WHEN SWEDISH SOLDIERS AND POLICE TRIED TO HALT THE INTERNEES AS THE LATTER CUT THEMSELVES WITH KNIVES, RAZORS AND BITS OF GLASS.

THE HUNGER STRIKE STARTED A WEEK AGO IN PROTEST TO AN ORDER TURNING THE FORMER SOLDIERS OVER TO THE RUSSIANS.

ALTHOUGH MOST OF THE 2,700 SOLDIERS WERE GERMANS, A NUMBER OF POLES, LITHUANIANS, ESTONIANS AND LATVIANS WHO HAD SERVED IN THE GERMAN ARMY ALSO WERE BEING DEPORTED.

VIENNA, DEC. 1-(AP)-THE AUSTRIAN GOVERNMENT TODAY PUBLISHED A LAW DESIGNED TO PUT AUSTRIA BACK ON A SHILLING BASIS, WITH THE "ENTIRE AUSTRIAN NATIONAL WEALTH" BACKING THE NEW CURRENCY AFTER DECEMBER 12.

BETWEEN DECEMBER 13 AND 20 AUSTRIANS WILL BE OBLIGED TO RETURN TO BANKS ALL GERMAN MARK NOTES OF TEN MARKS OR MORE AND ALL ALLIED MILITARY CURRENCY OF TEN SHILLINGS AND MORE.

AUSTRIANS ARE TO BE ALLOWED TO COLLECT ONLY 150 SHILLINGS PER PERSON OF THE NEW MONEY TO BE ISSUED BY THE AUSTRIAN NATIONAL BANK AT THE TIME OF EXCHANGE AND ARE TO BE LIMITED TO WITHDRAWALS OF 150 SHILLINGS A MONTH THEREAFTER. THESE LIMITATIONS ARE DESIGNED TO CUT DOWN THE TREMENDOUS AMOUNT OF MONEY IN CIRCULATION.

GERMAN REICHSMARKS AND ALLIED OCCUPATION CURRENCY IN DENOMINATIONS OF TEN MARKS OR SHILLINGS AND ABOVE ARE NO LONGER TO BE LEGAL TENDER AFTER DEC. 20.

ONLY SMALLER DENOMINATIONS AND GERMAN COINS NOT IN CIRCULATION AND SHILLINGS TO BE ISSUED BY THE NATIONAL BANK ARE TO BE ACCEPTED.

THE SHILLING IS QUOTED CURRENTLY AT THE EQUIVALENT OF TEN CENTS ALTHOUGH ON THE BLACK MARKET IT IS QUOTED AT 3 1/3 CENTS.

ALL AUSTRIAN BOOKS ARE TO BE KEPT IN SHILLINGS AFTER THE FIRST OF THE YEAR. THE NEW LAW DOES NOT APPLY TO ALLIED MILITARY PERSONNEL WHO ARE TO BE ABLE TO EXCHANGE THEIR OCCUPATION CURRENCY FOR NEW MONEY AT ARMY FINANCE OFFICES.

THE ARMY ELEVEN, INFERIOR IN POWER, WEIGHT AND EXPERIENCE, NEVER CROSSED NAVY'S 35-YARD LINE.

SOME OF THE SPECTATORS HADN'T SEEN A FOOTBALL FOR TWO YEARS OR MORE. THE GAME HAD BEEN GIVEN A BIG BUILDUP IN THE STARS AND STRIPS, ARMY NEWSPAPER, AND RED CROSS WORKERS HANDED OUT 20,000 HOT DOGS AND DOUGHNUTS.

SHANGHAI, DEC.1-(AP)-LT. GEN. ALBERT C. WEDEMEYER, COMMANDER OF U.S. FORCES IN CHINA, TODAY TERMED THE APPOINTMENT OF GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL AS ENVOY "MOST FORTUNATE."

HE TOLD NEWSMEN AT A CONFERENCE THAT MARSHALL IS WELL EQUIPPED TO DECIDE IMMEDIATELY SUCH DIFFICULT QUESTIONS AS WHETHER TO WITHDRAW U.S. MARINES AND WHETHER TO SELL WAR MATERIEL TO CHINA.

ASKED WHETHER THE UNITED STATES WOULD TRANSPORT CHINESE GOVERNMENT FORCES TO MANCHURIA BY AIR, WEDEMEYER REPLIED THAT "MANCHURIA IS A RUSSIAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS, AND IF CHINESE AND RUSSIANS ARE HOLDING THE DISCUSSIONS IN THAT REGARD, THEY ARE ON A HIGHER LEVEL THAN MYSELF--THE TWO CAN MAKE AGREEMENTS WITHOUT INVOLVING ME."

CONFIRMING THAT HUNDREDS OF AMERICAN AIRCRAFT HAD BEEN ORDERED FLOWN INTO THE SHANGHAI AREA FROM INDIA AND BURMA, WEDEMEYER TOLD NEWSMEN THAT HE PERSONALLY HAD ORDERED THE MASS FLIGHTS HALTED WHEN HE LEARNED THAT WEATHER CONDITIONS HAD CAUSED LOSS OF 11 OF 22 FIGHTER PLANES ON ONE HOP IN EASTERN CHINA. HE SAID HE WANTED NO MORE "FLYING AROUND IN BAD WEATHER--I DON'T WANT TO JEOPARDIZE AMERICAN LIVES."

AT LAST REPORTS, TWO PILOTS WERE DEAD AND ONE MISSING, FROM THE LOST FIGHTER PLANES.

NO COMBAT PLANES HAVE BEEN GIVEN TO CHINA SINCE THE WAR ENDED, HE ADDED; AND ONLY NON-COMBAT TYPES WERE BEING ASSEMBLED FOR POSSIBLE SALE TO CHIANG KAI-SHEK'S GOVERNMENT.

HE OFFERED NO FURTHER EXPLANATION OF RECENT FIGHTER-PLANE HOPS TO SHANGHAI, BEYOND SAYING THAT HE WAS TRYING TO CONTRACT AMERICANS INTO THE SHANGHAI AREA "FOR FUNNELLING THEM HOME."

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON, DEC. 1-(AP)-A LABOR DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL TODAY PREDICTED DEATH THIS WINTER FOR HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF EUROPEAN CHILDREN UNLESS INTERNATIONAL AID IN FOOD, CLOTHING AND MORAL SUPPORT IS GIVEN IN RECONSTRUCTION OF WAR-TORN COUNTRIES.

RECENTLY RETURNED FROM THE INTERNATIONAL LABOR CONFERENCE MEETING IN PARIS, MISS KATHARINE F.LENROOT, CHIEF OF THE DEPARTMENT'S CHILDREN'S BUREAU, GAVE A GLOOMY PICTURE OF GRAVE MALNUTRITION AND PRIVATION IN VIRTUALLY ALL AREAS FORMERLY OCCUPIED BY THE NAZIS.

THIS COUNTRY WOULD NOT BE "PLAYING SANTA CLAUS" IN OFFERING AID, SHE DECLARED IN A STATEMENT. I TWOULD BE IN "ACCORDANCE WITH THE ONLY FOREIGN POLICY THAT HAS A CHANCE TO SAVE OUR OWN COUNTRY AND THE WORLD FROM UTTER DESTRUCTION", MISS LENROOT ASSERTED, ADDING THAT RELIEF OF ALL KINDS SHOULD BE GIVEN "UNTIL THE AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL RESOURCES OF EUROPE ARE REVIVED TO MEET HUMAN NEEDS."

A SURVEY OF PRESENT CONDITIONS, AS REPORTED TO THE ILO, INDICATED THAT MILLIONS OF PERSONS ARE HOMELESS AND LACK EVEN BARE NECESSITIES IN FOOD AND CLOTHING, SHE REPORTED. THE SURVEY INCLUDED THESE OBSERVATIONS:

POLAND: A MILLION HOMELESS, WITH 300,000 PEASANTS FACING A WINTER TO BE SPENT IN HOLES IN THE GROUND; ONE OUT OF EACH NINE CHILDREN UNDER 14 HAS LOST BOTH PARENTS (COMPARED WITH ONE IN 100 IN THIS COUNTRY), AND 300,000 HAVE BEEN SEPARATED FROM THEIR FAMILIES. ANOTHER 2,000,000 MUST BE CLOTHED AND PARTIALLY FED.

NETHERLANDS: ACUTE SHORTAGES OF HOUSING, FOOD, SHOES, CLOTHING AND OTHER NECESSITIES. INFANT MORTALITY NEARLY FOUR TIMES NORMAL.

BELGIUM: ONE-SIXTH OF WORKING POPULATION DEPORTED AS FORCED LABOR; UNDER-FEEDING AND TUBERCULOSIS CONDITIONS ARE SERIOUS. THE GOVERNMENT IS MAKING PROGRESS TOWARD RECONSTRUCTION.

DEC 2 1945

GREECE: MORE THAN 1,300 OUT OF 6,500 TOWNS DESTROYED, INCLUDING 879 TOTALLY WIPED OUT, AND APPROXIMATELY 1,200,000 PEOPLE HOMELESS. THERE ARE 400,000 CASES OF TUBERCULOSIS AND ONE-THIRD OF THE POPULATION HAS MALARIA.

HUNGARY: FOOD AND HEATING PROSPECTS ARE SERIOUS, WITH 75 PER CENT OF COUNTRY'S LIVESTOCK GONE.

ITALY: APPROXIMATELY 8,500,000 HOMELESS, TRANSPORT DISORGANIZED, SEVERE SHORTAGE OF WHEAT AND PRACTICALLY NO FUEL.

AUSTRAI, CZECHOSLOVAKIA, YUGOSLAVIA, AND ALBANIA: SIMILAR CONDITIONS.

FRANCE: NO HEATING FUEL, VERY LITTLE MILK, EGGS OR MEAT, INCREASING JUVENILE DELINQUENCY, AND INFANT MORTALITY TWICE THE NORMAL FIGURE.

"THE STORY IS MUCH THE SAME FOR ALL EUROPE," MISS LENROOT DECLARED. "ECONOMIC LIFE IS BROKEN DOWN; MATERIAL RESOURCES HAVE BEEN DESTROYED; THE PHYSICAL RESISTANCE OF THE PEOPLE, AFTER THESE YEARS OF PRIVATION, HAS BEEN WEAKENED. FAMILIES ARE SEPARATED. AND, A SERIOUS MATTER, LARGE NUMBERS OF YOUTH ARE DEMORALIZED."

MacArthur Orders 59 Japanese Leaders Held for War Trial

IMPERIAL PRINCE, TWO EX-PREMIERS WILL BE ARRESTED

Political Leaders, Admirals, Generals and Industrialists Named.

HITS AT ZAIBATSU

Industrial Financial Hierarchy to Be Broken Up By Allied Orders

LANDSBERG

TOKYO, Monday, Dec. 3.—(AP) In the most important single list of war crime suspects yet issued by Allied headquarters, General MacArthur today ordered the arrest of 59 prominent Japanese, reaching for the first time into the Imperial household and the ranks of Japan's industrial-financial hierarchy, the Zaibatsu.

MacArthur's abolition of the National Financial Control association and completion of a detailed inventory of Japanese industry, to form the basis of whatever reparations Japan may be required to pay, were other steps in the direction of demilitarizing Japan.

Those ordered arrested included 71-year-old Prince Morimasa Nashimoto and two former premiers, Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma and Koki Hirota. Two other ex-premiers, Kuniaki Koiso and Hideki Tojo, already are behind bars.

Political leaders, several generals and admirals, two newspaper executives and a number of important industrialists and bankers who financed Japan's aggression were among the persons whose arrest by the Japanese government was ordered by the Supreme Allied Commander.

The headquarters announcement did not specify any charges against Nashimoto, a lesser prince who became a field marshal in 1932 and who was a supreme war councillor for many years.

Family Control Hit

The new list, appearing as the Allies prepared to prosecute the first of 259 suspects in custody, seemed to answer the question raised here since family control of Japanese industry and finance was ordered broken up: Would members of the Zaibatsu themselves face trial?

Ordered arrested were such financial giants as Kiyoshi Goko, former president of the Mitsubishi Heavy Industries company; Seihin Ikeda, a Mitsui banker who became governor of the Bank of Japan; and Chikuhei Nakajima, founder of a fighter aircraft production company.

Military leaders ordered jailed included Admirals Soetake Toyoda and Sankichi Takahashi, each of whom had served as commander-in-chief of the combined fleet and chief of the Navy General Staff, and Field Marshal Shunroku Hata, former commander-in-chief of Japanese expeditionary forces in China and former minister of war.

Diplomats Face Trial

Japan's diplomatic corps contributed to the new list such figures as Eiji Amau, longtime Foreign Office spokesman and author of the Amau statement of April 1934, warning other powers to keep hands off China; and Masayuki Tani, who was foreign minister in the Tojo cabinet in 1942.

The newsmen named were Ingosuke Furuno, who was president of the recently disbanded Domei agency and councillor of the Cabinet Information bureau during the war; and Matsutaro Shoriki, president of the Tokyo newspaper Yomiuri and former chief of the criminal section of the Metropolitan Police bureau.

When arrested, the newly-named suspects will join those previously jailed and now awaiting trial at Sugamo and Omori prisons in the Tokyo area.

The National Financial Control association which MacArthur ordered abolished was one of 29 wartime financial bodies and banks closed Sept. 30. It was a policy-making organization sponsored by the government and with jurisdiction over all the Empire's financial institutions.

Inventory Completed

The industrial inventory was given to Edwin W. Pauley, chief of the U. S. reparations mission, only 12 days after he had requested it. It contained production figures, war damage and plant equipment inventories on all Japanese war industries, as well as compilations of all foreign assets owned by the Japanese whether government, corporate or private.

The list presumably may be used to determine what industries may be transferred bodily from Japan to Allied countries as reparations, or be destroyed in furtherance of the policy to demolish Japan's capacity to prepare for war.

The report covered in detail 23 major industries, including values of raw materials and finished products; lists of specific products, processing methods, types of equipment and materials required; relative positions of the nation's 15 largest family-dominated monopolies; price lists covering more than 100 commodities; and a tentative export-import program for 1946.

Pauley praised Lt. Cmdr. Joseph Reday of Washington, D. C., chief of the Research division of the Economic and Scientific section of Allied headquarters, and Corp. Jack McKela, Dalton, Mass., writer of the report, for the speed with which they accomplished a difficult task.

Interest Growing Over UNO Posts

London, Dec. 2 (AP)—Delegates to the Preparatory Commission of the United Nations Organization have shown greatly increased interest in high posts in the peace agency since President Truman announced that UNO should take over the world problems which the Big Three have been handling.

Although the elections will not take place until the General Assembly meets in January, delegates are discussing possible candidates for secretary general. Among those mentioned are General Eisenhower; Norman Robertson, Canadian Under Secretary of State, and Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Minister.

Ballot Proposal Discussed

Chief candidates for the presidency of the General Assembly are Belgium's Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak and Australia's Foreign Minister Herbert Vere Evatt.

Meanwhile, the delegates also were discussing Canada's proposal for a secret ballot on a permanent home for the UNO. The Canadians proposed that a vote be taken on the precise site, without a preliminary decision between Europe and America.

If this plan is adopted, delegates say, it is possible that some countries will reverse their decision to vote for the United States, which at present seems to have a clear-cut majority.

FRENCH ASSEMBLY VOTES FOR STATE BANKING CONTROL

Bank of France and Four Major Depositories Affected by Action.

DEGAULLE BACKS MOVE

At His Request, Two Business Banks Are Excluded Under Law.

WILSON

PARIS, Dec. 2 — (AP) The Constituent Assembly today nationalized the Bank of France and four major deposit banks, placing more than 80 per cent of France's bank deposits under state control. The vote was 521 to 35.

Gen. de Gaulle personally appeared before the Assembly and asked that the government's measure be passed without any profound changes. Two large business banks were not included in the nationalization at his request. Meeting in an extraordinary session before tomorrow's opening of the stock exchange, the Assembly wrought in France one of the most sweeping financial reforms ever achieved by democratic means.

The bill provides for the nationalizing before Jan. 1, 1946, of the Bank of France, with 47,000 stockholders, and the four deposit banks, all having a total capitalization of $53,500,000. The four deposit banks have a total of 400,000 stockholders.

The nationalized banks will be directed by 12-members commissions named by the government.

The government will take over the shares of these banks, and assume their management with government appointed officials. The law provides also for narrow control of business banks, through naming of a government commissioner to each one.

Creates Credit Council

The measure also created a National Credit Council, which could recommend nationalization of still other bank establishments.

Shareholders of the Bank of France will be reimbursed with dividends not higher than those of 1944, and the rate of interest on the amortized sinking fund bonds is restricted to not more than two per cent.

Shareholders of deposit banks will have their stock purchased over a 50-year-period, beginning in 1947, and will be reimbursed with dividends on an average stock value of the past year.

De Gaulle, in asking that business banks be left outside the nationalization program, supported the contention that to include these banks would be harmful to France's chances for reviving her export trade, since the reserve in those banks was vital in that respect.

In addition to the Bank of France, the Assembly voted to nationalize these four deposit banks, holding 55 per cent of France's bank deposits: Credit Lyonnais, Societe Generale, Comptoir National D'Escompte de Paris, and Banque Nationalie Pour le Commerce et L'Industrie.

The legislature's Finance commission had sought to extend nationalization to the Banque de Paris et Des Pays-Bas and the Banque de L'Union Parisienne, two business banks.

De Gaulle Backs More

De Gaulle appeared after the Assembly had voted 519 to 38 against a substitute measure proposed by a group of moderates that would have excluded all banks but the Bank of France from the nationalization program.

"The government has provided in its program for nationalization of credit," said De Gaulle. "The project, drawn up with great care, takes into consideration all conditions, interior and abroad, that are to be envisaged in the matter.

"There are certainly differences of opinion on the details, and under normal circumstances a second study would be useful, but there should be no question of that today.

"The government asked the Assembly, very strongly, to not make any profound changes in its text, for that would make necessary a second governmental deliberation which no one wishes."

Deputy Joseph Laniel, in arguing that nationalization be confined to the Bank of France, said that the shares of the five major banks whose nationalization was proposed had fallen 10,000,000,000 francs ($200,000,000) on the stock exchange in the past week, and that nationalization would wreak a great hardship on the stockholders.

Finance Minister Rene Plevin, speaking for the government's proposal, said the French were not following the program of the Labor government in England for nationalizing only the Bank of England "to which is confided the task of orienting credit in the public interests."

He said that "in none of the countries who will be our partners (in foreign trade) tomorrow have the business banks been nationalized. If one wishes the revival of our exports, we must have a bank reserve."

France's business banks are chiefly concerned with the taking of shares and administration of shares in enterprises. They accept only a few classes of deposits.

The Assembly voted, despite Communist opposition, to amend the method of reimbursing shareholders of the Bank of France. The rate of interest on the sinking fund bonds was restricted to not more than two per cent, instead of three per cent, and it was specified that dividends on stockholder shares of 1945 and 1946 could not be higher than those of 1944.

The government proposed purchase of the stock over a 50-year period and payment of a dividend based on the average stock value of the past year.

Paris, Dec. 2 (AP)—A Paris jeweler reported a 400,000 franc ($8,000) diamond robbery today by three men wearing American uniforms, and Paris police carried out a series of raids on the Left Bank of the Seine last night in an effort to check a growing crime wave.

The police raids netted 21 persons, two wanted on charges of attempted murder. The police questioned 3,325 individuals.

HITLER'S NAME DISTURBS HESS

Prison Psychologist Conducts Surprise Examination

TUCKER

Nuernberg, Germany, Dec. 2 (AP). Rudolf Hess, the self-confessed amnesia faker once known as "Hitler's obedient shadow," flared angrily today at each mention of Hitler's name during a surprise re-examination conducted by a prison psychologist.

Dr. G. M. Gilbert, who quizzed Hess, said the tests were undertaken to determine what effect the "sudden restoration of memory" had on the man who until his flight to England in 1941 had trotted faithfully for years at Hitler's heels.

Angry Retort By Hess

Hess, whose confession that he was only pretending to be a sufferer from amnesia was followed by a decision of the International War Crimes Tribunal that he was fit to stand trial with nineteen other top Nazis, had no difficulty in remembering Hitler's name. He was asked by Dr. Gilbert:

"Don't you know what Hitler said about you after you flew to Scotland?"

"I don't know, I don't want to know, it doesn't interest me," Hess retorted angrily, according to Dr. Gilbert.

Hitler was reported to have been furious over Hess's flight, which caught the entire Nazi hierarchy by surprise in May, 1941.

"A Refuge In Amnesia"

Dr. Gilbert said Hess subsided after this outburst, and replied quietly to all questions until Hitler's name again was mentioned.

The psychologist asked Hess if he knew that all the streets that had been named after him had been changed by direct order of Hitler.

"Of course I know it, including a hospital that was named after me," Hess bristled.

"Oh, so you know about that," Dr. Gilbert said.

"I didn't know about it, but only assumed it was so," Hess amended. "It would have been justified under the circumstances."

Dr. Gilbert said the reply showed "the defensive mechanism of a hysteric personality reacting to an idea that was catastrophic to his ego—he was seeking a refuge in amnesia."

Opinion Confirmed

Dr. Gilbert said that after talking about incidental matters he asked Hess whether his previously claimed loss of memory "was really a fake."

"Well, maybe not entirely," Hess replied.

"Was it a habit?" Gilbert pressed.

"Maybe," Hess said. "Maybe I just didn't try to remember, or didn't pay attention. I suppose that's possible."

Dr. Gilbert declared this confirmed the opinion of psychiatrists that Hess was actually suffering from hysterical amnesia, and that it contained an element of "deliberate motivation." Dr. Gilbert said his original claim to outright simulation was only "a rationalization."

Goering Reported Upset

Later Dr. Gilbert recalled to Hess stories out of Britain during the war in which Hess had scoffed at reports of destruction of German cities by Allied air armadas.

Hess said he still had not seen the destruction, because after flying from England to Nuernberg he was transferred from the airfield to the jail in a closed ambulance.

"Ah, well, those old buildings," Hess sighed. "It's about time somebody destroyed them, anyway."

Reichsmarshal Goering, the No. 1 defendant in the war crimes trial, was reported today to be considerably upset over the damaging testimony given Friday and Saturday by Maj. Gen. Erwin Lahousen, German counterintelligence officer plucked from the prison-camp jungles of Austria as a star witness for the prosecution.

Point Generally Overlooked

Goering was reported to have turned to Field Marshal Keitel during Lahousen's testimony and to have said:

"My God! We overlooked that dog on July 20."

Goering's reference was to the wholesale execution of German officers and others which followed the attempt to assassinate Hitler on that date in 1944.

Associate Prosecutor Col. John Amen, of New York said today a point generally overlooked was that Lahousen was promoted to the infantry as a general officer after the work of the secret inner group in army intelligence had been completed.

"If he had been around at the time of the bomb plot he certainly would have been executed," said Amen, explaining that since he was not connected with the group at the time of the Nazis' investigation he apparently was overlooked.

Claims Role For Patriots

Lahousen has been under the wing of the prosecution only since August. Until then he was thought dead.

When he testified, Keitel and Col. Gen. Gustav Jodl shrugged and were reported to have exclaimed "traitor."

When advised of this Lahousen smiled bleakly and said, "I don't blame them."

"I had to speak for the patriots who were murdered," he explained. "I am the only one left."

Keitel had been accused by Lahousen of giving orders for the assassination of French Generals Maxime Weygand and Henri Giraud, which were never carried out. Lahousen said also that the German high command was responsible for atrocities on the Eastern front.

British Judge Proves 'Toughest' Figure at the Nuernberg Trials

GALLAGHER

NUERNBERG, Dec. 2 — (AP) After two weeks of this international war crimes trial, the "toughest" character in the courtroom has emerged—and he is not in the defendants' dock.

He is a small, bald, lantern-jawed individual who looks like the John Bull cartoons and who sits in the middle of the judges' bench—Chief Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence.

There is no doubt in the mind of anyone here as to who dominates the courtroom. In two weeks, the dry, unemotional son of one of Britain's Lord Chief Justices, Lord Trevethin, has won the honor hands down.

Sir Geoffrey wears glasses but seldom looks through them. He usually peers over them, and when he does even the toughest and most courtwise of the prosecution lawyers peckle, gape for words and look red-faced.

Even Hermann Goering, who once had quite a reputation as a tough guy, halts his endless grinning and acting when the chief justice cocks a disciplinary eye in his direction.

The American lawyers are fond of making wisecracks as they present their case, but all such attempts have fallen flat under Lawrence's frosty gaze.

"The chief justice believes in the dignity of the court and does not believe the court is a place to make jokes," one of his friends confided.

Sir Geoffrey, as chief justice, has the toughest job facing any jurist. He has to keep the trial moving despite the differences in five legal systems and four languages. Often he confers with his colleagues, particularly U. S. Judge Francis Biddle, but much of the time he just goes on his own. That the trial keeps moving is a tribute to skill, gathered in 12 years as a traveling circuit judge.

He usually sits leaning forward on the bench, his glasses on the end of his nose, taking notes in a big black book. And woe betide the careless attorney who slips while presenting the number of a document of reference in the case.

Sir Geoffrey will inqure in a testy voice: "I can't find that; where is it?" and he usually looks at the flustered attorney as if he were a not-too-pedigreed specimen of Guernsey bull, which he judges as a hobby.

Windy lawyers who shadow box all around a main point—and the court has a considerable number—suddenly find themselves interrupted by a dry voice saying "don't you mean this?" and Lawrence sums up the whole argument in about 10 words.

The best comeback any of the noted attorneys here has made to date after such an interruption was "yes sir."

British attorneys, apparently well aware of the chief justice's sternness, have been extremely careful and correct. The other lawyers are learning in the same way a small boy finds out whether a stove is hot—and with the same result.

DEC 3 1945 NIGHT

FORMER NAZI LEADER REPORTED NEAR DEATH

NUERNBERG, Dec. 2. — (AP) Dr. Karl Haushofer, whose teachings of geopolitics to the Hitler clique almost caused him to be landed in the prisoners box at Nuernberg as a defendant, is near death at his home near Munich, it was learned today.

The 76 year-old exponent of the Nazi superman myth suffered a stroke three days ago, according to a letter from Haushofer's wife to the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S J., vice president of Georgetown University.

Father Walsh, on leave to Prosecutor Robert H. Jackson as an expert consultant on matters of religious persecution, studied thousands of words of Haushofer's microfilmed lectures, speeches and magazine articles before it was decided not to indict the aging educator as a war criminal.

Tenth Berlin Newspaper

BERLIN, Dec. 2 (AP).—Berlin's tenth newspaper, the Russian-licensed "Night Express," is scheduled to appear within a week. A daily, it will employ German personnel and have no affiliations with political parties or occupying armies. It will be the seventh paper published in the Russian sector of Berlin. Those published in other sectors are the American-licensed "Der Tagesspiegel," the British Army's "Der Berliner" and the French Army's "Der Kurier."

U. S. OCCUPATION AROUSING REICH

Growing German Resentment Stirs Talk of Resistance, Report Says.

By JAMES P. KING

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 2.—(AP) A secret survey by American intelligence officers disclosed today said German resentment against American occupation methods is developing into bitter hatred with growing talk of resistance.

The 20,000 word report on "The German Viewpoint" compiled by two American intelligence officers and two trusted Germans and disclosed what Germans are talking about among themselves. The report was described officially as "more nearly true than any yet produced."

Even among some clergymen and Germans who profess pro-Allied sympathies the view is held that the American military was involved in red tape, and suffers from lack of policy which has led to injustices and confusion.

The report pictured Germany as a land of groaners, and quoted one civil servant as saying "the only thing Germans would be able really to agree on would be some form of resistance."

The council of the Evangelical Church in Germany made a formal protest to the Inter-Allied Control Council charging injustices in the denazification program, the report disclosed.

"This campaign as we see it in the American zone will not exterminate Hitlerism," clergymen said. "Indeed danger exists that Hitlerism will win new adherents."

The report said that mention of a new "Freikorps" (illegal military formations organized after th first World War) was frequent and that it was expected in many quarters that desperation and idleness of youth will have violent consequences.

"The Germans indicate their apprehension in various ways," the report stated. "One university intends to keep a sharp lookout for the formation of Nazi and Communist cells, while parents fear that their children will form into gangs."

Clergymen and laymen were reported to be of the opinion that the American policy is "resentful of the church's position as a defender of rights and suspicious of the church as an educational force."

Asserting that this has been evident in all levels of the Catholic hierarchy, the report said "One Catholic priest had to be restrained by his superior from delivering strongly anti-American sermons."

The Evangelical church protest stated, "We never let it remain in doubt that we do not consider it possible to leave devoted adherents of Hitler in leading positions. Today however we find above all in the American zone that in cases of dismissals no investigation is made whether the former party members joined the party under pressure. We find that many persons are being arrested or dismissed who did not even belong to the party and some whom at the risk of other existence fought against national socialism."

The protest said Michael Cardinal Von Faulhaber of the Catholic church was ignored some weeks ago when he "drew atention to the military government to injustices that are being commited daily in the dismissal of former National Socialists."

The clergymen protested too against the "freedom accorded the Poles and other foreigners when they take their revenge on the German people for evils which the Nazis inflicted on them."

Charge Army Stands By

The clergymen charged that the American army stands by at these acts of outrage while UNRRA encourages their activity.

The intelligence investigators heard some Germans talking of organizing vigilante bands against the displaced persons while many others felt "groups may be organized to punish fraternizing women."

The report said that a feeling of hopeless despair is voiced by virtually the whole German nation, with demands that something be done to help rebuild the country.

Fraternization is still one of the main causes of burning resentment, and wide concern is expressed over the loose morals of German girls, the survey said.

Simple but strong motives of jealousy may convert otherwise non-political Germans into members of the resistance," the investigators were told.

King Christian Receives Patton

Copenhagen, Dec. 2 (AP)—Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., was received by King Christian X of Denmark today. During the day the General toured Copenhagen with the United States ambassador, Monnett B. Davies, and Count Folke Bernadotte, of Sweden.

Finnish Judge Asks to Quit

HELSINKI, Dec. 2 (AP)—Supreme Court President Hialmar Neovius has asked the government to relieve him of his duties as presiding justice of the Finnish War Crimes Court, for "health reasons," it was learned today.

The move followed strong leftist criticism of the handling of the trial, which has been in adjournment since Nov. 17. Neovius was known to have cast his vote for release of former Finance Minister Vaino Tanner and of three other Finnish war-time leaders until resumption of the trial Dec. 1.

Pravda Says World State Discussions Injure UNO

Moscow, Dec. 2 (AP)—A foreign affairs commentator in Pravda, Communist party organ, said today that discussions of a world state—advocated on several occasions by British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin—were injuring the United Nations Organization.

Without mentioning Bevin by name, the reviewer asserted that "foreign proposals" for a world state offered no panacea for war and atomic-bomb dangers and said the arguments in favor of such proposals were "little convincing."

This is true, he said, "because in no way can the fact be ignored that, under the flag of preaching universal trust, there is being pulled a project for undermining the real substance of the charter of the United Nations—its efficiency based on the collaboration, first of all, between the great powers on whom rest the responsibility for maintaining peace."

Kalinin Urges Language Study

MOSCOW, Dec. 2 (AP).—President Michael I. Kalinin advised Soviet youth today to become better acquainted with the languages, customs and characters of foreign peoples, in view of Russia's expanding international contacts. He addressed a session of the fourteenth plenary meeting of the Comsomol Russian youth organization.

AID FOR ARMENIANS PROMISED BY RUSSIA

MOSCOW, Dec. 2—(AP) A special decision published today by the Council of People's Commissars says that preparations are under way for receiving and accommodating Armenians living abroad who wish to return to the Armenian Soviet Socialist Republic, a member republic of the Soviet Union.

Tass agency said Armenians abroad are applying for permission to return to Armenia.

The Soviet government has earmarked a fund to pay 50 per cent of the cost of building individual houses for returning Armenians and has decided that the Armenians will not have to pay customs duties on possessions brought back with them.

CABINET CRISIS HOLDS IN ITALY

ROME, Dec. 2—(AP) An unexpected leftist demand for two key cabinet posts added new difficulties today to attempts of Foreign Minister Alcide de Gasperi to form a new Italian government.

As the political crisis which has prevented formation of a government went into its eighth day, the Socialists and Action party were understood to have insisted on both the interior and foreign affairs portfolios.

A source close to de Gasperi said the Christian Democratic leader would never yield both posts to the left wing. This informant expressed hope, however, that the six coalition parties would still come to terms at a meeting of their secretaries with de Gasperi.

Leone Cattani, Liberal party secretary, described the leftist demands as a "deliberate attempt to sabotage de Gasperi." In the tug-of-war for key ministries, the Liberals themselves have insisted on the interior portfolio.

The Leftists had not objected previously to de Gasperi's retaining the foreign affairs portfolio himself.

Rome newspapers predicted that the Liberals, who provoked the current crisis by forcing the resignation of "moderate leftist" Premier Ferruccio Parri Nov. 24, would not participate in the new government unless they were given the interior post.

The Socialist newspaper Avanti said "after eight days the crisis is still at the starting point," and speculated that de Gasperi might decline to form a government if the Liberals refused to participate.

The Christian Democrat Il Popolo said speed was essential in forming a new government because of discussions in the United States on UNRRA aid for Italy.

Valencia Police Stop Carlist-Falange Fight

Madrid, Dec. 2 (AP)—Shots fired into the air by police broke up a fight in Valencia between 500 Carlists demonstrating for the return of monarchy, and a group of members of Franco's Falange Youth Front.

Valencia's Calle dela Pas was filled with people when the Carlists marched toward the Falange Youth headquarters. Shortly after the two groups clashed, nine police, led by a captain who fired into the air, dispersed the rioters. No serious injuries or arrests were reported.

Vote In Albania Runs Smoothly

Tirana, Alabania, Dec. 2 (AP)—Albania's first national election in 21 years was held today without incident and although the results were not expected before late tonight, it is generally accepted that Premier Enver Hoxha's Democratic Front ticket would be named intact to the constituent assembly.

A field of twenty independent candidates—narrowed to eighteen by last minute withdrawals—was offered in the districts where Hoxha and his ministers were not running. They are not classified as opposition candidates, however.

A previous announcement that negative votes would not be permitted was amended last night and boxes for negative votes appeared at all voting places.

Early returns on votes cast up until noon showed that 52 per cent of Tirana's electorate and 65 per cent of the votes in Durrazo voted. The Democratic Front newspaper Bashkimi said Hoxha's ticket of 82 candidates expected to get 85 per cent of the vote.

AUTONOMISTS SAID TO HAVE 4,000 ARMED

British Deny Anglo-U.S. Reinforcements Are

Moved Into Iran

Tehran, Dec. 2 (AP)—Rebel democrat autonomists, with about 4,000 men under arms, have seized police and Government officials in strife-torn Azerbaijan province, three official American observers reported today after returning from that province to the borders on Soviet Russia.

The British Embassy here, simultaneously, vigorously denied reports that British and American reinforcements had moved into Iran.

The American Embassy said 2,000 American troops had arrived from the United States, but that these had been sent as replacements for men going home under the army point system.

Three U.S. Camps Remain

Two hundred of the new arrived Americans were sent to Tehran to complete liquidation of American military installations, definitely scheduled for January 1, it was stated. The United States State Department has suggested that British and Russian troops also evacuate Iran by that date.

Only three main American camps remain in Iran—Amirabad, Khorramshahr and Abadan.

It is understood the Americans have requested the Russians to evacuate "Camp Stalingrad," near Kazvin, which was turned over to the Russians several months ago. The request was made, it was reported, so camp property can be disposed of.

Governor Reported Killed

At the same time, the Tehran Journal reported that "rebels who entered the town several days ago" killed the Governor of Maraghen and wounded a military officer and a soldier.

Americans making the trip were John D. Jernegen, secretary of the American Embassy at Tehran; Major Carl P. Garver, embassy air attache, and Capt. Alixis M. Gagarine, assistant military attache.

The Americans said their general impression was that conditions at Tabriz, main city of Azerbaijan, were "superficially normal." Azerbaijan is the province which Iranian troops have been prevented from entering by Soviet authorities who contended greater bloodshed might result.

Election Boycott Reported

The Americans said members of the autonomist party all wear white armbands, and some carry white flags covered with Persian lettering.

They estimated the number of "tourists" in Azerbaijan at 2,000. Iranians have contended that "tourists" were allowed to cross over an uncontrolled border by the Russians.

The observers said that Assembly elections held recently in Azerbaijan had been boycotted by all parties except the autonomists.

Many Roadblocks Found

The Assembly, as one of its first official acts, voted for autonomy for the province.

Jernegen and Garver made the trip in Garver's personal plane, while Gagarine traveled by automobile. They reported innumerable roadblocks between Tabriz and Kazvin, guarded by autonomists who demanded identity papers of all travelers, with the exception of those in Soviet military vehicles.

Maragheh is about 50 miles south of Tabriz, main city of Azerbaijan which Soviet authorities have prevented Iranian troops from entering for the purpose of putting down an insurrection.

Dispatch From Tass

The newspaper said the governor was shot down in the street and died immediately. It added that Colonel Moine-Azad and his orderly were seriously wounded. The name of the governor was not given.

[A Tass dispatch from Tehran quoted newly appointed Governor General Bayart, of Azerbaijan, as saying the Iran Government had given him full freedom of action in the province.

[Bayart also was quoted as saying that when he was at Tehran he wanted to introduce a law for Azerbaijan's self-administration, but had failed.]

U.S. Plan Rejected Soviet Diplomat Says

Moscow, Dec. 2 (AP)—A Moscow diplomatic source said today the Soviet Union has turned down a United States proposal that Allied troops be withdrawn from Iran by January 1.

The Moscow radio, meanwhile, said Russia would take no part in the politics of northern Iran, which is occupied by Red Army troops.

[The United States State Department made public November 26 the text of a note delivered to the Russian Government in Moscow which said American troops would be withdrawn from Iran by January 1 and proposing similar action by Britain and Russia. The note said that since hostilities had ceased there was no "compelling reason" for Allied troops to remain in Iran until March 2, 1946—the date originally agreed upon by the Big Three.]

Moscow Radio Disclaimer

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Moscow radio said today Iranian reactionaries were misrepresenting the Soviet Union's "friendly attitude" toward Iran and "intriguing to stir up trouble between the Soviet Union and the British and Americans."

The broadcast said Soviet representatives had "nothing to do" with the "national democratic movement" developing in the northern provinces of Iran. The Soviet Union regarded the movement as "the internal affair of Iran," the broadcast added.

ARABS PLAN BOYCOTT OF ZIONIST INDUSTRY

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 2—(AP) The Arab League Council, in a move to throttle Jewish trade in Palestine, decided today to boycott all Zionist industry.

If the council's decision is approved by delegates of the league's seven member nations, the action would mean the loss of all Middle East outlets for Palestine's rapidly expanding industries.

A statement said the actual provisions of the boycott would be announced tomorrow by Abdel Rahman Azzam Bey, secretary general of the league.

tiative.

Nehru said he expected the administration of India to form a central government after the elections next spring, "representing the democratic forces within the country." Then, he said, should follow the setting up of a constituent assembly.

Brings Army Close To People

Nehru asserted that the activities of the Indian National Army, organized in Burma to fight against the British, and the present trial of its officers had had the effect of bringing the army closer to the people. Heretofore most Indians had considered the army as something apart from themselves and almost foreign, he said.

Exploits of the Indian National Army, disclosed by the lifting of censorship and the trial of national army officers, Nehru said, had caused many of the country's youth to question the Gandhian philosophy of nonviolence. Many were not thinking of using force as a means of gaining independence. This, he continued, was the subject of considerable thought and discussion by congress leaders.

Gandhi Confers With Casey

Calcutta, Dec. 2 (AP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi, who has begun a five-week tour of Bengal and Assam provinces, conferred for more than an hour and a half last night with R. G. Casey, governor of Bengal.

Details of the meeting were not disclosed, but it was believed the two men discussed recent anti-British disturbances in Calcutta in which at least 36 persons, including one American soldier, lost their lives.

It was the first meeting between Casey and the Indian Nationalist leader.

The New Szechwan daily asserted that a new Sino-Russian agreement on Manchuria was taking shape in negotiations which it said "are proceeding satisfactorily." This would supplement a recent agreement under which Russian withdrawal from Manchuria was deferred a month to enable Nationalist administration troops to take over.

The new agreement, granted that one is in the making, probably would concern joint Sino-Russian control of the more important enterprises in Manchuria.

Yesterday, Nationalist forces were reported to have reached Tahushan, where Chinese Communists earlier were said to have dug in for a firm stand. Tahushan is 65 miles miles southwest of Mukden. It was not clear whether the Nationalists had by-passed Tahushan or whether the Communists had withdrawn.

The China Times reported that troops of free-lance warlord Chang Hsueh-shih, formerly depicted as supporting the Communists, had entered Mukden. However, other sources said that General Chang had dispatched emissaries to Chinese Government headquarters at Chinhsien to surrender his Manchurian army, and there was uncertainty whether his force was pro-Nationalist or pro-Communist.

General Chang is reported to have stipulated that if surrender terms were signed they must provide for the full freedom of his brother, "Young Marshal" Chang Hsueh-liang, who has been under surveilance since December, 1937, for the twelve-day detention of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at Sian.

Meanwhile, Vice Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, Seventh Fleet Commander, announced that United States naval personnel on Dec. 10 would begin training Chinese crews to operate amphibious vessels.

The school, which will enroll 600 Chinese sailors and sixty officers, will be "for the purpose of providing Chinese crews for ships employed in effecting the surrender terms of Japan," Admiral Barbey said.

While the three-month training period probably would prevent Chinese trainees from transporting Government troops to Manchuria in time to affect the present situation, the fleet commander expressed hope that eventually they would replace United States sailors and permit their demobilization.

At present the Chinese Navy has no amphibious vessels and Admiral Barbey declined to speculate whether it was planned to provide any. He said that a ten-man staff and three LST's manned by low-point crews would operate the training program at Tsingtao.

Another development in the Manchurian crisis was the departure of President Chiang Kai-shek's elder son, Chiang Chung-kuo, for Changchun, Manchuria capital.

Chiang Chunk-kuo, who left Manchuria in the face of Chinese Communist pressure, is the first important Government official to return there since the announcement of the agreement under which the Russians are delaying their withdrawal from Manchuria to permit Chinese Government administrators and troops to move in.

Accompanying young Chiang was Chang Kian-gau, chairman of the board of directors of the Chinese Changchun Railway, which under the recent Russian-Chinese treaty will be jointly owned and operated.

Renewed Parleys Forecast

In Chungking, new interest was shown in the long-delayed peace parleys between Nationalists and Chinese Communists after reports that the discussions would be resumed December 10.

Communist sources here foresaw new fighting, however, saying that Gen. Ho Ying-chin, commander in chief of the Nationalist army, had issued orders on November 3 for seven government armies to launch drives in the direction of Kalgan, Chingteh and Mukden.

In China proper the first Nationalist-operated train on the northern section of the Canton-Hankow railroad since the Japanese occupation began in October, 1938, moved from Wuchang toward Hengyang.

Claims Documentary Proof

He submitted what he said were captured Government documents ordering wholesale attacks on Chinese Communists.

"There is hope for peace, but its realization depends on efforts of both sides, as well as the good will of foreign friends, especially America," Yeh asserted.

He said more than 80,000 men have been killed and wounded in the two opposing forces since Japan's surrender. He termed the situation "very serious but not hopeless; we do not look in the present fight as all-out civil war, yet."

The last civil war, more than ten years ago, lasted a decade, he said, although it involved smaller forces and the Communists' position then was weaker.

Aided By Coalition Idea

"Today, with Communists strengthened through reliance on the idea of a coalition government in contradiction to the old Soviet plan," the war could last ten years, he remarked.

He estimated the strength of Chinese Communists at more than 3,000,000 men and declared that they could sustain themselves for a decade without military aid from outside.

General Yeh contended, however, that the Communists never had objected to Nationalist landings at Manchurian ports and would not oppose airborne movements into other sectors. At the same time, he declared the Communists could not be responsible for acts of "popular armies" in Manchuria.

Will Send Delegates

Communists soon will send seven delegates to Chungking to talk peace, he announced, but "without political democracy there will be only false peace."

He charged the Kuomintang (Nationalist party) with a "double-faced" policy during the Japanese war, asserting that it fought the Japanese with one hand and Communists with the other. Now that this war has ended, he alleged that Nationalists were using puppets and armed Japanese to continue their war with the Communists.

He claimed evidence to Japanese participation in the form of 260 Nipponese soldiers of a unit captured by Communists November 29 and 40 from a police detachment captured November 27 in Shantung province.

Declaring that the Nationalists used "bandit" as a euphemism for "Communist," Yeh said that Chiang Kai-shek's "bandit suppression" order contained the statement that "on the present bandit suppression campaign depends the happiness and prosperity of the Chinese people." He said Chiang also had expressed the belief that unity in China would be impossible as long as Communists existed.

Yeh outlined the major areas of conflict as:

1. Central-southwest Shansi province, where the Chinese Reds face the forces of Gov. Yen Hsi-shan.
2. The Peiping-Suiyuan railroad extending southwestward.
3. The Peiping-Suiyuan (Inner-Mongolian) railroad.
4. The Tientsin-Pukow railroad extending southward.
5. Hopei province.
6. Honan province.
7. East Chekiang, south Kiangsi and south Anhwei provinces.

Yeh said 144 nationalist divisions, totaling 1,200,000 men, were opposing the Communists.

Ready for Long War

YENAN, China, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Chinese Communists, although anxious for peace, are prepared to fight a ten-year civil war, the Red chief of staff, General Yeh Ching-yin, declared today at an interview to which he devoted nine hours. RODERICK

A guerrilla tactician, General Yeh reviewed in detail events leading to the present strife in North China and concluded with an accusation that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists had used the disarming of Japanese as a pretext to attack and try to annihilate the Communist 8th Route Army. He submitted as proof what he said were captured government documents ordering wholesale attacks on Chinese Reds.

"There is hope for peace, but its realization depends on efforts of both sides, as well as the good will of foreign friends, especially America," Yeh asserted.

He said more than 80,000 men have been killed and wounded, in the two opposing forces, since Japan's surrender. He termed the situation "very serious but not hopeless; we do not look on the present fight as all-out civil war, yet."

Embassy Official Lays Blame On Chinese Reds

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—The Chinese Communists "have been doing more shouting than shooting," and the situation should not cause undue alarm, Chen Chih-mai, counselor at the Chinese Embassy, said today.

Asserting that he preferred to make his comments as a private citizen, Chen said in a broadcast that "when people talk about confusion and trouble in China, they are talking about the Chinese Communists."

"When the war ended, the Communists tried to reap the fruits of victory by seizing a portion of North China and filtering into Manchuria. . . . The Communists are now launching an open secession movement against the Government of China by means of force. Hence the trouble.

"But one should not be unduly alarmed by the situation. The Communists form only a distinct minority in China. . . ."

Chen also declared that "nobody in China today thinks that the United States, or Great Britain, or the Soviet Union, or France is reviving the game of power politics and imperialistic aggrandizement in China."

CHINESE FORCES APPROACH MUKDEN

Chiang's Troops Reported Within 30 Miles of Vital Rail Junction.

CHUNGKING, Monday, Dec. 3—(AP) Vanguards of the Chinese Nationalist army today reached points within 30 miles of Mukden, vital rail junction, Chinese Central News Agency dispatches reported.

The agency said Nationalist troops would be flown into Manchuria starting next week.

Chinese Communists Ready For 10-Year War, Chief Says

RODERICK

Yenan, China, Dec. 2 (AP)—Chinese Communists, although anxious for peace, are prepared to fight a ten-year civil war, their chief of staff, Gen. Yeh Ching-yin, declared today in an interview to which he devoted nine hours.

Yeh reviewed in detail events leading to present strife in North China and concluded with the accusation that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists had used the disarming of Japanese as a pretext to assault and try to annihilate the Communist 8th Route Army.

YANKS TO TRAIN CHINESE SAILORS

School For Amphibious Crews Planned By 7th Fleet

BERGHOLZ

With U.S. 7th Fleet off Manchuria, Dec. 2 (AP)—American naval personnel will begin training Chinese crews December 10 to operate and maintain amphibious vessels, the 7th Fleet commander, Vice Admiral Daniel E. Barbey announced today.

The school, which will be held at Tsingtao, will be "for the purpose of providing Chinese crews for ships employed in effecting the surrender terms of Japan," Barbey said.

To Relieve Americans

The fleet commander recommended several weeks ago that Chinese crews be provided for American ships used in transporting Nationalist forces, thereby relieving American sailors and permitting them to be demobilized.

At present there are no amphibious vessels in the Chinese navy and Barbey declined to speculate on whether the Chinese trainees eventually will be provided with such craft.

The outlined three-month training period indicated the improbability the Chinese trainees might be able to assist materially in transporting Nationalist troops to Manchuria in time to affect the present situation.

Staff Allocated

A ten-man staff, headed by Commodore P. L. Carroll, and three LST's with normal crews have been allocated to the training program.

Only low-point service men will be used, Barbey emphasized.

Approximately 600 Chinese men and 60 officers are expected to enroll for the first course.

First Snowfall Chills U.S. Forces In Korea

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 2 (AP) — The first snowfall in Southern Korea today chilled American forces and provided a cold reception for the second contingent of heretofore exiled provincial government officials.

Flying from Chungking, the officials were forced to land south of here because of bad weather. The party, traveling in an American Army plane, was more than a week behind the first group, which included Kim Koo, provisional president in exile.

The weather failed to cool the enthusiasm of Kim Koo's supporters, who paraded through the streets in his honor, carrying United States, Russian, Chinese and Korean flags. Kim Koo has been actively seeking to unite Leftists and Rightists into a workable government.

There was fighting also in the Soerabaja area farther east, where sixteen Indonesians were killed near a road block.

Flareup On Sumatra

Some signs of Indonesian resistance flared on Sumatra, where Japanese troops, instructed to provide transport and move all Amboinese (native Dutch) troops from Padang to Fort De Kock, reported that native police were obstructing them.

The British announced that the bodies of 22 English and Indian victims of an Indonesian massacre were cremated at Bekassi, village 12 miles west of Batavia.

The victims, who had survived a plane crash in the area, were taken from their cells in the Bekassi jail and hacked to death with swords, the British said.

The British investigated an Indonesian charge that 40 Indonesians were slain by Amboinese in Batavia on November 28, and found 20 bodies.

The British said all the victims were young men killed by mortar shells, grenades or bullets, and showed no signs of bayonet wounds. The investigators concluded they had been brought to a Red Cross post from near-by street fighting. The Indonesians charged that the killings were unjustified.

British Turn Japanese Guns On Indonesians At Bandoeng

HAUGLAND

Batavia, Dec. 2 (AP)—A Japanese artillery battery, under British orders, blasted today at an Indonesian headquarters in Bandoeng, Java summer capital 75 miles southeast of Batavia.

The British, who had said previously they were using Japanese troops in Java for "defensive" action, announced that they had organized a Japanese battery of three Krupp guns and three mountain cannon.

Indonesians said their headquarters at Bandoeng was bombed by British planes, and a British report said two Thunderbolts bombed out an Indonesian strong point blocking convoys evacuating refugees from near Bandoeng.

At Least 10 Indonesians Killed

At least ten Indonesians were killed in a battle with British Indian troops evacuating 600 refugees from northern Bandoeng. The Indonesians, using machine guns, grenades and mortars, wounded two Indians.

The British said they were continuing the removal of 3,000 Eurasians from the southern sector of Bandoeng, from which they had cleared most of the Indonesians after giving them an ultimatum to evacuate that portion of the city.

Killings of Eurasians continued in Southern Bandoeng, British reports said.

ChineseArmy Reported Taking an 'Impartial Attitude'

SAIGON, Dec. 2 (AP).—New clashes between rival Annamite groups in Chinese-occupied Tonkin Province were reported today, adding to an already tangled situation in French Indo-China.

Advices from Hanoi said the new outbreaks involved Ho Chi Minh's Viet Minh party, which is advocating Annamite independence, and the rival Dong Minh Hoi party, understood to be linked with the Chinese Nationalists. It was the second such clash reported since Nov. 12.

Chinese Army authorities occupying Tonkin said the situation was "well in hand" and that an "impartial attitude" was being maintained toward the two groups.

In fighting far to the south, the French captured Banmethout, 155 miles northeast of Saigon, in a two-hour battle in which Viet Minh forces were dislodged from that important communications center in Annam Province on the road to Cochin China.

Evasive Jap Quizzed In Trial Of Yamashita

Manila, Monday, Dec. 3 (AP)—Col. Hideo Nishiharu, Lieut. Gen Tomoyuki Yamashita's judge advocate general, was so persistently evasive today that the president of the United States military commission trying Yamashita as an accused war criminal took over the questioning.

Maj. Gen. Russell B. Reynolds, commission president, demanded to know who took action before executions were carried out after execution papers were signed (presumably by a military tribunal).

"I do not believe that after the report on the case was made up and signed by the reviewing officer that it required any signature or approval of the commanding officer for execution of the death sentence," Nishiharu replied.

17,000 RELEASED BY SEVENTH FLEET

WITH U. S. SEVENTH FLEET OFF MANCHURIA, Dec. 2.—(AP) Seventeen thousand U. S. Navy personnel and 137 ships of all descriptions will have been released from the Seventh Fleet by Dec. 10 and will be in the United States by Christmas, Vice Adm. Daniel E. Barbey announced today.

The Seventh Fleet commander, reviewing demobilization activities, said that since he took command Nov. 19, 29,000 men had been detached from the fleet and assigned to the job of carrying American personnel home. He did not estimate the number released earlier.

Thus, he continued, by Dec. 10 more than half of all Seventh Fleet personnel afloat will have been released to return to the states. The percentage of ships released will be much higher than that, he added.

In addition, five squadrons of Seventh Fleet planes, half the fleet air strength, will have been released. Included are two seaplane tenders and 60 planes.

The fleet is getting some replacements "but not many," he remarked. Efforts are being made to remove low-point men from ships returning to the states and to replace them with high-point men from vessels remaining here.

PRESIDENT VOTE HEAVY IN BRAZIL

Ballot Is First In 15 Years; Congress Being Elected

CHANDLER DIEHL

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 2 (AP)—Heavy voting was reported throughout Brazil today as the nation elected a president for the first time in fifteen years and chose a Congress which will draft a new constitution.

There was no immediate indication how the race was going among the four presidential candidates, since the official count will not begin until tomorrow and final results may not be available for eight or ten days.

A report from Porto Alegre, capital of Rio Grandedo Sul, home state of former President Getulio Vargas, said, however, that Vargas, a candidate for the Federal Senate, had received a heavy vote throughout the state.

Two Pre-Election Favorites

Vargas's candidate for President, Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, was one of two pre-election favorites. Gen. Eduardo Gomes, another favorite, had shown considerable strength in the federal district and in northeastern Brazil here he served as air commandant during the war.

The other candidates were Yedda Fiuza, a non-Communist supported by the Communists, and Mario Zoilin Telles, Agrarian candidate. Fiuza entered the campaign only fifteen days ago and Telles made no attempt to campaign.

It was apparent from the long lines of voters at the polls that a large precentage of the nation's 7,613,339 registered voters were participating in what was undoubtedly the freest election in the history of Brazil.

No Disturbances Reported

Army and police forces were stationed at the voting booths to insure order, but no disturbances had been reported at a late hour. Tension of the past weeks appeared to have been replaced by a holiday atmosphere.

The voters, many of whom had never cast a ballot before, chatted gayly as they waited their turn. There was some delay in getting the voting started in some districts, but this was only because the election officials were out of practice after not functioning in any form for eleven years.

Many business houses and private homes flew the Brazilian national flag in observance of the restored voting privileges.

U.S. Envoy Tours City

Extra tram service was provided in the capital to insure that voters could get to the polls easily. State and municipal trucks were used in many rural districts to carry voters to the polls. They were under instructions to provide transportation for members of all parties.

Perfect weather was reported throughout the country.

United States Ambassador A. A. Berle, Jr., accompanied by his secretary, toured Rio de Janeiro during the polling, apparently to observe conditions under which the election was being carried out.

The election was the climax of a stormy campaign which began shortly after Vargas was ousted by the army October 29 on charges that he failed to guarantee the holding of elections. He was replaced by Jose Linhares, Chief Justice of the Federal Supreme Court, to serve until after the voters chose a new President.

Last President Elected in 1930

The last President elected by the Brazilian people was Washington Luis Pereira Souza, who was elected October 24, 1930, and overthrown by Vargas ten days later.

In today's balloting, the voters elected a Senate of 42 members and a Chamber of Deputies of 286 members. The Congress will meet 60 days after the election to draft a constitution to replace the 1937 charter which was written by Vargas.

Brazil has been without a legislative branch since 1937 when Vargas abolished Congress and imposed his "new state" dictatorship on the country.

Disorders Rise Again In Argentina On Sunday

Buenos Aires, Dec. 2 (AP)—Mounted and infantry police charged into a group demonstrating for former Vice President Juan Perón today, as disorders broke out for the third successive Sunday in front of the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Apparently no one was injured, but several persons were arrested for carrying firearms.

The disturbances at the church started November 18, when a group of women walked out of services, protesting that politics had been injected in the church.

Witnesses said the police today acted energetically in breaking up the demonstration. This was in contrast to other recent pro-Perón demonstrations where police refused to interfere.

Berle Recall Disclaimed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP).—The White House today disclaimed knowledge of a published report that President Truman has recalled Ambassador Adolf A. Berle jr., from Brazil to explain charges of political intervention in the Brazilian Presidential campaign.

Eben Ayers, assistant press secretary, told The Associated Press that he "had heard nothing about the matter." Otherwise, Ayers would not comment. The report, carried by the New York Herald Tribune, said Mr. Truman was disturbed over the fact that Berle had apologized to former President Vargas for a speech given on Sept. 29 in which he declared the United States favored the holding of elections in Brazil on schedule.

Enemy Property Unit's Heads Quit In Argentina

Buenos Aires, Dec. 2 (AP)—Argentina's board for the control and disposition of enemy property was left virtually without officials today following the mass resignation of most of its members in protest against alleged interference with their work.

Submitting their resignations to Foreign Minister Juan Cooke were the board's vice president, general secretary, general manager, four members of the board and eight members of the board's administration committee.

In a letter to Cooke, Dr. Carlos Adroque, secretary general of the board, said the officials had decided to resign because they could not accept the "policy of interference" which had resulted in difficulties "affecting gravely" the board's duties.

He said he had the full support of the board, but that "the base of success was that the board should have the backing of the Government and complete autonomy of action."

PROPAGANDA LAID TO BRITAIN

Zionist Charges Drive To Sway U.S. Sentiment On Palestine

Salt Lake City, Dec. 2 (AP)—Dr. Harry S. May, Western division director of the Zionist Organization of America, charged tonight that the British Government is spending millions of dollars "to make the American public believe the Jews are trying to push the Arabs out of Palestine."

Jews and Arabs can and do live side by side in peace, Dr. May declared at a public meeting in the First Unitarian Church.

'Arab-Jewish relationship would be excellent," said Dr. May, "if it were not for the British Colonial Department, which aims to confuse public opinion abroad, particularly in the United States.

"Can Live Together"

"Millions of dollars ore spent in the United States by the British Government to make the merican public believe the Jews are trying to push the Arabs out of Palestine. Past history of Arab-Jewish relationship in Palestine has shown the two nations can live together in complete harmony and mutual trust."

"Once again the Jews in Palestine are ready to fight for independence," declared Dr. May after referring to the exploits of the Jewish brigade at El Alamein.

He stated there "is no question of the Jews displacing the Arabs in Palestine," and said the groups opposing Jewish immigration were the colonial office and "Arab leaders, backed by British oil magnates."

"British Stranglehold"

The last two groups, "both want to keep the Arab masses in obedience and subjugation, always afraid the awakening of the masses with a plea for democratic development might endanger the British stranglehold on the various countries of the Middle East, primarily India."

Britian "is anxious to withhold from the general public," the information that the Arab population in Palestine has more than doubled, and that Arabs outside Palestine make no more than 12 cents a day.

"In Palestine they enjoy complete equality and the same high level as Jewish laborers," Dr. May continued.

He described the Arab in other countries as an "illiterate and a serf to Arab landowners or effendies, who have kept them in ignorance and on a subsistence level."

Dr. May said Arabs in Palestine "participate on an equal basis (with Jews) in all social and political function in the Jewish community."

Of the United States place in the struggle for Jewish independence, Dr. May said:

"If the world is to be free, then the Jews and the homeless in Europe must be given a chance to prove to the world they too are ready to make their contribution toward a lasting world peace. America must take the lead in this great humanitarian and social endeavor."

voy to China.

The five star General, former Chief of Staff, will testify before the joint Pearl Harbor investigating committee as soon as he can fit the appearance into a schedule crammed with last minute conferences about his new mission.

At the same time, Senator George (D-Ga) said it is his understanding that Marshall will be asked to give the Senate Foreign Relations committee a preview of what he intends to do in Chungking, where he will replace Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, resigned.

Some Foreign Relations members already have talked informally with Secretary of State Byrnes about the conditions that caused Hurley to resign. Lesser lights in the State department, Hurley said, had been undercutting his efforts to provide support for the Chiang Kai-Shek government.

One of those who attended said Byrnes told the senators that this country is committed to the removal of about 300,000 Japanese soldiers and upwards of 400,000 Japanese civilians from Manchuria, where the Chinese Communists have shown their greatest strength.

Russia May Aid

This country may be helped in carrying out this commitment, senators said, by an agreement announced Saturday under which Russian forces will not complete their withdrawal from the area until Jan. 3, instead of Dec. 3.

President Truman has said he will announce the policies which will start Marshall's course in Chungking, but some Foreign Relations members want to discuss a little further than that behind the scenes with the General.

Gen. Marshall to Testify In Pearl Harbor Inquiry

Former Chief of Staff Also Expected to Discuss Plans in China.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 — (AP) Gen. George C. Marshall may fill a double engagement on Capitol Hill this week to tell Congressional committees something about how the war started and what his policies will be as President Truman's envoy to China.

The Foreign Relations committee is expected to vote tomorrow on whether its hearing, scheduled Wednesday, will be open, as Hurley desires. Chairman Connally (D-Tex) has indicated he is willing to open the doors to the public, and Senator Lucas (D-Ill) said he saw no reason why Byrnes and Hurley shouldn't testify publicly.

To Bare War Details

Marshall's appearance before the Pearl Harbor committee—which may begin Monday because of Byrnes' desire for the General to start his long trip as soon as possible—is expected to bring a barrage of questioning about almost every phase of this country's activities prior to the Japanese attack of Dec. 7, 1941.

William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, said in an outline of prospective testimony that the group wants to hear from Marshall about "conferences with cabinet officers and President Roosevelt, handling of warning messages, extent of knowledge of impending attack, conferences with Navy department and Dewey incident of 1944."

The Dewey incident revolved around a letter Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York has said he received from Marshall during the 1944 presidential campaign. Marshall purportedly urged Dewey at that time not to reveal for war security reasons some information he had obtained about the Pearl Harbor attack.

George said he expects Marshall to be on the stand for "three or four days."

Meanwhile Representative Rankin (D-Miss) said the House committee on Un-American Activities also should inquire into the Hurley allegations.

"It is the duty of the committee on Un-American activities to investigate the charges made by General Hurley to the effect that subversive elements in the State department are undermining this government," Rankin said in a statement.

They aren't conceding anything publicly, but several of them acknowledged to reporters they fear the President's proposal for a year's training will be killed. They expressed willingness privately to settle for a compromise four-months plan.

A final committee decision is not expected until sometime next year, however.

Martin's resolution would call upon the President, the Secretary of State, and the President's representative on the United Nations Organization to "work unceasingly for an immediate international agreement whereby compulsory military service shall be wholly eliminated from the policies and practices of all nations."

No special machinery was proposed for carrying out any such agreement.

PATTERSON SEES NEED FOR DRAFT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2. — (AP) Secretary of War Patterson said today that voluntary enlistments alone are not likely to keep the Army up to minimum needed strength while combat veterans are being discharged.

Martin Presses Plea for Ban On World Military Training

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—(AP) House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts called on the Military committee tonight to start hearings on his bill for an international ban on compulsory military service.

He asked in a letter to Chairman May (D-Ky.) that the military group conduct the hearings before a decision is reached on a pending bill for a universal military training program requested by President Truman.

"I firmly believe this effort should be made before we fasten compulsory military service in peacetime upon the young men of the United States," Martin said in the letter, which he made public.

His request came at a time when sponsors of the universal training program were growing pessimistic over chances of their measure passing.

more than seven million discharges in the period between V-E day and July 1, 1946, Selective Service inductions must continue," Patterson asserted in a statement prepared for the annual edition of the Army and Navy Journal, unofficial service publication.

"Otherwise," he added, "men who have already risked their lives in combat will have to remain in the Army while those who have not served at all are exempted from any military duty."

It is of paramount importance to this country and the whole world, he said, to maintain an effective military strength in the postwar years.

"Postwar reaction in a democracy tends to reduce its military establishment to impotence. In the past, the error has been remediable when attack threatened. In the future, it will be irreparable. If there is another war, the unready will be conquered."

LEADERS GIVE MERGER VIEWS

Nimitz On Air Against, Stilwell For One-Department Plan

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—Some of the nation's top fighting men carried the Army-Navy merger controversy to the country tonight in two broadcasts.

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz warned that development of naval power "should not be interrupted for the sake of an administrative amalgamation in the name of undemonstrated economies."

On another program, Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell, former commander of the United States 10th Army on Okinawa, called for "unification at the top" and said "national defense is one job." Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Far Eastern Air Forces, supported unification, but Rear Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, commander of Carrier Division 1, said separate administrative departments meant greater efficiency.

Lewis And Father Sheehy

Nimitz participated in a broadcast with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religious education, Catholic University.

"While our own people now bask in the great achievement of having suppressed the most dangerous nations that have ever threatened humanity, we are once again toying with the notions that made us so vulnerable prior to 1942," Admiral Nimitz said. "The complacency with which we cut down our Navy after World War I to a bare semblance of a protective force is once again the background of danger. . . .

"With the potentials of atomic energy not yet fully known, we as a nation must move cautiously in removing from the present unsettled world any element of balance that maintains the hard-won peace. . . .

"Let us be realistic in our appraisal of predictions of nations dueling with 5,000-mile robot bombs. It is only common, everyday horse sense for use to retain the known, proved naval advantage we so laboriously constructed until a better substitute has been demonstrated to be technologically feasible. . . .

"The Navy intends to increase the striking power of our fleet through the use of new, offensive weapons. Your Navy can be developed as a strategic force of ever-increasing three-dimensional striking power and mobility. That development should not be interrupted for the sake of an administrative amalgamation in the name of undemonstrated economies."

"Concentration Of Power"

Lewis, although saying that he had not fully studied the merger suggestions, expressed belief "it will make for a greater concentration of military power than we have before had in this country."

He said he was "reluctant to see the civilian influence and policy direction over military forces reduced or weakened.

"We have seen what happens in other countries when such is the case," he said, and added:

"While giving all possible help to the armed services, we must insure that in the future the threat of military dictatorship should not hover over this land."

Dr. Sheehy, a navy chaplain for 59 months, said:

"While my service with the Navy has terminated, I can not but regard as an evil thing any movement which changes radically the conditions of life of a half a million men. . . . If the Navy is absorbed or loses its identity, the Government is striking against them."

Stilwell Uses Analogy

Stilwell used what he called the "homely, but very apt parallel" of the modern-city fire department to express his views.

"The fire-fighters are organized in chemical companies, hose companies, ladder companies and, in some cities, fire boats are used," he said. "But when the alarm rings, they all rush together to the one fire. And it's the fire chief who decides what piece or pieces of equipment will be used, to put out the blaze in the shortest possible time.

"National defense is one job. We have the tools to do that job. We must keep them virile and in fighting trim by unification at the top."

Asserting the term "merger" is a misnomer for the unification plan, General Kenney declared:

"If we do not have unity at the top, we re-establish the Pearl Harbor state of mind."

Admiral Sherman paid tribute to the ground armies and said, "We are all agreed that there must be unity of operational command in peace and in war." But, he added:

"This does not make it necessary or desirable to merge the War and Navy departments. Greater efficiency will result from keeping separate administrative departments."

MCVAY FACES TRIAL TODAY

Skipper Of Lost Indianapolis Before Naval Court

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—The skipper of the 10,000-ton cruiser Indianapolis, which sank last July 30 with heavy loss of life after a mysterious explosion, will face a navy court-martial Monday.

Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d, 47, who commanded the ship when it went down while en route from Guam to Leyte after delivering atomic bomb material, will answer to charges growing out of loss of the ship. The Indianapolis had made a high speed run from San Francisco to Guam with its secret cargo.

The Navy, which withheld the detailed charges and specifications against Capt. McVay, said the court will be concerned only with the skipper's responsibility for the cruiser. Other questions, including reasons for delay in beginning a search for the ship and its survivors, are the subject of a continuing investigation, officials said.

Cruiser Sank In 15 Minutes

Fifteen minutes after the explosion the ship sank. Survivors were in the water for four days before a navy seaplane, on a routine mission, sighted them and summoned help.

Of the Indianapolis' total personnel of 1,196, 880 were listed as dead or missing and 316 wounded.

Capt. McVay told Associated Press Reporter Morrie Landsberg in a Peleliu hospital last August that his guess was "that it was an underwater torpedo attack."

The Japanese have denied since, that they had any submarines in the vicinity, but either a mine or a torpedo apparently hit the forward 8-inch-shell magazine of the cruiser. Shell blasts then ripped the forward part of the ship, and she plunged under.

Orders Calls For Help

McVay related to Landsberg that he told the navigator, later lost:

"For God's sake, make certain the contact reports gets out. Say we've been torpedoed, our position is . . . and we are sinking rapidly and need assistance."

Although two radiomen attempted to send distress signals, they apparently were not heard, and survivors were not sighted until the fourth day.

McVay also told Landsberg that he gave the word to abandon ship when it became apparent the vessel was sinking, and that the order was passed along by word of mouth, without the aid of loudspeakers or the telephone system, which was out of commission.

Rear Admiral Baker Presides

Survivors interviewed shortly after their rescue said the ship sank so rapidly no one knew for sure what hit her.

The court-martial to convene at the Washington Navy Yard at 10 A.M. (E.S.T.), will have as its senior officer Rear Admiral Wilder D. Baker, of Bay City, Mich., until recently chief of staff to the first carrier task force.

First order of business will be the formal reading of the charges and specifications. It was considered probable that the court would then recess, possibly for a week or ten days, to allow the defendant to prepare his reply.

Nimitz Flays 'Economies' Curtailing Power of Navy

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 — (AP) Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said tonight development of the Navy's striking power through new weapons "should not be interrupted for the sake of an administrative amalgamation in the name of undemonstrated economies."

Participating in a broadcast program with John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers president, and the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the Department of Religious Education, Catholic university, Nimitz had reference to proposals to merge the armed forces.

Lewis, although saying that he had not fully studied the merger suggestions, expressed belief "it will make for a greater concentration of military power than we have before had in this country."

Dr. Sheehy Hits Merger

Dr. Sheehy, a Navy chaplain for 59 months, said:

"While my service with the Navy has terminated, I cannot but regard as an evil thing any movement which changes radically the conditions of life for half a million men. If the Navy is absorbed or loses its identity, the government is striking against them."

After referring to the part naval air and sea power played in the defeat of Germany and Japan, Nimitz strated to be technologically feasible.

"The Navy intends to increase the striking power of our fleet through the use of new offensive weapons. Your Navy can be developed as a strategic force of ever-increasing three-dimensional striking power and mobility. That development should not be interrupted for the sake of an administrative amalgamation in the name of undemonstrated economies."

Assails Military Power

Lewis said he was "reluctant to see the civilian influence and policy direction over military forces reduced or weakened.

"We have seen what happens in other countries when such is the case," he said, and added:

"While giving all possible help to the armed services, we must insure that in the future the threat of military dictatorship should not hover over this land."

Air Merger Plan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 — (AP) Unification of the armed services was debated over the air today by officers of the Army, the Navy, and the Army Air forces.

Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, former commander of the U. S. Tenth army on Okinawa, and Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of Far Eastern Air forces, spoke in favor of the proposal.

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, commander of carrier division 1, opposed it.

Sherman paid tribute to the ground armies and said "we are all agreed that there must be unity of operational command in peace and in war." But, he added:

"This does not make it necessary or desirable to merge the War and Navy departments. Greater efficiency will result from keeping separate administrative departments. We believe that a single department would become a huge cumbersome military bureaucracy in which waste and inefficiency could more easily occur than in smaller departments compactly integrated."

"If the Navy is absorbed by the War department as a minority element," he added, "the Navy may be ready to fight if needed—or it may not be ready.

"We hear stories of great economies which the War department could achieve after a merger. If these economies are to be achieved by cutting down the Navy it certainly will not be ready."

Stilwell used what he called the "homely but very apt parallel" of the modern city fire department to express his views.

"The fire fighters are organized in chemical companies, hose companies, ladder companies, and in some cities, fire boats are used," he said. "But when the alarm rings, they all rush together to the one fire. And it's the fire chief who decides what piece or pieces of equipment will be used, to put out the blaze in the shortest possible time.

"National defense is one job. We have the tools to do that job. We must keep them virile and in fighting trim by unification at the top."

Urges 'Unity'

Asserting the term "merger" is a misnomer for the unification plan, General Kenney declared:

"If we do not have unity at the top, we reestablish the Pearl Harbor state of mind."

Admiral William F. Halsey had been scheduled to take part in the program, which was carried over NBC, but was unable to appear.

ACTION SOUGHT TO EASE HOUSING

House Committee Opens Hearings Today on Plea for Federal 'Czar.'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—(AP) Chairman Spence (D-Ky.) of the House Banking committee announced tonight that his group will open hearings Monday on a proposal to create a Federal "czar" to solve the housing shortage.

First witness will be Representative Patman (D-Tex.), with National Housing Administrator John Blandford and OPA Chief Chester Bowles next.

Patman is author of the bill the committee will consider. It would establish an office of housing stabilization, headed by a director with broad emergency power to meet housing problems.

The housing director would have authority to set price ceilings on homes, give housing priorities to veterans, allocate building materials and coordinate all federal housing programs.

Patman told a reporter "this extreme action is necessary because the housing crisis is now so acute we can't solve it any other way."

He said veterans alone need least 1,500,000 new homes built in the coming year, and that plans now call for only about half a million. He added:

"I have delayed action on this problem in hopes that real estate and building groups might solve it. But in all parts of the country there is a growing tide of resentment, irritation and unrest over high prices of homes and scarcity of shelter."

Considerable opposition to the Patman plan seemed assured. Representative Herbert (D-La.) characterized the proposal as "the first signpost on the road to permanent regimentation of American lives." Talking to a reporter, he added:

"This plan for a housing czar is merely an expression of the real thoughts and purposes of Chester Bowles to perpetuate himself and his administration in power over the lives of Americans.

"Some proponents of public or socialized housing will, of course, welcome this as a means of advancing their plans and proving the inadequacies of private enterprise operations.

"The home-building industry, like all others, must go through a difficult period of reconversion, but the fewer restrictions imposed upon it the more rapidly it can supply new housing in volume."

BOWLES DEMANDS FACTS ON PROTEST

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 — (AP) Price Administrator Chester Bowles today called on the National Retail Dry Goods association to substantiate its contentions that OPA discriminated in fixing certain ceiling prices.

He referred to a merchandise exhibit sponsored by the association which Bowles said had been designed "to prove that OPA prices have created difficulties for old manufacturers and allowed special advantages to new manufacturers."

The merchandise recently was displayed in the House Office building in Washington, and was discussed when Bowles testified before a House committee Nov. 20.

In a letter to Lew Hahn, general manager of the association, Bowles said he was asking for the third time that the organization turn over to OPA the names of manufacturers represented in the exhibition "so we could track down each case individually and get the true facts."

Hahn, Bowles said, had indicated emphatically that the association was unwilling to do this. The price chief added:

"In a few instances where we have been able to obtain the names of manufacturers of certain items in the exhibit, the facts have proved to be radically different from the information given in the exhibit.

"In view of the mistatements that have already been uncovered, I must say that your failure to identify the manufacturers naturally creates some doubt as to whether the other items would stand examination."

Bowles said that in one case the exhibit had stated, "OPA expects this manufacturer to produce this pair of men's shorts at $3.55 per dozen."

"Actually," Bowles said, "this manufacturer is producing thousands of dozens of this item each week, and is not even charging as much as his allowable ceiling."

RETURN TO WORK IN AUTO STRIKE APPEARS UNLIKELY

Opposition Develops in Union to Making G. M. Parts for Other Firms.

'TERMS' OUTLINED

C.I.O. Leader Says Strikers Want to Decide What Parts Would Be Made.

DETROIT, Dec. 2—(AP) Leaders of the C.I.O. United Auto Workers strike against General Motors took steps today to strengthen the ranks as prospects for a proposed partial resumption of work appeared remote.

Opposition developed in union circles to the proposal of General Motors that auto parts production for other manufacturers be restored in the 12-day-old walkout which has idled more than 70 factories and 225,000 persons.

While one strikers group attacked that proposal, Local 235 of the Chevrolet Gear and Axle factory in Detroit decided to penalize strikers $1 a day for failure to fulfill picketing assignments, with a $3 a week maximum.

Vice President Walter P. Reuther, commenting on the union's demand for a 30 per cent wage rate increase from General Motors, told the Chevrolet workers:

"What we auto workers do here is as important as what the foreign minister does in London."

The union demands the wage boost within General Motors' present price structure. General Motors maintains that is impossible.

There was no immediate prospect for the suggested return to work of striking auto parts men.

Influential U.A.W.-C.I.O. groups at Flint, a stronghold of the union, protested any parts manufacture, and Union President R. J. Thomas said tonight that the International Union "has no intention of arbitrarily and immediately ordering strikers back to work in the General Motors parts plants."

Corrects Impression

Thomas issued a statement in which he said he wished to correct "certain erroneous impressions which seem to have arisen from a misinterpretration" of his letter Saturday to General Motors on the subject of parts manufacture during the strike.

The union chief called attention to provisions in his letter and said it was "obvious" that it would be "necessary for the U.A.W. to determine just what G.M.-manufactured items, if any, are essential to continuous production in the plants of competitor companies."

"When all the facts are ascertained, they will, as I said, be laid before the G.M. local unions involved," Thomas said. "In accordance with the well-established democratic procedure of the U.A.W. no groups of strikers will go back to work under any circumstances until they have voted to do so."

A union spokesman previously had emphasized conditions in Thomas' acceptance of G.M.'s proposal.

This union source said the U.A.W.-C.I.O. would first seek to determine "where" such parts were needed to maintain operations and "whether they were needed."

Dispute Need

Labor and industry have disputed the extent to which other motorcar manufacturers are dependent on General Motors in the supply of car parts such as spark plugs, fuel pumps, and ignition wiring.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. Local 651 in Flint expressed itself as fearing "violence" in the event some strikers were permitted to return to work. The local also said such action would weaken the union's position.

A similar objection was voiced by the Flint Industrial Union Council, which claims to represent 40,000 of the G.M. strikers.

At union headquarters it was said that no steps had yet been taken to get men back to work.

The proposal originated with G.M. President Wilson, and Thomas, in answering, said it was his "personal opinion" that there were "only one or two items on which General Motors production is an essential part of the picture for other manufactu[illegible]s."

Thomas said the union would take steps to learn from other manufacturers what parts they receive from General Motors and that the information would be turned over to the affected General Motors locals of the union.

Crisis Easing

In nearby Windsor, Ont., the crisis was easing today although the strike of 10,000 Ford Motor company workers continued into its 32nd day.

Sympathy walkouts of another 8,000 auto plant workers in the Canadian city were discontinued after several weeks of idleness. Chrysler and General Motors of Canada will reopen tomorrow and work will resume later this week at 25 smaller plants.

The sympathy strikes were called by Allied C.I.O. Auto Workers in support of the U.A.W.-C.I.O. walkout in demand for union security and wage adjustments from Ford of Canada.

A government proposal for ing the Ford strike, details which were not made public, failed to win the Ford strikers' approval by a scant margin in a vote week.

UNION HITS G. E., WESTINGHOUSE CO.

Says War Plants 'Abandoned' for Low Wage Areas —Firms Deny It.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—(AP) The C.I.O. United Electrical Workers today said the General Electric and Westinghouse Electric companies are "abandoning" 15 government-built war plants costing $132,000,000 and erecting new factories in small town, low wage areas.

James J. Matles, director of organization for the union, said in a statement that the plants being abandoned, located in industrial areas where the union is strong, "could have been converted speedily and have produced tens of thousands of radios, refrigerators, washington machines and other electrical appliances for an appliance-hungry public."

Matles asserted the products of the 15 plants, including small motors, generators and wiring devices, are needed by other industries whose reconversion, he said will be hampered.

Charge Denied

In Pittsburgh, a spokesman for Westinghouse said "there is no abandoning," and he added:

"The plants are not our plants. The Navy has owned them right along, and we have simply been operating them for the Navy. There is no provision made for us to buy the plants. The Navy is now going to exercise its right to assume management.

"As to 'erecting new factories,' I don't know of a single construction job going on now."

An official of General Electric said in a statement issued in New York city that factories built by the government and the firm during the war "were constructed to meet conditions prevailing then and were not planned for conditions that might prevail in peacetime."

"We are planning our peacetime manufacturing to meet peacetime conditions such as accessibility to raw materials, proximity to markets, transportation and cost," the official said. "Also we have to seek areas where help is available."

The union said it is seeking a congressional investigation of the matter, along with its contention that the radio and electrical manufacturing industry is engaged in "a deliberate hold-back" of electrical appliances from the Christmas trade.

"American housewives who have sought to purchase a new radio or washing machine know from experience that the new models on distributors' floors are 'samples only' and that dealers refuse to promise early delivery," Matles said.

"The electrical industry is holding back production and, in many cases, placing these products in warehouses, waiting until 1946 when the companies will no longer pay excess profits taxes and when, they hope, a higher price for their products can be squeezed from the American public.

"There is a direct connection between this hold-back and the demand by the U.E.-C.I.O. for a $2-a-day wage and salary increase for the 750,000 men and women our union represents in the industry."

A strike vote will be taken Dec. 13 by the National Labor Relations board, under the War Labor Disputes act, among 270,000 U.E. workers at General Electric, Westinghouse, and the Electrical division of General Motors Corporation.

A union spokesman said that approximately 5,000 workers are being laid off in each of the 15 war plants, totaling 75,000 union members who were forced to take other jobs in their communities or scatter for employment elsewhere.

No estimate of the number of workers who would be employed at the 32 projected new plants could be obtained, the union said.

G. E. Statement

The General Electric statement said:

"After Pearl Harbor the government as well as ourselves built factories close to our existing work where we would have necessary engineering and supervisory personnel to get into war production quickly, even in face of heavy losses of manpower to the armed forces.

"These buildings were constructed to meet conditions prevailing then and were not planned for conditions that might prevail in peacetime.

"We are planning our peacetime manufacturing to meet peacetime conditions such as accessibility to raw materials, proximity to markets, transportation facilities and cost.

"Also we have to seek areas where help is available. In many of our present work cities we have not been able to get help to meet our requirements although we have been advertising regularly for some time.

"Looking toward more efficient production in smaller units and, therefore, smaller prices to customers, these plants nevertheless will provide more jobs than larger manufacturing units would. We believe that both of these goals, more jobs and lower prices, are good for the country and General Electric.

"Of course if it had worked out that these war plants would fit our peacetime requirements, we would expect to find the union deploring their sale to the company by the government instead of criticizing us for not using them as they are now doing.

"The charge that we are holding up shipments and storing completed materials is simply false.

"Only a few days ago, an officer of this same union stated that they were considering making it impossible for General Electric to ship its goods so that our competitors would have an advantage. It is likely that we would voluntarily bring this about?

"We are doing everything we know to get samples in the hands of distributors and dealers and fill distribution lines to our customers."

Westinghouse Firm Denies C. I. O. Charge

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 2—(AP) A spokesman for Westinghouse Electric Corporation today denied assertions the company is "abandoning" government-built war plants and erecting new factories in low wage areas.

Commenting on a statement by James J. Matles of the C.I.O.-United Electrical Workers, the spokesman said Westinghouse has been operating three Navy ordnance plants which, by contract terms, the Navy can "take over" at any time.

"There is no abandoning," the spokesman declared.

He continued:

"The plants are not our plants. The Navy has owned them right along, and we have simply been operating them for the Navy. There is no provision made for us to buy the plants. The Navy is now going to exercise its right to assume management.

"As to 'erecting new factories', I don't know of a single construction job going on now.

"The Navy has indicated it will take over management of the Canton, O., plant tomorrow, Dec. 3," he said, "one at center line, Mich., Feb. 3, and one at Louisville, Ky., Feb. 24. All will be operated under civil service as regular, peacetime, government ordnance plants."

Westinghouse did not wish to buy a steam turbine plant which it operates in South Philadelphia for the U. S. Maritime commission, he declared, "since it duplicates our own capacity for steam turbines there."

The spokesman declared the company's recent purchase of several factories did not indicate any trend toward building in small town, low wage areas.

Concerning the union's contention the industry is "holding back" electrical appliances, the spokesman declared Westinghouse has no appliances in its warehouses but "is shipping them directly from production lines to its more than 10,000 dealers and distributors."

The company said it had recently purchased a small plant from the Talon, Inc., at Meadville, Pa., the Ken-Rad Lamp Co., Owensboro, Ky.; the Atlantic Elevator plant, Philadelphia and the C. T. Sturdevant Company, Boston.

Over Billion V-Mail Units Handled By Army

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—A total of 1,250,000,000 V-mail letters, the "dehydrated" notes to and from GI's overseas, was handled by the Army in the three and a half years' operation of the system.

In a summary today, the Army said more than 140 tons of air cargo space was used to transport the microfilmed mail, but that if all the letters had been handled in standard size and weight they would have used up 14,000 tons of space.

Penicillin for Dublin, Paris

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP)—Two million units of penicillin will be flown to Dublin and Paris on a TWA transport on a preview passenger flight to Europe tomorrow. The penicillin, still scarce in Europe, is the gift of Mayors John E. Kerrigan of Boston and Edward J. Kelly of Chicago. It will be delivered to Lord Mayor Peadar Doyle in Dublin and André Le Trocquer, President of the Paris Municipal Council.

LASKI IN U. S.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—(AP) Prof. Harold Laski, chairman of the British Labor party, has been in the United States since last Wednesday and will address an atom bomb conference here tomorrow night, Miss Freda Kirchwey, editor of the Nation, said today.

Miss Kirchwey said the British Laborite arrived in New York after having flown from England to Montreal in a British plane, and later visited in Washington with Supreme court Justice Felix Frankfurter.

The forum on the atom bomb is being sponsored by Miss Kirchwey's magazine.

MARITIME MEN PLAN TO HALT WORK TODAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 — (AP) The National Maritime Union (C.I.O.) said today troopships, colliers, tankers and vessels carrying relief supplies would be the only ships manned in the nation's ports tomorrow during a 24-hour work stoppage.

The stoppage is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. (E.S.T.) in protest against what the NMU termed a slow return of servicemen from abroad.

The NMU said members of the Marine Cooks and Stewards association, the Inland Boatsmen's Union and the Marine division of the American Communications association, all C.I.O. affiliates, and the Marine Firemen, Oilers and Watertenders, Independent, also would refuse to man ships.

Joseph Curran, NMU president, has estimated that 20,000 workers would be involved in the stoppage.

KAISER NAMES AIDE IN CLOTHING DRIVE

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. — (AP) Henry J. Kaiser, national chairman of the Victory Clothing Collection, announced today the appointment of Dan A. West as executive director of the nation wide clothing drive for overseas relief in January.

The goal in the collection, Jan. 7-31, is 100,000,000 serviceable used garments, in addition to shoes and bedding. West reported that 6,816 communities already are organizing local drives.

AAF HONORS HARVARD

Awards War Work Certificate and Gives Medal to Professor

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 2 (AP) —Awards by the Army Air Forces of the Distinguished Service Medal to a Harvard professor, a certificate of appreciation to another, and a certificate of service to the university were announced today.

Professor Edmund P. Learned of the Business School has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his work as special consultant for program control to the commanding general of the Army Air Forces, Gen. H. H. Arnold.

The President and thhe fellows of the University received the certificate of service "in recognition of meritorious service" for wartime training given at the Graduate School of Business Administration where nearly 3,200 officers and officer candidates were trained.

Dr. Learned, a professor of marketing at the start of the war, was the first director of the Army Air Forces Statistical School which was organized and functioned at the Business School.

Emory University scientists three of whom worked on the atomic bomb.

The plan is this:

Scientists—including social scientists and humanist—would be attached to embassy staffs. They would be empowered to visit all laboratories.

They would make reports on scientific and industrial developments in all parts of the world.

"It is not in the tradition of science to close laboratory doors," the scientists said in a statement. "Scientists of all nationalities do so only under compulsion."

"The attachment of visiting specialists to embassy staffs would remove the secrecy and suspicion of scientific industrial development and would help pave the way for moral forces to flourish."

Making the statement were J. Harris Purks, Jr., dean of the college and a research worker in radioactivity; Dr. R. A. Day, a chemist who worked at Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Dr. R. T. Lagemann, physicist who worked on atomic research and Dr. W. H. Jones, a former laboratory director at Oak Ridge.

How would such a program be enforced?

The scientists suggest that the other nations should break diplomatic relations with and outlaw any nation trying to restrict the observations of the visiting scientists.

"Now, as never before," the statement said, "the United States is in a position to bargain with other nations.

"That position will deteriorate the instant another nation produces an atomic bomb. Time is running out while we foolishly boast of secrets."

Eisenhower Recovering From A Severe Cold

White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., Dec. 2 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, hospitalized here for treatment of a severe cold, believes "this fine West Virginia air is doing wonders and I am rapidly heading toward complete recovery."

The new chief of staff has been a patient at the Army's Ashford General Hospital for about 10 days.

Writing to the hobby editor of the Charleston Gazette, General Eisenhower commented on his improvement and listed his hobbies as fishing—by a quiet stream, preferably in Kansas, and with bird shooting his next choice.

Army Used Radio Static To Save Lives in Pacific

Device Found Storm Positions Within 2,000 Miles

ORLANDO, Fla., Dec. 2 (AP).—That radio static with which you're so familiar enabled the War Department to save countless lives and aircraft in the Pacific.

A device—a close secret during the war—records this static and can locate the position of a storm within a radius of 2,000 miles.

The War Department, in a now-it-can-be-told story released today, said the device—which is called a static or "sferics" direction finder, holds great peace-time promise.

In the advanced stages of its development the direction finder was put to combat tests in a simulated theater of war here at the American Air Force center.

Even though the final kinks had not been worked out, eighteen of these instruments were put in use during the final phases of the war, so great was the need for them.

The finder consits of a cathode ray indicating tube similar to those used in television and radar sets, and two mutually perpendicular receiving loops and amplifiers.

Recordings of the static by several A. A. F. stations in a network taking simultaneous observations can locate storm positions in a few minutes within a radius of 2,000 miles.

'DIXIE' DIVISION IS ON WAY HOME

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2.—(AP) The 31st (Dixie) division, which distinguished itself in the First World war, and again on the Philippine island of Mindanao during World War II, is coming home.

The Port of Embarkation today reported word from Manila that the first of Maj. Gen. Clarence A. Martin's units already had departed on three vessels and that five other ships had been deployed to pick up the remainder of the outfit.

The low point men were screened out before departure and transferred to other divisions and the 31st's complement filled with high point men from other organizations, including 1,000 men of the 96th (Deadeye) division, which was formed at Camp Adair, Ore., and distinguished itself in the Leyte and Okinawa campaigns.

The Dixie division, originally was a National Guard outfit from Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and Florida. The nickname Dixie dates back to the First World war. Now however, what with casualties, replacements and previous return of high point men the 31st represents every one of the 48 states.

The S. S. Charles Carrol, carrying elements of the 167th Infantry regiment, which dates back to 1836 and claims Aalabama as its home, was the first of the Dixie's troop ships to clear Mindanao. The Carroll is due in San Francisco or Los Angeles on Dec. 6. Elements of the 117th Field Artillery battalion also are aboard.

DUBLIN, DEC. 2-(AP)-GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS TONIGHT RULED OUT THE POSSIBILITY THAT IRISH AIRLINES MIGHT RELAY PASSENGERS OF PAN AMERICAN WORLD AIRWAYS, FROM EIRE, TO ENGLAND.

THE SUGGESTION HAD BEEN MADE AS THE RESULT OF BRITISH ACTION LIMITING PAN AMERICAN TO TWO FLIGHTS WEEKLY, FORCING PLANES FROM NEW YORK TO LAND AT RINEANNA FIELD, EIRE.

AN IRISH AIRLINE EXECUTIVE SAID EIREANN WAS UNABLE TO GET PLANES FOR SERVICE DIRECT FROM RINEANNA TO ENGLAND. THERE IS NO AIR LINK FROM RINEANNA TO DUBLIN AND, EVEN IF THERE WERE, THIS SPOKESMAN SAID, DUBLIN-BRITAIN PLANES ARE BOOKED UP FROM A MONTH TO SIX WEEKS IN ADVANCE.

PAN AMERICAN PASSENGERS NOW BEING LANDED AT RINEANNA TRAVEL BY BUS AND RAIL TO DUBLIN AND SAIL FROM THERE TO ENGLAND.

Russia Rejects U.S. Request To Leave Iran

REASON FOR MOSCOW'S ACTION NOT ANNOUNCED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

Washington Presumes British and Soviet Date Of Withdrawal Still Stands At March 2; American Note Sent 10 Days Ago

DEC 3 1945

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—The State Department said tonight that Russia had rejected an American request that all Allied troops be withdrawn from Iran by January 1.

NIGHT

The reason for the Russian rejection was not given by the department, which has proposed to Moscow publication of its note received here over the week end.

Officials presumed, they said, that the withdrawal date for both British and Russian troops still stands at March 2. President Truman was described as intent upon this Government's objective of withdrawing all American troops by January 1.

U.S. Note Sent Ten Days Ago

The United States had proposed the latter date to London and Moscow in a special note ten days ago, arguing that the best way to restore peace and security to the troubled Middle Eastern country was to get all foreign troops out as quickly as possible.

Of the Russian reply, Michael J. McDermott, State Department information officer, said simply that the Russians had advised the United States Government they do not find it possible to accede to the American request that British and Russian troops also be withdrawn by the first of January.

Warning By Russia

This development came after dispatches from Tehran told how the Iranian Government was petitioning Moscow for permission to transport Iranian troops into Azerbaijan province where armed rebel groups were reported to have seized police and Government officials.

Previously the Russians had turned down a Tehran request that troops be allowed to enter the province and had warned that the presence of more Iranian troops there might increase fighting and bloodshed.

Anxiety Over Iranian Rights

The United States has been especially anxious to find out whether in Russian activities there has been denial of the rights of the Iranian Government to exercise sovereign authority over its own territory, to maintain law and order and to send troops wherever necessary within its own borders.

The Russians have argued all along that they would take no part in the political developments in Azerbaijan province which their army occupies, but American officials have strongly indicated that they would oppose any use of foreign troops in Iran which even passively deprived the Government of power to control its own territory.

No American Combat Troops

The United States entered the picture because the late President Roosevelt signed at Tehran in the fall of 1943 a declaration made jointly with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin pledging the full independence of Iran.

British troops rode into southern Iran and Russian troops into northern Iran during the war for the announced purpose of safeguarding it as a strategic territory through which lend-lease supplies could be moved to Russia. American troops were not combat units but transport forces concerned with operation of rail and highway lines and many have been pulled out since the end of the war in Europe.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, a Republican congressman charged the State Department "did not tell the whole story" in saying our military forces will leave Iran by January 1.

Two United States military missions are scheduled to stay there longer, Representative Mundt, of South Dakota, told the House, and a United States officer is in effect commander of the Iranian gendarmerie with its thousands of men.

Mundt declared he had confirmed with the War Department today that contracts recently signed with Iran will continue the two missions two more years.

Missions Held "No Secret"

He asserted he had protested the condition to President Truman October 25 and observed:

"It is reasonable to suppose that this is one reason for Russia's reluctance to withdraw from Iran."

A State Department official said of Mundt's charges that presence of the military mission was "no secret" since the Iranian Government had requested them.

He said the American officer, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, was there "in an attempt to make the Iranian gendarmerie more effective" and that the latter did not determine policy.

War Strategy Measure

Both missions, added the official who commented anonymously, will be withdrawn by the United States upon congressional termination of the national emergency unless specifically exempted.

These missions were sent to Iran to implement United States policy toward the country as decided "before the Tehran declaration," the official stated. Joint occupation was agreed upon as a war-strategy measure before the Tehran conference.

Mundt said the missions of about twenty men each included one under Maj. Gen. Clarence S. Ridley, "engaged for the past three years in reorganizing the supply and administrative sections of the Iranian Army.

"A second mission headed by Colonel Schwarzkopf, who has also been in Iran three years, has the position of commander of the gendarmerie."

"Backing Up A Long Way"

Mundt said Schwarzkopf was not there as an adviser or counselor "but he is vested with full administrative authority and is in effect the chief and commander of the gendarmerie," and added:

"This gendarmerie as of last September consisted of a headquarters and fifteen regiments, totaling 20,000 men and 1,000 officers. . . ."

"In my mind, this is backing up a long way from the pious phrases once enunciated in the Atlantic Charter," Mundt declared.

He said this country would look with disfavor on a situation where Russia might assign her officers to one or more of the South American republics.

Reports From Tehran

Also today the State Department began receiving reports from three officials who went from the United States Embassy at Tehran into strife-ridden areas of northern Iran to try to find out what is going on there. But Michael J. McDermott, department information officer, said that some of the reports were still being decoded and other than saying that they generally confirm the presence of disturbances in the northern areas he could not tell their contents immediately.

The British have not yet replied to the January 1 proposal.

IRAN'S CHIEFS READY TO TALK

Willing 'To Meet Legitimate People' In Azerbaijan

Tehran, Iran, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Iranian Government told Russia today that it would be willing "to meet the legitimate people" in troubled Azerbaijan province, presumably to discuss demands for local autonomy, as soon as order is restored in northern Iran.

The Government's offer, considered by some Cabinet members as the inauguration of an appeasement policy, was made in a note replying to a Russian refusal to permit Iranian reinforcements from entering the province on the ground that their presence would cause further fighting and bloodshed.

Quick Russian Reply Sought

Iranian forces would be used only to prevent disorder or aggression, the note said, and "in this way the northern provinces will be quickly pacified and Government officials will be able to meet the legitimate people of Azerbaijan."

The note asked Russia to inform the Iranian Government as soon as possible what steps could be taken to permit local officials "freedom of action" and to allow the movement of Iranian troops into the northern provinces.

DEC 3 1945

"The Ministry of Foreign Affairs," it said, "considers incorrect the Soviet statement that an increase of Iranian forces in the north would be a matter for suspicion, and this argument should not be used for the Russians to increase their forces in Iran."

Appeasement Swing Visioned

The conciliatory tone of the Government's reply, coupled with the replacement of Tehran's Mayor, Chulan Hussian Ebterhaj, by Mahmud Nahriman, described as a Soviet sympathizer, was seen by some Government members as a definite swing toward appeasement.

The expressed fears that any show of weakness might result in demands which would push the country "slowly but surely under the influence of a foreign power."

London Announces Answer

Other resignations and dismissals were expected in the next day or two, and the pro-Russian press already has started a campaign against Sayed Zia, former premier and arch-enemy of Russia, who emigrated to Palestine twenty years ago and returned here two years ago. Pro-Russian newspapers and deputies are urging his immediate expulsion from Iran..

NIGHT

Iran Asks Russia Let Army Move

Tehran, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Iranian Government urgently petitioned Russia today to permit transportation of Iranian troops to Azerbaijan province, where armed democrat autonomists were reported to have seized police and Government officials.

Soviet military authorities in Azerbaijan—which borders Russia—have prevented Iranian reinforcements from entering the province on the ground that their presence would cause further fighting.

In a note handed to the Soviet Embassy, the Iranian Foreign Ministry declared that Government troops were needed in Azerbaijan to restore order and promised that they would not be used for aggressive measures against the populace.

DAY

Note Felt Conciliatory

The note requested that the Soviet Embassy inform the Government "as soon as possible of the steps to be taken with Soviet authorrities to insure the freedom of action of proper officials in the internal affairs of the northern provinves as well as for transport of security forces of the Iran Army in general an dthat body of Iranian troops in particular now held up by Soviet military authorities at Sharifabad en route to Azerbaijan."

The communication, generally regarded in diplomatic circles here as conciliatory in tone, expressed the Iranian Government's satisfaction with Russia's assurances of nonintervention in the internal affairs of Iran and with Russia's assurances of respect for tripartite agreements concerning Iran.

Disputes Russian Stand

The note added, however, that "the Ministry of Foreign Affairs considers incorrect the Soviet statement that an increase Iranian forces in the north would be a matter of suspicion, and this argument should not be used by the Soviets to increase their forces in Iran."

The Iranian note followed publication of reports here that the Governor of Maragheh, 50 miles south of the main Azerbaijan city of Tabriz, had been killed by "rebels who entered the town several days ago."

4,000 Rebels Under Arms

Three official American observers just back from a trip to Azerbaijan estimated that the autonomists have about 4,000 men under arms in the province.

The American observers declared conditions in Tabriz were "superficially normal," but said armed autonomists had established numerous road blocks outside the city and were demanding identity cards of all travelers except Soviet military officials.

Reinforcements Denied

The British Embassy, meanwhile, denied reports that British and American reinforcements had been moved into Iran. The United States Embassy added that 2,000 American troops had arrived from the United States, but said they were merely replacements for men going home under the point system.

Two hundred of the newly arrived Americans were brought to Tehran to complete the liquidation of American military installations, now scheduled for January 1, the United States Embassy said.

U. S. Reply to Mundt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP).—A State Department official said today, concerning Representative Mundt's charges, that the presence in Iran of American military missions was "no secret," since the Iranian government had requested them. He said Colonel Scwarzkopf was there "in an attempt to make the Iranian gendermerie more effective," and did not determine policy.

Both missions, added the official, who commented anonymously, will be withdrawn by the United States upon Congressional termination of the national emergency, unless specifically exempted.

The missions were sent to Iran to implement American policy toward that country as decided "before the Tehran declaration," the official stated. Joint Allied occupation was agreed upon, as a war strategy measure, before the Tehran conference.

British, American and Russian Army troops from Iran by January 1. The witdrawal date originally agreed upon by the Big Three was March 2, 1946.

Raises Cry of Free Speech.

London, Dec. 3 (A. P.).—The Cuban delegate to the United Nations Preparatory Commission launched a fight for "freedom of speech" today, with a charge that debate in the United Nations General Assembly was in danger of being severely restricted. Guy Perez Cisneros declared at a committee discussion that a proposal to establish a small steering committee to run the debate of the assembly would limit freedom of discussion.

He argued that every member of the United Nations should be represented on a general committee to insure freedom of speech. He said later that he believed the committee should be composed of the president of each of the fifty-one delegations. Under the plan advanced by the Executive Committee, the steering committee would be composed only of the president and vice-presidents of the assembly and the heads of the committees.

Preliminary debate showed that Perez Cisneros was likely to be backed by Russia and Yugoslavia at least. Another committee voted down an Australian proposal to postpone the election of judges for the International Court of Justice and approved, 27 to 3, a recommendation to hold the elections at the first session of the assembly in January.

Moscow Replies to London.

London, Dec. 3 (A. P.).—A Foreign Office spokesman said today that Moscow had replied to Britain's note on separatist disturbances in northern Iran, but details of the reply were not announced.

Britain had suggested that Soviet interference with the movement of Iranian Government forces into the province of Azerbaijan might have arisen through a misunderstanding on the part of the Red Army commander in the province. Britain also recalled that the sovereignty of Iran had been guaranteed jointly by Russia, Britain and the United States. Moscow dispatches reported that Russia had rejected a proposal advanced by the United States for the withdrawal of

BRITISH CONSIDER TERMS OF U. S. LOAN

London, Dec. 3 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Attlee and his Cabinet today considered a draft of final proposals under which the United States would make a loan to Britain. Details were not disclosed, but it was understood that the principal difference remaining between the two governments was whether Britain could waive interest payments if she experienced a "bad year" financially.

Under a tentative proposal, the Bretton Woods Council would sit as a third party to determine what would be considered a "bad year." Acceptance of this proposal would be conditional upon British ratification of the Bretton Woods agreement.

London, Dec. 3 (AP)—Britain has purchased 24,311 tons of Malayan rubber since liberation of the peninsula from the Japs, John Wilmot, Minister of Supply and Aircraft Production, told Commons today.

A total of 16,484 tons has been shipped to the United Kingdom.

Wilmot said no purchases of tin had been reported to the Board of Trade.

85% Of Albanian Voters Back Gen. Enver Hoxha

London, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Tirana radio said tonight that 85 per cent of the Albanian electorate voted in Sunday's election for the democratic-front candidates of Premier Gen. Enver Hoxha.

Albanians went to the polls for the first time in 21 years to elect a constituent assembly.

Previous reports from Tirana said there were no opposition candidates, although eighteen independents ran in districts in which the Hoxha front did not present candidates.

France Planning Power Firms' Nationalization

Paris, Dec. 3 (AP)—Nationalization of France's electrical industry was forecast today as the next goal of the Constituent Assembly, which passed a sweeping financial reform program at a special session yesterday.

The Assembly voted 521 to 35, to take over the shares and management of the Banque de France and four major deposit banks. It was a marked victory for General de Gaulle, interim president, who appeared personally in the Chamber of Deputies to appeal to the legislature not to press for the nationalization of business or investment banks. He said inclusion of these banks would be harmful to France's chances for reviving her export trade.

Deposits Run High

The nationalized deposit banks are Credit Lyonnais, Societe Generale, Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris and Banque Nationale pour le Commerce et l'Industrie. They have combined deposits of $4,140,000,000, representing 55 per cent of the country's total bank deposits.

The Banque de France will be nationalized before January 1, and shareholders will be reimbursed with dividends not higher than those of 1944. The rate of interest on the amortized sinking fund bonds is restricted to not more than two per cent.

Commissions To Operate Them

The five banks affected by yesterday's legislation will be directed by twelve-member commissions named by the Government. The Government will take over the shares of these banks and assume their management with Government-appointed officials.

The law also created a national credit council, which could recommend nationalization of still other banking establishments, and provided for narrow control of business banks through the naming of a Government commission for each one.

Communists Conciliatory

Passage of the legislation was marked by the conciliatory attitude of the Communist party, which precipitated a nine-day governmental crisis when de Gaulle first named his interim Government Cabinet. The Communists earlier had expressed a desire to widen the scope of the nationalization program, but bowed yesterday to de Gaulle's personal appeal.

Communist Deputy Jacques Duclos, however, served notice that his party awaited further action in this field.

In de Gaulle's first speech to the Assembly ten days ago, he called for nationalization of credit, electricity and insurance; reform of Government administrative machinery, of the civil service and the judiciary system; for a constitutional change in the military structure for national defense; for "modernization" of mining, industry and agriculture; for an immediate budget, and for revaluation of the franc.

More German Plants Ordered Destroyed

Berlin, Dec. 3 (AP)—The American Military Government office announced today that eight more German war plants had been ordered destroyed, making a total of 25 demolished or earmarked for destruction in the United States occupation zone in Germany.

All the general purpose machinery and usable raw materials will be removed and the power plants and specialized military facilities will be blown up. The eight factories are:

Fabrik Fritz Sauer at Gerathofen which produced flares; Werke Weldon at Weldon and Werke Schrobenhausen at Schrobenhausen which produced essential elements for explosives; Rheinisch-Wesiefelisch-Sprengstoff at Landsberg, mortars; Fabrik Muenchen at Munich, triggers for mines and explosives, the Gustav Genschow factory at Durlach and another at Wolfart, small arms ammunition, and the Eschenstruth machinery and equipment plant at Eschenstruth, dies for pressing powder.

STORY OF MUNICH BARED AT TRIAL

Hitler Planned to Attack Czechs as He Pledged No Territorial Claims.

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 3 —(AP) An American prosecutor today laid bare before the international war crimes tribunal Hitler's most famous act of treachery—how he told the world he had no more territorial claims to make and at the same time secretly planned to attack Czechoslovakia.

Unfolding what he called the "inside story" of the Munich pact, Sidney S. Alderman, assistant U. S. prosecutor, pointed to the 20 solemn Nazi leaders in the prisoners' box and declared that the Munich agreement "was a trap set by these people who are here on trial."

Traces Hitler's Moves

Throughout the day he presented evidence to support his assertion, tracing step by step the historic four-power meeting at Munich in September, 1938, then the German occupation of the Sudetenland and finally the seizure of Moravia and Bohemia.

Official Nazi documents showed that one month after the occupation of Austria in March, 1938, Hitler and Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel met to discuss a "pretext" for the invasion of Czechoslovakia and that from then on plans went forward, despite Hitler's pious assertions and his signature of the Munich pact on Sept. 30, 1938.

Germany's intentions were made clear in numerous documents such as a directive from Hitler dated May 30, 1938, which opened with the words: "It is my unalterable decision to smash Czechoslovakia by military action in the near future. It is the job of the political leaders to bring about the politically or militarily suitable moment."

This directive, transmitted by Keitel to commanders of the army, navy and air force, was supplemented by an order from the supreme commander fixing Oct. 1, 1938, as the deadline for the attack.

Hungary Drawn Into Plot

Alderman also introduced documents showing that Hungary had agreed to participation in the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia and had informed Hitler that she would be ready by Oct. 1. The Hungarian government, Alderman disclosed, was reluctant at first, but agreed after Germany told Hungary that if she wanted to take part in the "eating" of her neighbor state she would also have to participate in the "cooking"—the invasion.

The American prosecutor introduced a memorandum from Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, one of the defendants, to Hitler dated Aug. 24, 1938, which he said showed Jodl's complicity in "the shameful fabrication" of an "excuse for war."

"Operation green," the memorandum said, "will be set in motion by means of an 'incident' in Czechoslovakia which will give Germany provocation for military intervention.

Plans Never Abandoned

"Fixing of the exact time for this incident is of the utmost importance. It must come at a time when weather conditions are favorable for our superior air force . . . and at an hour which will enable authentic news of it to reach us."

The Munich agreement delayed the attack, but Alderman presented documents to show that the Nazi leaders never abandoned their plans to smash their little neighbor.

About three weeks after Neville Chamberlain returned from Munich to utter his famous "peace in our time" phrase, Hitler ordered the German armed forces to prepare for "the liquidation of the remainder of Czechoslovakia and the occupation of Memelland."

Sudeten Party Subsidized

Hitler's treachery went even beyond the military sphere, the evidence showed. Into the growing mountain of documents went the Foreign Office minutes of a conference January 21, 1939, at which Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop told the Czech Foreign Minister that a reduction in the size of the Czech Army would be a "decisive" factor in German-Czech relations.

Alderman also presented evidence showing that the Sudeten party in Czechoslovakia was being subsidized by the Germans from 1935 on and that the party leader, Konrad Helein, went on the Nazi pay roll as early as 1933.

Shawcross To Talk Today

This was in line with the Nazi plan, read into the record by the American prosecutor, to "direct national groups such as the Sudeten Germans to support German forces and to influence neutrals into our way of thinking."

Presentation of evidence on the

30.24—32077

Czechoslovakian aggression was unfinished at nightfall. The tribunal disclosed, however, that it would proceed with its original plan to have Sir Hartley Shawcross, chief British prosecutor, give his opening statement tomorrow outlining the case against the prisoners for aggression against Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium and the Balkan countries. The Czechoslovakian case will be finished later.

Munich Threat Not A Bluff, Court Told

Nuernberg, Dec. 3 (AP)—Hitler was not bluffing when his threats of war in 1938 led England and France to sign the Munich pact, secret German war plans introduced at the international war-crimes trials of twenty leading Nazis disclosed today.

Documents laid before the international military tribunal showed that the Munich pact—by which the Czech Sudentenland was handed over to the Nazis — was signed only two days before the date set by the German high command for four armies and the air force to be prepared for a Blitz invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Not only were plans complete for the invasion of Czechoslovakia with the help of Hungary but the German Air Force expected France to join the fight and had prepared detailed plans for attack in the West, the evidence introduced by American prosecutors made plain.

Keitel Quoted

Relaying Hitler's "unalterable decision to smash Czechoslovakia by military action" to commanders of the German Army, Navy and Air Forces, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the High Command, was quoted in an official directive as ordering that "its execution must be assured as from October 1, 1938, at the latest."

Detailed plans for the invasion and an agreement that Hungary would join in the attack left little doubt at the trial that the cold-blooded invasion would have been carried out if England and France had not signed the Munich pact on September 29, 1938—two days before the deadline set by the high command.

Prague Raid Plans

Plans for the bombing of Prague without warning were made by Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, German Army chief of staff, while Sudeten Germans were ordered to stir up unrest and Hungary had promised to be ready to "take part in the conflict by October 1." official German documents disclosed.

Keitel, according to another German document introduced as evidence, was ordered on September 26, 1938, to move his assault forces up to the jumping-off places for the Czechoslovak invasion. Next day Britain mobilized her fleet and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain joined French Premier Edouard Daladier at Munich, where they finally gave in before Hitler's threat of war and signed the Munich pact on September 29.

Citing the growth of the Nazi party into a powerful fifth column among the Sudeten Germans, an official Czechoslovak report filed with the court asserted that "few people knew that Henlein (Konrad Henlein, Nazi leader in Czechoslovakia) went on Hitler's pay roll . . . in 1933."

Mobilization "A T[illegible]"

Declaring that the [illegible] tells the "inside story" of the Munich pact, Assistant Prosecutor Sidney S. Alderman said the mobilizing of Germany's armed might was "a trap set by these people who are here on trial."

Disclosure that two SS "Death's Head" battalions were actually engaged in raids across the Czechoslovak border before the Munich meeting came in the reading of another order signed by Jodl.

The SS battalions were operating under the command of Heinrich Himmler, chief of the SS and all secret police, but were to change to regular army control if war broke out, the order said. Sudeten Free Corps units were also to come under army control at the start of hostilities.

Further evidence that Henlein's Nazi fifth column stirred up trouble in Czechoslovakia as part of Hitler's terror campaign was seen in records of a secret meeting on March 29, 1938, in which the Sudeten Nazi chief was ordered by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop to avoid reaching any agreement with the Prague Government that might settle the coldly calculated "crisis."

Henlein requested in August, 1938, that secret German Nazi subsidies to the Sudeten movement be increased from 15,000 marks (nominally $6,000 at prewar rates) a month to 17,500 marks ($7,000). The memorandum said subsidies began in 1935.

As the third week of the historic trial opened, American prosecutors presented German Army High Command orders revealing that Nazi conquest of Czecho-Slovakia was planned in 1937—two years before the actual invasion and at a time when Hitler was assuring the world he had no desires for additional territory.

"Unalterable Decision"

Another top-secret Hitler directive added to the mounting pile of evidence disclosed that the Führer said on May 30, 1938—four months before the Munich pact and a year before the Germans goose-stepped into Prague—that "it is my unalterable decision to smash Czechoslovakia by military action in the near future."

Alderman said the Nazi plotting was carried on under a pretext of "friendship" through the Locarno pact and other treaties. Hermann Goering nodded in agreement as Alderman quoted the former No. 2 Nazi as assuring the Czechs that "I give you my word of honor" that Germany had no aggressive intentions toward their country.

The German high command plan for the Blitz invasion of Czechoslovakia, drawn June 24, 1937, declared that "the necessary conditions to justify such action politically and in the eyes of international law must be created beforehand."

Meeting With Keitel

One month after the Austrian Anschluss in March, 1938, Alderman said, Hitler met with Keitel and discussed the previously disclosed plot to assassinate the German envoy to Prague as a pretext for invasion of the neighboring country. This plan, he added, was abandoned.

Hitler's May, 1938, directive for the Czech invasion declared that "it is the jot for political leaders to await or bring about the politically or militarily suitable moment."

Another order, entitled "Case Red" and dated June 2, 1938, was the Air Force staff plan for war on France. The document added:

"Regardless whether France enters the war as a result of Case Green (attack on Czechoslovakia) . . . the mass of German offensive formations will, in conjunction with the army, first deliver the decisive blow against Czechoslovakia."

Spying Activities

Alderman produced a letter from the German air attaché in Prague giving a detailed report on his spying activities preparatory to invasion.

Hitler's calculated plans to stir up unrest among Germans in the Czech Sudetenland were made plain by a directive amending the "Case Green" invasion plan calling for propaganda war to intimidate Prague officials by threats and to "direct national groups such as the Sudeten Germans to support the German forces and to influence neutrals into our way of thinking."

Also disclosed were plans to eliminate opposition to the invasion in Hungary and Poland by dismembering Czechoslovakia among the three countries. Poland got the Teschen-Bohumin area and Hungary took over the Province of Ruthenia after Hitler finally had moved in.

Horthy-Hitler Parley

Telling of a conference between Hitler and Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent of Hungary, in mid-Summer of 1938, one document showed that Horthy favored the dismemberment of the little country but a fellow Minister opposed it.

"Whoever wants to join the eating must help in the cooking," Hitler was reported as saying.

Italy, also, was aware of the conspiracy, according to a German Foreign Office memorandum which declared that "Attolico (Italian Ambassador Bernardo Attolico) added that we had made it unmistakably clear to Italians what our intentions are regarding Czechoslovakia." A note initialed by Ribbentrop declared that Mussolini was to be one of the first to be notified as to the actual date of occupation of Czechoslovakia.

Hungarian Foreign Minister Koloman von Kanya was quoted as telling Ribbentrop that his country "would be ready as far as armaments were concerned to take part in the conflict by October 1 of this year (1938)."

Earlier, Ribbentrop had assured Hungarian diplomats that Yugoslavia would not dare to go to the defense of the Czechs and said that "England and France would remain tranquil—England would not recklessly risk her empire."

Jodl Memo Introduced

Alderman then introduced a memorandum signed by Jodl which he said showed complicity in "shameful fabrication . . . as an excuse for war." The Jodl memo declared:

"Operatino Green (invasion of Czechoslovakia) will be set in motion by means of an 'incident' in Czechoslovakia which will give Germany provocation for military intervention. Fixing of the exact time for this incident is of the utmost importance. It must come at a time when weather conditions are favorable for our superior air force . . . and at an hour which would enable authentic news of it to reach us."

Warnings "Impossible"

"Even warning to diplomatic representatives in Prague is impossible before the first air attack," Jodl told Hitler in the plan, which the Führer promptly approved.

The four-power tribunal took great interest in a detailed German study on how to deal with all possible violations of international law involved in the Czech invasion.

The court recessed for lunch at 12.45 P.M. (6.45 A.M. E.S.T.).

American prosecutors presented German Army high command orders revealing that the conquest of Czechoslovakia was planned in 1937—two years before the actual invasion and at a time when Hitler was assuring the world he had no desires for additional territory.

Prosecution Can't Prove Goering Burnt Reichstag

Evidence Is Lacking and He Denies Any Participation

NUERNBERG, Dec. 3 (AP).—Spokesmen for the prosecution in the war-crimes trial said today they have no evidence that Hermann Wilhelm Goering was responsible for the 1933 burning of the Reichstag.

They were commenting on a United Press story which said it was understood that Allied authorities possessed evidence, including affidavits, that Goering was personally and directly responsible for the fire.

Colonel Robert G. Story, an assistant American prosecutor, said American interrogators questioned Goering repeatedly about the burning of the Reichstag, but he stood fast on his disclaimer of participation. He said the American prosecution has no other information on the subject.

Sir Hartley Shawcross, British prosecutor, said: "We have no knowledge of such affidavits, and only last night I was remarking that no evidence had turned up on this."

A French spokesman commented: "This has nothing to do with our case. We have no knowledge of any such affidavits. We are not interested in Goering setting fire to the Reichstag. We are interested in his setting fire to the world."

Nazis Sentenced In 'Sweat' Case

Wuppertal, Germany, Dec. 3 (AP). Capt. Erich Killinger, 52-year-old German prison-camp commandant, was sentenced by a British military court today to five years' imprisonment, and two of his aides received prison terms for ill-treatment of RAF flyers in a "sweat-box" camp.

Killinger and two staff officers—Major Heinz Junge, chief interrogation officer, and Lieut. Heinrich Eberhardt, an interrogation officer—were convicted on charges of torturing airmen in hot, asbestos-lined cells in an endeavor to make them disclose Allied air secrets.

Two Acquitted

Junge was sentenced to five years and Eberhardt was sentenced to three years. Two other defendants, Major Otto Boehringer and Lieut. Gustav Bauer-Schlichtegroll, were acquitted.

Defense counsel pleaded for leniency [illegible] Killinger, on the grounds of his age and the fact that he has a wife and three children.

Ship Leaves Sweden With 1,600 Germans

Stockholm, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Russian transport Kuban sailed today for Soviet territory with 1,600 German army men who were evacuated from Swedish internment camps last week after riotous scenes of resistance and attempts at self-injury by the inmates.

About 600 who were hospitalized as a result of their self-inflicted wounds or hunger strikes still are in Sweden. They probably will be taken away in small groups as they recover. Three committed suicide. Fifteen Germans who escaped from the camps were still at large.

MOSCOW, Dec. 3 (AP)—A commentator of the New Times today attacked the coverage of the Yugoslav elections by THE NEW YORK TIMES, saying that the outstanding majority of foreign correspondents as well as British Members of Parliament who were in Yugoslavia during the balloting had unanimously approved the elections, the commentator added:

"But what about correspondents who make dollars only because they write different fairy tales about the new Yugoslavia? For instance, what about Brewer [Sam Pope Brewer], the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES, who must find facts about the 'undemocracy' of the elections? He has only one way out and that is to give free run to his imagination and irresponsible thinking. * * * Brewer has nothing to do with facts. He must satisfy his bosses—and he used American "freedom of the press' to lie about Yugoslavia."

ITALY FORMS GOVERNMENT

Official List Of New Ministers Not Yet Compiled

Rome, Tuesday, Dec. 4 (AP)—Foreign Minister Alcide de Gasperi said early today he had succeeded in forming a new Italian Government to succeed that of Ferruccio Parri, whose coalition Cabinet fell November 24.

De Gasperi had been conferring with the heads of Italy's six major political parties for several days in an attempt to reach a compromise on the allotting of key Cabinet posts.

Liberals Accept New Proposals

He made the announcement after Liberals (rightists) accepted new proposals for entering the Government. The Liberals and the Christian Democrats precipitated the governmental crisis when they withdrew after feuding with leftists over control of machinery for the elections next spring and Fascist purge measures, forcing Parri's resignation as Premier.

Leone Cattani, Liberal party secretary, said the party decided to enter the Government because of its "great esteem for De Gasperi."

Orlando Favored For Vice Premier

"We feel he is the best man in Italy at this time," Cattani said, adding that the Liberals also decided to adhere to the new Government because "its base is broadened."

Although an official list of new cabinet ministers has not yet been compiled, it was understood that Vittorio Emmanual Orlando—who previously had been backed by the Liberals for the premiership—will get the post of vice premier. Monarchists had been pushing Orlando, World War I Italian leader, for the premiership, but Leftists refused to accept him.

The post of Minister of the Interior, it was understood, will go to the Socialists. In view of the forthcoming national elections this post had assumed vital importance during the conferences leading up to formation of the new government and was the chief obstacle in the crisis.

De Gasperi left the Foreign Office immediately after his announcement and went to the Royal Palace to receive the premiership officially from Crown Prince Umberto, lieutenant general of the realm.

Ethridge Enroute to U. S.

ROME, Dec. 3 (AP).—Mark Ethridge, special observer for Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, was en route home today to report his observations on turbulent Balkan politics. The Louisville publisher left Rome early Sunday aboard an Army Transport Command plane and unless delayed at Casablanca should rech the United States late today.

Greek Elections Set For March 31

Athens, Dec. 3 (AP)—Greek Premier Themistokles Sophoulis said tonight that Greek elections definitely will be held on March 31, 1946.

Elections previously had been scheduled for next January 20. The British Foreign Office had suggested they be held next March.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister John Sophianopoulos said 800 Allied civilian and military observers would arrive in Athens "shortly" to supervise the elections.

Greek Trade-Union Move

Athens, Dec. 3 (AP)—Greek trade union representatives signed today with Louis Saillant, secretary general of the World Trade Union Federation, an agreement outlining conduct of forthcoming elections to choose a trade union executive.

Arabs Urged to Join Boycott

CAIRO, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Pan Arab Council, declaring that Zionist Palestine could prosper only at the economic expense of the Arab, adopted a resolution today urging Arab nations to join in a boycott of all Jewish goods manufactured in Palestine, starting Jan. 1.

Calling for action against the "Zionist economic danger," the council asked Arab countries to deny licenses for importation of Palestine goods and proposed that the league name a committee to supervise execution of the resolution's terms.

Abdul Rahman Azzam Bey, secretary general of the league, said the boycott resolution was not directed at the Jews as a people, but against the aims of Zionism. He said the Arabs were "ready for the consequences" of possible retaliation.

The league's boycott measures would be lifted, he said, when Jewish immigration to Palestine is halted.

British Action On Palestine Issue Assailed

Statement Questions Empire Aims and Urges U. S. to Re-examine Commitments

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP).—Eight prominent Americans, including two Congressmen, declared today in a joint statement that the United States should "re-examine" its commitments to Britain in the light of what they termed British "short-sighted self-interest" in Palestine.

The statement was signed by Representative Andrew L. Somers, Democrat, of New York, and Bertrand W. Gearhart, Republican, of California; Will Rogers jr., former Democratic Representative from California; William B. Ziff, publisher and author; Emil Lengyel, author and educator; Mrs. Karin Michaelis, Danish-American writer and feminist, and Louis Bromfield and Ben Hecht, authors.

"We believe," the statement said, "that a powerful effort is being made by official Britain to utilize (Palestine) and related situations for the purpose of bringing American troops, planes and warships into the Middle East, where their presence would serve as a bulwark against the threat to British interests which undeniably exists there. . . . The British are apparently not so much interested in peace and stability in Palestine or elsewhere."

Under the heading, "We can give our money only to clean hands," the statement warned that America should consider the possible use of money advanced to England in loans before completing current financial negotiations. "How much of the loan . . . will be used to shoot down innocent women and children who try to flee . . . to Palestine?" the statement asked.

The 6,000-word document charged the British with stifling Jewish industrial attempts in Palestine because they might compete with British interests, issuing an "unofficial order" forbidding British soldiers to fraternize with Palestine Jews, and supporting both the Arab League and anti-Jewish riots in the Middle East.

It also charged that a protest made at Belsen, Germany, against British Palestine policy resulted in the arrest of Jewish men, women and children who "were indiscriminately beaten by police with rubber truncheons."

CHINESE PLAN HARBIN DRIVE

Will Reach Manchurian City In Month, Commander Says

Chungking, Dec. 3 (AP)—Chinese Nationalist forces advancing in Manchuria were reported within 30 miles of the important city of Mukden today and their commander said, "we expect to be in Harbin in a month or so."

Chinese Central News Agency dispatches reporting the new gains said air transportation of Nationalist troops farther into Manchuria would start next week.

An Associated Press dispatch from Peiping said that Nationalist officals, who had fled from Changchun, Manchurian capital, in mid-November for fear that Russian withdrawal would leave them at the mercy of the Chinese Communists, were preparing to return tomorrow and take over the government.

To Discuss Air Ferry

Among these officials is Chiang Chung-kuo, eldest son of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He said he would discuss with the Russians the projected airborne Nationalist troop movement.

Credible reports in Chungking said that the Russians already had undertaken to protect the airfields at Changchun and Mukden, but that the Nationalists had appealed to them to guarantee rail transit as well, because airborne operations could not be on a sufficiently large scale to ensure Nationalist invulnerability to Communist attacks.

The Russians, who have agreed to stay in Manchuria until January 3 so that the Nationalists can consolidate in that territory, apparently have made no commitments to admit the Nationalists anywhere except Mukden and Changchun.

Charge Aid To Communists

Some Nationalist sources here alleged that the Russians still were aiding the Communists, but Lieut. Gen. Tu Yu-ming, supreme Nationalist commander in the northeast, said he had found no evidence that any foreign power was giving his opponents material help.

Speaking to Associated Press correspondent Olen Clements, at advance headquarters in Chinhsien Manchuria, General Tu said he expected the opposition to collapse within two months because of lack of organization and supplies.

"I do not expect any large-scale fighting anywhere in Manchuria," General Tu said, adding that he expected to be in Mukden in a few days.

Returned To Mukden

Reports received from Mukden indicated the Russians left that city November 10 but returned to restore order eight days later after irregulars and guerrillas had begun a looting rampage.

General Tu, peppery little 42-year-old field commander, fought beside the Americans in Burma during the Japanese war. He predicted that his present operations soon would boil down to a matter of guarding against guerrilla hit-and-run raids and protecting communication lines.

In line with this forecast, Chinese press dispatches today from Inner Mongolia said the Communists besieging Paotow had failed in a new attempt to scale the city's walls and might soon have to abandon their siege after repeated repulses.

Chinese Advance 30 Miles In Day

Chungking, Dec. 3 (AP)—The rich industrial city of Mukden, in Manchuria, lies only 30 miles ahead of advancing Nationalist spearheads, the Chinese Central News Agency reported today.

As Chiang Kai-shek's forces rolled northward without reported opposition Central News said the first Government troops to be flown into Manchuria would be taken in next week.

35-Mile Advance

Today's report indicates an advance of 35 miles. The Nationalists yesterday reached Tahushan, 65 miles from Mukden. Central News did not specify if Tahushan had been by-passed or the Communists had withdrawn.

Press dispatches stated negotiations are "proceeding satisfactorily" on a new Chinese-Russian agreement on Manchuria.

The Russians recently agreed to defer for a month withdrawal of Red troops from Manchuria, thus enabling Nationalist forces to take over.

Chiang's Son Going To Capital

The Generalissimo's son, Chiang Chung-kuo, has departed for Changchun, Manchurian capital.

Reports of the Nationalist approach to Mukden followed a China Times assertion that troops of the free lance general, Chang Hsueh-shih, had entered the city. It was uncertain whether he favored the Nationalists or the Communists.

There were reports the long-delayed peace talks between Nationalists and Chinese Communists would be resumed December 10.

Yank Flyers Returning

In Shanghai, Lieut. Gen. George Stratemeyer, commanding United States Air Forces in China, announced headquarters of the 10th and 14th Air Forces are on a non-operational basis and are processing personnel for return home. Three squadrons and a troop carrier headquarters group, containing low point men and volunteers, are scheduled to remain in China.

The 14th AAF has been in China since July 2, 1942. It was activated by Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault as the China air task force, built on veterans of the famed "Flying Tigers" of the American volunteer group which fought the Japanese before America entered the war.

Two U.S. Air Forces In China Disbanded

Shanghai, Dec. 3 (AP)—The 10th and 14th air forces went out of existence today.

Lieut. Gen. George Stratemeyer, commanding general of army air forces in China, announced that headquarters of both forces were put on a nonoperational basis and were processing their men for return to the United States. The only units scheduled to remain in China are three squadrons and a troop carrier group headquarters containing low-point men and volunteers.

The 14th Air Force Flying Tigers date to July 4, 1942, with activation of the China air task force under Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault. It was built from a nucleus of American Volunteer Group pilots. The 10th fought in West China and Burma.

U. N. R. R. A. Deputy Is Critical

SHANGHAI, Dec. 3 (AP).—Roy F. Hendrickson, deputy U. N. R. R. A. director, sharply criticized today China's failure to transport U. N. R. R. A. supplies into the interior. He declared curtailment of future shipments would be necessary unless China developed a swifter distribution system.

Hendrickson, who has just completed a three-week inspection of China's stricken areas, said U. N. R. R. A. supplies were piling up in Shanghai warehouses. Eight large supply-laden vessels have docked here since Nov. 8, but "supplies in port warehouses do not feed starving people 500 miles away," said Hendrickson, who left for the United States late today.

Nazi Raider Captain Found in Peiping

Destroyer of 168,000 Tons of Allied Shipping Is Living Quietly With Untroubled Conscience.

Peiping, Nov. 24 (Delayed)—(A. P.).—Living quietly today in Peiping is Hellmuth von Ruckteschell, a man of considerable distinction in German naval circles, a middle-aged, ruddy-cheeked, sea-going Junker, who wears the Knight's Cross and Oak Leaf presented by a grateful Reich for his work in destroying 168,000 tons of Allied shipping in second world war.

He was successively captain of two Nazi auxiliary raiders, and among his twenty-four victims were the British vessel, Gloucester Castle, sunk in seven minutes with all hands, including a number of women and children; the 10,000-ton American tanker Connecticut, torpedoed off Trinidad, which he watched burn for seven hours; and twenty-two other ships of British, French, Norwegian, Greek and American registry which came within range of his six-inch guns, his motor torpedo boat and his two scout planes.

"If you should meet the captain of the Blue Funnel liner Menelaus, present him my compliments, Von Ruckteschell told an Association Press reporter. "He is the only man who ever outmaneuvered me and got away."

In all, more than 600 prisoners of war from fourteen nations spent varying periods as captive guests aboard his vessel until they were transferred to Japanese hands. And when it is suggested that Allied courts of inquiry might like to look into his record, this blue-eyed German replies with a shrug: "Make what you want of me. I did my job and my heart is absolutely clear."

His first raider was the converted Hamburg-America Line freighter Neuemark of 8,000 tons. His second was a converted Polish steamship of 4,500 tons carrying a crew of 400 men and twenty-two officers. Most of the complement perished later when the ship was torpedoed off Japan by an American submarine.

Second Thanksgiving For G. I.'s in China

Chungking, Dec. 3 (A. P.).—American forces in Chungking will have a second Thanksgiving dinner next Sunday to dispose of 499 pounds of Turkey which arrived belatedly from the United States.

Goes On 36-Hour Week

Chungking, Dec. 3 (AP)—American Army personnel in Chungking went on a 36-hour work week effective today.

Canton Paper Under Censor

Canton, Dec. 3 (AP)—Newspaper censorship under Chinese military direction was clamped on Canton today as a reoccupied city in which Chungking dictates "guidance" on the contents of the papers.

JavaIndoChina Parley Headed By Mountbatten

British, French and Dutch to Confer at Singapore; No Indonesians Included

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 3 (AP).—Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten will preside at a conference of top British, French and Dutch leaders in Singapore Thursday night in an effort to solve the politico-military problems of Java and Indo-China, it was announced today.

Among those expected to sit with the Allied supreme commander in Southeast Asio are Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the Imperial General. Staff; Lieutenant General Sir Philip Christison and Major General Douglas Gracey, British commanders in Java and Indo-China, respectively; Vice-Admiral C. E. L. Helfrich, commander of Dutch naval forces in the Pacific; Major General Jacques Leclerc, French commander in Indo-China, and Hubertus J. van Mook, acting governor general of the Netherlands East Indies.

While the announcement of the conference mentioned no Indonesians, it was recalled here that Van Mook said he will continue to hold the door open for discussions with representatives of the unrecognized Indonesian Republic.

The Dutch news agency, Aneta, said fresh attempts were being made to arrange a Dutch-Indonesian meeting, and a Nationalist-sponsored article in an Indonesian newspaper mentioned various means of settling disputes by conciliation. The article spoke of "events that might take place in the near future."

Meanwhile, British naval guns were in action again to disperse Indonesian forces near Semarang, and British planes attacked a force massing near Bandoeng, seventy-five miles from Batavia. Indonesians kidnaped four Europeans and set houses afire in a raid at Bandoeng Saturday night.

British authorities received an apology from Indonesian Premier Sutan Sjahrir for the mass slaying of twenty-two survivors of a British plane crash near here on Nov. 23. Sjahrir said the slayings resulted from "a misunderstanding between occupation troops and the people."

Annamese And French Reported In New Clash

Saigon, Indo-China, Dec. 3 (AP)—An official Anglo-French statement today disclosed a new clash between French troops and Annamese nationalists near Nhatrang, coastal town 190 miles northeast of Saigon.

"French troops have broken through Viet Minh defenses northwest of Nhatrang, inflicting heavy casualities on the extremists," the statement said. "The area occupied has been cleared."

Meanwhile, rubber shipments from Indo-China to the United States were reported delayed by the general disorganization of loading facilities and the refusal of stevedores to work in the face of Annamese threats.

The American-flag liner Red Rover, which arrived here in mid-November to transport 8,000 tons of rubber to Baltimore, remained idle. Washington has been asked by American representatives here to send no more ships for Chinese cargo until harbor conditions are clarified.

Indonese Seize 4 Europeans

Batavia, Java, Dec. 3 (AP)—Indonesi. Extremists raided European homes in Bandoeng and kidnapped four persons Saturday night after firing several houses, an official British statement declared today. The nationality of the Europeans, one of whom later escaped, was not disclosed.

Elsewhere in Java, the statement disclosed, there was little heavy fighting. North of Tjibadak, in the Bandoeng area, a strong force of Indonesians attacked a British native company, but was dispersed by RAF planes.

Mobilizing Near Semerang

At Ambarawa, where native troops have moved in to protect 10,000 civilian internees in a large camp, no developments were reported. The Indonesians, however, were said to be mustering their forces east and southeast of Semarang, 30 miles north.

The British cruiser Sussex shelled the area, the British said, and British troops fully occupied Oengaran, between the two cities.

British tanks have entered Waroe, 10 miles south of Soerabaja.

Slayings a "Misunderstanding"

BATAVIA, Dec. 3 (AP)—Prime Minister Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian Government has expressed regret to General Christison, British commander, for circumstances leading to the slaying of twenty-three survivors of a British plane crash near Batavia on Nov. 23. Premier Sjahrir termed the incident a "misunderstanding between the occupation troops and the people."

Rubber Shipment to U. S. Delayed

SAIGON, Indochina, Dec. 3 (AP).—Shipment of rubber from Indochina to the United States is being delayed by the general disorganization of loading facilities and the inability to round up local labor in the face of a continuing threat of Annamite attacks against stevedores.

Sheets of crude rubber are awaiting loading on the American-flagged Panamanian liner Red Rover. An American representative, who makes a daily round of responsible agencies seeking stevedores, said he has asked Washington to send no more ships solely to take out Indochina rubber until conditions improve.

'War Criminal' In Japan Still Undefined

Tokyo, Dec. 3 (AP)—General MacArthur's newest directive ordering the arrest of 59 prominent Japanese as war crimes suspects reaches into every strata of Nipposese society but leaves unanswered the question: What is a war criminal?

Neither rank nor position will protect suspected war criminals, MacArthur's directive demonstrates.

The new "rouges gallery" includes one imperial prince, an ex-president of the Privy Council, two former Premiers and nine erstwhile Cabinet Ministers, five prominent zaibatsu (industrialists), militarists, bankers and newspaper executives.

Influential Leaders On List

These men are sandwiched into the latest war criminal list among somoe of Japan's most influential leaders—and some whose presence in this company is puzzling.

The newest group reached deeply into domestic totalitarianism. Seven of the militarists once were top men in the dreaded kempeitai, or thought police. Several were prominent in the Imperial Rule Assistance Association, Japan's first single party, and its successors. The list included:

Field Marshal Shunroku Hata, former War Minister who retired in 1940 and gave Dictator Hideki Tojo his big chance by naming him as his successor. Hata miraculously escaped death by sitting out in an air-raid shelter the atomic bombing of Hiroshima.

Hiranuma An Ex-Premier

Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, former Premier and now president of the Privy Council and senior elder statesman. Although known as a Japanese Fascist, he opposed the Tripartite Pact with Germany and Italy.

Former Premier Koti Hirota, under whose administration the Anti-Comintern Pact was signed in 1936 as a substitute for the Tripartite Pact.

Naoki Hoshino, who as chief Cabinet secretary was instrumental in applying Manchurian-developed controls to the Japanese homeland.

Nishio Adviser To Tojo

Gen. Toshizo Nishio, former commander in chief in China, who was considered one of Tojo's closest military friends and advisers.

Lieut. Gen. Saburo Ando, another Manchurian general, who took over the Home Ministery under Tojo to enforce more strictly the repressive laws in Japan.

Although MacArthur demanded the arrest of the man who named Tojo War Minister it ignored, for the time being at least, the man who selected him as Premier—Marquis Koichi Kido, former Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal.

The list included Imperial Prince Nashimoto, presumably because of his position as Lord Custodian of the national Shinto Shrines.

Nip Prince Puzzled By His Arrest

Tokyo, Dec. 3 (AP)—A bewildered old man with Nineteenth Century mustachios stood amid the bomb-charred ruins of his imperial mansion today and professed ignorance as to why he was the first member of the Japanese imperial household named as a suspected war criminal.

"I have no idea why I was named and it was very much a surprise to me," Imperial Prince Morimasa Nashimoto said.

Reprieve Is Asked

Almost as he was speaking Foreign Minister Shigeru Yoshida submitted a formal Japanese Government request to Allied headquarters asking "for a reprieve" for the aged prince, whose arrest along with that of 58 other suspects was ordered earlier in the day.

Standing stiffly in his garden, the 71-year-old Nashimoto described himself as a field marshal without a command, a prince without influence and a Shinto ritualist with little to do.

"Nothing To Do" With War

"I had nothing whatsoever to do with the war and nobody ever consulted me on political affairs," Nashimoto said. "I didn't actively oppose it but you can imagine how I felt . . . I can imagine what you think of (wartime Premier Hideki) Tojo and I feel the same way."

The prince declared that he retired from direct participation in military affairs in 1932—"not in opposition to the Manchurian incident but because of ill health." Since then he has served on the board of marshals, which functioned infrequently when the Emperor asked its advice on military matters.

Member Of Societies

"Foreign Minister Yoshida notified me a short time ago about the war-criminal list," Nashimoto said. "He thought maybe I would be named because of my connection with several societies."

The societies, he added, included honorary chairmanships in organizations for the military arts—such as sports taught in schools—and for training airplane glider pilots for air-raid defense.

"But I was only an honorary chairman; the real work was done by someone else," he explained.

The prince paused and said: "Let's see what else I have done."

Then he looked up solemnly and added: "Nothing."

Jap, Arrested, Calls It An Honor

Tokyo, Dec. 3 (AP)—Ryoichi Sasakawa, former president of the ultra-nationalistic Kokusai Domei Political Association, was quoted tonight by Jiji news agency as saying the new list of 59 suspected war criminals comprised "Japan's first-class persons" and he was glad his name was among them.

"To be named by the Allied army as a war criminal is eloquent proof that I devoted my whole self to the prosecution of the war," he said.

Jiji reported that Sasakawa and Lieut. Gen. Nobutaka Shioten, anti-Semtic leader, took their seats in the Diet as usual today but Shioten left hurriedly upon learning his name was on the list.

Hata Is Unapologetic

TOKYO, Dec. 3 (AP)—Field Marshal Shunroku Hata, proud and unapologetic, said today: "I will take responsibility for all operations" while Commander in Chief of Japanese forces in China.

Declaring it was no shock to find his name on the new list of Japanese war leaders ordered arrested by General MacArthur, the 66-year-old Chief Aide de Camp to the Emperor said: "I feel the responsibility of the war."

"I expected it. I feel the responsibility of the war."

Marshal Hata offered no defense for a career that reached a bloody climax when he led Japanese troops into Shanghai in 1938 and commanded all Japanese forces in China until December, 1943.

He disclosed that the Japanese were preparing for American landings on the coast of China as far back as September, 1944. An invading force could have walked in at almost any time up to the surrender, Hata said, for though more than 1,000,000 Japanese soldiers were in China there was only one regiment and half a brigade—5,000 men in all—deployed along the expected American beachhead.

Japan Must Boost Taxes To Meet Proposed Budget

TOKYO, Dec. 3—(AP) The Japanese Diet, operating under the shadows of growing domestic unrest and new American probing into war responsibilities, was told today that heavy tax increases would be required to meet a proposed budget of 13,600,000 yen (about $907,000,000 at the official exchange rate.)

Finance Minister Keizo Shibusawa, presenting the budget to the House of Representatives, said estimated revenues would meet less than two-thirds of it. He called for increases in income taxes, luxury taxes, many indirect taxes and higher prices for sake and tobacco, which are government monopolies.

Diet to Recess

The Diet, which has accomplished nothing in the first week of its session, scheduled a recess for tomorrow so that committees could wrestle with the budget and bills for election revisions.

Sharpening coal shortages and reported increases in crimes of violence posed additional problems which must be faced eventually.

The lower House sessions have been marked by inconclusive wrangling over war responsibility, but General MacArthur's new list of 59 wanted big-time operators made it clear to the members that their decisions on that subject would carry no weight.

The new list included a prince of the blood, eight peers and two former premiers, leaving out of the "wanted" category only two men who have served as government leaders since 1937. They were former Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye and former Navy Minister Mitsumasa Yonai.

The 71-year-old, white-moustached Prince Morimasa Nashimoto, who said he had no idea why he was on the list, declared he was a prince without influence, a field marshal without a command and a Shinto religious ritualist without duties. Foreign Minister Shigeru Yoshida asked Allied headquarters to "reprieve" the old man, but no immediate reply was received.

Accepts Full Responsibility

Others on the new list reacted differently. Field Marshal Shunroku Hata, former commander-in-chief in China, said he was not at all surprised he had been included and declared, "I will take responsibility for all operations" while commanding in China. Hata remarked incidentally that the Americans could have invaded the China coast at any time after September, 1944, because he had available as a defensive force only 5,000 men out of the 1,000,000 Japanese in China.

Another suspect was Ryoichi Sasakawa, leader of ultra-nationalistic organizations. He said he was proud to be on the list because it was composed of "Japan's first-class persons" and that he had been "waiting with my neck cleaned for the Allied army to name me as one of the war criminals."

Sasakawa and Lt. Nobutake Shioten, anti-Semitic leader, took their regular seats in the Diet today but Shioten left when he learned he was on the wanted roster.

The war responsibility question already has split the dominant party in the House of Representatives, the so-called Progressives. Only 178 of its 275 members voted for a resolution Saturday which whitewashed the Diet members by merely asking that they "reflect on their past."

Confusion On Language Marks Yamashita Trial

Manila, Dec. 3 (AP)—Presentation of testimony in the month-long war-crimes trial of Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita ended on a note of confusion tonight as opposing counsel agreed that some of the questions asked of the defendant in English had a different meaning in Japanese.

Maj. Gen. Russell B. Reynolds, president of the military court, resolved the linguistic riddle with a ruling that in doubtful cases the chief interpreter's decision would be final.

Expects Verdict Friday

Reynolds then declared a recess until Wednesday to allow attorneys time to prepare their final arguments, and said the court expected to be able to announce its verdict on Friday.

Yamashita himself was the last witness to take the stand. He was recalled by defense counsel to counter damaging testimony by the prosecution's rebuttal witnesses.

In a final effort to emphasize his contention that he was not responsible for alleged Japanese atrocities in the Philippines, the General testified that one of his army groups had the power of life and death over prisoners and he was helpless to intervene.

Had Power To Hold Trials

He said the 35th Army Group operating east of Manila, where prosecution witnesses have testified many atrocities were committed, had authority to appoint courts-martial and try prisoners of war and internees. The army group was vested with this power at the time of its activation, he explained, and he was without authority to take it away.

Earlier in the session the prosecution's star rebuttal witness, Col. Hideo Nishihara, became lost in a maze of defense questions attacking his credibility. His replies of "I don't know" or "I think I have forgotten" became so frequent that Reynolds finally intervened to protest that the witness was "getting everyone confused."

Failed In Philippines Court

Yamashita's move today to put his case before the Supreme Court of the United States came after he had drawn a blank in his efforts to have the case taken out of the hands of the American military commission by the Philippines Supreme Court.

The Philippines court on November 28 rejected a petition by Yamashita's attorneys for a writ of habeas corpus that would have transferred him to the jurisdiction of the Commonwealth's courts.

It did this despite the fact that the Army ignored its summons and sent no representative to the hearing. The Army's view was that the Philippines courts had no jurisdiction over its actions.

'No Power' Over Lower Courts: Yamashita

Manila, Dec. 3 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita declared at his war-crimes trial today that one of his army groups had the power of life or death over prisoners and he was helpless to intervene.

The former Japanese commander in the Philippines made the startling statement when his counsel called him back to the stand to counter damaging testimony by the prosecution's rebuttal witnesses.

Yamashita said the 35th Army Group operating east of Manila, where many atrocities for which the prosecution seeks to hold him responsible were committed, had authority to appoint courts-martial and try prisoners of war and internees.

Vested At Activation

The Army group was vested with this power at the time of its activation, the General testified, and he was without authority to take it away.

The prosecution in crossexamination struck vigorously at some of Yamashita's previous testimony. After much wrangling it was agreed by both sides that some questions asked him in English had a different shade of meaning in Japanese.

Whereupon the military commission trying Yamashita ruled that henceforth the chief interpreter's decision would be final.

YAMASHITA SEEKS HIGH COURT RULING

Petition Challenges Authority Of Military Tribunal

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—General Yamashita, first of Japan's leaders on trial for war crimes, asked the United States Supreme Court today to take over and bring him to Washington.

From Manila, where Yamashita is denying responsibility for atrocities against Filipinos, his American lawyers sent a petition that his trial before a United States military commission be halted.

Petition By Airmail

Yamashita in a formal petition airmailed from the Philippines asked the Supreme Court to issue a writ of habeas corpus requiring Gen. Douglas MacArthur to produce him before the tribunal or one of its justices for any action the high court considers proper.

He also asked a "writ of prohibition," prohibiting continuation of his trial as a war criminal. He requested that the high court order him returned to the status of prisoner of war "in conformity with provisions of the Geneva convention."

No Martial Law Is Claim

Yamashita's petition, contending the military commission lacked authority to try him, said:

"There being no martial law, no military government of occupied territory, and no active hostilities in the Philippines at the time of the appointment of the commission, there was no authority to appoint the commission and it is without jurisdiction."

The court will act on the petition later.

Attachés said they expected Yamashita to file another petition, asking the Supreme Court to review a decision by the Philippines Supreme Court. The islands tribunal denied the General's contention that the military commission was illegal and that Philippine civil courts should take over his case.

"Surprise" At Singapore

San Francisco, Dec. 2 (AP)—Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, on trial on war criminal charges in Manila, didn't expect Lieut. Gen. Arthur Ernest Percival to surrender Singapore in February, 1942, the one-time "Tiger of Malaya" was quoted today in a Mutual Broadcasting System broadcast.

MBS Correspondent Robert Stewart said Yamashita told him he used "some 40,000 to 30,000 men" to defeat the British from he believed "more than 100,000."

"Sheer Luck"

Yamashita, reported Stewart, said it was "'by sheer luck our entire forces were not annihilated when we attempted to cross Johore Straits" from the Malay Peninsula to Singapore Island.

"The British guns could have annihilated us. I expected the British guns to wipe us out to the last man, but they never did."

Yamashita said his table pounding and fist waving at the surrender parley with the British officer arose out of efforts to make an interpreter understand what he was trying to tell Percival.

Re-Enlistment Record Set

Manila, Dec. 3 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Jack B. Dunn, in charge of Army re-enlistments in the Pacific theater, reported today that all records for regular Army re-enlistments were broken last week with 11,835 men signing up for additional military duty.

Dunn said industrial unrest at home and the new twenty-year retirement plan are contributing factors.

VARGAS MAN LEADING VOTE

Dutra Ahead In Four States; Seven Brazilians Killed

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 3 (AP)—Army General Eurico Dutra, backed by former President Getulio Vargas, took an early lead today over three opponents in returns from Sunday's presidential elections in Brazil in which seven persons were killed.

Dutra and Air General Eduardo Gomes, leader of the anti-Vargas forces, were easily outdistancing their civilian opponents on the basis of the unofficial returns. It was Brazil's first election for President in fifteen years.

Gomes Leads In Six States

Returns from ten states gave Dutra 16,723 votes; Gomes, 11,138; Yeddo Fiuza, Communist party candidate, 5,108, and Mario Rollim Telles, Agrarian party candidate, 48.

Gomes held the lead in six states, which have a total of 1,564,924 registered voters, while Dutra led in four states with a registered vote of 3,895,613. It was estimated that from 75 to 90 per cent of all those registered in the country cast ballots.

Dutra was showing early strength in small cities and rural areas where the long-established Vargas political machine was least affected by the ousting of the former President from office last October 29.

Plurality Voting For Senators

Dutra's early lead, based on rural votes, may be challenged by returns from metropolitan areas, where both Gomes and Fiuza are running well. Telles failed to register as a candidate in many states.

Only two boxes were counted in this capital today. They gave Gomes 205, Dutra, 194; Fiuza, 117, and Telles, 7. The decision will go to the candidate gaining a plurality of the nation's 7,613,339 registered voters. The electoral tribunal said if the contest is close final results may not be known for ten to fifteen days.

Election of Federal senators also will be plurality voting. Election of members of the Chamber of Deputies, however, will be on a proportional basis, each party obtaining a number of seats from each state according to its proportionate vote in that state.

Vargas Gets Early Lead

Vargas, a candidate for the Federal Senate from his home state, was leading on the basis of early reports. The former President made no campaign, but both the Brazilian Labor and Social Democratic parties indorsed him in a number of states, under rules which permit multiple candidates, for the Senate and Chamber of Deputies. Party officials said Va[illegible] voted today in his home city of São Borja.

All state capitals reported the most orderly elections and the heaviest voting in Brazil's history. Five persons, however, were killed when an election dispute flared in the jungle town of Flores in the Recife area, and two others were killed in a dispute in the town of Carpina in the state of Pernambuco. Otherwise only minor incidents have been reported.

DUTRA IS LEADING IN BRAZIL VOTING

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 3 (A. P.).—The first three districts to report in Brazil's first presidential election in fifteen years gave a slight lead today to Gen. Eurico Dutra who had the backing of former President Getulio Vargas.

Press dispatches disclosed that seven persons were killed in political fights yesterday.

The first ballot box opened at Petropolis, summer capital of the State of Rio de Janeiro, gave Dutra sixty-nine votes. Gen. Edourdo Gomes, his principal opponent, received 135, Yedda Fiuza, a non-Communist backed by the Communist party, fifty-five, and Rollin Telles, Agrarian, two.

At Fortaleza, capital of the northern State of Ceara, the first box gave Gomes 203, Dutra sixty-five and Fiuza eighty-six. From Araguay in the State of Goyaz the first election totals were 970 for Dutra, 170 for Gomes and ninety for Fiuza.

The final results from Sunday's voting may not be learned for ten days.

Argentine Fascists Seen Planning A 'Putsch'

Buenos Aires, Dec. 3 (AP)—The English language newspaper Standard today quoted Emilio Troise, president of the Committee Against Racialism and Anti-Semitism, as saying that Nazi elements in Argentina would attempt in a few days a "Putsch similar to the firing of the Reichstag in Germany."

The newspaper said Troise had telegraphed the accusation to Interior Minister Gen. Felipe Urdapilleta.

The Standard quoted Troise as saying the plotters would attempt to make Jews appear responsible for placing bombs in meeting places of supporters of former Vice President Juan Perón, and would then destroy Jewish property and beat Jews, as an act of revenge.

Argentine Bishopric Tells Catholics to Vote Against Anti-Peron Democratic Union Ticket

PARANA, Argentina, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Catholic weekly Acción today published instructions signed by the provincial bishopric ordering Catholics not to vote for candidates of the Democratic Union, which was formed among the major political parties in Argentina to combat the Presidential candidacy of Col. Juan Perón.

The article said it was a "directive—not merely advice."

The instructions did not mention the Democratic Union by name, but it told Catholics that they must not vote for the Communist or Socialist parties, "nor for parties that unite or collaborate with them."

The Democratic Union was formed by a coalition of the Socialist, Communist and Radical parties.

The instructions said Catholics were forbidden to vote for Socialists or Communists because those parties propose the separation of the Church and State, elimination of the religious oath, suppression of religious teaching in schools and legal divorce. Argentina's population is more than 90 per cent Catholic.

The instructions said the Church does not mix in politics, "but when politics touches the altar, it can and should intervene, instructing Catholics about their duties."

The article said the instructions were issued in conformity with the orders of the Archbishop of Argentina. But the pastoral letter of the archbishop told Catholics only to keep calm, vote according to their conscience and avoid hatred.

U.S. Plane, 13 Missing

Montevideo, Dec. 3 (AP)—Uruguayan radio stations tonight reported a United States Army plane with thirteen persons aboard had been missing since 10.30 A.M., en route from Asuncion, Paraguay, to Montevideo, a distance of about 650 miles.

NIGHT

The plane was last reported near the frontiers of Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay, flying in a southeasterly direction through a heavy wind and rain storm.

Military aviation headquarters here said the plane should have landed at the Montevideo air port at 5.30 P.M. It left Asuncion at 6.15 A.M.

Senator's Son Has Return Canceled

Honolulu, Dec. 3 (AP)—Orders transferring Seaman 2/c Paul T. Stewart, son of Senator Tom Stewart (D., Tenn.) from the Hawaiian Islands to Norfolk, Va., have been canceled at young Stewart's request.

NIGHT

Capt. H. W. Hurney, chief of the amphibious command, administrative section, said today that Stewart, 18, would remain here.

In a letter to his commanding officer, asking that he be allowed to remain, young Stewart said: "I feel that my continued presence overseas is desirable so that it will be evident that my status in the Navy can in no way be attributed to any possible political influence."

Canada's "Top B" Dissolved

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (AP)—Dissolution of Canada's Industries Control Board, the wartime body mainly responsible for the distribution of war materials, was announced today by Munitions Minister C. D. Howe.

Plane Missing; Twelve Aboard

Seattle, Dec. 3 (AP)—The 13th Naval District said tonight a search by air and sea was being conducted all the way from Seattle to Kodiak, Alaska, for a navy plane missing since November 29 with twelve persons aboard.

The public relations office said the "privateer" plane—Navy version of the B-24 Liberator—was not contacted after it left Kodiak. The names of those aboard were withheld pending location of the plane and notification of next of kin.

All naval craft have been alerted to be on the lookout for indication of the plane's location and two small craft are searching. Planes from Whidby Island, north of here, Coast Guard planes from Port Angeles, Wash., and navy aircraft in Alaska are flying over the 1,000 miles of rugged coastline which was the privateer's intended route.

The Western Defense Command of the Royal Canadian Air Force offered its assistance in the search.

NAVY PLANE, 15 [illegible] OARD, REPORTED M[illegible]SSING

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 3—(AP) United States planes fighting heavy winds searched tonight for a U. S. Navy plane missing on an Alaska-Seattle flight with 15 persons, believed to be Navy personnel, abroad.

U.S. HAD NO SPIES AT START OF WAR, WITNESS ASSERTS

Pearl Harbor Probers Learn Intelligence Committee Was Paper Organization.

MILES BACKS ESPIONAGE

General Believes Secret Service Should Be Part of National Defense Set-Up.

NOT DEC 3 1941

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 — (AP) Army's pre-Pearl Harbor intelligence chief testified today that the United States had no secret foreign intelligence service before the war and that a joint Army-Navy intelligence committee existed only on paper.

Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, appearing before the joint congressional committee investigating Pearl Harbor, said that difficulties over office space figured in failure of the joint Army-Navy board, technically created in October, 1941, to meet until two days after the Japanese attack on the American fleet.

Differed on Duties

Its functioning also was delayed, he said, by differences between the War and Navy departments over just what duties it should perform.

Miles cited these difficulties as among the reasons why "I believe thoroughly and have for many years in the unification of the services."

Asked by Senator Lucas (D-Ill.), if the United States should maintain a foreign secret intelligence service in peacetime, Miles declared:

"Decidedly, yes. In my opinion a secret intelligence service is essential for national defense."

He commented that before the war the Army "never had any money for espionage."

Miles amplified under questioning from Rep. Murphy (D-Pa.) earlier testimony that all military men knew a possible attack on Hawaii was "inherent" in any war with Japan.

However, he did not believe there was anyone in high place, Miles said, who anticipated in the tense days of 1941 that such an attack was Japan's "most likely" initial move if she decided to risk war.

Third Day as Witness

It was the bulky general's third day in the witness chair. For the most part, his questioning revolved about the warning messages sent from Washington to overseas Army stations.

Miles emphatically demurred when Rep. Gearhart (R-Calif.) suggested that an admonition not to "alarm civil population," contained in a message to Hawaii, led commanders there not to order a full state of alert.

In his opinion, Miles said, a full alert could have been ordered without alarming civilians.

Reply Was in Adequate

He contended that Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, Army commander in Hawaii, made a "totally inadequate" reply when—in response to a warning from Washington—he reported that he [illegible] alerted his command against [illegible] age.

But the witness [illegible] ined to express an opinion [illegible] whether officials at the W[illegible] department should have detec[illegible] the alleged inadequacy.

Miles said in reply to a question that the message Gen, George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, sent to Hawaii Nov. 27, 1941, was "sufficient warning to cause the necessary and proper alert to be put into effect."

When Rep. Clark (D-N.C.) asked whether anyone at the War department should have done something about Short's reply, Miles said that question should be directed to one of the three men who, so far as he knew, were the only ones who saw Short's message.

He named these men as Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War; Marshall and Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, then head of the War Plans division.

Gerow, Marshall to Testify

The committee will have opportunity later this week to question two of the three on that point. Gerow is to follow Miles to the witness chair and Marshall is to begin testifying on Thursday.

Short, who has been attending all sessions of the hearings, got up and left the room during Miles' testimony.

The message from Marshall had said that Japanese "hostile action" was "possible at any moment." It directed that Short "undertake such reconnaissance and other measures as you deem necessary" but not "alarm civil population." A report of action taken was requested.

Short's reply, sent the next day, said: "Report department alerted to prevent sabotage period liaison with Navy reurad four seven two twenty seventh. (Reurad means "reference your radio."

As has been brought out in previous Pearl Harbor investigations, Short ordered only his No. 1 alert into effect. This alert was a defense against sabotage, espionage and subversive activities without any threeats from the outside.

Short's operating procedure designated as No. 3 alert a defense against all-out attack.

Miles turned over to the committee correspondence between the War department and General Hugh Drum, commanding the Hawaiian department in 1936, which showed the department had envisioned in almost every detail the possibility of just such an attack as the Japanese made on Dec. 7, 1941.

Drum had raised the question whether additional airfields should not be constructed on outlying islands as part of the defense against surprisee air attack.

The department decided against constructing such bases. One reason it gave was that planes on islands to the east and west of Oahu, where Pearl Harbor is located, would not be in a good geographical position for defense against a carrier raid [illegible] from the northeast.

DEC 3 1941

The analysis made at that time presumed an enemy carrier force would speed toward the island during the night and loose its planes at dawn. It was calculated that, to make such an attack, the carriers need not approach closer than 665 to 1,000 miles during the daylight hours of the day preceding the attack.

Impossible to Patrol Perimeter

The department concluded that it was an almost "impossible task" to patrol the entire perimeter at 665 or more miles from Oahu.

"In 1936 we were just beginning to build our big bombers and radar was unknown," Miles commented.

"Did succeeding officers (to Drum) have the benefit of these documents?" Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn) asked.

"I assume they were on file in the Hawaiian department," Miles replied.

The witness also read to the committee what he said was an affidavit by Col. George F. Bicknell, then Hawaiian intelligence officer, that he learned from naval officers on Dec. 3, 1941, that Japanese consuls had been instructed to destroy their codes.

Bicknell said he reported this at a staff meeting Dec. 6 and said then that "something warlike by Japan is likely to happen somewhere." It was not brought out whether Short attended that meeting of his staff.

taken, "there is an inference of that." He said a reference by Short to liaison with the Navy "might or might not" indicate that the General was planning a later message covering other actions.

Clark noted that messages simi-

General Short's Reply 'Inadequate', Miles Tells Probe Unit

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Sherman A. Miles said today that the reply Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short made from Hawaii on November 28, 1941, to a war-warning message from Washington was "totally inadequate."

Miles testified before the Senate-House group investigating Pearl Harbor. On Thursday the committee is to hear General of the Army George C. Marshall, who sent the warning message. Evidence was cited by Representative Clark (D., N.C.) that on November 27 Marshall warned Short that "hostile action is possible at any moment" and to take reconnaissance and such other measures "as you deem necessary."

Short's Reply

Filed as a reply was word from Short to Marshall the next day that the Hawaiian department was "alerted to prevent sabotage."

"Was that in any way responsive?" asked Clark.

Miles, who was head of army intelligence at the time of Pearl Harbor, demurred. He said he would like that question to be directed to officers who saw the reply. He named these as Secretary of War Stimson, General Marshall and the chief of the war-plans division, Gen. Leonard T. Gerow.

But Clark persisted, saying that he wanted Miles' opinion as a military man of long experience.

"Totally Inadequate"

"Very well, sir," replied Miles. "My opinion is that that message was a totally inadequate reply to th[illegible] message it purported to reply to."

Miles continued that while the Short message did not say that only steps against sabotage had been lar to the one sent to Hawaii were dispatched at the same time to other overseas stations.

Refers To MacArthur Reply

He directed attention to a reply from Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur in the Philippines that reconnaissance had been extended and ground forces put in a state of readiness for defense.

Saying that Short's message was "conspicuously different," Clark asked: "Ought not someone in the War Department have detected that difference?"

"There again," Miles replied, "I would rather you would ask that question o[illegible] someone who did see the message."

Clark did not press him for an opinion.

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) asked if Miles conferred very often with Marshall during that period.

Conferred With Marshall

He saw Marshall from time to time, Miles said, but in so far as possible tried to avoid taking any more of Marshall's time than was absolutely necessary because the chief of staff was very busy.

"What was he doing?" Lucas asked.

"Well, Senator, he had to appear frequently before congressional committees. He was trying to build an army with none too great support from the American people."

Miles added that Marshall was planning the training and maneuvers of the army forces as well as planning moves which would be made if this country was forced into the war.

Held "Sufficient Warning"

Miles previously testified that he considered Marshall's November 27, 1941, message "sufficient warning to cause the necessary and proper alert to be put into effect" to meet the Japanese Pearl Harbor attack.

Under questioning by Representatives Cooper (D., Tenn.) and Clark (D., N.C.) Miles told the committee he regarded the message of Marshall, then chief of staff, as word to the Hawaiian fortress that "the situation you were built for has arrived; be on the alert."

Cooper asked specifically if Miles thought the Marshall message was "sufficient warning to cause the necessary and proper alert to be put into effect" by Short.

"I did, sir, most definitely," Miles replied in a solemn voice.

Had Placed No. 1 Alert

Previous inquiries have disclosed that Short had placed into effect a No. 1 alert, designed primarily against sabotage. This alert was two steps away from the No. 3 full alert under which guns would have been manned constantly.

Clark asked if the Japanese success in the December 7, 1941, raid depended largely on surprise.

Miles said that the intelligence officers believed that, for the Japanese to attack the Hawaiian fortress and the fleet that was there, risking ships they could not replace, their chances of success would rest in surprise—in "finding the fortress unprepared and unalerted."

Clark asked the General if he meant Hawaii was unprepared as well as unalerted.

"Man Must Pull Trigger"

"No gun will go off unless there is a man there to pull the trigger," Miles replied. "If the man who is supposed to pull the trigger is not there to pull it, the gun is unprepared."

Cooper asked if Short was presumed to know what to do to defend Hawaii and his command.

"I assumed, sir, that he had no other reason or purpose for having command there," the witness replied.

"A lieutenant general of the United States Army would be presumed to know what to do if somebody started shooting at him, wouldn't he?" Cooper pressed.

"Yes, sir," Miles replied.

Termed "The Obvious"

Under questioning by Clark, Miles said that he still fails to see why it should have been necessary to repeat in messages to Short what Miles termed "the obvious" possibility of an attack on Hawaii.

He said the general staff "constantly thought of the element of surprise in connection with Hawaii."

"We never lost sight of the fact that Japan, if it engaged in war with us, probably would attack Hawaii," Miles declared.

Miles previously testified to an affidavit he said was obtained from Col. George F. Bicknell, then Hawaiian intelligence officer.

Learned About Message

Bicknell said in the affidavit that on December 3, 1941, he learned from naval officers about the Japanese message to their consuls. Bicknell added that he had discussed this and had learned from Robert Shivers, FBI head in Honolulu, that the local consul was destroying his papers.

In the affidavit, Bicknell said he had reported this information at a staff meeting held for Short by Colonel Phillips, Short's chief of staff. The affidavit did not make it clear whether Short himself was in attendance.

Meeting Held Dec. 6

Bicknell said in the affidavit that he told the staff meeting, held December 6, that "something warlike by Japan is likely to happen somewhere."

Miles testified that the affidavit was obtained by Lieut. Col. Henry C. Clausen, who, Senators Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Brewster (R., Maine) recently told the Senate, former Secretary of War Stimson "sent around the world" getting statements from officials who previously had testified before inquiry boards.

Miles took the stand to correct what he said were some errors in his previous testimony after William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, announced that Marshall would testify beginning Thursday.

Gerow To Follow Miles

Mitchell said Gerow would follow Miles on the stand.

Miles said he had testified last week that he did not know if the Army had been informed of the message the Navy sent about Japanese burning their codes. He said he meant to say he did not know about it in 1941 but did know about it last week because he had read Bicknell's affidavit.

He also wanted it understood, Miles said, that there had been no "complacency" in the intelligence division about the slowness of decoding and translating Japanese messages that had been intercepted.

Miles Cites Technical Work

The committee has been informed that several important messages intercepted before December 7, 1941, the day of the attack, were not translated until much later.

Stressing that this process entailed much technical and detailed work, Miles said the intelligence division was sure that the "devoted men" who were doing the work were rushing it through as much as they could.

"The astonishing thing," he said, "was not that the translation of the messages was delayed but that we were able to do it at all."

More Information Due

Gerhard Gesell, one of committee counsel, said information soon would be made available to the group about the time the messages were intercepted, by which monitoring station, the time they were forwarded to the technical services to be decoded, the method by which they were forwarded and the time consumed in getting them into English.

Lucas considers the code-destroying message one of the most important sent by Washington to field commanders before the Japanese sneak attack.

"I can't understand w' the message that the Japanese had been ordered to destroy their codes didn't put every military leader on a full alert," Lucas said. "Even a layman knows that when codes are ordered destroyed, war is likely to come, and come fast."

Message Is An Issue

Gesell said one of the greatest controversies expected in the hearing revolves around the delivery or nondelivery to Short of a message the Navy sent its fleet commanders, including Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, on December 3, 1941.

The message said:

"Highly reliable information has been received that categoric and urgent instructions were sent yesterday to Japanese diplomatic consular posts at Hong Kong, Singapore, Batavia, Manila, Washington and London to destroy most of their codes and ciphers at once and to burn all other important confidential secret documents."

On December 6, Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander of the Pearl Harbor naval district, sent this message to Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations:

"Believe local consul has destroyed all but one system although presumably not included in your eighteen double five of third." The latter reference was to Washington's December 3 message.

The Army Pearl Harbor inquiry board cited the Roberts report on the disaster which quoted Short as saying:

"I never got that (December 3) message." The Army board added however, that "Short was advised by the FBI that it had tapped the telephone line of the Japanese consul's cook and had found the consul was burning his papers."

Stressed December 6 Information

The board said that at 10 P.M. December 6, Washington time, information was delivered to Marshall's office that "indicated very emphatically that war with Japan was a certainty and that the beginning of such war was in the immediate future."

It said that about 8.30 A.M., December 7, information reached the Army Intelligence Division "vital in its nature and indicating an albetween the United States and most immediate break in relations Japan." The report added that when an officer attempted to reach Marshall "he discovered the general was horseback riding."

PRESIDENT URGES CONGRESS TO ACT TO HALT STRIKES

Proposes Appointment of Fact-Finding Boards in Major Industries

DEC 3 — 1945

REQUESTS SPEEDY VOTE

Panels Would Recommend Settlements, with Walkouts, Lockouts Barred.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3. — (AP) President Truman today asked Congress to legalize fact-finding in big labor disputes — with work stoppages barred for 30 days — and requested 225,000 striking General Motors employes to go back to work.

In a special message, he asked quick legislation under which he could set up fact-finding boards to recommend settlements in crucial disputes. Under the legislation strikes and lockouts would be prohibited while the boards worked.

Will Name Two Boards

He announced that meanwhile he would create such boards for the gravest present crisis, the 20-state General Motors strike of C.I.O. auto workers, and for the gravest industrial threat, the nationwide steel wage dispute. The steel workers were requested not to strike.

President Eric A. Johnston of the United States Chamber of Commerce issued a statement endorsing the fact-finding principle, but withholding judgment on Mr. Truman's actual plan until he learned the possible "form and scope" of the legislation.

The available labor comment was adverse. A.F.L. President William Green stated his belief the plan would be "unacceptable to labor." In Detroit, three C.I.O. leaders voiced dissatisfaction with the back-to-work proposal, but announced that General Motors workers would hold a meeting Saturday to decide what course to take.

On Capitol Hill senators interviewed various their reaction from quick approval to the opinion that Mr. Truman's plan did not go far enough.

In the House a move developed for a joint Senate-House committee to recommend national labor legislation. A resolution for such a committee was introduced by Rep. Smith (D-Va.).

Smith later introduced a bill to set up, for industry and labor generally, mediation boards modeled after the railway mediation boards.

The legislation also would outlaw sympathy and jurisdictional strikes and require unions to register with a Federal agency and make annual financial statements.

Fears Reconversion Setback

Warning that present stoppages are so serious as possibly to "cripple our reconversion program," Mr. Truman asked for passage of the fact-finding bill before Congress' Christmas recess, which is to start Dec. 20, only 17 days away.

Besides asking the C.I.O. United Automobile Workers to resume work in GM's far-flung plants, Mr. Truman wired United States Steel corporation and the C.I.O. United Steelworkers to permit no break in production while the fact-finding board assigned to their wage dispute goes to work.

Benjamin F. Fairless, U. S. Steel president, announced the corporation would give "immediate attention" to Mr. Truman's wire and send a reply "as soon as possible."

The GM president, C. E. Wilson, said in New York he had not yet received the presidential telegram and would need time to study it.

The fact-finding boards set up for steel and automobiles would work exactly like those proposed to Congress, government officials said, but lacking legislative authority, they would depend on voluntary cooperation of the companies and unions.

Expressing his disappointment that industry and union leaders had failed to agree on machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes at the National Labor-Management conference which closed Friday night, Mr. Trumman said in his message to Congress:

"Now that the conference has adjourned without any recommendation on the subject, it becomes the duty of the government to act on its own initiative."

Similar to Railway Act

The White House plan is patterned after the Railway Labor act, which has kept substantial peace in railroading for 20 years.

It also has striking similarity to management fact-finding proposal offered unsuccessfully at the conference just closed; but it contains elements to which both sides could not agree voluntarily.

Industry, for instance, objected to laying open its records to fact-finders; the Truman plan would give Presidential investigators power to "subpoena individuals and records." Labor resisted limitation of the right to strike; the White House plan prohibits strikes and lockouts for 30 days.

It would be applied, Mr. Truman said, only to vital and widespread industries, and he named steel, automobiles, aviation, mining, oil, utilities and communications as examples.

If a major dispute did not yield to negotiation or conciliation, and if voluntary arbitration was refused, the Secretary of Labor would certify the case to the President, who could appoint within five days a fact-finding board of three or more "outstanding citizens." In these five days, stoppages would be prohibited.

The board would make "a thorough investigation of all the facts which it deems relevant in the controversy," reporting within 20 days on its findings and recommendations for settlement.

For 25 more days—the 20-day investigation, and five days thereafter—Mr. Truman said it "should be made unlawful to call a strike or lockout, or to make any change in rates of pay, hours, working conditions or established practices, except by agreement."

Public Would Get Facts

"The parties would not be legally bound to accept the findings or follow the recommendations of the fact-finding board, but the general public would know all the facts," the Congress was told.

"The result, I am sure, would be that in most cases, both sides would accept the recommendations, as they have in most of the railway labor disputes.

"I believe that the procedure should be used sparingly, and only when the public interest requires it."

Mr. Truman described the plan as "fair to both sides" and expressed hope that Congress, in its disappointment over the failure of the Labor-Management conference, would not "adopt repressive or coercive measures against either side."

"Legislation which would stifle full freedom of collective bargaining on either side would be a backward step which the American people would not tolerate."

Mr. Truman did not announce immediately the members of the General Motors and steel fact-finding panels, but was expected to do so shortly.

In sending his message to Congress, Mr. Truman carried out the notice he had served upon the delegates to the labor-management conference when he opened it one month ago: "If the pepole do not find the answers here, they will find them some place else."

The early reaction from Senate members was generally approving, but in many cases lukewarm. Sen. Ball (R-Minn) indicated wholehearted support, however, telling the Senate the message was "the most hopeful words I have seen on this particular front for a long time."

Sen. Reed (R-Kans) told his colleagues he hoped they would act promptly on the message, and a House member, Rep. Smith (D-Va) proposed creation of a joint Senate-House committee to make recommendations for national labor legislation.

Under the Smith resolution, the joint committee would "specifically investigate the desirability of legislation requiring mutuality of responsibility under contracts between labor and industry, the desirability of federal enforcement of law and order in labor disputes involving inter-state commerce or affecting inter-state commerce, the desirability of legislation to allay jurisdictional disputes, boycotts, and sympathy strikes."

Asks Auto Walkout's End; Would Avert Steel Shutdown

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—President Truman today set up fact-finding boards to deal with the General Motors strike and the threatened steel walkout, and asked Congress for permanent machinery to handle labor disputes in "important nation-wide industries."

The President appealed publicly for 225,000 CIO-United Automobile Workers to return to their jobs with the General Motors Corporation and urged the 700,000 who might be involved in a steel [illegible] main at work.

Mr. Truman said in a special message, fast on the heels of the labor-management conference which could not agree upon a fact-finding recommendation.

Asks Curb On Stoppages

He proposed:

A law setting up machinery for naming fact-finding boards to prevent work stoppages in important, nation-wide labor disputes.

A ban on strikes or lockouts for at least 30 days—five after certification of a dispute by the Secretary of Labor, 20 for the fact-finding board to deliberate, and five more.

The President cited such widespread industries as steel, automobiles, aviation, mining, oil, utilities and communications as the kind to which the act should apply. He said the legislation should not cover small and local labor troubles.

Naming Board For G.M. Case

The President said he was appointing such a board on his own authority to deal with the dispute between General Motors and the CIO United Automobile Workers.

"While this board will not have the statutory powers which I hope the Congress will soon authorize," Mr. Truman said, "I am sure that the American people will expect the employer and the employes to co-operate with the board as fully as if appropriate legislation had already been passed.

Asks End Of G.M. Strike

"In the meantime, I am asking both parties to the dispute to display the same kind of patriotism as they displayed during the war. I am asking all the workers to return to work immediately, and I am asking the employers to proceed energetically with full production.

"I make this appeal on behalf of the American people to their fellow citizens who are now responsible for this major obstacle holding up our reconversion program.

Also Naming Steel Board

"In connection with the threatened strike involving the United States Steel Corporation and the United Steel Workers, I am appointing a similar board. The public will expect full co-operation with the board by both sides. I am making the same appeal to the United Steel Workers to remain at work pending the report of the board's findings and recommendations."

The first reaction from labor ranks came from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. He told reporters that "in my judgment" President Truman's recommendations would not be approved by organized labor.

"AFL Cannot Approve This"

"The principles and policies incorporated in the Railway Labor Act are in no way suited to private industry as a whole," Green said. "The plan proposed for fact-finding will operate disadvantageously to both employers and workers in many cases. The AFL cannot approve this legislation."

A CIO official who declined to be named said, "This is such a serious proposal and so far-reaching that we will want to study it carefully before making any comment."

Mr. Truman's outline of the fact-finding legislation said it was "not applicable to small industries or to small local disputes in large industries."

Labor Secretary's Role

"The objective," he added, "should be to cover by legislation only such stoppages of work as the Secretary of Labor would certify to the President as vitally affecting the national public interest."

Mr. Truman said "the American people have been patient" and "waited long in the hope that those leaders in labor and management whose business it was to handle this problem would be able to do so in agreement."

The Recommendations

The President recommended:

"In industrial disputes in such industries, where collective bargaining has broken down and where the Conciliation Service of the Federal Government has been unable to bring the parties to agreement, and where the Secretary of Labor has been unable to induce the parties voluntarily to submit the controversy to arbitration, I recommend the following procedure:

"Upon certification by the Secretary of Labor to the effect that a dispute continues despite his efforts, and that a stoppage of work in the affected industry would vitally affect the public interest, the President, or his duly authorizesd agent, should be empowered to appoint, within five days thereafter, a fact-finding board similar to the emergency board provided for under the Railway Labor Act.

Pay, Hours Would Stand

"I recommend that during these five days after the Secretary of Labor has made the above certificate, it be unlawful to call a strike or lockout, or to make any change in rates of pay, hours or working conditions, or in the established practices in effect prior to the time the dispute arose.

"The board should be composed of three or more outstanding citizens, and should be directed to make a thorough investigation of all the facts which it deems relevant in the controversy. In its investigation it should have full power to subpoena individuals and records, and should be authorized to call upon any Government agency for information or assistance. It should make its report within twenty days, unless the date is extended by agreement of the parties with the approval of the Presdient. The report should include a finding of the facts and such recommendations as the board deems appropriate.

"Public Would Know Facts"

"While the fact-finding board is deliberating and for five days thereafter it should be made unlawful to call a strike or lockout, or to make any change in rates of pay, hours, working conditions or established practices, except by agreement.

"The parties would not be legally bound to accept the findings or follow the recommendations of the fact-finding board, but the general public would know all the facts. The result, I am sure, would be that in most cases, both sides would accept the recommendations, as they have in most of the railway labor disputes.

"I believe that the procedure should be used sparing, and only when the national public interest requires it."

"Hopeful Word," Says Ball

At the Capitol, Senator Ball (R., Minn.) told the Senate the President's message "is the most hopeful word I have seen on this particular front for a long time."

Ball said the fact-finding board recommendation ought to be effective in a strike of 5,000 over-the-road truck drivers in seven Western states.

Senator Gurney (R., S.D.) said the truckers' strike had caused a "critical" transportation situation and voiced the "urgent request" that Secretary Schwellenbach appoint a fact-finding board for this walkout.

Senator Wherry (R., Neb.) said he hoped the "wholesome suggestion" of the President "will result in remedial legislation."

Senator Reed (R., Kan.) told his colleagues he hoped Congress would act promptly on the President's message.

Truman's Message on Labor Problems

DEC 3 194

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP).—Following is the text of President Truman's message to Congress on labor problems:

To the Congress of the United States:

All who think seriously about the problem of reconversion—of changing our economy from war to peace—realize that the transition is a difficult and dangerous task. There are some who would have the government, during the reconversion period, continue telling our citizens what to do, as was so often necessary when the very life of our nation was at stake during the period of world conflict.

That, however, is not the policy of the government. The policy is to remove war-time controls as rapidly as possible, and to return the free management of business to those concerned with it.

It was for the expressed purpose of getting away as soon as possible from some of the war-time powers and controls that the recent national labor-management conference was called in Washington, instead of retaining in the Federal government the power over wages and labor agreements and industrial relations which a global war had made necessary, the top leaders of management and labor were invited to recommend a program under which labor relations would be turned back into the hands of those involved.

It was decided that full responsibility for reaching agreement on such a program would be left with the representatives of labor and management. Accordingly the conference was made up of leaders of labor and management only. Government representatives participated only as observers without vote. The agenda and the entire program were worked out by the leaders themselves.

Not a Government Conference

In opening the conference I said:

'I want to make it clear that this is your conference—a management-labor conference—and not a government conference. You have not been chosen by me or by any government official. You have been selected by the leading labor and industrial organizations in the United States. There has been no interference by government in that selection.

'The time has come for labor and management to handle their own affairs in the traditional American, democratic way. I hope that I can give up the President's war-time powers as soon as possible, so that management and labor can again have the full and undivided responsibility for providing the production that we must have to safeguard our domestic economy and our leadership in international affairs.'

I am sure that it was the hope of the American people that out of this conference would come some recommendation for insuring industrial peace where collective bargaining and conciliation have broken down.

The conference is now closed. The very fact that the top leaders of labor and management have met and worked together for more than three weeks is itself some progress.

Some agreements on a few general principles were also reached. For example, agreement on the principles of collective bargaining, and recommendations on the detailed procedure to be used; agreement on strengthening and enlarging governmental conciliation services; recognition of the necessity of eliminating discrimination in employment; agreement on settling by voluntary arbitration grievances under labor contracts and disputes concerning their interpretation—these are all valuable.

But on the all-important question of how to avoid work stoppages when these expedients have failed the conference arrived at no accord. Failing in that, the conference was unable to attain the objective most necessary to successful reconversion.

Sees Reconversion in Peril

"If industrial strife continues, the quick reconversion which has been planned, and which is now proceeding on schedule or even ahead of schedule on many fronts, will fail. In that event, we shall face a period of low production, low consumption and widespread unemployment—instead of the high production, high employment, good markets and good wages that are within our grasp.

The history of labor relations has proven that nearly all labor disputes can and should be settled by sincere and honest collective bargaining. The vast majority of those disputes which are not adjusted by collective bargaining are settled through government conciliation. For example during the month of October last, 354 strikes were killed by the conciliation service, and 1,282 labor controversies were adjusted before any work stoppages occurred.

The American people commend the many instances where management and labor have settled their problems peacefully. Many of these were in critical industries where work stoppages would have gained great prominence in the newspapers and over our radios. But when industrial disputes were settled, little notice was taken of them by press or radio.

We know, however, that there are always some disputes that cannot be settled this way.

Industrial strife in some key industries means not only loss of a great amount of wages and purchasing power; but it may have ramifications throughout the country affecting the whole reconversion process. In such industries, when labor and management cannot compose their differences, the public through the Federal government has a duty to speak and to act. In the last analysis, labor, management and the public have the same interest.

Just Settlements Needed

The reconversion effort is now going well. The people have a right to expect it to succeed. Specific obstacles that stand in its way must not be allowed to defeat that expectation.

Good labor relations are just as important now as they were during the war. They should be based on justice, and not on tests of strength. Any industrial dispute which depends for settlement upon the respective strength of the parties results in loss to everyone; it causes loss of wages to the worker and his family, loss of dividends to the stockholders and owners of the industry, loss of goods to the public.

I regret that labor and management have not been able to agree on machinery that would provide a solution for existing strikes in some of the major industries and for the strikes which are threatened. Strikes already in effect may possibly cripple our reconversion program. Negotiations have broken down in other industries, and stoppages are threatened.

The American people have been patient. They have waited long in the hope that those leaders in labor and management whose business it was to handle this problem would be able to do so in agreement. The Federal government declined time and again to make any suggestion to the conference as to proper machinery. All that the government did was to point out the objective which the American people expected it to attain.

Now that the conference has adjourned without any recommendation on the subject, it becomes the duty of the government to act on its own initiative. Therefore, I now suggest to the Congress that well reasoned and workable legislation be passed at the earliest possible moment to provide adequate means for settling industrial disputes and avoiding industrial strife.

For Fact-Finding Board

I recommend that for the settlement of industrial disputes in important nation-wide industries there be adopted the principles underlying the Railway Labor Act. The general pattern of that act is not applicable to small industries or to small local disputes in large industries. But it would be effective, as well as fair, in such wide-spread industries, for example, as steel, automobile, aviation, mining, oil, utilities and communications. I do not intend to make this list exclusive. Nor do I think that local inconsequential strikes even within these industries should be included. The objective should be to cover by legislation only such stoppages of work as the Secretary of Labor would certify.

In industrial disputes in such industries, where collective bargaining has broken down, and where the conciliation service of the Federal government has been unable to bring the parties to agreement, and where the Secretary of Labor has been unable to induce the parties voluntarily to submit the controversy to arbitration, I recommend the following procedure:

Upon certification by the Secretary of Labor to the effect that a dispute continues despite his efforts, and that a stoppage of work in the affected industry would vitally affect the public interest, the President, or his duly authorized agent, should be empowered to appoint, within five days thereafter, a fact-finding board similar to the emergency board provided for under the railway labor act.

I recommend that during these five days after the Secretary of Labor has made the above certificate, it be unlawful to call a strike or lockout, or to make any change in rates of pay, hours or working conditions, or in the established practices in effect prior to the time the dispute arose.

The board should be composed of three or more outstanding citizens, and should be directed to make a thorough investigation of all the facts which it deems relevant in the controversy. In its investigation it should have full power to subpoena individuals and records, and should be authorized to call upon any government agency for information or assistance. It should make its report within twenty days, unless the date is extended by agreement of the parties with the approval of the President. The report should include a finding of the facts and such recommendations as the board deems appropriate.

Strikes Illegal in Meantime

While the fact-finding board is deliberating and for five days thereafter it should be made unlawful to call a strike or lockout, or to make any changes in rates of pay, hours, working conditions or established practices, except by agreement.

The parties would not be legally bound to accept the findings or follow the recommendations of the fact-finding board, but the general public would know all the facts. The result, I am sure, would be that in most cases both sides would accept the recommendations, as they have in most of the railway labor disputes.

I believe that the procedure should be used sparingly and only when the national public interest requires it.

The legislation should pay particular attention to the needs of seasonal industries, so that the so-called "cooling-off periods" can be arranged in those industries in a manner which will not subject labor to an undue disadvantage.

There are other subjects which were on the agenda of the labor-management conference on which no agreement was reached. The most immediate, the most pressing, however, is this one of machinery. I hope that the Congress will act upon this matter as quickly as possible—and certainly before its Christmas recess.

In order to avoid any delay in the settlement of the most important existing strikes, I am appointing such a fact-finding board for the present stoppage in the dispute between General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers. While this board will not have the statutory powers which I hope the Congress will soon authorize, I am sure that the American people will expect the employer and the employees to co-operate with the board as fully as if appropriate legislation had already been passed.

Asks Strikers to Return

In the meantime, I am asking both parties to the dispute to display the same kind of patriotism as they displayed during the war. I am asking all the workers to return to work immediately, and I am asking the employers to proceed energetically with full production. I make this appeal on behalf of the American people to their fellow citizens who are now responsible for this major obstacle holding up our reconversion program.

In connection with the threatened strike involving the United States Steel Corporation and the United Steel Workers, I am appointing a similar board. The public will expect full co-operation with the board by both sides. I am making the same appeal to the United Steel Workers to remain at work pending the report of the board's findings and recommendations.

I hope that the Congress will approve the steps which I am now taking. They are being taken in the interest of accelerating our production, promoting our reconversion program, and pushing forward toward higher standard of living.

This is an immediate program which is fair to both sides. I hope that the Congress, naturally disappointed at the failure of labor and management to agree upon a solution for the prevention of industrial disputes, will not adopt repressive or coercive measures against either side. A free American labor and a free American private enterprise are essential to our free democratic system. Legislation which would stifle full freedom of collective bargaining on either side would be a backward step which the American people would not tolerate.

I am sure that the Congress will give its calm and careful consideration to this matter so essential to the progress of American life.

C.I.O. HEADS COOL TO PROPOSAL FOR ENDING OF STRIKE

Leaders Want 'Something More Tangible' Before Voting.

RANK AND FILE TO ACT

Detroit Locals Will Ballot Saturday on Truman's Request.

DETROIT, Dec. 3—(AP) Heads of the C.I.O.'s United Auto Workers bluntly disapproved President Truman's proposal for ending the General Motors strike today but left the final verdict to the union's rank and file.

The auto union's leadership summoned a conference of 250 representatives of General Motors locals for Saturday to act on the President's proposal for an immediate end to the walkout idling 225,000 workers.

Union President Disapproves

President R. J. Thomas of the union told a press conference he was "not sold" on Mr. Truman's proposal, which included the setting up of a fact-finding board to make recommendations in the dispute.

Then, when asked if he meant he was "not in favor" of Mr. Truman's plan, Thomas said:

"I am not. That is my own opinion."

Joining with Thomas in expressing disapproval were the union's secretary-treasurer, George F. Addes, and Vice President Walter P. Reuther, head of the U.A.W.-C.I.O.'s General Motors department and chief negotiator of the union's demand on GM for a 30 per cent wage rate increase.

"If I am a GM worker and voting (on an end to the strike), I would certainly not be willing to go back to work with only the President's proposal as a basis for settling the strike," Reuther said.

Addes said, "I would want something more tangible if I were voting."

Thomas emphasized that the decision would be up to a vote of the strikers, asserting "The workers will vote the way they want to. Ours is the most democratic union in the world."

The President made his proposal for ending the GM strike, now in its 14th day, in presenting a legislative program to Congress to halt increasing labor strife.

Could Subpoena Records

The White House proposal would give Presidential investigators, acting as fact finders, the power to subpoena individuals and records. Strikes and lockouts would be prohibited for a stated period.

Thomas, commenting on the legislative proposal, said he did not approve. The union, however, messaged the White House tonight asking "details" from the President.

"I am wondering what is happening to democracy," Thomas said. "The right to strike is a democratic principle."

President C. E. Wilson of General Motors declined comment in New York until he had learned the "exact content" of President Truman's proposal.

"I wonder," Thomas said, "if the President knows that GM has not been negotiating in good faith, that we tried to get conciliation and mediation. I wonder if the President knows we offered arbitration.

"It seems to me that before the fact-finding committee should be set up the President should know of these things."

Asks Workers to Return

Mr. Truman at Washington announced the setting-up of a fact-finding board to deal with the GM strike and in telegrams to management and union said he was "asking all the workers to return to work immediately" and appealed for "the same kind of patriotism they displayed during the war."

The Presidential intervention in the strike of U.A.W.-C.I.O. members seeking to enforce their demands on General Motors for a 30 per cent wage increase within present price structures highlighted a day which also saw these developments:

1. The union asked the Justice department to investigate General Motors with a view to anti-trust proceedings based on control of a large part of the automobile industry's supply of engine fuel pumps.

2. Thomas denied authorship of a letter issued by his publicity department last Saturday, which accepted a GM proposal to reopen some plants for production of parts for rival manufacturers.

3. U.A.W.-C.I.O. local unions in some General Motors centers expressed opposition to any partial return to work.

Thomas said only the memberships of local unions could end the strike, under the union constitution, and that their decision could not be obtained before Tuesday, Dec. 11. Representatives at Saturday's conference here, he said, must carry recommendations to the locals for their vote.

Last Saturday's letter, accepting a proposal by GM President C. E. Wilson for reopening of some parts plants, was written by his publicity department while he was on a train, Thomas said, and "the signature must have been rubber-stamped."

He said he would not have approved the letter, "didn't know" if any other union officer had approved it, and that his reply to the proposal would have been to investigate the parts plant situation, which the union is now doing, and await the results before giving a definite acceptance or rejection.

Will See All Letters

Thomas told his press conference, "no more letters are to go out under my signature unless I see them."

The President's intervention came a short time after Thomas had asked the Justice department to institute an anti-trust investigation of General Motors' control of most of the automotive industry's production of engine fuel pumps.

In a telegram to U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark, the U.A.W.-C.I.O. president cited Wilson's Nov. 30 letter proposing to reopen GM parts plants to supply competitors as "strong corroboratory evidence for our belief that this corporation holds a monopoly position."

Thomas said that "control of a single vital item gives General Motors Corp. a control over its competitors that is contrary to the public interest."

At Washington the Justice department said the request would be referred to its anti-trust division for "thorough investigation." Wilson declined comment on the union's move.

General Motors' AC Spark Plug division at Flint, Mich., is a large producer of the fuel pumps which a corporation spokesman said recently were supplied to about 90 per cent of the car industry.

Much of the rank-and-file opposition to the union's acceptance of Wilson's proposal came from Flint, where the 60,000-member Industrial Union Council said such a partial back-to-work movement would destroy workers' morale and might cause "riot and bloodshed."

Will Answer Ford Proposal

U.A.W.-C.I.O. leaders said today they would present to the Ford Motor company next Monday a plan for "company security" in answer to the company's proposal that the union be penalized $5 a day for every worker engaging in an unauthorized strike.

"If we can get what the company calls 'company security' out of the way and agreed to, we can discuss wages," Richard T. Leonard, national director of the U.A.W. Ford department, said after a meeting of company and union negotiators.

The union is requesting a 30 per cent wage increase.

John S. Bugas, director of the Ford company's industrial relations, said the basic questions "come under the heading of company security and a guarantee of union responsibility."

Thomas Calls Union Conference Saturday to Decide on Ending Strike—He Wonders if President Has Facts.

Detroit, Dec. 3 (A. P.).—The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers union will call a conference of General Motors workers next Saturday to decide whether they will heed a request by President Truman to end their wage strike against the corporation, R. J. Thomas, U. A. W.-C. I. O. president, said today.

Thomas told a press conference that the decision for such a conference was made by the union's strike strategy committee.

The workers themselves will be asked to decide on the President's request, Thomas said. He pointed out that, under the union's constitution, votes by local unions are required before a strike can be ended.

Wonders if Truman Knows.

Referring to C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors, Thomas declared:

"Mr. Wilson has had an opportunity to talk to the President. We have not had that opportunity, and I wonder if the President knows that (1) General Motors has not co-operated on collective bargaining; (2) that we have tried conciliation and mediation, and (3) that we have offered arbitration.

"We wonder if President Truman knows these things. We think he should know them before he sets up his fact-finding committee."

Thomas disclosed that a letter sent under his name on Saturday accepting General Motors' offer to reopen its parts plants to supply competitors was written by his publicity department while he was on a train en route here from Washington and that the signature must have been rubber-stamped.

Thomas said he would not have approved the letter to Wilson if he had seen it, and didn't know if other union officers had approved it before it was sent.

Reuther, present at the press conference, said, "I saw it but did not agree with its contents."

His answer to the Wilson proposal, Thomas said, would have been to inform G. M. that the union would make a fact-finding investigation of the parts plants situation and base its answer on the results of such an inquiry.

The conference of General Motors workers, Thomas said, would meet in Detroit, probably at 10 A. M. eastern standard time, and its recommendations would be submitted to he local unions. A final decision, Thomas said, probably could be obtained by Tuesday, December 11.

Saying that the accepted views taken in some quarters [illegible] indicate a split between himself and Walter P. Reuther, the union's vice-president active in direction of the G. M. strike, Thomas said that "there is no difference of opinion between Mr. Reuther and myself."

A short time before the President's message, Thomas had asked United States Attorney-General Tom Clark to investigate General Motors operations, contending the corporation's control of a large part of the supply of fuel pumps for the industry constituted a monopoly.

The request was made by Thomas in a telegram which stated that control of a single vital item gives General Motors Corporation a control over its competitors that is contrary to the pulic interest.

Thomas, in his telegram, cited Wilson, in which G. M. offered to re-open its parts plants to supply other automobile manufacturers only. The International U. A. W.-C. I. O. accepted this offer only to have some prominent locals oppose the plan. George Romney, general manager of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, has said the General Motors strike would eventually force a shutdown of the entire industry.

Principal producer of fuel pumps among G. M. units is the AC spark plug division at Flint, Mich., which employed more than 9,000 workers before the strike began on November 21. After international union officials said the question of reopening this unit would be considered, leaders of the AC local said a partial return to work would lead to trouble and probably violence.

A corporation spokesman said on Saturday that approximately 90 per cent of the automobile industry uses fuel pumps produced by General Motors.

Thomas telegraphed Clark today that "a disastrously dangerous situation is indicated when a single automobile corporation, closed down by a dispute over wages, tacitly admits that its competitors will not be able to operate unless the corporation can reopen some of its parts manufacturing plants."

He said that Wilson's letter "provides strong corroboratory evidence for our belief that this corporation holds a monopoly position."

The Department of Justice in Washington said that the request will be referred to the anti-trust division and that a thorough investigation will be made. The department declined to comment further.

International officers of the U. A. W., C. I. O., today acknowledged mounting opposition within the union's ranks to a plan for resumption of parts production in some of the seventy-odd strike-bound General Motors plants.

Wilson Is Non-committal.

Wilson, attending a regular meeting of the General Motors board of directors at 1775 Broadway was non-committal on the President's recommendation for new legislation on labor disputes, saying he wanted time to study it thoroughly and to study, too, a telegram reported to have been sent to the General Motors' head by Mr. Truman.

"I have just received word of the President's request to the Congress for statutory authority to set up a system of fact-finding boards to deal with labor disputes when collective bargaining has broken down," he said. "I also understand that the President is addressing a telegram to me, advising that he would set up a fact-finding board in the dispute between General Motors and the U. A. W.-C. I. O.

"The President's telegram has not reached me as yet, and I therefore do not know its exact contents. Until the telegram is received and we have had time to study thoroughly the President's proposal, I fell I should withhold any comment."

Schwellenbach Gives Views In Labor Issue

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach said today that no single conference of management and labor could hope to solve basic issues of industrial disputes.

Addressing the opening of the twelfth National Labor Conference, Schwellenbach referred only briefly to the labor-management conference which ended here Friday, but reiterated that the problems which confronted it could be solved only by the employers and their workers. Throughout the labor-management conference, the Secretary was insistent in opposing active Government intervention in the meetings.

From 41 States

The twelfth National Labor Conference ha sdrawn state labor commissioners from 41 states. Today and tomorrow, the conferees will discuss state-Federal administrative co-operation. Beginning Wednesday, they will be joined by representatives of state labor organizations.

TRUCK STRIKE BOARD URGED

Senators Put Mid-West Stoppage Before President

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Senator Gurney (R., S.D.), acting on behalf of himself and thirteen other senators, today laid the mid-West truck strike controversy on the White House doorstep and requested a solution.

Gurney said he would send a transcript of a hearing attended by the senators today to President Truman along with a suggestion that he appoint a fact-finding board similar to that he set up in the General Motors strike case.

Gurney and other senators who called the meeting to discuss the strike affecting 161 trucking firms in seven mid-West states were openly irked over failure of Daniel J. Tobin, head of the AFL International Teamsters Union, to attend.

Tobin Had Been Invited

Tobin had been invited along with William Wilson, of Sioux Falls, S.D., president of the Mid-West Operators Association. Wilson appeared and talked to the senators for more than an hour.

Tobin's failure to show up "indicates how little he cares what the public or Congress thinks in this situation," Senator Ball (R., Minn.) declared.

"The union is put in an awful bad position by refusing to be here or to tell its story," Gurney interjected. "Our great concern is the movement of freight."

"No Reason For Refusal"

Gurney said he spoke for all the senators present in asserting there was no valid reason for the union to refuse even to meet the operators and negotiate.

Wilson had testified that the operators repeatedly had asked the union to negotiate with them, but the union declined and insisted the operators must sign a contract similar to that in effect east of the Mississippi River.

Wilson said such a contract would mean "liquidation of the companies, as we are operating in the red now."

Others Who Attended

Other senators attending the meeting were Bushfield (R., S.D.), Wilson (R., Iowa), Shipstead (R., Minn.), Butler and Wherry (R., Neb.), Young and Langer (R., N.D.), Donnell (R., Mo.), Briggs (D., Mo), and Reed (R., Kan.).

Meanwhile, Representative Mundt (R., S.D.) said that an appointment with the President, requested by a group of representatives meeting in Mundt's offices last week on the truck strike, had been held up "at the request of the White House."

Mundt indicated the Senate and House groups would join forces in seeking a solution.

UNIONS TO MEET IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 3—(AP) All American Federation of Labor workers were summoned today to a mass meeting Thursday night by a notice which said that "a state of emergency now exists in New Orleans."

A spokesman explained that the session was called in connection with the situation at the Higgins Industries, Inc., boat-building plants.

Andrew J. Higgins, Sr., company president, has announced that the company would be liquidated as the result of labor difficulties with the A.F.L.

But Higgins has been hiring workers again at one of the plants with the explanation that they will be used to complete existing contracts.

The mass meeting was called by the New Orleans A.F.L. councils.

Curran Calls Tieup Complete In Demand For Troops' Return

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Joseph Curran, president of the CIO National Maritime Union, said today that every ship in the nation except those carrying troops and relief materials was tied up by the union's 24-hour work stoppage.

The walkout, which began at 8 A.M., was in support of the union's contention that return of overseas veterans was being delayed. Union officials have said that some ships were being employed commercially which might be used to bring troops home.

Curran told a mass meeting of protesting seamen here after a parade down Broadway:

"We made a promise to the GI's and we mean to carry it out. If the Government thinks we don't mean business, we'll show them."

Felt At Many Ports

Effects of the walkout, which exempted troopships, those carrying relief materials and those on the high seas, were felt at virtually all East Coast ports, at Mobile, Galveston, New Orleans and Houston on the Gulf, and at San Francisco and Los Angeles on the Pacific Coast.

There was no over-all estimate from the union on the number of workers idle, but reports from individual ports showed that thousands left their jobs. Curran had predicted 90,000 workers would participate.

Union Account Of Effect

Capt. Hewlett R. Bishop, Atlantic Coast director of the War Shipping Administration, said only 38 ships were involved on the Atlantic Coast from Portland, Maine, to Jacksonville, Fla.

The union gave this account:

Six thousand men idle at New York, with 120 ships tied up; 20 ships affected at Jersey City, N.J., 40 to 55 at Baltimore and virtually all those at Philadelphia; 55 ships tied up at New Orleans, and 2,000 workers idle at Galveston.

At San Francisco, where 29 ships and about 4,500 workers were said to be idle, the situation was described as "confused." F. C. Gregory, of the Waterfront Employers Association, said longshoremen had failed to report to unload ammunition from two navy ships.

Fifty ships were reported idle in the Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor.

35 Ships Affected In Baltimore

Steam was turned off on from 35 to 40 cargo vessels here yesterday as members of the National Maritime Union (CIO) staged a 24-hour work stoppage in protest of the War Shipping Administration's alleged policy of using vessels for other operations than bringing troops home.

Harry Conner, NMU agent, said also there were about 500 men in the parade in downtown Baltimore from the union hall to the WSA offices in the Association of Commerce Building.

The local demonstration is part of a nation-wide protest against resumption of commercial operation of ships which might be used to bring service personnel back to the States.

Westinghouse Offers 5½-Day Work Week

Pittsburgh, Dec. 3 (AP)—President George H. Bucher of the Westinghouse Electric Corporation today announced a proposal to increase the corporation's work week wherever practicable from five days to five and a half days, with time and a half for all hours worked in excess of 40.

Bucher said these and other company proposals have been made to the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America in reply to the union's demand for a $2-a-day wage increase. The union is scheduled to take a strike vote December 13.

DEC 3 1945

"Needed For Expansion"

Bucher asserted in connection with the announcement:

"A company cannot pay out more wages, salaries and operating costs than it takes in. This is fundamental. The union has not proposed to give more work for what it now asks. The present demand of the union cannot be justified on any basis other than the fact that the company has assets which the union would like to have distributed to its members now. It ignores the fact that these assets are needed for reconversion, plant expansion, development of new products, creating new jobs and carrying on "Strike Affecting All Meat" Threatens U.S.

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—A CIO union official said today that 400 butchers and other workers had "walked off the job" today at the Jersey City (N.J.) plant of the Cudahy Packing Company in what he called the beginning of "a national strike affecting all meat."

Meyer E. Stern, district director of the United Packing House Workers of America, said the issue was a union demand for a general wage increase of 25 cents an hour. Present wage rates range from 72½ cents to $1.25 per hour, he said.

"The union is negotiating with the Wilson Company in Chicago today," Stern added. "If there are no settlements eleven big plants throughout the country will be struck within the next seven days." He named specifically plants in Omaha, Neb., and Kansas City, Mo.

"All other companies will be struck unless we can come to a settlement," Stern declared.

SENATE BEGINS SECOND WEEK OF DEBATE ON UNO

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—(AP) Administration leaders today beat off three amendments to the United Nations bill but failed to bring it to a final vote as the Senate opened a second week of debate.

The measure would provide for the appointment of U. S. representatives to the security council and general assembly and for the allocation of U. S. troops to an international police force.

First the Senate defeated, 57 to 14, an amendment by Senator Donnell (R-Mo.) which would have required the Senate's approval by a two-thirds majority before the President could allocate U. S. forces to the council. Senator Wheeler of Montana was the only Democrat voting for it. As it is, only a simple majority of both Senate and House would be required.

Asks Connally to Listen

Donnell had spoken for part of three consecutive sessions in support of his theory that the agreements to supply troops were treaties and as such required a two-thirds Senate vote for ratification. At one point Donnell noticed Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) talking with another senator and protested that the floor leader for the bill was not listening.

"I beg the senator's pardon," Connally said with a flourish. "I listened all day Thursday, all day Friday and now for two hours today and I think I understand the senator's argument."

Action On UNRRA Delayed

Next the Senate rejected, 53 to 21, a proposal by Senator Morse (R-Ore.) to put the bill aside temporarily and take up a $550,000,000 appropriation for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Agency.

Morse said he was making his proposal because some persons had created the "impression that a filibuster is being conducted" and that the Republicans were responsible for delaying the UNRRA funds, which the House already has voted. The Republicans were evenly split on his proposal.

Finally the Senate turned down two amendments by Senator Millikin (R-Colo.), 46 to 16 and 31 to 27, respectively, and then it was past the dinner hour.

The first would have deprived the American delegates to the United Nations organization of the titles of ambassador and minister. Millikin said that under the legislation UNO would be a "diplomatic convention." Senator Ball (R-Minn.) said that instead of being a gathering of envoys acting under instructions, he hoped UNO would be an "embryo parliament for the peoples of the world."

The second would have required that the five delegates to the assembly be confirmed by the Senate and receive regular pay of $12,000 a year. Millikin argued that the assembly was the "heart and core" of the new world organization. He criticized provisions of the bill allowing appointment of up to five delegates by the President without Senate confirmation or regular salaries.

Friend of Beaverbrook Asks Aid In Naming Boston UNO Center

BOSTON, Dec. 3 (AP) A Boston attorney who once was Lord Beaverbrook's roommate appealed to the eminent Briton tonight to support Boston's claim to become the site for UNO headquarters.

Meanwhile Governor Tobin and Dr. Karl T. Compton, leaders of the city's UNO delevation, were enroute home from London aboard a plane expected to land at Bedford airport at 11:30 p. m.

Others in the Boston delegation remained in London to answer questions concerning the city.

Percy A. Guthrie, who roomed with Lord Beaverbrook in Fredericton, N. B., for two years while Guthrie was practising law there, sent a cable to his friend asking him to exert his "powerful influence" to advance Boston as the UNO headquarters site.

"Nobody in Britain," the cable said, "knows better than you its superior historic, cultural and geographic advantages as center of the new world of peace, for which we all pray."

Guthrie, who commanded the Black Watch, a Canadian Highland regiment, in World War I, is a Boston attorney. Both he and Beaverbrook are Fredericton natives.

Later, William K. Jackson, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, disclosed that businessmen had contributed about $10,000 to finance the city's bid to become "the capital of the world."

Jackson said the $10,000 would supplement a fund made available by the commonwealth through Governor Tobin.

He added that in a trans-Atlantic telephone conversation today with Orson Adams, a member of Boston's UNO delegation in London, he had learned that "if the executive committee of the UNO decides to locate headquarters in North America, Boston has an excellent chance."

work of American scientific laboratories, as saying Mr. Roosevelt had made such a decision.

Dr. Bush said he had referred only to the use of new incendiary bombs, adding that the atomic bomb had not been tested prior to Mr. Roosevelt's death.

F.D.R. Ordered A-Bomb Use, Bush Says

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Dr. Vannevar Bush told senators today that the late President Roosevelt made the decision to use the atomic bomb against Japan, even though it involved killing civilians, in order to destroy industries.

Dr. Bush testified before the Senate Special Atomic Energy Committee that other weapons as deadly, or worse, will be involved in future wars.

His references to the late President were made in answer to numerous questions by senators concerning possible world control of the atomic bomb.

Developed Incendiary

Bush recalled that scientists under his direction had developed a powerful incendiary to burn Japanese cities before the atomic bomb was used.

"The decision to use them was made by President Roosevelt," Dr. Bush said. "In order to wipe out industry in Japanese cities we were forced to kill many people. That was a serious problem in my mind and I was glad I did not have to make the decision."

The witness said the same question arose on use of the atomic bomb, "but I knew it would end the war."

Other New Weapons

Dr. Bush said the future weapons might be powerful new incendiaries, rockets, guided missiles or many other things.

Bush, director of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, said that premature outlawing of the atomic bomb could well be "disastrous."

Cautioning the Senate Atomic Energy Committee against too "quick answers" to the problem of controlling the newly discovered power source, he declared:

"It is impossibe to outlaw when there is no effectively supported law. The first task is to create this. A good start has been made.

"The best possible support which our Government can bring to that good start is the expeditious passage of sound legislation for domestic regulation and development of atomic energy."

Warning On "Evasion"

Nevertheless, Bush advised against letting doubt and indecision hamper the advancement of atomic science.

"People are getting tired of hearing about the atom," he said, "and when people get tired they tend to turn away from issues. This is an issue which cannot in conscience be ignored. . . .

"Preventing war is a long task, which must be done bit by bit, step by step; so also is the development of peaceful atomic power. The two must be related in our thinking."

Plan In Detail

Bush said five principles should be recognized in legislation for domestic control. He declared they must:

1. Insure to the American people their control of plant and process.

2. Safeguard knowledge of the military applications of atomic energy.

3. Properly guard the physical well-being of the people against the many hazards to life and health which the investigation and production of atomic energy involve.

4. Provide for free and full research and interchange of knowledge in this new and promising field.

5. Reckon with the future task of putting fissionable materials to useful work.

In connection with his third point, Bush observed:

"The manufacture of fissionable materials is by long odds the most dangerous manufacturing process in which men have ever engaged.

"The process is accompanied by the production of radio-active by-products as poisonous as the basic material itself; should the process used in producing power be ill managed and get out of hand it would produce a great and deadly volume of such poisons."

Denial By Dr. Bush

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Dr. Vannever Bush denied tonight that, in testimony today before the Senate Committee on Atomic Energy, he had said that the late

Roosevelt Gave Atom Decision, Dr. Bush Says

Incendiaries Also Used on Japanese Cities by His Order, Senators Are Told

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP).—The decision to use the atomic bomb and fearsome new incendiaries against Japan's cities in order to destroy her industry was made personally by the late President Roosevelt, a Senate committee was told today.

Dr. Vannevar Bush, who headed the war work of American scientific laboratories, said there was some question whether to use the incendiaries on cities because they would kill so many civilians. He remarked that he was "glad I did not have to make the decision." The same question arose in connection with the atomic bomb but Dr. Bush said he had no doubts about the wisdom of using that because "I knew it would end the war."

Dr. Bush expressed the belief that "the atomic bomb means the end of world war." The scientist, who directed the development of this and other weapons as head of the National Defense Research Committee and the Office of Scientific Research and Development, predicted it would take a long time to set up atomic controls.

But he told the special Senate committee on atomic energy that all the nations now want a long peace and this period can be used to develop the control machinery. He added that two nations armed with atomic bombs would not consider going to war against each other because the consequences would be "too terrible."

The scientist said the first task for the United States was to set up effective domestic controls as a pattern for possible world use of atomic energy. This would be a long and trying process, he added, requiring wisdom of the Congress and administrators placed in control under legislation.

Progress will be slow, he conceded, on the international side of control but he noted that the easiest way to solve any difficult problem was to "attack at the point easiest of solution."

"There is no danger of war breaking out until we can work this out," he said. "We can't do it in a moment or by wishful thinking."

Warning Issued On Atomic Perils

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Told of "fantastic" suggestions for rebuilding American cities, the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers received this warning today:

"Unless we learn to live together on the surface of the earth, all of us are doomed to perish together, no matter how widely we scatter our cities or how deeply underground we place them."

The warning came in a report prepared by Barnet Hodes, corporation counsel of Chicago and chairman of the institute's committee on municipal war and post-war problems. It was submitted as the organization opened a three-day conference.

Yardstick Of Democracy

Asserting that while the matter of controlling the atomic bomb may appear far afield from municipal functions, Hodes added "it is only by making democracy work at home that we can save our cities and our civilization from the doom which otherwise awaits us, whether by atomic bombs from without, or from the explosive forces generated within."

"It is my feeling," the Chicagoan declared, "that the measuring stick of our democracy is our ability to remove the blighted areas which threaten our cities' future growth and which constitute breeding grounds for poverty, disease, juvenile delinquency, crime, group conflicts and human misery."

30.24-32087

President Truman congratulted the institute today for the "prominent and effective part" it had played in the war effort. In a letter to Fred T. Van Liew, president of the institute, he envisioned an important role for the institute in postwar problems. The President's letter was as follows:

Dear Mr. Van Liew:

To you and your fellow members of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers my greetings and best wishes for what I am convinced will be a most constructive conference here in the nation's capital on December the third, fourth and fifth.

Your membership played a prominent and effective part in the war effort. For this I and all other Americans are grateful. Each of you is conscious of the work which lies ahead. The need for real thought and action by persons occupying the important positions held by your group is as great today as during the war. Your conference is therefore timely, and much good will come to those whom you serve through a free and full discussion of the common problems of reconversion and post-war planning.

It is significant that your program embraces not only representatives of the municipalities, but also of the Federal and State governments. It is vital that the maximum possible co-operation between the three levels of Government be had if each is to serve best those whom we immediately represent as well as the nation. This may be brought about only through meetings and mutual understanding of the problems of each other. So for this reason also I congratulate you and your membership and wish each and every one a profitable and pleasant stay in Washington.

Very sincerely yours,
HARRY S. TRUMAN.

Scientist 'Suicide Squad' Kept First Atom Test In Hand

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP)—A scientist disclosed today that a "suicide squad" stood by as the first atomic reaction was started here, ready to sacrifice their lives to save the city had an explosion threatened.

Dr. Walter H. Zinn, who erected the first atomic pile beneath the University of Chicago's football grandstand, described the precautions to a group of State champions in the 4-H Westinghouse Electric contest attending the National 4-H Club Congress. The champions included Carl Feucht, Jr., of Elkton, Md.

All Were Scientists

Dr. Zinn said a group of University of Chicago scientists was prepared to halt the experiment "before the whole pile exploded like a thousand atomic bombs in one." They expected to be killed in the process, he said.

Zinn said there was a "one in a million chance" of an explosion but that if it had occurred there was a squad of men on hand ready to quench the atomic fire with a special liquid, which he declined to identify.

DEC 3 1945

The pile was composed of blocks of pure uranium and graphite, Dr. Zinn stated, and the group believed that when the metal rods were withdrawn from the lattice-like structure the chain reaction would begin.

"I Pulled The Rods"

"I pulled out the control rods and all of us watched for the result as we never watched for anything before," he said. " The neutrons came with constantly increasing rapidity. Then the control rods were pushed back into the pile and the chain reaction stopped.

"The 'suicide squad' of university men who had helped to create the experiment breathed a sigh of relief. They would not have to give their lives to prevent what could have been the greatest disaster in history."

The 4-H champions were shown the site of the atomic pile experiment, the first group of students to visit Stagg Field since the project was started at the beginning of the war.

Post-War Social Season Opens With Two White House Parties

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 — (AP) The capital's first postwar social season opened today as Mr. Harry S. Truman entertained more than 300 notables at two consecutive teas in the White House.

Conservative informality was the keynote of the White House's social reconversion after the war time ban on elaborate formal parties which the Franklin D. Roosevelts installed.

Lights blazed through the wintry afternoon and the scarlet-coated Marine band played as ranking Army and Navy officers, members of Congress whose surnames fell in the A's, B's and C's, and assorted capital figures filed through the east room, green and blue rooms to be received by the First Lady in the red room and then swell the groups in the state dining room.

Few senators appeared, leaving the social respects to be paid by their wives. However, Senator Bilbo (D.-Miss.) was among the first guests.

Wearing his battle jacket, the new chief of staff, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, made his first appearance since a cold sent him to a hospital 10 days ago.

"I didn't realize," he said with a grin, "that the first day of duty would include a party."

To Mrs. Truman's inquiry about Mrs. Eisenhower's health, the chief of staff replied that his wife hoped to return here the end of the week. Mrs. Eisenhower was stricken with pneumonia in Boone, Iowa, three weeks ago.

For the second tea the First Lady was joined by her daughter, 21-year-old Margaret. Wearing a tailored blue-green velveteen dress and a black ribbon through her blonde hair, Margaret said she'd just come from an afternoon's attempt at shopping.

"It's so hard to find anything you want," she exclaimed.

Camellias from Louisiana, roses and heather from government conservatories decorated the tables.

The assortment of cakes and cookies outdid in variety those proferred in wartime by Mrs. Roosevelt.

But the nuts were still just peanuts.

HIGH COURT RECONVENES

Hands Down Two Opinions And Issues Orders

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Supreme Court, reconvening after a two weeks' recess, handed down two opinions and issued some orders.

One decision settled a question of radio law. The Court held that when conflicting applications for a radio license show up, the Communications Commission must hear both before granting a permit.

Requested By Fetzer

The Court had to reconcile two provisions of the law. One allows the commission to issue a license without hearing. The other requires a hearing before an application is denied.

The case involved a request of the Fetzer Broadcasting Company to build a station at Grand Rapids, Mich., and operate on 1230 kilocycles. The Ashbacker Radio Corporation, operating WKBZ at Muskegon, Mich., asked to switch to the same frequency.

The commission granted the Fetzer application in June, 1944, but set the Ashbacker application for hearing. Ashbacker appealed and the Supreme Court, while not passing on the merits of the applications, held that the procedure had the practical effect of nullifying Ashbacker's right to a hearing. So the commission was reversed.

the right to levy and sue for unemployment compensation taxes against the International Shoe Company, of St. Louis, which had

In the other opinion, the Court held the State of Washington had salesmen in the State at the time but no headquarters there.

The Court extended until January 28 the time for California to answer a Government suit claiming Federal jurisdiction over rights to oil and minerals just off shore.

MCVAY LOSES DEFENSE MOVE

Court-Martial Of Indianapolis Captain Opens

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d, commander of the ill-fated Indianapolis, was unsuccessful in his first defense move today before a navy general court-martial trying him on charges of negligence and inefficiency.

The heavy cruiser was sunk last July 30 in the Philippine Sea. Of its 1,196-man crew, 880 are dead or missing and all the remainder were injured.

As the court convened at the Washington Navy Yard, McVay's counsel, Capt. John P. Cady, of Providence, R.I., objected to the first charge: "Through negligence, suffering a vessel of the Navy to be hazarded."

No Zigzag Course

The specifications alleged that McVay "neglected and failed" to order a zigzag course while traveling without escort from Guam to Leyte through an area "in which enemy submarines might be encountered."

The defense contended that the charge "failed to state an offense," but simply "set out a conclusion."

After a brief deliberation, the seven-man court headed by Rear Admiral Wilder D. Baker overruled the objection. The court's instructions, Baker said, stated it was not essential to specify that the accused officer committed a breach of Federal statutes or naval regulations.

"Culpable Inefficiency"

McVay entered no objection to the form of the second charge, that he was guilty of "culpable inefficiency in the performance of duty."

Specifications of that charge accused him of failing to issue "such timely orders as were necessary to cause said vessel to be abandoned, as it was his duty to do, by reason of which inefficiency many persons on board perished with the sinking of said vessel."

After the court rejected the motion to quash the first charge, McVay's counsel won a 24-hour postponement to complete his case.

Other Charges Possible

The court-martial, officials emphasized, will be concerned only with what occurred aboard the vessel. Other aspects of the disaster, including responsibility for delay in starting a search after the ship was overdue at Leyete, are still under investigation.

Officials said it was "very conceivable" that additional court-martial would be ordered.

It was not until four days after the ship went down that a Marine pilot, flying over the area on a routine mission, saw survivors in the water and summoned aid.

Navy Charges McVay With Negligence

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Navy formally accused Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d today of negligence and culpable inefficiency in the loss of the 10,000-ton cruiser Indianapolis in the closing days of the war.

The charges were prepared for the opening session of a general court-martial convened at the Washington Navy Yard to try the 47-year-old son of a retired admiral.

DEC 3 1945

Every man aboard the Indianapolis was a casualty when enemy action sent her to the bottom of the Philippine Sea July 30. Dead or missing totaled 880; the wounded, 316.

Forrestal Signs Charges

Signed by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, the charges made public as the seven-man military tribunal convened accused McVay of:

1. "Through negligence suffering a vessel of the Navy to be hazarded," and
2. "Culpable inefficiency in the performance of duty."

Under the first charge, the captain was accused specifically of neglecting "to cause zigzag course to be steered" through an area in which enemy submarines "might be encountered."

Under the second charge, he was accused of failing, after being informed that the ship was in a sinking condition, "to issue and see effected such timely orders as were necessary to cause said vessel to be abandoned, as it was his duty to do."

As the court-martial opened, counsel for Captain McVay challenged the first of the two charges—negligence in that the officer neglected to put the cruiser on a zigzag course through submarine-infested waters.

The defense said "the first charge fails to state an offense, it merely sets out a conclusion."

Challenge Rejected

The challenge sent the court into private session, and, after a ten-minute conference, Admiral Wilder Baker, senior officer of the court-martial, announced that the challenge had been rejected and the trial would proceed on the original charges.

Admiral Baker explained that the court instructions stated it was not essential to assert in a specification that the accused committed a breach of Federal statute or naval regulations.

He said the court found the charges and specifications in due form and technically correct.

Adjourns Until Tomorrow

Counsul for the accused, when asked if he was ready to proceed, requested a postponement of one day to complete the preparation of his case, and the court adjourned until 10 A.M. tomorrow.

As a result, the specifications set forth, "many persons on board perished with the sinking of said vessel."

The Indianapolis sank July 30, fifteen minutes after a terrific explosion. The loss has been attributed officially to "enemy action" but details have not been fully explained.

Blames Torpedo Attack

In an interview in a Peleliu hospital in August, McVay said his guess was "an underwater attack."

The skipper added that he told the navigator to make certain that distress signals were sent. These apparently were not heard, because survivors were in the water four days before any were rescued.

The Navy said this phase of the ship's loss still is being investigated and that the court-marital will not go into the rescue delay.

Members Listed

Rear Admiral Baker was until recently chief of staff to the 1st Carrier Task Force. Other members of the court-martial are Com-modores Paul S. Theiss and William S. Popham and Capts. Homer L. Grosskopt, H. J. Redfield, John R. Sullivan and Charles B. Hunt.

A native of Ephrata, Pa., McVay was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1916 by President Wilson.

LEHMAN SAYS UNRRA FACES A BREAKDOWN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP)—Herbert H. Lehman told President Truman today that unless Congress appropriates for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration soon, there will be a "breakdown" in its shipment of supplies to needy Europeans.

The director-general of the administration told White House reporters that a new authorization of $1,350,000,000 was necessary to avoid a breakdown in shipments for February.

Mr. Lehman said another appropriation of $550,000,000, sought under an early authorization and now pending in the Senate, "will provide only enough for loadings in December and January."

Congressional sanction for the additional American contribution, he said, must be had before the end of the year so that supplies can be ordered for shipments beginning in February. Mr. Lehman added:

"I told the President that it was absolutely necessary to have action on both bills before the Congressional recess, or there will inevitably be a breakdown in the pipeline of supplies."

Legislative leaders reported that President Truman again today had made UNRRA funds a "must" before Congress recessed over Christmas.

Representative Cox, Democrat, of Georgia, asserted today that "every dime" spent by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration is "furthering the cause of communism."

Mr. Cox made the statement at a meeting of the House Rules Committee, before which Representative Bloom, Democrat, of New York, appeared to ask right-of-way for consideration of an authorization of $1,350,000,000 for UNRRA's operation next year.

After heated arguments, the committee granted Mr. Bloom's request that the bill come up for House debate Wednesday.

'Aid To Reds' In UNRRA

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Representative Cox (D., Ga.) asserted today that "every dime" spent by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration is "furthering the cause of communism."

Cox made the statement at a meeting of the House Rules Committee, before which Chairman Bloom (D., N.Y.) appeared to ask right of way for consideration of an authorization of $1,350,000,000 for UNRRA's operation next year.

After heated arguments, the committee granted Bloom's request that the bill come up for House debate Wednesday.

Cox said, "I have no objection to the purpose for which UNRRA was created, but I haven't the slightest confidence in the setup that is doing the job."

Bloom replied that UNRRA had made some mistakes in the past but that "the mistakes are being corrected."

WAR POWERS ACT APPROVED

House Passes Extension Of Priorities Right

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—The House today passed and sent to the Senate legislation extending most provisions of the second War Powers Act—including rationing and priorities over scarce materials—until June 30, 1946.

The powers otherwise would expire at the end of this year.

The voice vote on passage was unanimous.

Affects Real Estate Plan

The bill would end immediately the Government's power to seize real estate before starting condemnation proceedings.

Extended for six months would be:

Emergency powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission over coastal water carriers and motor vehicles.

Priorities powers, including rationing (now limited to sugar); allocation and conservation of scarce materials, and commitments to supply foreign nations with materials.

Buying Of Government Paper

Authorization of the Federal Reserve banks to buy up to $5,000,000,000 of Government obligations.

Waiver of navigation and inspection laws.

Exemption of part-time Government employés from provisions of the Hatch Act, which prohibits Federal employés from engaging in political activity.

Gift Clause Amended

Acceptance of gifts made directly to the Government for furtherance of the war effort, with an amendment confining the acceptances to gifts made for the benefit of members of the armed forces.

The collection and exchange of statistical information among branches of the Government.

In reporting the legislation unanimously, the House Judiciary Committee said it was "the determination of Congress" to recapture the war powers granted the Executive Department "as speedily as may be wise, for the people, so that they may again be exercised in accordance with the slower but more desirable processes of democracy."

Military Training Bill Held 'Road To War'

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Organized educators told the House Military Committee today adoption of universal military training as a peacetime policy "would lead straight to war."

Their views were voiced by Dr. Ralph McDonald, an official of the National Education Association, with a membership of 733,409 educators. He testified:

"If we adopt compulsory military training as a peacetime policy, with all that must of necessity go with that policy, war is then but a matter of time.

"Arming Leads To War"

"When nations are all armed to the teeth, using threats or a show of military strength to influence international affairs, war is inevitable . . . already the United States has started a world-wide armaments race."

Dr. H. S. Bender, assistant secretary of the Mennonite Central Committee, Nappanee, Ind., opposed universal training. He urged that if it is adopted, provision be made for the exemption of conscientious objectors or for "completely nonmilitary training or service under civilian direction" for such persons.

Congressman Offers Formula To Defeat Higher Cost of Living

DEC 3 1945

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—(AP) Everybody says his living costs soared during the war. Everybody, that is, except Rep. Hoffman (R-Mich.).

Hoffman said in a recent House speech that it doesn't cost him a dime more to live than it did in 1941.

Furthermore, it's his opinion that "about half the people in this country" could get by just as cheaply if they only would follow the Hoffman formula.

Which is:

If it costs more, don't buy it.

"Maybe I exaggerated a little—for emphasis," Hoffman confessed to a reporter today. "But it's still essentially true that my personal living expenses are about the same."

Hoffman said that when meals began to cost more, he simply switched to a less fancy diet. Instead of steaks he eats "bread and milk and good old Battle Creek cereal." And if an apple costs a dime and a pear 15 cents, he does without.

He suffered one defeat in his wardrobe. He had to buy a pair of shoes.

"But suits and shirts can be patched," he said. And then, holding up his arms and turning around, Hoffman asked, "This shirt is patched, isn't it?"

No, it wasn't.

"Not patched!" exclaimed Hoffman, and there was a trace of dismay in his voice. "Well, most of them are. This one probably is the exception."

Hoffman has another way to whack expenses. He washes his socks and underwear—"something anybody could do."

He also has a couple of words of advice to those who (a) smoke, (b) drink, (c) have yachts or (d), like [illegible] gin rummy.

The advice: Quit it.

"I don't do it myself," he said, "but I understand they cost money."

Connally, Wheeler Clash Over Surpluses

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—A report on destruction of surplus army jeeps and food caused an exchange in the Senate today between Senators Wheeler (D., Mont.) and Connally (D., Texas).

Senator Wheeler read a press report from Australia that the War Department was "burning and bulldozing into the earth" large quantities of food and many other surplus items, such as jeeps, engine motors, radio sets and hospital equipment.

"I this is true, it is most outrageous and sinful," the Montana Senator said.

Should Go To UNRRA

If such equipment is not worth returning, Wheeler said, it should go to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Agency for distribution.

Senator Connally interrupted to ask Wheeler if he had checked the account with the War Department or Secretary Robert P. Patterson.

The Texas Senator said the War Department should be given a chance to say whether such charges are true or not before they are brought to the floor of the Senate.

8,500 Surplus Jeeps Available For Vets

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Veterans will be able to buy 8,500 surplus jeeps, Representative Case (R., S.D.) said today.

Case said he was told by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that the jeeps would be allocated to the regional RFC offices in the various states on the basis of population and need.

American Legion officials in South Dakota told Case that information they had received from Government sources indicated few if any jeeps would be available for veterans in that State.

45 RATIFY CHARTER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3. — (AP) The State department announced today that formal ratifications of the United Nations charter have recently been received from Panama City, Ethiopia, Bolivia, Venezuela, Guatemala and Norway, raising the total of nations which have completely approved the charter to 45.

Communist Pickets' Signs Declare Byrnes 'Must Go'

Marchers at State Department Call for Marines' Return

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP).—Several members of the District of Columbia Communist party picketed the State Department today with signs saying that James F. Byrnes, Secretary of State, "must go."

The Communists also carried signs calling for the return of United States marines from China.

The marchers handed out typewritten sheets praising the resignation of Major General Patrick J. Hurley as American Ambassador to China. The signs and the sheets bore the statement that they were issued by the "Communist party, District of Columbia."

HOUSE VOTES RETURN OF NICKEL TO NICKEL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 — (AP) The House voted today to put the nickel back into the five-cent piece.

Because the metal has been diverted to war purposes, Congress authorized the use of copper and silver in minting the coin.

In amending the second warpowers act, the House voted to return to the use of nickel at the end of this year. The bill now goes to the Senate.

White House Gets Deployment Protests

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—The White House today reported receiving a number of telephone calls protesting against alleged delays in returning American troops from overseas.

Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary, was asked at a news conference if there had been any telephone calls to the President regarding redeployment. He replied that according to Brig. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide, there had been "several."

Newsprint Price To Go Up $5 Ton

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP) — OPA plans to announce soon an increase of at least $5 a ton in newsprint ceiling prices, it was learned today.

An official who asked that his name not be used said the increase "might be a little more" than $5.

Although the purpose of any price boost would be to restore earnings of United States mills to prewar levels, the increase would apply to Canadian as well as domestic producers.

This policy always has been followed in the case of newsprint price adjustments.

Canadian mills produce about three fourths of the newsprint used in this country.

Eisenhower on Job As Army Staff Chief

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP).—General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower went to work today as the Army's new chief of staff.

General Eisenhower, appointed to succeed General of the Army George C. Marshall, had been resting at an Army hospital in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for almost two weeks. Doctors sent him there after he come down with a heavy cold following his return from Frankfurt, Germany.

Baby Gurgles Happily As He Gets Father's C.M.H

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Seven-month-old John Harlan Willis 2d, gurgled contentedly in his mother's arms today as James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, placed around his neck the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The award was presented posthumously to his father, John Harlan Willis, of Columbia, Tenn., pharmacist's mate 1/c who died on Iwo Jima last February 28.

Willis was serving with the 5th Marine Division. Although wounded, he returned to the front lines to administer blood plasma to a wounded man. He threw back ei[illegible]

Negro Quits FEPC In Transit Row

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Charles H. Houston, Washington Negro attorney, today resigned from the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee and accused the Truman Administration of giving only "lip services" to its anti-discrimination policy.

He told a news conference the FEPC decided to issue a decision ordering the Capitol Transit Company, of Washington, to open employment opportunities to Negroes as motormen, bus drivers, etc., but that President Truman on November 24 directed FEPC not to issue the decision.

Carver Bill Advanced

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP).—Jan. 5 would be designated George Washington Carver Day under a resolution approved today by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The resolution, honoring the memory of the noted Negro scientist, has been approved by the House.

Retired Pay Boost Denied Other Vets

Washington, Dec. 3 (A. P.).—President Truman vetoed today legislation to provide maximum retirement pay now provided for enlisted personnel of the armed forces who served overseas between 1898 and 1912.

House Passes Bank Bill

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—The House approved unanimously and sent to the Senate today legislation authorizing the Export-Import Bank to extend its operations to include the Philippine Islands.

HURLEY HEARINGS WILL BE PUBLIC

Washington, Dec. 3 (A. P.).—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee decided today to hold open hearings on Wednesday when Major-Gen. Patrick J. Hurley appears to discuss the reasons for his recent resignation as Ambassador to China.

Originally the committee had intended to hear Hurley behind closed doors, but Hurley expressed his opposition to secret testimony.

MYSTERY SCREENS TYLER KENT'S SHIP

Steamer With Ex-Embassy Aide From Britain Overdue

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—The arrival of Tyler Kent, former American Embassy clerk imprisoned by the British on charges of revealing contents of coded messages between President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill, was shrouded in mystery and confusion today.

Kent, 34, sailed from Londan aboard the British steamer Silver Oak November 21 and was expected at dawn today. But hours afterward the ship had not arrived and a spokesman for its owners, the Kerr Steamship Line, said:

"The Customs Office here has clamped a blackout on information concerning the Silver Oak, and under no circumstances shall we give out any details." Harry Durning, port collector, said: "We just don't have any report on the Silver Oak."

May Arrive Today

At 3 o'clock this afternoon, however, his office said: "Our best information is that the ship will arrive late tonight or tomorrow morning."

Kent was convicted in 1940 of "violating the Official Secrets Act" and sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. His term, with time off for good behavior, ended last October 5, but his return home was delayed by the British dock strike.

EDUCATOR URGES U. S., RUSSIA TO WORK TOGETHER

BOSTON, Dec. 3—(AP) President James B. Conant of Harvard university said tonight that the immediate issue in the consideration of national defense was to develop a "mutual trust between Russia and the United States."

In an address delivered at the Harvard Club of Boston, the noted educator asserted:

"It seems to me we have a great deal that would be of value to our ally—not only the great mass of technical information about atomic energy, and the details of the atomic bomb, but a great quantity of other international and engineering knowledge and skill.

"I like to think of all this as a product of our great strides in science and technology. I like to think of it as a series of cargoes which we would gladly ship to Russia for her use."

In turn, he added, we would expect Russia to welcome our technical and scientific men, and work with us to set up an international agency for inspection and control of atomic energy through the United Nations organization.

Dr. Conant said that whatever the final plan, no scheme could be made to work without inspection by a technical corps of experts.

"Inspection will not be too acceptable either in the United States or in Russia, let us admit freely," he continued. "But I believe, given time and patience, it could be adopted and be made to work.

"I should like to make it plain that an inspection scheme must be a supplement to an international order based on mutual trust; it cannot be a substitute for a friendly relation between countries."

Right Eye Improving

Sight is about gone out of his left eye but the right now is rapidly becoming normal. And Bill had no trouble seeing today as Iris and the children, Diane and Jennifer, arrived from Washington on the last leg of their aerial trip.

It was the first time he had seen 10-month-old Jennifer and Diane, who'll be 2 years old Saturday, was an infant when he went to war.

The children were quiet and shy but Diane smiled from her father's arms as photographers took pictures.

Her First Plane Ride

Blue-eyed, brunette Mrs. Bingham said the group had a fine trip since leaving New Zealand Sunday but that she was tired. It was her first plane ride.

Bill didn't know definitely until 10 A.M. that his family would arrive today. He had to pack his bags and get a seven-day furlough from the naval hospital here.

He was at the airport long before the plane arrived and smilingly said he was more nervous than on his wedding day.

Tomorrow they will go to Columbia with Bingham's mother. The sailor expects to be discharged in a few weeks.

BRITISH WIFE, 19, STAYS WITH LOVER

DUBUQUE, Ia., Dec. 3—(AP) Capt. Darrell Beschen, 25-year-old hero of the air war over Europe, and a pretty, titian-haired English girl who flew the Atlantic to join him instead of her husband, emerged from hiding this afternoon to announce:

"We are going to stay together and see what happens."

Beschen and the girl, Mrs. Jean Gioor Carbone, 19, wife of Army Lt. Harold Carbone, now a student at the University of Rochester (N. Y.) said they would marry as soon as Carbone obtained a divorce—which she said he assured her by telephone he would do at once.

"I came to the states to see Darrell," Mrs. Carbone said to reporters and Police Capt. John Derreberry. "I want a divorce from Harold so that Darrell and I can be married. I'll be a mother soon."

"I'm the father of her unborn child," Capt. Beschen said. "I'm desperately in love with Jean. I'm sorry for her husband, but I want to marry her as soon as she is free. I hope that is not long."

Mrs. Carbone had been the object of a widespread search since her arrival in Chicago last week and her subsequent disappearance which led to Carbone's appeal to the Red Cross to help find her.

At Rochester, Carbone refused to comment further than to say he had talked with his wife by telephone this morning.

New Zealand Family Flown To Sailor, Once Nearly Blind

Charleston, S.C., Dec. 3 (AP)—Navy Cook Bill Bingham's long wait ended happily today. A navy plane brought his New Zealand wife, whom he last saw seventeen months ago, and his two small daughters here to rejoin the sailor.

Bingham contracted a severe eye infection on Okinawa and for a while it seemed he might become blind. So the Navy arranged transportation here for his family.

Leo T. Crowley Elected Chairman Of Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP)—Leo T. Crowley, former alien property custodian, today was elected chairman of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company, which Saturday resumed private operation after ten years of reorganization proceedings.

H. A. Scandrett, president of the line since January 11, 1928, and Federal court trustee of the property since January 1, 1936, was elected president of the new corporation.

LONDON, DEC. 3--(AP)--DIFFERENCES BETWEEN LARGE AND SMALL NATIONS OVER THE ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURE OF THE UNITED NATIONS WERE BROUGHT INTO THE OPEN AGAIN TODAY BY TWO CLASHES IN COMMITTEE MEETINGS OF THE UNITED NATIONS PREPARATORY COMMISSION.

IN ARGUMENTS RECALLING THE BITTER DEBATES AT THE SAN FRANCISCO CONFERENCE, THE DELEGATES DISAGREED SHARPLY OVER ~~THE~~ THE EXTENT TO WHICH NATIONS NOT REPRESENTED ON THE 11-MEMBER SECURITY COUNCIL CAN PARTICIPATE IN ITS AFFAIRS AND THE EXTENT OF CONTROL WHICH LARGE POWERS WILL EXERCISE OVER THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

CUBAN DELEGATE GUY PEREZ CISNEROS, URGING THAT EVERY NATION BE REPRESENTED ON THE ~~STEERING~~ STEERING COMMITTEE OF THE GE ASSEMBLY, DECLARE THAT FREEDOM OF SPEECH WAS ENDANGERED BY PLANS TO ESTABLISH A COMMITTEE

BRITISH MINISTER OF STATE PHILIP NOEL-BAKER SAID HE THOUGHT THE ASSEMBLY SHOULD BE RUN BY A COMMITTEE OF 14 TO 16 MEMBERS, CHOSEN FO THEIR PERSONAL COMPETENCE AND GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION.

DEC 3 1945

PEREZ DECLARED THAT SUCH A PLAN WOULD MEAN THE ESTABLISHMENT OF "PERMANENT ASSEMBLY RULERS," COMPARABLE TO THE PERMANENT MEMBERS ON THE SECURITY COUNCIL.

THE OTHER MAJOR ARGUMENT WAS OVER A PROPOSAL BY SYRIAN DELEGATE NAJEEZ AL ARMAMAZI THAT SECURITY COUNCIL DOCUMENTS BE MADE AVAILABLE TO NATIONS NOT REPRESENTED ON THE [redacted] BODY WHICH WILL BE CHARGED WITH TAKING DECISIVE ACTIONS NECESSARY TO KEEP PEACE.

HE RAN INTO SERIOUS OPPOSITION FROM THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, WHILE [redacted] ECUADOR AND THE MIDDLE EASTERN COUNTRIES SUPPORTED THE SYRIAN PROPOSAL. DURING THE DISCUSSION, GROMYKO AROSE TO SAY THAT THE COUNCIL ITSELF SHOULD DECIDE ITS OWN PROCEDURE.

THUS FAR THE UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA HAVE CONSISTENTLY OPPOSED ANYTHING WHICH WOULD SET A PRECEDENT FOR INTERFERENCE IN THE SECURITY COUNCIL'S AFFAIRS BY OTHER POWERS.

THERE WAS NO DEBATE ON THE FLOOR TODAY ABOUT THE PERMANENT HOME OF THE UNITED NATIONS, BUT SOME DELEGATES SAID PRIVATELY THAT THEY FELT IT WAS BECOMING INCREASINGLY DIFFICULT FOR THE UNITED STATES TO WIN THE RACE.

LONDON, DEC 3 -- (AP) -- THE UNITED NATIONS COMMISSION TODAY PLUNGED INTO ITS SECOND WEEK OF FORGING PEACE MACHINERY [redacted] WITH REACHING A DECISION ON [redacted] A TEMPORARY TRUSTEESHIP COMMITTEE.

THE FATE OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS MANDATES, WHICH DELEGATES TO THE SAN FRANCISCO CONFERENCE AGREED SHOULD BE REVIEWED FOR FUTURE DISPOSITION, HINGES [redacted] CONTROVERSIAL ISSUE.

IT WAS [redacted] STATED AUTHORITATIVELY, [redacted] THAT

THE ISSUE UNDERLYING THE PRESENT DISCUSSION ON ESTABLISHING A TEMPORARY TRUSTEESHIP COMMITTEE IS HOW FAR RUSSIA SHOULD BE PERMITTED TO PARTICIPATE IN DECIDING THE FUTURE OF AMERICAN ARMS AND OF THE PACIFIC ISLANDS SHE WAS WON IN THIS WAR.

DELEGATES ARE EXPECTED THIS WEEK TO VOTE ON A YUGOSLAV PROPOSAL -- BACKED BY SOVIET RUSSIA -- TO ESTABLISH THE PERMANENT TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL IN THE NEAR FUTURE BY TURNING ALL LEAGUE OF NATIONS MANDATES INTO TRUSTEESHIPS.

SUCH A PLAN, IF ADOPTED, WOULD MEAN THAT RUSSIA COULD SIT IN ON ALL PLANS FOR ITALY'S NORTH AFRICAN COLONIES, FOR PALESTINE AND FOR DISPOSITION OF THE PACIFIC ISLANDS.

MEANWHILE, ANOTHER CONTROVERSIAL ISSUE -- THE SELECTION OF A PERMANENT SITE FOR THE UNO -- APPEARED HEADED FOR A SHOWDOWN EARLY THIS WEEK, WITH INDICATIONS THAT A VOTE MIGHT BE FORCED ON THE ISSUE.

ALTHOUGH THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE RECOMMENDED THE UNITED STATES AS THE SITE, BRITAIN, FRANCE, BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS ARE SEEKING TO ESTABLISH THE LEAGUE HOME IN EUROPE.

CANADA HAS PROPOSED THAT DELEGATES VOTE BY SECRET BALLOT FOR CITIES INSTEAD OF FIRST CHOOSING BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND EUROPE. THE PROPOSAL IS EXPECTED TO BE BROUGHT UP FOR DEBATE SOON.

WHILE THE CONTROVERSIAL TRUSTEESHIP AND SITE ISSUES DOMINATED THE CONFERENCE WORK, THE AMERICAN DELEGATION SUBMITTED WHAT IT HOPED WOULD BE AN ACCEPTABLE COMPROMISE TO THE DISPUTE BETWEEN BRITISH AND AMERICAN DELEGATES AND THE RUSSIANS ON ESTABLISHING A SEPARATE SECRETARIAT FOR THE SECURITY COUNCIL.

THE SOVIET DELEGATION IS INSISTING ON A SEPARATE SECRETARIAT, WHILE THE AMERICAN COMPROMISE PLAN SUGGESTS THAT THE QUESTION BE LEFT UP TO THE ORGANIZATION'S SECRETARY GENERAL.

REICHSMARSHAL GOERING, WHO FOLLOWED HESS AS DEPUTY FUEHRER AND IS NOW A DEFENDANT IN THE WAR CRIMES TRIAL HERE, WAS REPORTED TO BE "CONSIDERABLY UPSET" OVER THE DAMAGING TESTIMONY GIVEN FOR THE PROSECUTION BY GEN.ERWIN LAHOUSEN, FORMER GERMAN COUNTER INTELLIGENCE OFFICER.

GOERING WAS REPORTED TO HAV(TURNED TO FIELD MARSHAL KEITEL DURING LAHOUSEN'S TESTIMONY AND SAID:

"MY GOD, WE OVERLOOKED THAT DOG ON JULY 20TH."

HE APPARENTLY WAS REFERRING TO THE PURGE WHICH FOLLOWED THE ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE HITLER ON JULY 20, 1944. PROSECUTOR JOHN H.AMEN OF NEW YORK SAID LAHOUSEN HAD BEEN TRANSFERRED TO THE INFANTRY AFTER THE PLOT AGAINST HITLER HAD BEEN COMPLETED.

FRANKFURT, DEC. 3-(AP)-GERMAN RESENTMENT AGAINST AMERICAN OCCUPATION METHODS IS DEVELOPING GRADUALLY INTO BITTER HATRED WHICH IS GIVING RISE TO INCREASING TALK OF RESISTANCE, ACCORDING TO A SURVEY MADE BY U.S. INTELLIGENCE OFFICERS.

AN OUTSTANDING SOURCE OF RESENTMENT, THE SURVEY FOUND, IS THE CONVICTION THAT THE AMERICAN MILITARY ADMINISTRATION IS SUFFERING FROM A LACK OF POLICY WHICH THE GERMANS HOLD RESPONSIBLE FOR MUCH INJUSTICE AND CONFUSION.

THIS CONVICTION, IT WAS SAID, IS SHARED BY MANY OF THE CLERGY WHO PROFESS PRO-ALLIED SYMPATHIES.

RESULTS OF THE SURVEY, UNDERTAKEN IN AN EFFORT TO OBTAIN SOME LIGHT ON "THE GERMAN VIEW," WERE EMBODIED IN A 20,000-WORD REPORT MADE PUBLIC YESTERDAY.

IN GENERAL, THE INVESTIGATORS FOUND THAT THE GERMANS SEEM TO FEEL THAT THEY HAVE SUFFERED ENOUGH, WHATEVER THEIR CRIMES.

"WHATEVER MATERIAL LOSSES WERE INFLICTED ON OTHER COUNTRIES, GERMANY HAS LOST MORE," IS THE WAY THE AVERAGE GERMAN SEEMS TO FEEL, THE REPORT SAID.

IT PICTURED GERMANY AS A LAND OF GROANERS, AND QUOTED ONE CIVIL SERVANT AS SAYING "THE ONLY THING GERMANS WOULD BE ABLE REALLY TO AGREE ON WOULD BE SOME FORM OF RESISTANCE."

THE REPORT DISCLOSED THAT THE COUNCIL OF THE EVANGELICAL CHURCH IN GERMANY HAD MADE A FORMAL PROTEST TO THE INTER-ALLIED CONTROL COUNCIL CHARGING INJUSTICES IN THE DE-NAZIFICATION PROGRAM.

"THIS CAMPAIGN AS WE SEE IT IN THE AMERICAN ZONE WILL NOT EXTERMINATE HITLERISM," THE PROTEST SAID. "INDEED DANGER EXISTS THAT HITLERISM WILL WIN NEW ADHERENTS."

BOTH CLERGY AND LAYMEN WERE REPORTED OF THE OPINION THAT AMERICAN POLICY IS "RESENTFUL OF THE CHURCH'S POSITION AS A DEFENDER OF RIGHTS AND SUSPICIOUS OF THE CHURCH AS AN EDUCATIONAL FORCE."

THE CLERGYMEN ALSO PROTESTED AGAINST "THE FREEDOM ACCORDED POLES AND OTHER FOREIGNERS WHEN THEY TAKE THEIR REVENGE ON THE GERMAN PEOPLE FOR EVILS WHICH THE NAZIS INFLICTED ON THEM."

THERE HAS BEEN SOME TALK AMONG GERMANS OF ORGANIZING VIGILANTE GROUPS TO COMBAT DEPRADATIONS BY DISPLACED PERSONS, THE SURVEY SAID. THERE ALSO HAS BEEN TALK OF ORGANIZING SIMILAR GROUPS "TO PUNISH FRATERNIZING WOMEN."

ME, DEC. 3-(AP)-FOREIGN MINISTER ALCIDE DE GASPERI SAID TODAY HE WAS "MAKING GOOD PROGRESS" TOWARD FORMING A NEW ITALIAN GOVERNMENT, AS HE CONTINUED CONSULTATIONS WITH LEADERS OF THE SIX MAJOR PARTIES.

AFTER A FORENOON MEETING, SOCIALIST CHIEF PIETRO NENNI SAID NO AGREEMENT HAD BEEN REACHED OVER DISPOSITION OF THE MINISTRY OF INTERIOR POST--THE CHIEF OBSTACLE IN THE NOW NINE-DAY-OLD GOVERNMENT CRISIS. NENNI INDICATED, HOWEVER, THAT LIBERAL OPPOSITION TO GIVING THE PORTFOLIO TO THE LEFTISTS HAD DIMINISHED.

SOURCES CLOSE TO THE FOREIGN MINISTER SAID THAT DE GASPERI WAS DETERMINED THAT HE WOULD NOT FORM A NEW GOVERNMENT UNLESS THE LIBERALS AGREE TO PARTICIPATE.

THE ITALIAN NEWS AGENCY, ANSA, SAID A COMPROMISE MAY BE REACHED BY GIVING THE INTERIOR POST--SOUGHT BY BOTH THE ACTION PARTY AND THE SOCIALISTS--TO SOMEONE "UNAFFILIATED WITH THE COALITION," AND NAMED THE TWO FORMER PREMIERS, IVANOE BONOMI AND VITTORIO EMANUEL ORLANDO AS POSSIBILITIES FOR THE CABINET PORTFOLIO.

MOSCOW, DEC. 3 - (AP) - POLITICAL COMMENTATOR V. BORISOV WRITING IN THE "NEW TIMES" SAID TODAY THE WESTERN ALLIES HAD FAILED TO DELIVER THE GOODS DUE RUSSIA UNDER THE REPARATIONS AGREEMENT OF THE BERLIN CONFERENCE.

HE SAID THAT UNDER THE AGREEMENT THE SOVIET UNION HAD BEEN PROMISED 25 PER CENT OF THE INDUSTRIAL EQUIPMENT FROM THE WESTERN ZONES OF GERMANY.

"THE SOVIET PEOPLE STAND FOR THE DIRECT IMMEDIATE FULFILLMENT OF THE REPARATIONS PROGRAM," BORISOV WROTE.

UNDER THE BERLIN PACT, HE SAID, 15 PER CENT OF THE INDUSTRIAL EQUIPMENT WAS TO BE IN EXCHANGE FOR EQUAL VALUE IN FOOD FROM THE RUSSIAN OCCUPIED ZONE AND AN ADDITIONAL TEN PER CENT WAS SUPPOSED TO BE TURNED OVER TO THE RUSSIANS WITHOUT ANY PAYMENT.

"THE SOVIET UNION IN LESS THAN TWO WEEKS AFTER THE CONCLUSION OF THE BERLIN CONFERENCE CONCLUDED AN AGREEMENT WITH POLAND ON AUG. 16 ON THE QUESTION OF DAMAGES THUS IMMEDIATELY FULFILLING THE FIRST PART OF THE BERLIN PACT," HE ADDED, "BUT ANOTHER FATE OVERTOOK A MORE IMPORTANT PART OF THE AGREEMENT CONCERNING REPARATIONS. THE ALLIED CONTROL COUNCIL ONLY ON NOV. 20 FOR THE FIRST TIME AFFIRMED TWO LISTS OF GERMAN PLANTS."

BORISOV SAID THE ANGLO-AMERICAN AND FRENCH MEETING ON REPARATIONS WAS HELD IN PARIS ON NOV. 9 BUT THAT NOTHING WAS KNOWN ABOUT THE CONFERENCE RESULT.

"IT HAS BECOME THE STYLE IN SOME CIRCLES TO COMPLAIN WITHOUT REASON OF EXTRA SUSPICIOUSNESS OF THE SOVIET PEOPLE BUT IT WOULD HAVE BEEN A HOPELESS AFFAIR TO WAIT FOR SOVIET SOCIETY TO CLOSE ITS EYES TO THE INTRIGUES OF THE INTERNATIONAL GROUP WHO GNAW AT INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION AND THE GUIDING OF A DURABLE PEACE."

YENAN, VIA SHANGHAI,DEC.1-(DELAYED)-(AP)-IN YENAN AND THROUGHOUT THE COMMUNIST SHENSI-KANSU-NINGSAI BORDER REGION FREE ELECTIONS ARE BEING HELD THIS MONTH. I SAW MY FIRST ONE TODAY.
IT WAS A VILLAGE ELECTION AND REMINDED ME OF MANY A NEW ENGLAND TOWN MEETING I ATTENDED YEARS AGO.
THE BORDER REGION EMBRACES MORE THAN 1,000,000 PEOPLE AND HAS REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT BEGINNING AT THE VILLAGE LEVEL. TRUE REPRESENTATION STARTS THERE, WITH ELECTION OF A DELEGATE FOR EACH 50 PERSONS.
THE ELECTION PLACE WAS A MUD-WALLED ADOBE PRIMARY SCHOOL A COUPLE OF MILES FROM YENAN ON AN OLD DUSTY, RUTTED ROAD ALONG WHICH MULE TRAINS WOUND THEIR WAY ENDLESSLY.
THERE WERE 52 MEN AND WOMEN OVER 18--THE MINIMUM AND ONLY VOTING REQUIREMENT--SITTING ON STOOLS AND BENCHES LITENING TO A MODERATOR, A ONE-ARMED EX-SOLDIER, EXPLAINING THE PROCEDURE.
THE PEOPLE STILL CONSIDER THEMSELVES PART OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT BUT WITH THEIR OWN SYSTEM OF LOCAL SELF RULE. THEY HAVEN'T SET UP A GOVERNMENT OF THEIR OWN BECAUSE OF THE UNWILLINGNESS OF THE COMMUNISTS TO ANTAGONIZE THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.
CURRENT ELECTIONS WILL INSTALL A BORDER GOVERNMENT IN WHICH THE COMMUNIST PARTY IS PERMITTED TO HAVE ONLY ONE-THIRD OF THE ELECTED OFFICIALS.
ONE INTERESTING ASPECT OF THE ELECTION SYSTEM IS THAT OF REQUIRING TWO DAYS INVESTIGATION INTO THE WORTH OF PUBLIC SERVANTS BEFORE VOTING ON THEM. THIS IS DONE IN PUBLIC MEETING.

TOKYO, TUESDAY, DEC.4-(AP)-SHAKEN TO ITS VERY FOUNDATION BY GENERAL MACARTHUR'S ORDER FOR THE ARREST OF SOME OF ITS LEADING MEMBERS, THE IMPERIAL DIET DISCUSSED FINANCES TODAY WITHOUT ENTHUSIASM.
THE JAPANESE NEWS AGENCY, KYODO, SAID "A WAR CRIMINAL STORM BLEW THROUGH THE WHITE WALLED DIET BUILDING" AS 20 MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF PEERS AND SIX MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES WERE INCLUDED IN THE NEWEST ARREST LIST.
LT.GEN.NNOBUTAKE SHIOTEN, DISCOVERING HIS NAME ON THE LIST IN A SPECIAL EDITION OF A NEWSPAPER, TURNED PALE AND QUICKLY DISAPPEARED, KYODO REPORTED.

THE BUDGET MEETING WAS SLOW MOVING, WITH PREMIER KIJURO SHIDEHARA AND REP.KAWASAKI ALTERNATELY GETTING UP AND SITTING DOWN IN UNENTHUSIASTIC DISCUSSIONS.

YAMASHITA ALSO ASKED THE HIGHEST AMERICAN TRIBUNAL FOR A "WRIT OF PROHIBITION" FORBIDDING CONTINUATION OF HIS TRIAL AS A WAR CRIMINAL, AND REQUESTED THAT THE COURT ORDER HIM RETURN TO THE STATUS OF PRISONER OF WAR "IN CONFORMITY WITH PROVISIONS OF THE GENEVA CONVENTION."

HIS PETITION POINTED OUT THAT THE PHILIPPINES WERE NOT UNDER MARTIAL LAW, OR UNDER MILITARY GOVERNMENT, NOR WERE THERE ANY ACTIVE HOSTILITIES THERE AT THE TIME THE COMMISSION TRYING HIM WAS APPOINTED; THEREFORE "THERE WAS NO AUTHORITY TO APPOINT THE COMMISSION AND IT IS WITHOUT JURISDICTION."

THE PHILIPPINES SUPREME COURT ON NOV.28 REJECTED A PETITION BY YAMASHITA'S ATTORNEYS FOR A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS THAT WOULD HAVE TRANSFERRED HIM TO THE JURISDICTION OF THE COMMONWEALTH'S COURTS.

IT DID THIS DESPITE THE FACT THAT THE ARMY IGNORED ITS SUMMONS AND SENT NO REPRESENTATIVE TO THE HEARING.

HOWEVER, AN INFLUENTIAL REPUBLICAN--REP.MUNDT OF SOUTH DAKOTA--RECOMMENDED A WIDESPREAD PROBE, ASSERTING THAT THE SENATE GROUP WOULD "HUSH UP" ANY INFORMATION THAT MIGHT REFLECT UNFAVORABLY ON THE ADMINISTRATION.
MUNDT ADDED THAT HIS PARTY "ONLY WANTS THE FACTS."
BOTH SPARKMAN AND MUNDT MADE THEIR REMARKS TO A REPORTER IN COMMENTING ON HURLEY'S CONTENTION LAST WEEK THAT CAREER DIPLOMATS ARE UNDERMINING PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S FOREIGN POLICY.
SPARKMAN STRESSED THAT THE ASSERTIONS SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED, BUT ADDED:
"NATURALLY, SOME REPUBLICANS ARE TRYING TO HAVE ALL SORTS OF INVESTIGATIONS STARTED. THEY WOULD LIKE TO KEEP THIS CRITICISM RUNNING FOR POLITICAL REASONS, BECAUSE THEY KNOW IT BREAKS DOWN FAITH IN THE ADMINISTRATION.
"BUT THERE IS NO NECESSITY TO GET ALL EXCITED ABOUT GENERAL HURLEY'S STATEMENTS. THE SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE WILL DO THE NECESSARY JOB OF CHECKING, AND IF CHA TISEMENT FOR THE STATE DEPARTMENT IS NEEDED THE COMMITTEE WILL PROVIDE IT."
MUNDT EXPRESSED DOUBT, HOWEVER, THAT THE SENATE GROUP WOULD

"DO AN ADEQUATE JOB." HE SAID HE PARTICULARLY WANTS TO HOUSE COMMITTEE ON UNAMERICAN ACTIVITIES TO QUESTION HURLEY ON HIS STATEMENT THAT SOME SECTIONS OF THE STATE DEPARTMENT ARE "ENDEAVORING TO SUPPORT COMMUNISM GENERALLY, AS WELL AS SPECIFICALLY IN CHINA."

THE UNAMERICAN INVESTIGATING GROUP, OF WHICH MUNDT IS A MEMBER, HAS INVITED HURLEY TO TESTIFY, AND CHAIRMAN WOOD (D-GA) TOLD A REPORTER THE GENERAL HAS PROMISED TO APPEAR AFTER HIS SENATE TESTIMONY.

HURLEY HAS TOLD NEWSMEN HE IS WILLING TO APPEAR BEFORE ANY PUBLIC HEARING THAT "CONGRESS MAY ARRANGE." HE SAID TOO HE WILL ASK FOR STATE DEPARTMENT PERMISSION TO PRESENT SUPPORTING DOCUMENTS, INCLUDING PAPERS IN HIS OWN POSSESSION AS WELL AS THOSE FROM DEPARTMENT FILES.

WASHINGTON, DEC 3-(AP)-CONGRESS HEARD A DEMOCRAT'S CONTENTION TODAY THAT THE REPUBLICANS ARE TRYING TO MAKE POLITICAL CAPITAL OUT OF THE FURORE CREATED WHEN MAJ.GEN. PATRICK J.HURLEY QUIT AS AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN.

THUS THE STAGE WAS SET FOR ANOTHER WORDY WEEK ON CAPITOL HILL, WITH PEARL HARBOR, THE UNITED NATIONS AND LABOR LEGISLATION PROVIDING PLENTY OF SUBJECTS.

REP.SPARKMAN OF ALABAMA, BRAND NEW IN HIS JOB AS DEMOCRATIC WHIP OF THE HOUSE, RAISED THE POLITICS ISSUE WITH A SUGGESTION THAT THE WHOLE HURLEY MATTER SHOULD BE LEFT TO THE SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE.

A QUICK REPUBLICAN REJOINDER CAME FROM REP.MUNDT OF SOUTH DAKOTA, HOWEVER. HE SAID ALL HIS PARTY WANTS IS "THE FACTS" AND HE DOESN'T WANT ANYTHING "HUSHED UP." MUNDT SAID HE THOUGHT IT WOULD BE A GOOD IDEA IF THE COMMITTEE ON UNAMERICAN ACTIVITIES, OF WHICH HE IS A MEMBER, GAVE HURLEY A CHANCE TO TALK.

HURLEY ALREADY HAS SAID HE'LL APPEAR BEFORE ANY PUBLIC HEARING THAT CONGRESS MAY ARRANGE TO HEAR MORE ABOUT HIS CONTENTION THAT CAREER DIPLOMATS ARE HAMSTRINGING ADMINISTRATION FOREIGN POLICY.

THE PEARL HARBOR COMMITTEE, GETTING BACK TO WORK AFTER A TWO-DAY RECESS, LOOKED FORWARD TO AN EARLY APPEARANCE BY GEN.GEORGE C. MARSHALL, WHOM PRESIDENT TRUMAN DESIGNATED TO TAKE HURLEY'S PLACE IN CHINA. ALSO SENATOR LUCAS (D-ILL) SAYS HE WANTS TO CLEAR UP THE ISSUE WHETHER LT.GEN. WALTER C.SHORT EVER RECEIVED A MESSAGE BEFORE PEARL HARBOR SAYING THAT THE JAPANESE HAD ORDERED ITS CONSULS TO DESTROY THEIR CODES. SHORT WAS THE ARMY COMMANDER IN HAWAII AT THE TIME OF THE ATTACK.

LABOR MATTERS CAME IN FOR A BIG SHARE OF CONGRESSIONAL ATTENTION AS A RESULT OF THE FAILURE OF LAST MONTH'S LABOR-MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE TO COME UP WITH A REAL SOLUTION TO RECONVERSION PROBLEMS.

A57WX

REP.COX (D-GA) SAID HE PLANS TO CALL UP FOR AN EARLY HOUSE VOTE A BILL THAT WOULD IMPOSE HEAVY PENALTIES ON UNIONS WHICH VIOLATE NO-STRIKE CLAUSES IN CONTRACTS.

ON THE OTHER HAND, A NUMBER OF LABOR LEADERS HAVE BEEN INVITED TO APPEAR BEFORE AN INFORMAL MEETING OF HOUSE MEMBERS TOMORROW TO GIVE THEIR VIEWS ON A MEASURE WHICH WOULD REMOVE PRESENT EXEMPTIONS FOR UNIONS FROM AN 11-YEAR-OLD ANTI-RACKETEERING ACT. THAT BILL HAS BEEN APPROVED BY THE HOUSE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE, BUT TOMORROW'S MEETING WAS CALLED BY CHAIRMAN SABATH (D-ILL) OF THE RULES COMMITTEE WHICH WILL HAVE TO STAMP ITS OKAY BEFORE THE HOUSE CAN VOTE ON IT.

AND SENATOR HATCH (D-NM) HAS SAID HE PLANS TO PRESS ANEW FOR ACTION ON A BILL HE SPONSORED WITH SENATOR BALL (R-MINN) TO ESTABLISH A BROAD NEW METHOD OF HANDLING LABOR DISPUTES.

THE UNITED NATIONS DEBATE MOVES INTO ITS SECOND WEEK WITH SENATOR DONNELL (R-MO) STILL INSISTING ANY AGREEMENT TO PROVIDE AMERICAN TROOPS FOR UNO'S WORLD POLICE FORCE SHOULD BE TREATED AS A TREATY. THIS WOULD REQUIRE A TWO-THIRDS SENATE VOTE RATHER THAN A MAJORITY OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE AS THE PENDING BILL PROVIDES.

(300) WASHINGTON, DEC. 3-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES HAS ASKED SWITZERLAND TO CUT DOWN ON EXPORTS OF WATCHES TO THE UNITED STATES AND FORMALLY HAS ANNOUNCED THAT FACT TODAY.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT WAS IMMEDIATELY ATTACKED BY WALTER W.CENERAZZO, OF BOSTON AND WALTHAM, MASS., WHO CALLED IT A "WEASEL-WORDED" STATEMENT.

CENERAZZO MARCHED INTO THE STATE DEPARTMENT PRESS ROOM, IDENTIFIED HIMSELF AS NATIONAL PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN WATCH WORKERS UNIONS, AND READ REPORTERS A COPY OF THE STATEMENT BEFORE THE DEPARTMENT GOT AROUND TO ISSUING IT.

CENERAZZO SAID THAT SINCE THE DEPARTMENT HAS NO POWER TO FIX QUOTAS ON IMPORTS WHAT IT ACTUALLY HAS HAD TO DO IS ASK THE SWISS GOVERNMENT TO IMPOSE A LIMITATION ON ITS WATCH EXPORTS IN ORDER TO HELP PROTECT THE DOMESTIC WATCH INDUSTRY HERE. THIS INDUSTRY IS CENTERED AT ELGIN, ILL.; WALTHAM, MASS., AND LANCASTER, PA.

CENERAZZO SAID THAT THERE ARE MORE THAN 500 SWISS WATCH IMPORTERS IN THE UNITED STATES TODAY COMPARED WITH 50 IN 1940. HE SAID THAT 28,000,000 WATCHES HAVE COME IN TO THE UNITED STATES SINCE THE START OF THE WAR AND THAT THEY REPRESENT THE EQUIVALENT OF 14 YEARS' EMPLOYMENT FOR 8,000 WATCHWORKERS HERE. HIS UNION, HE DECLARED, WANTS A TOP QUOTA OF 2,000,000 IMPORTED WATCHES A YEAR. ACTUAL IMPORTS IN OCTOBER ALONE, HE SAID, AMOUNTED TO 2,100,000.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCEMENT DEALT IN GENERALITIES AND IT WAS FOR THAT REASON, CENERAZZO SAID, THAT HE CONSIDERED IT "WEASEL WORDED." THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID THAT A NOTE HAD BEEN HANDED TO SWISS MINISTER CHARLES BRUGGMANN EXPRESSING CONCERN OVER THE INCREASE IN SWISS WATCH IMPORTS AND PROPOSING A LIMITATION "DURING THE PERIOD OF RECONVERSION OF THE DOMESTIC WATCH MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY."

CENERRAZO SAID THAT IF NO EFFECTIVE ACTION WERE TAKEN BY DEC. 15 HIS UNION WOULD BEGIN PICKETING THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, DEC. 3-(AP)-SENATOR MC CARRAN (D-NEV) INTRODUCED TODAY LEGISLATION TO CREATE A SINGLE, GOVERNMENT-SUPPORTED INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORT COMPANY FOR OPERATIONS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

MC CARRAN EXPLAINED THE MEASURE IS A SUBSTITUTE FOR PREVIOUS PROPOSALS TO MERGE ALL COMMERCIAL LINES FLYING INTERNATIONAL ROUTES.

30.27-32105

THE SUBSTITUTE, HE SAID, WOULD PERMIT RAILROADS AND STEAMSHIP LINES TO PARTICIPATE IN A COMPANY FORMED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS BOARD. NO COMPANY OR INDIVIDUAL COULD OWN MORE THAN 2 PER CENT OF THE PROPOSED "ALL-AMERICAN FLAG LINE" COMMON STOCK UNDER THE TERMS OF HIS MEASURE.

MC CARRAN DECLARED THAT FOREIGN NATIONS WILL PLAY ONE AMERICAN COMPANY AGAINST ANOTHER UNLESS THERE IS A CONSOLIDATION OF INTERNATIONAL CARRIERS.

IF THE UNITED STATES PERSISTS IN A POLICY OF COMPETITION IN THIS FIELD, MC CARRAN TOLD HIS COLLEAGUES "WE SHALL FIND OURSELVES IN A VERY SHORT TIME EITHER SQUARELY BEHIND THE EIGHT-BALL OF INTERNATIONAL POWER POLITICS OR UNWILLING PARTICIPANTS IN A SHOT-GUN WEDDING WITH FOREIGN CARTELS."

NEW YORK, DEC 3-(AP)-THE NEW YORK JOURNAL-AMERICAN SAID TODAY IN A COPYRIGHTED STORY THAT FOR THE LAST TWO YEARS THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION HAS BEEN TRAILING A RUSSIAN SECRET SERVICE AGENT "WHO, IT IS BELIEVED, MAY HAVE OBTAINED ATOMIC BOMB SECRETS."

THE NEW YORK FBI OFFICE SAID IT HAD NO COMMENT ON THE STORY.

THE PAPER SAID FBI AGENTS FOUND A PACKAGE IN THE AGENT'S ROOM IN CHICAGO IN 1943 THAT "WAS FOUND TO CONTAIN HIGHLY CONFIDENTIAL DETAILS OF ATOMIC DEVELOPMENT."

THE PAPER SAID THE AGENT WAS LIVING NOW IN A MIDTOWN HOTEL AND WAS SURROUNDED BY A SQUAD OF FBI MEN, OPERATING ON A 24-HOUR BASIS. IT DID NOT GIVE HIS NAME.

THE JOURNAL-AMERICAN SAID THE AGENT ENTERED THE UNITED STATES FROM CANADA IN 1938 AND CARRIED FORGED PASSPORTS. THE MAN FIRST APPEARED IN THE UNITED STATES IN 1931 AS A MEMBER OF A SOVIET PURCHASING COMMISSION, BUT RETURNED TO MOSCOW THE SAME YEAR, THE PAPER ADDED.

THE NEWSPAPER RELATED THAT THE MAN WAS "EMPLOYED" BY AN OBSCURE MUSIC SHOP ON FIFTH AVENUE HERE AT $75 A WEEK, BUT HAD ACCOUNTS RUNNING INTO THE THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN MANHATTAN BANKS.

THE PAPER SAID THE FBI FIRST GOT ON THE TRAIL OF THE MAN IN CHICAGO, IN 1943, ADDING:

"A SCIENTIST, WORKING ON ATOMIC BOMB DEVELOPMENT IN A CHICAGO LABORATORY, HAD BEEN SUSPECTED BY MILITARY INTELLIGENCE OFFICIALS. UNWITTINGLY, THIS SCIENTIST LED THE FBI TO THE MAN.

"THIS SCIENTIST XXX HAD GONE FOR A WALK THROUGH A PARK. HE WAS TRAILED BY TWO MILITARY INTELLIGENCE OFFICERS ASSIGNED TO WATCH ALL HIS ACTIVITIES. THE SCIENTIST WAS SEEN TO STOP AND HAND A SECOND MAN A PACKAGE. NO WORDS WERE EXCHANGED. XXX

"THAT NIGHT, WHILE THE MAN WAS OUT OF HIS ROOM, THE FBI ENTERED IT AND FOUND THE PACKAGE. THIS PACKAGE WAS RUSHED TO WASHIGTON AND INSPECTED BY SCIENTIST ASSIGNED TO THE ATOMIC BOMB PROJECT. "IT WAS FOUND TO CONTAIN HIGHLY CONFIDENTIAL DETAILS OF ATOMIC BOMB DEVELOPMENT."

A10

THE JOURNAL-AMERICAN SAID THE SCIENTIST WAS IMMEDIATELY INDUCTED INTO THE ARMY, "AS WERE MORE THAN 100 OTHER PERSONS SUBSEQUENTLY BELIEVED GUILTY OF PASSING OUT INFORMATION ON THE ATOMIC BOMB. THIS SCIENTIST IS NOW STATIONED ON AN OBSCURE SOUTH PACIFIC ISLAND WHERE HE CAN BE WATCHED."

THE PAPER SAID THE AGENT MADE ONE ATTEMPT TO ELUDE THE FBI AND GET TO PORTLAND, ORE., TO BOARD A SOVIET SHIP. THE FBI TRAILED HIM BY PLANTING SCORES OF AGENTS ON THE TRAIL AS MEMBERS OF THE CREW AND AS PASSENGERS, WHO RODE IN FRONT AND BEHIND THE MAN, THE ACCOUNT CONTINUED. WHEN THE MAN GOT TO PORTLAND HE TOOK A BRIEF CASE AND HEADED FOR THE DOCKS.

"MEANWHILE, THE FBI HAD NOTIFIED THE STATE DEPARTMENT THAT THE MAN WAS ATTEMPTING TO LEAVE THE COUNTRY AND IT WAS BELIEVED HE MIGHT HAVE ATOMIC BOMB SECRETS IN HIS POSSESSION," THE PAPER SAID. "THE FBI REQUESTED PERMISSION TO ARREST THE MAN FOR ESPIONAGE. THE MAN WAS NOT ARRESTED."

THE ACCOUNT RELATED THAT THE AGENT SAW MORE THAN 100 FBI MEN AROUND THE DOCKS, TURNED AWAY AND AFTER SEVERAL UNSUCCESSFUL ATTEMPTS TO SHAKE THEM OFF, TOOK A TRAIN BACK TO NEW YORK WHERE HE "MADE NO FURTHER EFFORTS TO ESCAPE AND RESUMED HIS CAUTIOUS WORK WITH 'CONTACTS.'"

IRAN PREMIER MAY RESIGN

Russian Offers Proposal To Solve Azerbaijan Crisis

L. HERALD

Tehran, Dec. 4 (AP)—Premier Hakimi threatened today to resign unless the Azerbaijan province dispute was settled by direct negotiations with Russia, and a Foreign Office spokesman later said a Soviet representative in Tehran had made a "private proposal" concerning the crisis in troubled Northwest Iran.

The spokesman said the Cabinet had been called into emergency session to consider the Soviet proposal. This formula was said to provide that the Russians would meet certain Iranian wishes if Iran treated the Azerbaijan question as a matter concerning only Iran and the Soviet Union.

Appeasement Regime Seen

Insisting on direct negotiation with the Russians, Hakimi refused to attend a session of Parliament to report on Azerbaijan, where the Government charges rebels have started a separatist movement.

Moscow has refused an Iranian demand for permission to move Iranian troops into Azerbaijan, one of the northern areas occupied by Soviet forces.

Parliament members said Hakimi's resignation undoubtedly would be followed by formation of an appeasement government headed by former Premier Ghavam Sultaneh, described as pro-Soviet.

A Government spokesman said the new turn of events was influenced by the election of a council of nationals in Azerbaijan which would establish a new government in the province on Thursday.

Formation of an Azerbaijan militia was reported to have started in that province.

Putsch Reported Planned

[In Moscow, Tass dispatches based upon reports in Tehran newspapers said mass meetings of workers, peasants and persons of all classes were sweeping parts of northern Iran, denouncing persecution of democratic organizations and urging closer Soviet-Iranian relations.]

One parliamentary deputy, a member of the Tudeh party, which supports Azerbaijan claims for independence, asserted that Gen. Ibraham Arfaa, Iranian army chief of staff, and Sayyed Ziad, leader of the National Will party, were preparing a Putsch in Tehran, with support of the British.

The deputy said the crisis might become a pretext for further foreign intervention in Iran.

Authoritative sources said the nations of the Arab League were considering the advisability of promising assistance to the Iranian Government.

Pro-Soviet Assailed

Pro-Russian newspapers in Tehran attacked Ziad, an outspoken opponent of pro-Soviet policy, and demanded that he leave the country.

"I am prepared to leave my country," Ziad replied, "even to commit suicide, if I can be certain it will lead to a change in Russian policy."

High Government circles said Russia would be pleased if a new government was set up by Sultaneh, and added that it would be a major diplomatic defeat for Britain and the United States.

At the same time, authorities were said to be considering requesting appointment of a commission made up of Britons, Americans and Russians, to determine whether the Russian refusal to permit Iranian troops into Azerabaijan constituted intervention in Iran.

DEC 5 1945

Iran Premier May Resign

Tehran, Dec. 4 (AP) — Iranian Prime Minister Hakimi announced today he would resign if he were unsuccessful in reaching by direct negotiation an agreement with the Soviet Union on settlement of the Azerbaijan Province dispute.

In the midst of a tense political situation, Hakimi declined to attend a session of the Iranian Parliament to report on conditions in the northwestern province, where insurgent forces are demanding local autonomy within the Iranian state and where Russian garrison commanders have persisted in refusal to permit entrance of Iranian Government reinforcements.

Parliament members said Hakimi's resignation would be undoubtedly followed swiftly by the formation of a government of appeasement under Quavamus Sultaneh.

To Continue Negotiation

Hakimi himself said he would continue his direct negotiation with Moscow. The Government has told Moscow it is ready to discuss the local autonomy demand as soon as order is restored.

[A Moscow dispatch, quoting a Tass news agency account from Tehran, said thousands of workers, peasants, intellectuals and others had attended mass meetings in northern Iranian towns.

[These assemblages passed resolutions, the dispatch said, demanding, among other things, self-administration, an end to what was called "persecution of democratic organizations" and the reopening of peoples' party clubs and trade unions.]

drawal of all Allied troops by January 1 left this country in a position of having supported strongly but in vain the Iranian Government's demand that Soviet forces stop interfering with the movement of Iranian troops.

There were no ways immediately apparent by which the United States might impress its views upon Moscow more emphatically.

Kept Diplomats Busy

It was this problem which had State Department diplomats busy today.

The department disclosed Russia's rejection of the proposal last night. Michael J. McDermott, department news officer, said American troops are still to be withdrawn by year's end. They are leaving now as rapidly as possible, he added.

The United States had told Russia and Britain that if their forces, which divided the country between them for strategic reasons during the war, would also get out now the danger of further incidents in Iran would be ended.

The British have not replied at all. The Russians are understood to have said that since they have already agreed with the British to withdraw by March 2—six months after the end of the Japanese War—they see no reason for changing the agreement.

What most American officials privately express fear about is the possibility that the things that happen from now on in Iran may show up in some measure as the oppression of a small nation by a great power.

Problem Of Azerbaijan

One specific issue still wide open is whether the Government at Tehran should be permitted to send its own troops into the province of Azerbaijan, where rebellious tribesmen and groups seeking self rule for that area began an uprising about three weeks ago. Thus far Russia has barred the way to the Iranian forces, thus denying them the right to enforce order.

One result of the dispute very likely may be the overthrow of the present regime at Tehran. There is considerable expectation here, too, that it might be replaced with a completely pro-Soviet administration. Should this occur, it almost certainly would be followed by charges that Russia had in some manner forced the change.

Impasse Over Iran Is Problem To D.C.

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—American officials studied possible new moves in the Iranian impasse today with little evident hope of bringing an early end to Big Three differences over Red Army activities there.

5-POWER CONFERENCE HINTED FOR JANUARY

LONDON, Dec. 4.—(AP) The British Press association, quoting "delegates to the United Nations preparatory commission," said tonight a five-power foreign secretaries' conference would be held soon, with President Truman possibly substituting for Secretary Byrnes.

A survey of delegates by Associated Press reporters failed to confirm the report.

According to the British Press association, the foreign secretaries of the United States (or President Truman), Britain, Russia, France and China will meet during the United Nations assembly in January.

SMALL NATIONS WIN POINT ON UNO

London, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Smaller nations, seeking a stronger voice in the operation of the United Nations Organization, scored a victory today with an agreement to make verbatim records of all private meetings of the proposed trusteeship council available to all UNO Powers.

Without a dissenting vote, a committee of the United Nations Preparatory Commission adopted an Egyptian proposal to open the records of the private Trusteeship Council meetings to all members of the UNO General Assembly.

Meanwhile, another committee prepared to debate the disputed Cuban proposal for representation of all fifty-one members on the Assembly's powerful Steering Committee.

Another committee rejected a Belgian proposal that would require the suspension of any member of the organization's secretariat who ran for political office in his own country. Rejection of this proposal kept intact the present rule that political candidates must resign their secretariat jobs.

The committee accepted a Canadian amendment that nations must not give to a retiring Secretary-General any post in which his confidential information may be used against other countries.

British Ask Definition Of 'Distance' Hauling

London, Dec. 4 (AP)—The British Road Haulage Association demanded today a definition of the Labor Government's plans for the nationalization of long-distance road transport.

Declaring that public ownership would mean the annihilation of approximately 60,000 little family businesses, the association said it was impossible for any system of nationalized transport to give the service now offered by private enterprise.

The association asked the Government to tell what was meant by "long-distance" transport—whether it meant distances exceeding 100 miles or less.

AIRBORNE DIVISION SENT TO LE HAVRE

PARIS, Dec. 4—(AP) The 82nd Airborne division has been ordered to the Le Havre staging area between Dec. 11 and 19, theater service forces headquarters said today. Advance elements will sail for home directly from Le Havre. Others will shuttle to England first.

The last elements of the 90th Infantry division arrived in the staging area near Marseille today to await shipment.

Redeployment boxscore:

75th and 79th infantry and Twelfth armored division—on the high seas.

36th infantry division—first elements on the high seas; the remainder in the staging area at Marseille.

89th infantry—in Le Havre staging area. Five thousand of its personnel will be shuttled to England today and by Dec. 7 be on their way home, with the remaining 10,000 to be shipped directly from Le Havre at a date not set.

16th corps—waiting in Le Havre staging area.

26th infantry—scheduled to arrive at the Marseille area from the Oise section this week.

Divisions alerted for shipment home but not yet moved to redeployment centers—29th, 100th, 84th and 18th infantry and Second armored divisions.

French Fight Centralization

PARIS, Dec. 4 (AP).—President Charles de Gaulle's Cabinet reiterated today France's opposition to the centralization of German administrative machinery—a French policy that has been the subject of American criticism.

Foreign Minister Georges Bidault said the French would not consent to the centralization of some aspects of German economic life until the determination of Germany's western boundaries.

SAYS JEWS FLEE RED FOR U. S. ZONE

Paris, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Joseph Schwartz, American Jewish relief administrator, said today that in spite of poor living conditions in the American zone of Germany, "up to several thousand" Jews are crossing into it from the Russian zone each month. Schwartz is director for Europe of the American Joint Distribution Committee. He has investigated the condition of Jews in Germany, Austria, Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia.

Of the 60,000 to 75,000 Jews in camps of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in Germany, the great majority now are concentrated in the American zone, he declared, adding that these Jews will constitute a major problem unless a home is found for them, and that they may attempt to pass into west European countries unable to handle them. "We are no nearer a solution now than right after the liberation," Schwartz asserted.

There has been considerable improvement in camp conditions in Germany, Austria and Italy, he continued, but overcrowding and inadequate clothing distribution remain serious problems. He estimated that 30,000 Jews would be without overcoats in Germany this winter. The Joint Distribution Committee's total relief budget of $28,000,000 for Europe this year has proved insufficient, at least $50,000,000 should be counted on for 1946, and there still remains in Eastern Europe, he declared, a "terrific amount of anti-Semitism on the part of the general population, and the governments are not secure enough to take measures that would be unpopular with this current opinion."

ALLIES BARE MOVE TO SMASH FARBEN

Berlin, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—The Allied Control Council published new laws today designed to smash the I. G. Farben trust forever and to outlaw German military training in any guise. Under the new measures, the legal title to the 300 Farben plants and other assets within Germany was vested in the control council. A special committee, composed of commanders of the four occupation zones, was created to supervise liquidation of the trust.

The council found the Farben trust knowingly and prominently engaged in "building up and maintaining German war potential." It said the new measures were to "insure that Germany will never again threaten her neighbors or the peace of the world."

The law prohibiting military training outlawed military schools, military and Nazi uniforms, militaristic parades and veterans' organizations.

Allies Open Drive On Berlin Vice

Berlin, Dec. 4 (AP)—The four powers occupying Germany, aided by German civilian police, are conducting a drive against vice and delinquency which is bringing in about 2,500 Berlin women and girls weekly.

Up to last week 50 per cent. of those examined had venereal diseases. Compulsory treatment is reducing this to about 25 per cent.

In launching the anti-vice drive, military government authorities are tackling what one senior American medical officer called "the greatest morals problem in the world."

Germans Shocked

He estimated there are 250,000 women of "easy virtue" in Berlin, among whom at least 60,000 are classified as professional or semi-professional prostitutes.

"These figures shock even the Germans," the medical officer said. "They reflect more than a moral breakdown—more nearly a chaos to which many factors contribute.

"To explain it one must first of all remember that the Nazis encouraged illegitimacy to promote the birth rate. And now here is a beaten-up city of 3,000,000 people occupied by armies of four nations.

"A Cheerless City"

"It is a city through which stream many thousands of refugees with many lost children, a city in which food and shelter are short, a city in which many thousands of women lost their men through death or imprisonment.

"Above all, it is a cheerless city in which, for most German girls, life has stopped, and the only way to get a cigarette or candy bar or get into a dance hall or night club is through an Allied soldier."

So the girls hang around soldier clubs, movies and other places visited by Allied troops, and that is where most raids are conducted.

Prostitution is not legally countenanced in Berlin.

Reds Closed 30,000 Places

At the time of the capitulation, there were some 18,000 known prostitutes and another 25,000 Heimliche, or secret prostitutes. When the Red Army marched in it closed some 30,000 bordellos.

In the American sector alone last week, raids brought in 817 girls and women. Those taken in raids are given physical examinations, and first offenders who are found healthy are released by the German police with a warning. Second offenders are fingerprinted, photographed and warned again. Third offenders are jailed.

Infected women are treated and, in some cases, hospitalized. Detention wards for compulsory treatment in the American sector contain 1,800 beds.

AMG To Open New Berlin Radio Station

Berlin, Dec. 4 (AP)—The American military government today announced plans to open a new radio station in Berlin designed especially to reach the German people.

The station is expected to begin operations about December 20 and will broadcast all its programs in German.

BRITON ASSAILS NAZIS AT TRIAL

"Naked" Aggression Laid To 20 "Murderers, Robbers"

Nuernberg, Germany, Dec. 4 (AP). The twenty Nazi leaders on trial must bear full responsibility for Germany's greatest wrong, the crime against peace, Britain's Attorney General, Sir Hartley Shawcross, told the international military tribunal today.

In the first presentation of the British case, Shawcross accused the defendants of piloting Germany into "naked and unashamed aggression, and declared he was determined to prove that persons who do this "do so with a halter around their necks."

"Murderers, Robbers And Frauds"

The one-time masters of Europe, described by Shawcross as "murderers, robbers and frauds," "squirmed under the weight of evidence as the British prosecutor traced step by step the German course of broken treaties, violated frontiers and ultimate carnage, which he said resulted from their cynical disregard for established international law.

"These men were no mere tools," Shawcross declared. "They are the men whose support had built Hitler up into the position of power he occupied. They are the men whose initiation and planning perhaps conceived and certainly made possible the acts of aggression made in Hitler's name."

"Law Of Nations" Cited

He said he intended to prove "that the waging of an aggressive war is not only a dangerous venture but a criminal one" and that he would do so by applying the "law of nations" which branded aggression as "an international crime before this tribunal was established."

He emphasized particularly the Kellogg-Briand pact, signed in Paris in 1928, pointing out that this agreement outlawing war as an instrument of national policy was never denounced by the Nazis and hence still stands as accepted international law.

"The pact of Paris is the law of nations," he declared. "This tribunal will enforce it."

By this line of approach, Shawcross evidently sought to destroy one of the principal defense arguments—that the tribunal must apply retroactive justice to find the defendants guilty.

"Lust And Sadism"

The four victorious powers who are trying the Nazi leaders, the British prosecutor said, "are content to be judged by the verdict of history" on their policy of "interpreting, declaring and supplementing the existing law."

Only in the final passages, when he assailed the surviving Nazi leaders with bitter accusations, did Shawcross's address become impassioned. Charging them with "lust and sadism" and "deliberate slaughter," he declared:

"Perhaps their guilt as murderers and robbers is of less importance and of less effect to future generations of mankind than their crime of fraud—the fraud by which they placed themselves in a position to do their murder and their robbery."

Bad Faith Charged

Shawcross repeatedly charged the Nazi regime with bad faith as he unfolded the story of the invasion of Poland, Norway, Denmark, The Netherlands, France, Belgium, Greece and Russia.

Armed conflict in these countries, provoked by German aggression, was preceded by the "bloodless" conquests of Austria, Czechoslovakia and Memel, he pointed out, but in each case the Germans acted in contravention of treaties and solemn promises.

Shawcross cited evidence to show how in each case the defendants indulged in double-talk to lull their victims, only to jump at their throats when preparations were completed.

"Treaties," he said, "seemed no longer matters of solemn obligation, but were entered into with complete cynicism as a means of deceiving other states of Germany's warlike intentions.

Ribbentrop Mentioned

"International conferences were no longer to be used as a means for securing pacific settlements, but as occasions for obtaining by blackmail demands which were eventually to be enlarged by war.

"So patent, indeed, did this eventually become that to be invited by the defendant Ribbentrop (former Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop) to enter into a nonaggression pact with Germany was almost a sign that Germany intended to attack the state concerned."

Stressing the individual responsibility of the defendants, Shawcross asserted:

"They are the men whose skill and cunning, whose labor and activity made it possible for the German Reich to tear up existing treaties, to enter into new ones and flout them, to reduce international negotiations to a hollow mockery and finally to march against the peoples of the world to secure that domination in which, as arrogant members of their self-styled master race, they professed their belief."

Second Count Involved

Shawcross's address, which was concluded only a few minutes before adjournment of today's session, dealt with Count Two of the indictment—crimes against the peace.

The United States has already presented most of the evidence on Count One—that the Nazis engaged in a conspiracy to wage aggressive war. The two remaining counts, charging war crimes and crimes against humanity, are to be prosecuted jointly by Russia and France.

Briton Calls Nazi Chiefs 'Killers, Robbers'

Nuernberg, Dec. 4 (AP)—The twenty once-mighty Nazi leaders on trial for their lives before an international tribunal were excoriated in the name of the British Commonwealth today as "murderers and robbers" personally and individually accountable for breaking the world's peace.

Opening the British case against Hermann Goering, Rudolf Hess, Joachim von Ribbentrop and their fellow members of the fallen clique, Sir Hartley Shawcross, attorney general of the United Kingdom, declared that the defendants had piloted Germany into "aggression, naked and unashamed," and plunged the world into an appallingly costly war.

Support Built Hitler

"These men were no mere willing tools," Shawcross said. "They are the men whose support had built Hitler up into the position of power he occupied. They are the men whose initiation and planning perhaps conceived and certainly made possible the acts of aggression made in Hitler's name."

The attorney general's 30,000-word address introduced the British citation of proof that the accused were guilty of crimes against the peace. The United States has concluded its presentation on the first of three other counts in the indictment—that the Nazis engaged in a conspiracy to wage a war of aggression. Two remaining counts, charging war crimes and crimes against humanity, are to be prosecuted jointly by Russia and France.

Violated World Law

Shawcross first sought to show that the Hitler gang violated firmly established international law through aggression and preparation for aggression.

Then, step by step, from the long-concealed words of the Nazis themselves, he traced the German course of broken treaties, violated frontiers and ultimate carnage and misery.

"Their lust and sadism," he said, "their deliberate slaughter and the degradation of so many millions of their fellow creatures that the imagination reels incomprehensibly, are but one side only of this matter.

"Perhaps their guilt as murderers and robbers is of less importance and of less effect to future generations of mankind than their crime of fraud—the fraud by which they placed themselves in a position to do their murder and their robbery.

Might End Civilization

"Should it be taken as a precedent of behavior in the conduct of international relations, its consequences to mankind will no less certainly lead to the end of civilized society."

Shawcross declared that the chief nations, forced to defend themselves against an outlaw Germany, therefore have established a tribunal so that the conduct of the Nazi leaders "may be exposed in its naked wickedness" and "in the hope that the conscience and good sense of all the world will see the consequences of such conduct."

He said the British Empire was determined to prove "that the waging of an aggressive war is not only a dangerous venture but a criminal one," and that "persons who, in violation of this law, plunge their own and other countries into an aggressive war do so with a halter around their necks."

Not "Law Of Victor"

It is Britain's view, Shawcross said, that this tribunal shall apply "not the law of the victor but the accepted principles of international usage," and shall finish "what the law of nations itself constituted an international crime before this tribunal was established."

He cited agreements beginning with the Hague Convention of 1899 and down through the years to the Locarno and other treaties signed by Germany—treaties outlawing war as an instrument of national policy.

Mentioning particularly the Kellogg-Briand pact, signed at Paris in 1928, Shawcross said it "has in no way been modified or replaced by the Charter of the United Nations."

"The Pact of Paris is the law of nations. This tribunal will enforce it," he declared.

Verdict Of History

"The victorious powers," he added, "in thus interpreting, declaring and supplementing the existing law, are content to be judged by the verdict of history."

He turned then to a detailed analysis of German moves and motives, asserting: "From the moment Hitler became Chancellor in 1933, with the defendant von Papen as Vice Chancellor, and with the defendant von Neurath as his Foreign Minister, the whole atmosphere of the world darkened."

"Treaties," Shawcross said, "seemed no longer matters of solemn obligation but were entered into with complete cynicism as a means of deceiving other states of Germany's warlike intentions."

"International conferences were no longer to be used as a means for securing Pacific settlements, but as occasions for obtaining by blackmail demands, which were eventually to be enlarged by war.

"So patent, indeed, did this eventually become that to be invited by the defendant Ribbentrop to enter into a nonaggression pact with Germany was almost a sign that Germany intended to attack the state concerned."

It was in 1937, Britain's chief prosecutor declared, that the German War Ministry issued a "directive for unified preparation for war" which said Germany "need not consider an attack from any side but must be ready for 'military exploitation of politically favorable opportunities should they occur.'"

"That phrase is no more than a euphemistic description of aggressive war," Shawcross asserted.

Pre-Munich Plan

Referring frequently to documents the Americans had cited—such as the "Green Plan" for the rape of Czechoslovakia, "foiled partially or at least delayed by the Munich agreement." Shawcross said Hitler and his pack "considered and accepted" the possibility that their aggressions might draw England and France into war.

"To force the neighbors of a state to take up arms to defend it against aggression in order to fulfill their obligations to it is to initiate aggressive war against those neighbors themselves," he declared.

"As far back as September, 1938, plans for an aggressive war against Poland, England and France were well in hand," Shawcross charged. "While Hitler, at Munich, was telling the world the German people wanted peace and had no more territorial problems in Europe, the staffs of his armed forces were already preparing plans."

"Elimination" Of England

The British Attorney General said that on July 16, 1940, Hitler issued a directive "to eliminate the English homeland as a base for carrying on the war against Germany," first by destroying the RAF and then by invasion.

When the effort failed, Shawcross continued, Hitler "turned back to the east and on June 22, 1941, German armed forces invaded Russia without warning, without a declaration of war."

This had been contemplated, the prosecutor declared, in a Hitler order of November 12, 1940, which said: "The German armed forces have to be ready to defeat Soviet Russia in a swift campaign before the end of the war against Great Britain."

Molotov's Visit

On that very day, said Shawcross, Molotov visited Berlin and a German Government communiqué reported there was "an atmosphere of mutual trust" about his visit.

"The truth was," Shawcross declared, "that the elimination of Russia as a political opponent and the incorporation of the Russian territory in the German Lebensraum had long been one of the cardinal features of Nazi policy."

70 REPORTERS SICK AT TRIAL

Dysentery Strikes Press at Nuernberg.

Nuernberg, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—At least seventy of the 400-odd correspondents covering the International Military Tribunal's war crimes trial are suffering from a form of dysentary which United States Army investigators have been unable to trace.

The correspondents are housed in the Faber (pencil manufacturer) Castle six miles from Nuernberg.

The cases are light and Dr. Irwin Grantz of Brooklyn, press camp physician, said only five cases of diarrhea had been registered. According to the records, there were also five correspondents at the 116th General Hospital, representing one case of jaundice, one case of glandular disorder, one case of kidney colic and two head colds.

Tells of Poor Meals.

An epidemic of influenza and dysentery has hit correspondents at the Nuernberg war crimes trial, according to Roy Porter, NBC reporter. Describing the situation as "serious" with the "epidemic spreading."

A medical investigation of the situation shows, he said, that a contributing reason may be that correspondents are not getting enough to eat. Meals served to representatives of the press of the victorious Allied nations "are reported to be below the calorie level that is being fed to some German prisoners of war," Porter said, pointing out that the responsibility for such conditions rests entirely with the American authorities who are hosts to the other nations participating in the trial.

This "serious medical situation," he said, "seems hard to understand, particularly since Gen. Eisenhower laid down a strict rule that priorities for the Nuernberg trial were to be given an A-1 rating."

JACKSON DENIES TRIAL CHARGE

Critic In Army-Navy Journal 'Distorts' Motive, He Says

Nuernberg, Dec. 4 (AP)—Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief United States prosecutor at the Nuernberg war-crimes trial, charged today that an Army-Navy Journal article criticizing the prosecution was a "distortion of the course of action we are pursuing."

"The author . . . has quite obviously never taken the pains to read my opening statement in this trial," Jackson said.

"I pointed out that we were not prosecuting these militarists for serving their country, but for mastering it and driving it to war; not for fighting a war, but for 'promoting it.'

"He (the author) obviously is not acquainted with the evidence which has been so far adduced against those defendants who belonged to the military.

Criminal Acts Cited

"In the prisoners' dock are represented several professions, including the law. These professional men are not being indicted or tried because they belonged to a 'profession' but for crimes, among others of planning an aggressive war which bathed the world in blood.

"One cannot defend his criminal acts on the ground that he is a soldier or a lawyer.

"I should have thought by now that no American could espouse immunity for the persons we have brought to trial. The GI's I know in Germany certainly do not feel that way.

"Nonsense To Me"

"The position of the author and those for whom he speaks so inaccurately seems to be that it is all right to punish somebody for illegal war-making, shooting American prisoners of war and murdering and enslaving civilians—so long as you don't get the men who actually did it. This makes nonsense to me."

What Editorial Said

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP).—"The Army and Navy Journal" said in an editorial:

"Proper resentment is being manifested in the Senate at the attempt of Associate Justice Jackson to establish in the Nuernberg trials a principle of international law under which professional soldiers, sailors and airmen shall be convicted as criminals on the mere ground of membership in high commands or general staffs.

"Doubtless this kind of blatherskite is due to Mr. Jackson's desire to let no guilty German escape, which accords with American as well as world wishes, but it is obvious that blanket condemnation such as he is seeking to obtain is violative of the very essence of justice.

"Moreover, it does not conform with civilized practice nor with the provisions set forth in The Hague Convention of 1907 and the Geneva Prisoners of War Treaty of 1929. . . .

"Outraged by the Jackson policy, Senator Wherry, Nebraska, in his resolution for inquiry into our entire foreign policy, called for examination of any conflict between policies being pursued by the Department of State and those pursued by our Army and Navy in any territory now occupied by our military forces. . . .

"It ill behooves Justice Jackson therefore to attempt to discredit it by misguided zeal and by lack of regard for fundamental principles, which, as a member of the Supreme Court of the United States, he should deem it his duty to uphold.

"He should be given instructions by the President to abandon a course that has no basis of justice, or the War and Navy Departments should condemn it, else gentlemen of ability and experience will not be disposed to hold or seek commissions."

War On Russia 'Defensive': Keitel

DEC 5 1945

[The Associated Press submitted a written list of questions to Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief military figure among the twenty German defendants in the Nuernberg war-crime trial. His attorney, Otto Nelte, read the questions to Keitel, noted down his answers, and returned them.]

DE LUCE AND NORGAARD

Nuernberg, Dec. 4 (AP)—Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Hitler's military shadow for seven years, asserted today that the German invasion of Russia, for which he signed his name on many orders, was "a preventive-defensive war."

Answering a list of questions submitted by the Associated Press, the 62-year-old professional soldier shrugged off responsibility for such tragedies as that in 1941 when "very many" hundreds of thousands of Russian war prisoners "died of exhaustion."

He cited no individual instance when he opposed Hitler's war plans, and stated that if the International Military Tribunal let him go free he would retire to his country estate in Brunswick province and write a book called "My Memories of Seven Years with Adolf Hitler."

Self-Righteous Tone

The coldly self-righteous tenor of Keitel's replies appeared to dismay even his elderly silver-haired legal defender, Otto Nelte, who said:

"The Field Marshal lost one son in the war, another was taken prisoner in the East and a third is in an American prison camp. But he comes of a long line of soldiers and nothing that has happened to Germany or his own family has changed his opinions."

Keitel was asked concerning the German treatment of Russian prisoners.

"I think the question concerns the transporting of Russian prisoners to Germany," was Keitel's answer. "In the encirclement battles of the Summer of 1941, hundreds of thousands of prisoners were taken who were mostly already completely exhausted because of the encirclement. Because of the destroyed railways it was impossible to transport these masses directly to Germany. Besides, many of these completely weakened an dhalf-starved people were no longer fit to march.

Food Difficulties

"Transport could only be started after the railways were put in order. For the same reason, and because of the gigantic masses of prisoners, there were also food difficulties. Many thousands of these soldiers escaped; but unfortunately, very many also died of exhaustion."

Asked what explanation he could give for the preparation of "Plan Barbarossa," the outline for the Russian invasion drafted seven months ahead of time and initialed by him, Keitel answered:

"About this, I wish at this time merely to say that after the fruitless conference between (Russian Foreign Commissar) Molotov and Hitler, although diplomatic negotiations were still continuing, reports constantly reached the high command of the Wehrmacht that preparations for war were noticeable on the Russian side. For example, the construction of sixty big airports near the Demarkation Line (in Poland).

"Hitler, therefore, believed he had to take corresponding preparatory measures which led to the attack of June 22, 1941. It was a preventive-defensive war."

To the question of what was behind his attorney's hint last Saturday that he may have acted mercifully toward French Gen. Henri Giraud and the latter's family, although a prosecution witness, Erwin Lahousen, swore that Keitel had demanded Giraud's murder, the accused responded:

"I personally evinced that respect for General Giraud which, in my opinion, one owes a courageous general. It goes without saying that, on the order of the Führer, every means had to be employed to recapture such an important war prisoner. We then tried through negotiations with Vichy to bring about General Giraud's voluntary return to imprisonment.

Orders For Safe-Conduct

"I personally gave orders that General Giraud, who had come for a conference to a part of France occupied by us, be given safe conduct for his return to unoccupied France. We understood no measures of any sort to exert pressure upon his family, who lived in unoccupied France."

To the question, "Were you ever in opposition to any of the Führer's war plans?" Keitel answered:

"I must observe that I never figured in the strategic war plans of the Führer. These he discussed exclusively with the leadership staff of the Wehrmacht (codefendant Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl was chief of this sectional staff, while Keitel officially was chief of the Wehrmacht high command). Obviously, I had knowledge of them."

PW Camp Conditions

Asked if the Wehrmacht High Command, of which he was at least titular chief, was responsible for starvation conditions in crowded and unsanitary prisoner-of-war camps inside Germany, Keitel declared:

"The Wehrmacht High Command was responsible for the care of all war prisoners in the home area until August, 1944. At that time, the Führer handed over this task to the commander of the Home Army—Heinrich Himmler."

'3d Degree' Charge At Dachau

Dachau, Germany, Dec. 4 (AP)—Two defendants charged from the witness stand today that they were mistreated by United States officers who obtained written statements used against them in the Dachau atrocity trial.

Both Germans repudiated their statements which contained admissions of complicity in cruelties at the concentration camp.

Alfred Kramer testified he was "beaten on the head with sticks and rubber hoses by a counterintelligence officer until I broke down." He said he could not name the officer.

Accuses Lieutenant

Dr. Anton Witteler declared Lieut. Paul C. Guth, of Kew Gardens, Long Island, N.Y., interrogated him eight and one half hours, forcing him to stand under the bright glare of an electric lamp until 1.30 P.M., after Witteler had gone without food the previous day.

Guth, a war crimes investigator assisting the prosecution, sat at a counsel table a few feet away as Witteler testified. Witteler said Guth called him a "swine, criminal, murderer and liar." He said Guth declared: "We will march a battalion of SS men past you and they'll spit at you."

Then Signed, He Says

"When I found the interrogation would end that way, I signed a statement which had been prepared in another room," Witteler said.

Guth left the courtroom briefly and returned with a small desk lamp. Witteler, on cross-examination, first insisted it was not the lamp used, but finally conceded it was "possible."

U.S. TO BOOST GERMAN FOOD

Will Import Rations Into Country Starting January 1

KING

Stuttgart, Germany, Dec. 4 (AP)—The United States will import food into Germany to raise the German food ration, effective January 1, Lieut. Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today in declaring that "hunger and starvation have never been the United States' objective."

The foodstuffs to be paid for when "Germany is able to pay," would be sufficient to increase the daily average ration of Germans in the United States occupation zone to 1,550 calories, Clay, deputy American military governor for Germany, told a meeting of the German Council of State Minister Presidents.

Last October 15, the United States Military Government set the average German civilian ration for the coming weeks at 1,345 calories.

Other Developments

Other developments during the day were:

Publication by the Allied Control Council in Berlin of new laws outlawing military education and giving the council legal title to the 300 plants and other assets of the I. G. Farben trust, Germany's greatest war-production combine.

Agreement was reported among the four occupying powers on a unified de-Nazification policy, designed to blunt growing German attempts to play one of the powers against another by spreading rumors of lax treatment in other zones.

Brig. Gen. William Draper, chief of the American Military Government's economic division, told a meeting of German finance officials that the "economic future of Germany must be solved by the Germans themselves."

Transportation No. 1 Problem

Transportation still stands out as the main problem, he said in disclosing that from five to six million tons of coal were above ground in the Ruhr, but could not be moved because of rolling-stock shortages.

Clay announced that the control of railroads in the American zone, which had been under direct supervision of the Army, would be turned over to the military government January 1.

"The needs and demands of our army must be met," he told the minister presidents, "but it is our view that you people who have the incentive to rehabilitate your country should be able to get better results in the future than we have been able to get in the past."

The law giving the Allied Control Council title to the I. G. Farben properties creates a special committee composed of the commanders of the four occupation zones to serve as a Farben control group.

Nazi Uniforms Outlawed

The council said it had found the Farben trust guilty of "knowingly and prominently engaging in building up and maintaining the German war potential," and declared the law had been enacted "to insure that Germany will never again threaten her neighbors or the peace of the world."

The anti-military training law outlaws all military educational institutions, forbids all military or Nazi uniforms and bans militaristic sports, parades and veterans' organizations.

Meanwhile, the military government stated that the food situation in the American zone in Berlin had passed the critical semi-emergency stage and, with reserves on hand, the problem now is merely one of routine supply.

It was said, however, that despite reserves accumulated in many staples, Berliners in the American zone are not expected to receive extra rations for Christmas, which have been announced in other parts of Germany.

U. S. TO SHIP FOOD TO REICH ON CREDIT

Stuttgart, Germany, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—The United States intends to move enough food into Germany to assure an average of 1,550 calories for every one,

30.24—32111

Lieut.-Gen. Lucius C. Clay, the American Military Governor for Germany, said today. "Hunger and starvation have never been the objective of the United States," Clay told a meeting of the German officials in the American zone.

"We will approve, with the start of the January 1 ration period, a 1,550-calory average ration for all. My Government will support this by sending food from the United States, the cost of which will be paid for when Germany is able to pay."

Clay also said that the control of railroads in the American zone, which has been under the direct command of the Army, would be turned over to the Military Government at the first of the year. "The needs and demands of our Army must be met but it is our view that you people who have the incentive to rehabilitate your country should be able to get better results in the future than we have been able to get in the past," Clay said.

Amsterdam Exchange to Open

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 4 (AP).—The newspapers "Het Parool" and "Trouwun" reported today they had learned on good authority that the Amsterdam Stock Exchange would reopen Dec. 10, as the last of the continental financial centers to do so. "Het Parool" said further that trade would begin in a limited number of domestic stocks which would be increased gradually to about 300. The paper called the reopening the end of "a most undesirable situation."

U.S. Army Officer Hunted In Poland

Skoke, Poland, Dec. 2 [AP—Delayed] — Col. Walter Bashlow, United States military attaché, and the chief of the Polish militia here are attempting to determine the whereabouts of Lieut. David Millice, of St. Louis, liberated by Soviet troops from Oflag 64, a Nazi prison camp, and reportedly brought to a hospital in Skoke to recover from pneumonia.

He is not listed in any of the hospital records here, and it is believed he was with a Soviet hospital field unit which moved months ago.

Quisling Minister to Die

OSLO, Norway, Dec. 4 (AP)—Albert W. Hagelin, Minister of Interior in Vidkun Quisling's puppet government, was convicted today of treason and sentenced by a war-crimes tribunal to be shot. In addition, the court decreed that Hagelin must pay 1,000,000 kroner [about $200,000] as compensation to the Norwegian state.

Tass Assails French Reports

MOSCOW, Dec. 4 (AP).—The Tass news agency denied today what it said were false reports published in France that the Soviet Ambassador to the United States, Andrei A. Gromyko, has been instructed to oppose another meeting of the Big Three, to answer evasively on other matters such as the proposed end of German occupation by Jan. 1, 1949, and to insist on a control council for the Far East like the one in Berlin. An early musical program over the Moscow radio was interrupted to broadcast the Tass denial, which also was printed in morning papers.

Polish City Honors Roosevelt And Hoover

Poznan, Poland, Dec. 4 (AP)—The city council has issued a decree renaming the two principal squares in Poznan in honor of Franklin D. Roosevelt and Herbert Hoover.

Most Polish cities have streets named after Generalissimo Stalin and the Red Army, but this is the first reported to have accorded a similar honor to any American since the war.

Soviet Says British Foster Foe's Units

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 4—The Soviet Union has protested in a memorandum to the Allied Control Council in Berlin that some German military, naval and air force commands have been continued in existence in the British occupation zone in Germany.

In a dispatch from Berlin a correspondent for the newspaper Izvestia quoted the memorandum, which said the German units had more than 200,000 men. The dispatch said the Russians also had protested that 1,000,000 German soldiers in Schleswig-Holstein had not been transferred to the status of war prisoners and that Hungarian and Baltic states' military units had not been disbanded.

De Gasperi Now Premier Of Italy

Rome, Dec. 4 (AP)—Alcide de Gasperi became Premier of Italy today after a nine-day Government crisis, and was expected to announce his new Cabinet soon.

The Christian Democrat leader was named Premier by Crown Prince Umberto, lieutenant general of the realm, after a Liberal party conference gave up a demand for the key Ministry of Interior and decided to enter the Government because of "great esteem for de Gasperi."

"We feel that he is the best man in Italy at this time," said the party secretary, Leone Cattani, "that he is the best man in Italy at this time."

De Gasperi was expected to retain the Foreign Ministry portfolio, which he held in the Cabinet of Premier Ferruccio Parri, who resigned when his coalition government was broken up by the withdrawal of the Liberals and Christian Democrats.

The Liberals reportedly demanded the ministries of industry, treasury and public works and transport—three key economic posts—as the price of their participation in the Government.

Native Of Trento

Vittorio Emanuel Orlando, aged World War I Premier, was understood to have been named as Vice Premier, as a result of Liberal party demands that a person not affiliated with any of the six coalition parties be a member of the Cabinet.

The much-disputed Interior Ministry was understood to have been given to the Socialists. Former Premiers Parri and Ivanoe Bonomi were believed to have been appointed ministers without portfolio.

De Gasperi, 64, represented Italy at the London Conference of Foreign Ministers. A native of Trento, he took part in the irrendentist movement in that region before World War I.

During the first World War he led the Italian parliamentary group in Vienna, having been elected to the Austrian Parliament in 1911. He became a leader of the Italian Popular party in 1921.

After the Italian armistice in September, 1943, de Gasperi represented the Christian Democrats in the Committee of National Liberation.

De Gasperi Picks New Italian Cabinet

Rome, Dec. 4 (AP) — Christian Democratic Leader Alcide de Gasperi announced today that he had succeeded in forming a new Italian Government, ending a nine-day political crisis.

The crisis was resolved after a six-hour wait for Liberal party support. It came when Liberal Party Secretary Leone Cattani announced his party, which lost its struggle for the key Ministry of the Interior, decided to enter the Government because of "great esteem for de Gasperi."

"We feel that he is the best man in Italy at this time," the Liberal party spokesman said.

Former Foreign Minister

De Gasperi, 64, was Foregin Minister in the Cabinet of Premier Ferruccio Parri, who resigned when his coalition government was broken by the withdrawal of the Liberals and the Christian Democrats.

It was understood that one of the Vice Premierships had been given to Vittorio Emanuel Orlando, aged World War I Premier, in line with a Liberal party demand for a representative in the Government not affiliated with any of the six coalition parties.

Parri and former Premier Ivanoe Bonomi were reported to have been appointed ministers without portfolio.

Socialists Named

The Ministry of the Interior, it was understood, went to a Socialist, along with a vice premiership. De Gasperi himself was expected to retain the Foreign Affairs portfolio.

The Liberals had left de Gasperi's offices at 9.30 P.M., yesterday to discuss the final decision with their own directorate, and did not return until 2.45 A.M. Five minutes later de Gasperi made his announcement and left for the Royal Palace to receive from Crown Prince Umberto, lieutenant general of the realm, the official designation as Premier.

Italy Frees Scalera Brothers

ROME, Dec. 4 (AP).—Michele and Salvatore Scalera, wealthy Rome contractors who were detained Nov. 2 for investigation of reports they financed Mussolini's 1922 "March on Rome," have been cleared of all charges and released by the high commissarat for the punishment of Fascist crimes.

One Dead in Italian Jail Riot

PADUA, Italy, Dec. 4 (AP)—Gunfire by guards quelled 500 prisoners accused of political crimes under Fascism after a five-hour riot that started as a protest over the quality of food served at noon today. One prisoner was killed.

Greece Ends Censorships.

Athens, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Censorship of private cables and letters was ended today by the Greek Cabinet.

Greek Regime Loses Support Of EAM

Athens, Dec. 4 (AP)—The Leftist EAM (National Liberation Front) central committee announced today it was withdrawing its support of Greece's new government headed by Premier Themistokles Sophoulis.

Earlier, Sophoulis had announced that Greek elections—originally scheduled for January 20—would be held March 31. The EAM move was met with the comment from a government spokesman that the Left Wing party's support had "never been asked for."

HOXHA PARTY IN SWEEP

Captures All Assembly Seats in Albanian Election Triumph

TIRANA, Albania, Dec. 4 (AP)—Premier Gen. Enver Hoxha's Democratic Front party, the only ticket in last Sunday's elections, won all eighty-two seats in the voting for Albania's constituent Assembly, official returns disclosed today. The Democratic Front polled more than 95 per cent of all votes.

Of the 603,556 persons eligible to vote in the first Albanian elections in twenty-four years, 555,271 cast ballots. No date yet has been set for the first meeting of the Assembly which will draft a new Constitution and determine the method of selecting the chief of state.

At a press conference General Hoxha said that Albania demanded the right to participate in international organizations.

Nearly 20,000 Riot In Istanbul

Istanbul, Dec. 4 (AP)—Nearly 20,000 rioters—chiefly university and high-school students—wrecked two Istanbul newspaper plants and at least two book stores in what police called a sudden violent anti-Communistic demonstration today.

The crowd showed little signs of dispersing as soldiers and hundreds of police patrolled the city early this afternoon.

Newspapers destroyed were Tan, which had been critical of the Government, and La Turquie, a French-language publication. Also wrecked was a bookstore near Tacsim circle and one on newspaper row.

Flags appeared swiftly on store fronts along Beyoglu street, Istanbul's Fifth avenue, as the throng marched toward Tacsim circle. Steel shutters clanged down, covering store windows, and the street filled quickly with demonstrators.

CHINESE SEIZE 70 JAP PLANES

Communists Reported To Have Air Force In North

Chungking, Dec. 4 (AP)—Rumors of a Chinese Communist air force in northern Manchuria and charges of mass conscription for Nationalist forces kept the threat of renewed civil war alive in China today.

Lieut. Gen. Tu Yu-ming's Nationalist troops seized 70 former Japanese airplanes in a surprise raid yesterday on a Communist airdrome near Chinhsien, 130 miles southwest of Mukden, Olen Clements, Associated Press correspondent reported. He said all were in operating condition. Rumors drifting down from Harbin said Communists had more planes and were ready to use them against Tu's forces.

Advance elements of Tu's armies were 30 miles from Mukden, waiting a go-ahead signal from Russian forces before moving into the capital.

Independent Army Moves In

Chinese press dispatches said Gen. Chang Hsu-shih had already moved into the city with his independent army and was waiting to welcome Tu. Chang is the brother of Marshal Chang Hsueh-ljang, who once kidnapped Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Communist quarters in Chungking charged that the Nationalists were carrying out large-scale conscription in six North China provinces to increase their forces for civil war. The Communists said a mark of 100,000 men was set in Honan province alone. No figures were mentioned for the other provinces—Shansi, Hopei, Shantung, Suiyuan and Anhwei.

The same sources asserted Nationalist armies reinforced Tatung, North Shansi railway junction, to collaborate with "Japanese and puppets" in an attack on Communist-held area. The Nationalist version is that Tatung is under siege by Communists and reinforcements must be sent to relieve the defenders.

Claim Chiang Plans Drive

Another Communist report said Generalissimo Chiang's forces were planning an offensive against the Communist-held ports of Chefoo, Weihaiwei and Lunghow in northern Shantung.

A delayed dispatch from John Roderick, Associated Press correspondent at Yenan, said Communist headquarters feared the Kuomintang (Chiang's Nationalist party) might be using forthcoming peace talks as a stalling tactic while preparing for all-out civil war. Nevertheless the Communists were preparing to send delegates. They will leave Yenan in about a week.

A wholly unconfirmed report received in Chinhsien said the Communist capital at Yenan had been bombed, and leaders fled to Calgan.

Another unconfirmed Chinhsien report said Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault, former head of China's Flying Tigers, would return to head a Nationalist air force.

Anti-civil war rallies at Kunming cost four lives Saturday when a retired soldier threw a hand grenade among demonstrating students.

U.S. Policies On China Defined For Congress

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—Secretary Byrnes has given Congress a statement of American policy in China—"We favor the creation of a strong, united and democratic China which will contribute to peace and stability in the Far East."

Representative Anderson (R., Cal.) today made public a letter in which the Secretary outlined the policy.

Byrnes declared that China must solve her internal problems largely through her own efforts. He added that "we seek by all appropriate and practicable means to pursue such policies and action as will best facilitate that purpose."

Collaboration among China, the United States, Great Britain and Soviet Russia is essential to keeping peace in the Far East, the secretary said, adding:

"Such collaboration among these and other peace-loving nations should extend to all legitimate fields of economic and other endeavor on the basis of equality of opportunity and respect for national sovereignty."

Anderson congratulated Byrnes "for his forthright enunciation" in a statement submitting the letter to the House.

TEXT OF BYRNES LETTER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—The text of Secretary of State Byrnes' letter to Representative Anderson is as follows:

Nov. 30, 1945.

My dear Mr. Anderson:

I have received your letter of Nov. 17, 1945, requesting information in regard to our policy toward China.

In response to your inquiry, I should like to offer the following brief comment on this subject:

We favor the creation of a strong, united and democratic China which will contribute to peace and stability in the Far East and which will enable China effectively to support the United Nations Organization.

In line with this policy we deem it desirable and essential that China solve her internal problems. While we recognize that this is a task which China must carry out largely through her own efforts, we seek by all appropriate and practicable means to pursue such policies and action as will best facilitate China's achievement of internal unity and stability.

Among the means toward this end we propose, with due regard for the realities of the internal situation in China, to assist China to rehabilitate her devastated economy and to develop a higher standard of living for her masses.

We have to enhance China's international status, as evidenced by the recognition accorded to China in connection with the San Francisco Conference. We feel that collaboration among China, the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union, is essential to the maintenance of peace and security in the Far East, and that such collaboration among these and other peace-loving nations should extend to all legitimate fields of economic and other endeavor on the basis of equality of opportunity and respect for national sovereignty. We hope that China, for her part, will further such collaboration by instituting and carrying out reasonable policies that lie before her.

During the course of the war it was our policy to assist our Chinese allies to the greatest possible extent in the joint prosecution of hostilities against Japan. Such assistance took the form of credits, the grant of civilian and military lend-lease supplies, the training and equipping of a limited number of Chinese military units, the utilization in China of our air forces, and other related activities. Since the capitulation of Japan we have been assisting our Chinese allies in effecting the surrender, disarmament and repatriation of the very substantial Japanese armed forces who are now in China.

I trust that the foregoing brief comment will indicate to you the broad lines of our policy, with respect to China and will enable you to reply to inquiries which you may have received from your constituents.

Thank you for your courtesy in writing.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES F. BYRNES,
Secretary of State.

Argentine Envoy In China

Chungking, Dec. 4 (AP)—José Arce, first Argentine Ambassador to China, presented his credentials today to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Chinese Reds Charge Hurley Favored Chiang

Paper Says He Repudiated Pact He Made With Mao on Ending Civil Strife

YENAN, China, Dec. 1 (delayed) (AP).—The Communist "Emancipation Daily News," giving the first semi-official reaction from this Communist headquarters to the recent resignation of Major General Patrick J. Hurley as American Ambassador to China, charged today that "it was quite clear" that Hurley was supporting the dictatorial policy of Chungking."

The newspaper said Hurley came to Yenan in October, 1944—in line with the Roosevelt policy laid down at Yalta of dealing with both Yenan and Chungking—and conferred for three days with Mao-Tsu-tung, the Communist leader, in Mao's cave. But after Mao and Hurley had drunk toasts in the hope that they had found the means for a peaceful coalition, Hurley later returned to Washington and made a statement repudiating what had been agreed upon, "The Emancipation Daily News" said. The newspaper added that it became clear that Hurley was supporting Chungking when he made his second trip to Yenan last August.

"Reactionaries in Chungking and abroad who want to investigate a civil war in China and a war with Russia admire Hurley's pre-resignation anti-American, anti-Chinese and anti-British statement. Hurley's resignation represented 'a triumph of the American people,'" the newspaper continued, adding the hope that General George C. Marshall, who succeeded Mr. Hurley, would listen to "the will of the American and Chinese people," and would "restore the policy of General Joseph W. Stillwell and former Ambassador Clarence E. Gauss."

Stillwell was recalled to Washington in October, 1944, from his position as adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, reportedly at the Generalissimo's insistence. American quarters in Chungking said at the time that Stillwell favored helping the Communitst 8th Route Army fight the Japanese.

Cent-A-Day Troops Rich In Manchuria

Lchinhsien, Manchuria, Dec. 4 (AP)—Chinese National troops, whose pay is worth 1 American cent in China proper, have found themselves "rich" men in Manchuria due to an exchange rate ten times more favorable.

Their Chinese currency was 1,000 dollars to an American dollar in Chungking but the current rate is 100 to 1.

Flush with the equivalent of 10 American cents a day, they have been buying fur coats at one American dollar each, fat chickens at 5 cents, steak at 5 cents a pound, and all kinds of souvenirs at similar bargain rates.

Revealed a Suicide.

Shanghai, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Col. Moriji Hottori, commander of the dreaded Japanese gendarmerie in Hankow, killed himself by taking poison on November 23 shortly before he was to have been arrested for the killing of three American flyers at Hankow last December. The War Crimes branch of the Army disclosed today that just before taking his life Hottori signed a statement admitting his part in the murders. The statement was found beside his bed in a hospital where he had been under treatment for a heart ailment.

The news of the suicide was withheld, it was stated, pending the completion of the questioning of thirty-five other Japanese arrested in Hankow and flown here to face War Crimes trials in the same case. The trials are expected to begin in two weeks. The Army said that Hottori would have been a principal defendant as the alleged planner of the humiliating parade of the captured flyers through the Hankow streets that preceded their torture and cremation.

MalayRubberShipments Listed

SINGAPORE, Dec. 4 (AP).—Malayan rubber shipments to the United States and Great Britain since the liberation totaled 25,000 tons up to Nov. 30, it was announced officially today.

BANDOENG AIDED BY AIR

Troops Flown In As Java Official Tries To Halt Strife

Batavia, Java, Dec. 4 (AP)—British reinforcements were sent to troubled Bandoeng by air today and Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian government declared he had sent representatives there to try to halt mounting disorders.

A British press statement said 40 persons, most of them Eurasians, were killed, injured or missing after their homes were set afire in Bandoeng during the last week. It declared fourteen persons were locked in a house yesterday by Indonesians and burned to death.

Mortar Fire Stops Attacks

Attacks on British headquarters in Bandoeng were dispersed yesterday by mortar fire, the British said.

The new disorders were disclosed even as an Indonesian radio station, calling itself "Revolt Bandoeng," broadcast today that British and Indonesian forces in a conference Sunday had reached an agreement for joint responsibility in maintaining order.

The radio said the agreement called for British troops and Indonesian police to guarantee the safety of all Dutch and Eurasians, who were to be concentrated in one sector of Bandoeng. The broadcast appealed to Indonesian youths to cease activities against the British.

Plans To Fly Battalion

The first airborne reinforcements took off this morning in twelve transport planes for the 75-mile hop to Bandoeng, the Dutch news agency Aneta said. The British were reported planning to fly an entire battalion of the Indian 4th Mahrattas to the city.

The only other military action reported was in the Semarang area, on the Java north coast, where the British said Indonesian concentrations south and southeast of the city were dispersed after being shelled by British naval units in Semarang harbor.

Sjahrir, inaugurating a series of regular weekly press conferences, said his Government was trying to control what he described as "extremists." He said he already had sent two officials to Bandoeng to urge restraint, and was attempting to halt inflammatory radio appeals by "extremists" groups in eastern Java.

Still Seek Full Independence

The Premier said that, although he still saw a possibility of coming to terms with the Dutch, the Indonesians considered full independence a "minimum requirement" for the restoration of peace in the Netherlands East Indies.

He said dominion status would not be considered by his people.

The Allied-controlled radio at Bandoeng said that total British and British Indian military casualties in Java up to December 2 were 845, including 131 killed, Aneta said.

'Extremist Groups' Blamed In Java

Batavia, Java, Dec. 4 (AP)—Sutan Sjahrir, Prime Minister of the unrecognized Indonesian republic, announced today his Government was attempting to control what he described as "extremist groups" in eastern Java, who, he said, were violently inciting the natives.

He also told a press conference that he had sent two representatives to stormy Bandoeng, Java's summer capital, in another effort to deal with "extremist" groups.

He repeated that the Indonesian republic would insist upon freedom and said he had noted signs that Netherlands Government representatives might afford some recognition of Indonesian demands.

14 Reported Burned To Death

A British official press statement said an Indonesian group in Bandoeng had locked fourteen persons in a house and then fired the building, burning all to death.

The British yesterday sent planes against a strong Indonesian force in the Bandoeng area, 75 miles southeast of Batavia. The planes were sent to aid a company of British Indian troops which finally succeeded in forcing an Indonesian withdrawal. Indonesian forces also had been reported massing at Semarang.

Sumatra Quiet

Despite expressed official fears that the political unrest might spread from Java to Sumatra, that island remained quiet. RAF personnel at the Padang and Palembang airbases said they had experienced no trouble with the Indonesians since a recent unorganized attack on an ammunition dump at Padang. In that incident the British employed Japanese troops to repulse the raiders.

In the cities of Padang and Palembang British Indian troops are guarding areas set apart for the safety of Dutch citizens, of whom 3,000 are housed at Padang and about 5,000 at Palembang.

26 Others Reported Killed

In addition to the fourteen persons declared burned to death in one house at Bandoeng the British statement said 26 others were killed, injured or missing as a result of fires set there within the past week. Most of the victims were described as Eurasians.

Twelve transport planes began operating a shuttle service this morning from Batavia, flying a battalion of British Indian reinforcements to Bandoeng, 75 miles to the southeast.

JAP LEADERS FEAR U. S. WILL EXPAND WAR CRIMES LIST

TOKYO, Dec. 4.—(AP) Still groggy from the shock of General MacArthur's latest list of wanted war criminal suspects, Japan's politicians and high military leaders pondered today the nation's urgent postwar problems with the uneasy realization that their own necks might soon be at stake.

The Diet, heartedly discussing the gloomy financial situation and the prospect of drastically increased taxes, was described in the Japanese press as stunned by the inclusion of 26 of its members on MacArthur's list, and apprehensive lest the dragnet be widened to take in more of them.

Field Marshal Shunroku Hata, member of the Supreme Military council and former commander-in-chief in China, who was named on MacArthur's list, solemnly stated that in his opinion a war-criminal suspect could choose hara-kiri or leave it alone—and still "save face" with the Japanese army. The stern-faced field marshal left no doubt that he intended to follow the second method.

The newspaper Yomiuri, whose President Matsutaro Shoriki was named on MacArthur's list, said "the present arrest demand certainly represents an advance for Japan's democratizing bloodless revolution."

Adm. Sankichi Takahashi, once commander-in-chief of the combined Japanese fleet, showed no surprise over the order for his arrest, and said bluntly:

"I am one of the persons responsible for the war."

Field Marshal Hata, in addition to disclosing his own lack of inclination to commit hara-kiri, put in a good word for Emperor Hirohito. He said Hirohito's personal intervention halted the execution of captured Doolittle airmen after three of them already had been beheaded.

The emperor, he said, learned of the three executions when they were reported by the army chief of staff, and immediately ordered that there be no further killings.

Jap Diet Hit Hard By Criminal List

Tokyo, Dec. 4 (AP)—The Diet, with 26 members named on General MacArthur's latest list of wanted war-criminal suspects, was portrayed today by one member as feeling "as if an incendiary big shell has dropped on a neighbor's house."

Under such a cloud, the nation's gloomy financial situation was discussed only halfheartedly. The Diet heard yesterday that heavy tax increases are ahead.

Kyodo news agency quoted Finance Minister Keizo Shibuzawa as saying the Government has decided to reimburse investors for the loss of Japanese assets estimated at approximately 110,000,000,000 yen (about $7,000,000,000) in Manchuria, China, Korea, Formosa, Sakhalin and Southern Pacific areas.

Assets Abroad To Be Seized

Presumably all Japanese assets abroad are to be seized for reparations.

Kyodo said MacArthur's Monday order for the arrest of 59 more suspects blew up "a war-criminal storm" in the Diet. It likened the list to "sticking a dagger into the heart of the Diet, which is trying to gloss over the situation by pulling out a war responsibility resolution."

Diet Members Uneasy

The newspaper Yomiuri said editorially:

"Diet members in general appeared to have given a sigh of relief when they ascertained for themselves their names were not listed. The members could not conceal the uneasiness in their minds although they previously pretended to be indifferent regarding Diet members' responsibility for the war."

Matsutaro Shoriki, president of Yomiuri, asserted he had done nothing to warrant trial by the Allies and blamed his inclusion on the list to dissident employés he said had given false reports to MacArthur's headquarters.

Scores Control Of Press

Shoriki asserted militarist dictation to newspapers, beginning ten years ago, had brought Japan to her present circumstances. "If there had been freedom of the press there wouldn't have been war," he said.

Employés of the newspaper have demanded that Shoriki resign and accept war responsibility. Today the paper said "the present arrest demand certainly represents an advance for Japan's democratizing bloodless revolution. . . . Especially the present list includes among those to be arrested gendarmerie leaders who secretly wielded strong power for suppression of speech and leaders in press circles."

Says Hirohito Saved U. S. Flyers

Hata Declares Emperor Blocked Killing of All of Captured Doolittle Men.

Tokyo, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Only the Emperor Hirohito's personal intercession prevented the execution of all American flyers captured in the April (1942) bombing of Tokyo, Field Marshal Shunroku Hata, former War Minister and chief aid de camp to the Emperor, said today.

Hata, named as a suspected war criminal in Gen. MacArthur's latest list of wanted men, said in an interview that the Emperor's order of clemency was issued around October, 1942, after three of the captured Doolittle flyers had been executed in Shanghai. Hata was Commander in Chief of all Japanese forces in China at that time.

He said that he was not sure whether ten or eleven Doolittle flyers were captured, but that the three executed in China were court-martialed by the Japanese Thirteenth Army and that its commander, Lieut.-Gen. Shigeru Sawada, must bear the responsibility. Sawada has already been imprisoned. After the crash, the three airmen were brought to Japan for questioning and then returned to China, the marshal said.

The Emperor learned of the executions when they were reported by the Army Chief of Staff, the late Field Marshal Gen. Sugiyama. Hirohito ordered no further killings.

As commander-in-chief, Hata said, he received only final reports on the China executions and "was not sure in my own mind whether this was a good policy." However, he took no disciplinary action.

Hata was one of the three men who chose Hideki Tojo to be War Minister in 1940 as "the unanimous choice" of the Army. "At the time there was no other man," Hata declared today, adding that Tojo—who is still his "good" friend—"did only what any other leader would have done under the circumstances." Hata said Japan felt it had to obtain oil, and the failure of economic negotiations with the United States in 1941, he added, left force the only alternative. He was War Minister at the time.

Hata—who, in an airraid shelter, survived the atomic bombing of Hiroshima also declared today: "As long as the United States hangs on to the atomic bomb, no other nation will start aggression and therefore peace will be assured, but I do not know what will happen if other nations acquire the bomb."

ing his interrogation by American officers.

Retired Gen. Toshizo Nishio told the Associated Press about a second meeting, held late in November or early in December when the Emperor informed the Supreme War council through the chiefs of staff that "Japan might have to fight if things didn't improve."

On each occasion, there was no opposition from the emperor or any other participant to militarist-sponsored plans for breaking the diplomatic deadlock with guns. Furthermore, there was no proposal to attempt solving the major stumbling block—removal of Japanese troops from China.

However, Nishio insisted that even in the supreme council meeting the key militarists failed to disclose details for the Pearl Harbor attack and "we didn't know when the war would start."

Konoye, then premier, said the Sept. 6 conference was called in response to growing militarist impatience with the Washington negotiations. Others attending were Adm. Teijiro Toyoda, Hideki Tojo, then war minister, Adm. Koshiro Oikawa, navy minister, General Gen Sugiyama and Adm. Osami Nagano, chiefs of staff.

HIROHITO ATTENDED WAR CONFERENCES

Emperor Knew in Advance of Decision to Attack U.S., Britain, Court Told.

TOKYO, Wednesday, Dec. 5—(AP) Late in 1941 at the Imperial palace, Emperor Hirohito personally attended at least two highly secret conferences on war with the United States and Great Britain—a war on which Japan virtually decided three months before Pearl Harbor—Japanese participants disclosed.

The first conference was the momentous Imperial conference of Sept. 6 at which it was decided that Japan would begin preparing for war in the middle of October unless there was marked improvement in negotiations at Washington. It has been authoritatively revealed that Prince Konoye described this meeting recently dur-

Special Dispensation Denied Jap Prince

Tokyo, Dec. 4 (AP)—Supreme headquarters announced today there would be no special dispensation for Prince Morimasa Nashimoto, first member of the imperial household named as a suspected war criminal.

Foreign Minister Shigeru Yoshida asked headquarters yesterday for a reprieve for the aged Prince, whose arrest had been ordered earlier in the day, along with 58 other prominent Japanese.

Four Below In Tokyo

Tokyo, Dec. 4 (AP)—The temperature dropped to four below zero in frost-covered Tokyo today—a new low for 1945, said Kyodo news agency.

Eichelberger To Leave Japan Today On Holiday

Yokohama, Dec. 4 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, commander of the United States 8th Army, leaves by bomber plane tomorrow for the United States on a short leave of absence.

"Mrs. Eichelberger and I haven't spent Christmas together since 1941 and I am heading for North Carolina and a quiet holiday," the General said. "I hope to sit in front of the fire, visit with a few friends and relax."

Lieut. Gen. C. P. Hall, commander of the 11th Corps, will command the 8th Army during Eichelberger's absence.

Lifelong Disabilities From Bombs Expected

Fukuoka, Japan, Dec. 4 (AP)—Japanese doctors at Kyushu Imperial University have told public relations correspondents of the United States 32d Infantry Division that atomic-bomb victims may suffer lifelong effects through blood and bone diseases and possibly sterility.

The physicians are conducting detailed studies of 38 victims under treatment.

Dr. Toichiro Sawada, the hospital head, said: "I think we can expect that all these atomic-bomb patients will experience after effects in the form of anemia and other ailments due to blood deficiencies, bone diseases and general lack of resistance to infection."

He said microscopic studies showed the disappearance of rebuilding properties among white blood corpuscles from the bone marrow.

Dr. Ryozo Hirohata, who studied at Columbia University and the University of California in the United States, is experimenting with intramuscular injections of liver extract. He also is trying considerable liver in the diet and whole blood plasma transfusions.

YAMASHITA AWAITS ACTION ON PETITION

MANILA, Dec. 4.—(AP) Prompt action from the United States Supreme court was anticipated today on Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's latest attempt to escape responsibility for the atrocities his troops committed in the Philippines.

Dispatches from Washington indicated the high court might rule next Monday on the Japanese general's petition to stop his military court trial in Manila and hear his case in Washington. The expected answer was "no."

Yamashita has tried every legal recourse to save himself. His latest plea, following the same pattern as an unsuccessful petition to the Philippines Supreme court, contended that the Philippines were not under military rule and therefore a military court was without jurisdiction.

Washington dispatches said the trial was considered to be a purely military matter, and not a concern of the supreme court.

The military court sitting here announced it would probably reach its verdict Friday after a month of hearing details of horrors committed by Yamashita's men.

Manila Bank Robbers Caught Within 8 Hours

Manila, Dec. 4 (AP)—A youthful gang of jeep-riding gunmen got away with a 413,000 peso ($206,500) bank robbery for eight hours today.

Four youths were arrested at nightfall with 399,000 pesos ($199,500) of the loot. They were tracked down by the jeep and the fact one of the gunmen had only one arm, said Col. J. P. Holland, provost marshal and Manila police chief.

The youths, armed with a submachine gun and army pistols, robbed two messengers at they left the Philippine Bank of Communications, and then sped away in a jeep.

Police still were searching for the 31,000 pesos ($15,500) unaccounted for.

4 Bandits Seized After Manila Bank Holdup

Manila, Dec. 4 (AP)—Four Manila youths armed with a sub-machine gun staged the biggest bank robbery in Philippine history today and were captured eight hours later with 399,000 pesos ($199,500) of the 430,000-peso haul. Police were searching for the 31,000 pesos ($15,000) still missing.

Col. J. P. Holland, provost marshal and Manila police chief, said the four roared up in a jeep just as two messengers were leaving the Philippine Bank of Communications, one of the largest in Manila. They pulled out United States pistols and the sub-machine gun, forced the messengers to hand over the money, and sped away.

Sharp-eyed witnesses later spotted the jeep and a one-armed youth they said was a member of the gang and tipped off United States Army authorities.

Arrested Without Fight

Military police closed in quickly and surrounded the four in a house in the suburb of Santa Ana. The suspects surrendered without firing a shot. A fifth man was arrested as a suspected accomplice.

The robbery took place at 9.15 A.M. as the unarmed clerks were transferring funds to the National City Bank. Police said protection during the transfer had not been asked by the Bank of Communications, which is the second largest Chinese bank here.

Lieutenants Win Praise

Holland gave credit for the quick arrests to Lieut. William D. Davis, of Alexanderia, La., and George Cannell, of San Jose, Cal., a former policeman.

Holland said the two officers began checking on one-armed Filipinos as soon as they got the witnesses' report and the trail led to the suburb.

In addition to the loot the squad of raiding military police reported they found a machine gun and pistols stolen from the United States Army.

His Biggest Case

Cannell admitted it was the biggest case he ever worked on. In San Jose he was a traffic accident investigator and "I never heard of that much money."

Davis had two years of law school before entering the Army but had no police experience before being sent to Manila.

Australians Try Jap In Borneo 'Death March'

Sydney, Dec. 4 (AP)—Japanese Sergt. Maj. Tsuruo Sugino has been charged before an Australian military court at Labuan, Borneo, with ordering a "death march" which cost the lives of 47 Allied prisoners of war, dispatches from Labuan said today.

He was accused by the prosecution of "cold-blooded, deliberate and calculated murder" by ordering the march along the Riam road near Miri, Borneo, when he heard that an Allied convoy was approaching.

Sugino told the court he had been ordered to kill prisoners rather than allow them to be recaptured by the British, the advices from Labuan said.

Dutra Still Leads In Brazil Voting

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 4 (AP)—Army Gen. Eurico Dutra, who was supported by former President Getulio Vargas in Sunday's presidential elections, continued to hold a lead over three opponents as counting of ballots continued tonight. Vargas, himself a candidate for the federal Senate, was well ahead of his rivals.

On the basis of scattered unofficial returns, Dutra received 296,591 votes for the presidency to 158,417 for Air General Eduardo Gomes. The Communist candidate, Yeddo Fiuza, received 74,293, and Mario Rollim Telles, Agrarian party, 2,931.

Final returns of the elections, the first in Brazil in fifteen years, are not expected until next week.

Dutra Holds Lead In Brazil Election

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 4 (AP)—Army Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, supported by former President Getulio Vargas in Sunday's Brazilian presidential elections, held a substantial early lead today over air Gen. Eduardo Gomes on the basis of scattered unofficial returns.

Communist candidate Yeddo Fiuza was running third.

Vote Double That Of Gomes

Partial returns from seventeen out of twenty states and the Rio de Janeira Federal district gave Dutra a total of 84,359; Gomes, 46,710; Fiuza, 26,498. Marion Rollim Telles, Agrarian party candidate already conceded to be out of the running, had polled only 167 votes on the basis of these returns, largely from the rural areas.

Dutra was believed to be benefiting from the well-organized political machinery of the ousted Vargas, particularly in the small towns and villages of the interior states. As the reports come in from the larger cities, Gomes is expected to make some gains, and the only hope of the Communist candidate lies in the city vote.

4 Nations' Planes Hunt Missing C-47

Buenos Aires, Dec. 4 (AP)—Planes of four nations searched today for a United States Army C-47 transport plane missing 30 hours with fourteen persons aboard.

Argentine, Brazilian and Uruguayan ships joined a United States Army plane in searching for the transport, lost on a flight from Asuncion to Montevideo. Aboard were members of a geographic mission en route to the United States.

The United States Embassy said names of those aboard were being withheld until the plane has been found.

13 ARE MISSING ON ARMY PLANE

Aircraft Lost on Flight in South America.

Montevideo, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Uruguayan radio stations last night reported a United States Army plane with thirteen persons aboard had been missing since 10.30 A. M., en route from Asuncion, Paraguay, to Montevideo, a distance of about 650 miles. The plane was last reported near the frontiers of Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay, flying in a southeasterly direction through a heavy wind and rain storm.

Military aviation headquarters here said the plane should have landed at the Montevideo airport at 5:30 P. M. It left Asuncion at 6:15 A. M.

The United States Air Attache, Lieut.-Col. Emmett B. Cassady, said he believed the plane landed safely somewhere but was unable to communicate with Montevideo because of storm-damaged communications. He said the plane was a C-47 transport.

Search for Navy Plane.

Seattle, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—The Thirteenth Naval District said last night that a search by air and sea was being conducted all the way from Seattle to Kodiak, Alaska, for a Navy plane missing since November 29 with twelve persons aboard.

The public relations office said the Privateer plane—Navy version of the B-24 Liberator—was not contacted after it left Kodiak. The names of those aboard were withheld pending location of the plane and notification of next of kin.

All naval craft have been alerted to be on the lookout for the plane and two small craft are searching islands from Whidby Island, north of here, Coast Guard planes from Port Angeles, Wash., and Navy aircraft in Alaska are flying over the 1,000 miles of rugged coastline which was the Privateer's intended route.

The Western Defense Command of the Royal Canadian Air Force offered its assistance in the search.

BODIES OF 4 FLYERS FOUND

Army Search Party Locates 1 Of 4 Missing Planes

Portland, Ore., Dec. 4 (AP)—The bodies of four army flyers were found today in the wreckage of a B-24 bomber, in the rugged hills of Cowlitz county, Washington.

An army search party from McChord Field, Tacoma, found the plane, one of two which disappeared November 1. Soldiers began a 3-mile trek to bring the bodies to a logging road where they will be transported to McChord Field.

The bodies were not immediately identified. Earlier, however, the Army had announced that those aboard the bomber carrying four men were Second Lieutenant John A. Norris, Knoxville, Tenn.; Flight Officer Robert C. McClean, Harlingen, Texas; Staff Sergeant John Sullivan, Dubuque, Iowa.

Staff Sergeant Lowell Sauer, Route 1, Bremerton, Wash.

The other bomber carried five men. Hope for all nine was given up several weeks ago.

Two Other Missing Planes

Two other missing planes were added to the growing list in the Northwest today. A Navy Hellcat, one of 52 ferrying from Pasco Naval Air Station to Red Bluff, Cal., was reported missing by the 13th Naval District headquarters.

Col. Howard E. Engler, commander of Hamilton Field, said that an army basic training plane was missing between McChord Field and Red Bluff, Cal. The number of men in either of the missing planes was unknown.

Search continued for four navy airmen missing since they parachuted from their plane south of Washington's Mount St. Helen's and for one army airman still missing in the crash of a C-36 transport plane near Coos Bay, Ore., eight days ago.

Army Men Don Snowshoes To Hunt Missing Flyers

Portland, Ore., Dec. 4 (AP)—Army rescue crews on snowshoes today hunted the area south of Washington's Mount St. Helen's for four navy airmen missing since they parachuted from their plane last Thursday.

One of the airmen surviving the navy plane crash was resting in an airebase hospital here after spending three nights in the mountains sleeping in logs and under trees wrapped in his parachute.

Found By Motorist

He is Lieut. Warren H. Lawson, Mangun (Okla.) army veteran of nineteen months' European theater combat, who told last night how he struggled through deep snow and the dense forest growth before reaching a road, where a motorist found him.

Meanwhile, another army unit was trying to reach the wreckage of a B-24, one of two missing since November 1 with nine men aboard. The airbase here reported air patrols from McChord Field yesterday sighted the wreckage about 16 miles west of Silver Lake, Wash.

Search Continued

Search was also continuing near Coos Bay, Ore., for one army airman still unaccounted for in the crash of a C-36 transport plane eight days ago. Nine of the airmen were rescued and two officers were found dead in the wreckage yesterday.

All four of the planes disappeared over the Cascade Mountains during heavy storms.

Prize Souvenir Is Patton's Coat

Honolulu, Dec. 4 (AP)—1/Sergt. George Buta, 26, of Honolulu, has a purple heart, silver star, bronze star and campaign ribbons. His most prized war souvenir, however, is a bulky army overcoat which he lugged across two continents and two oceans to Honolulu.

During the battle of the Belgian Bulge Buta stood shivering in the snow, his jacket riped down the back as the result of rescuing seven wounded men under fire. A three-star general walked up, talked with Buta about his home and gave him his overcoat to keep him warm.

Buta proudly explained the officer was Lieut. Gen. (now Gen.) George Patton.

150,000 From the Pacific

HONOLULU, Dec. 4 (AP).—Nearly a hundred ships are rushing 150,000 veterans back from the Pacific, trying to get them home by Christmas, the Pacific Fleet command said today.

All of the ships will reach west coast ports before Dec. 25, fleet headquarters said, although some veterans won't actually get home by that time. The men are from Okinawa, Japan, the Philippines, the Marianas Islands, Korea, China, Peleliu, Kwajalein, Manus and Espiritu Santos. The announcement said that since V-J Day 1,189,739 men have been brought back from the Pacific.

SENATE APPROVES ENTRY INTO U.N.O.

Vote of 65 to 7 Favors Full Participation in World Security Set-Up.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. — (AP) The Senate today approved, 65 to 7, and sent to the House legislation providing for full participation by this country in the United Nations organization.

Before the final vote the Senate rejected a proposal to require the President to come to Congress for authority each time American troops are furnished to the UNO security council for putting down aggression.

Amendment Rejected

The proposal, sponsored by Senators Wheeler (D-Mont) and Willis (R-Ind), as an amendment to the UNO bill, was rejected by a 65 to 9 vote.

This left in effect a requirement that the President get congressional approval only on the "numbers and types" of armed forces to be supplied. These then could be used as required by the security council.

Numerous attempts to amend the bill were rejected during several days of debate. As passed it contains all provisions recommended by the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

When the final vote came only one Democrat, Wheeler (D-Mont) and six Republicans—Langer (R-ND), Moore (R-Okla), Revercomb (R-W Va), Shipstead (R-Minn), Taft (R-Ohio) and Wherry (R-Neb)—answered "no."

Shouting "yes" were 41 Democrate, 23 Republicans and the lone Progressive Senator LaFollette (Wis).

Broad Powers Defended

Supporters defended the broad powers that could go to President Truman to use "measures short of war" or actual force, in connection with the security council, to maintain peace of the world.

Early in the day both Senators Connally (D-Tex) and Vandenberg (R-Mich), leading backers of the legislation, had agreed to an amendment requiring Senate confirmation of all delegates of this country to any of the organizations set up under UNO. The amendment was passed.

These delegates will include the representative to the security council, with rank of ambassador and $20,000 a year pay; his deputy, who will be a diplomatic minister, at $12,000 a year; up to five delegates to the UNO assembly, who will be paid at the rate of $12,000 a year while serving; and representatives upon the economic and social council and the trusteeship council.

All these delegates would be required to vote as directed by President Truman or Secretary of State Byrnes.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) made the final futile effort to amend the bill which he protested was too broad a grant of unguided power to the President. He asked that Presidential authority to impose "economic sanctions" against nations be limited to three months.

The Ohio Senator observed that these might involve shutting of all news, communications, trade, and contact with nations designated by the UNO security council. Taft said such an order "might be arbitrary and go on for years."

Senator Connally protested that this would be "handicapping the President, tieing his hands."

The only major speech from a supporter on the final day of debate came from white-haired Senator Tunnell (D-Del) who said he was "astonished" at Senate quibbling over legislation providing necessary machinery for participation in UNO. He recalled the Senate had voted 89 to 2 to ratify the San Francisco charter of the organization.

"If the United States is going to welsh on its obligations then let's tell the world now," he said.

UNO Not Needed, Says Brewster

Portland, Maine, Dec. 4 (AP)—The United States could maintain peace without the United Nations Organization, United States Senator Owen Brewster (R., Maine) said today.

"America seems to feel that without some sort of a United Nations Organization there would be no hope of peace and that with such an organization all our troubles are ended," he told members of the Portland Lions Club.

"Such is not the case," he asserted, adding that such thoughts were "dangerous symbols of disillusion," and that "there are plenty of angles by which this country might pull along even without the United Nations."

Brewster said that "if America is going to preserve herself and peace, the time is here when she must step up her tempo with the rest of the globe. We have too long been the productive marvel and envy of all the world."

Prober Urges MacArthur Be Put on Stand

Demand Comes as General's Affidavit Reveals He Was Alerted for War.

FDR SENT WARNING

Philippines Leaders Were Informed of Imminent Possibility of Conflict.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 — (AP) Disclosure that President Roosevelt took a personal hand in getting war warnings to the Philippines in 1941 brought a Republican demand tonight that Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur be called as a witness in the Pearl Harbor inquiry.

The demand came from Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) who declared it was evident that MacArthur, then commander of Army forces in the Philippines, received a great deal more information on the threat of hostilities than did Army and Navy commanders in Hawaii.

Ferguson, a member of the joint Pearl Harbor investigating committee, told reporters he would ask formally that MacArthur be called as a witness "if he isn't called otherwise."

Message Sent Nov. 26

Mr. Roosevelt's role in the war warnings was developed during questioning of Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, pre-Pearl Harbor head of Army intelligence. A message which the late President sent on Nov. 26, 1941, to the United States commissioner in the Philippines was read into the record. It said in part:

"I consider it possible that this next Japanese aggression might cause an outbreak of hostilities between the U. S. and Japan."

Japan, the President said, apparently was preparing her forces for an aggressive move somewhere.

There was also a memorandum from Brig. Gen. L. T. Gerow, then assistant chief of staff, relating that on Nov. 27, 1941, Secretary of War Stimson told him "the President wants a warning message sent to the Philippines."

Ordered Asiatic Patrol

Another, from Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, to Admiral Thomas Hart, commander of the Asiatic fleet (based in the Philippines), said the President wanted three small vessels chartered for "a defensive information patrol" in Asiatic waters. The President also asked a report on reconnaissance measures being taken.

Ferguson, bringing in a MacArthur affidavit of May, 1945, disclosed the Philippine army chief was getting copies of some Japanese secret messages decoded by a Navy cryptography station on Corregidor. Miles had testified that the War department here did not send any such secret intercepts to Hawaiian commanders.

Had Ample Information

The MacArthur affidavit contained, too, a statement that "dispatches from the War department gave me ample and complete information and advice for the purpose of alerting" the defending forces in the islands.

The affidavit was taken for Secretary Stimpson by Lt. Col. Henry Clausen. Stimson had asked Clausen to undertake further inquiry after an Army board completed its investigation of Pearl Harbor.

It was a Republican day to question Miles, who has been in the witness chair since last week. (The committee members take turns according to seniority.)

Under Ferguson's interrogation, Miles conceded that although he was head of Army intelligence "there was a great deal of information in the higher level which I did not get."

"I never knew," Miles said, "what the Secretary of State or the President was saying to the Secretary of War or the chief of staff."

Gave Code Secret to Britain

The committee also heard from Miles that the United States gave to Great Britain in January, 1941, the means of decoding Japan's diplomatic and military messages.

Miles previously had told the committee that the secret of the code was of such "incalculable value" that the War department dared not send to Hawaiian commanders information gleaned from intercepted Japanese messages.

In response to questions, Miles said he recalled an arrangement between the U. S. and Britain under which "we could mutually assure ourselves we got the same messages."

"If we failed to get them the British would supply," he explained, "and vice versa."

At first, he had said he could not say offhand whether the British furnished the U. S. with any information they obtained from decoding intercepted Japanese messages.

Between bickerings, the committee listened to Miles' story of the interception Dec. 6-7 of the Japanese note which was to be given the United States at 1 p. m., Dec. 7, almost simultaneously with the attack on the Hawaiian naval base, and of the warning note which Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, sent to Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, Army commander in Hawaii.

Miles testified it was his recollection, as previously reported, that the Army learned between 7 and 8 a. m. on Dec. 7 of the hour the Japanese had set for delivery of the note, but that it was 11:50 a. m. before Marshall's message to Short was dispatched to the signal corps. As it developed, the Army radio was out of order, the message went by commercial services, and was not delivered until after the attack.

Hour Caused Comment

Under questioning by Rep. Gearhart (R-Calif.), Miles acknowledged that the 1 p. m. hour "excited comment" at the War department, but he declared he had no recollection that anyone ever suggested that that hour in Washington was dawn in Hawaii, or that it meant "trouble in Hawaii."

Committee counsel produced Mr. Roosevelt's message of Nov. 26 to Francis B. Sayre, then U. S. Commissioner in the Philippines. It said:

"26 Nov. 41

"From: The President

"For: High Commissioner Philippines.

"A copy of a despatch will be delivered to you by Admiral Hart which with my approval, the CNO and COS addressed to the senior Army and Navy commanders in the Philippines. In addition you are advised that the Japanese are strongly reinforcing their garrisons and naval forces in the mandates in a manner which indicates they are preparing this region as quickly as possible against a possible attack on them by U. S. Forces.

"However I am more particularly concerned over increasing opposition of Japanese leaders and by current southward troop movements from Shanghai and Japan to the Formosa area. Preparations are becoming apparent in China, Formosa and Indo China for an early aggressive movement of some character although as yet there are no clear indications as to its strength or whether it will be directed against the Burma road Thailand Malay peninsula Netherlands East Indies or the Philippines. Advance against Thailand seems the most probable.

"I consider it possible that this next Japanese aggression might cause an outbreak of hostilities between the U .S. and Japan.

"I desire that after further informing yourself as to the situation and the general outlines of Naval and military plans through consultation with Admiral Hart and General MacArthur, you shall in great confidence, present my views to the president of the Philippine Commonwealth and inform him that as always I am relying upon the full cooperation of his government and his people. Please impress upon him the desirability of avoiding public pronouncement or action since that might make the situation more difficult."

Note Delivered in 14 Parts

Miles' recital of the handling of the intercepted Japanese note brought out that it came to this country in fourteen parts. The first 13 were received Dec. 6 while the fourteenth and Tokyo's advice for its ambassadors to deliver the note at 1 p.m. Sunday were not received until next day.

With Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) putting the question, Miles repeatedly contended that there was no "military significance" in the first 13 parts.

He held to that contention after Ferguson pointed out that part two declared that the United States and Britain "while manifesting x x x an obviously hostile attitude" had "strengthened their military preparations perfecting an encirclement of Japan and have brought about a situation which endangers the very existence of the Empire."

Affidavit by Philippines Commander Is Introduced at Pearl Harbor Inquiry—Roosevelt Warned Manila Nov. 26.

Washington, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Congressional investigators heard today that Gen. MacArthur received from Washington what he regarded as "ample and complete information and advice" for alerting the Philippines before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

Furthermore, the Senate-House group investigating the attack was told that MacArthur received some intercepted Japanese messages. Previously, the committee had been told of a highly-secret policy by which Washington withheld them from overseas commanders, including those in Hawaii.

Affidavit by MacArthur.

An affidavit, sworn to by MacArthur last May, was placed in the committee records. He said in it that some Japanese messages were decoded at Corregidor in the Philippines, but he had not seen certain specific messages he was asked about.

The affidavit was taken for the Secretary of War by Lieut.-Col. Henry Clausen. It said that the Army signal intelligence service monitored some Japanese radio circuits, but that the transmission was wholly in the hands of the Navy. At any rate, MacArthur was quoted as saying, the War Department gave him full information from Washington.

Previously the investigators heard that the late President Roosevelt informed the Philippine High Commissioner, Francis Sayre, on November 26, 1941, that the "next Japanese aggression might cause an outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Japan."

A message read into the record disclosed that the President said eleven days before the attack on Hawaii that there were "no clear indications" of where the Japanese might direct the military strength they were massing. It added, however: "Advance against Thailand seems the most probable."

In this connection, the President said: "I consider it possible that this next Japanese aggression might cause an outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Japan."

Jap Garrisons Strengthened.

Mr. Roosevelt noted that the Japanese were strongly reinforcing their garrisons and naval forces in the mandated islands "in a manner which indicates they are preparing this region as quickly as possible against a possible attack on them by United States forces."

Major-Gen. Sherman Miles told the committee earlier that the United States in January, 1941—eleven months before Pearl Harbor—gave Great Britain the secret means for breaking the Japanese code.

Miles read to the committee gence at the time, said "I can't answer," whether the British in turn relayed here information they subsequently got from decoding Japanese messages.

There was this exchange between Senator Ferguson (R. Mich.) and Miles:

"Did you ever get from Britain any information they obtained from Japan by decoding?"

"I can't answer that offhand."

"Why not?"

Agreement on Thailand.

"My memory is not sufficiently good to allow me to say yes or no."

Ferguson asked whether there were any files on the matter. Miles said he doubted that there were; that it was a matter of great secrecy.

Miles testified earlier that general staff officers agreed in a conference with Gen. George C. Marshall shortly before noon on December 7, 1941, that the Japanese might strike Thailand by 1 P. M., Washington time.

Miles read to a Senate-House inquiry committee a memorandum he had prepared on December 15, 1941, for Marshall on the events of that fateful Sunday when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

Miles, then head of the Army's Intelligence Division, read to a Senate-House inquiry committee a memorandum he had prepared on December 15, 1941, for Marshall on the events of that fateful Sunday when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

The witness said that the delivery of the fourteenth part of an intercepted Japanese diplomatic message, plus a direction to Japanese "peace" ambassador to hand it to Secretary of State Hull at 1 P. M., convinced Army leaders here that a hostile move might be in the offing.

Urged Outposts be Warned.

"We thought it probable that the Japanese line of action would be into Thailand, but it might be any one or more of a number of areas," Miles's memorandum said.

Miles said he urged that the Philippines, Hawaii, Panama and the West Coast be informed immediately. He said that Marshall penciled out a message, after talking to Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations.

The Miles memorandum said that when Marshall put down the telephone, he said that "the Admiral did not think any further warnings necessary, since all of the forces had already been several times alerted."

Miles said in his memorandum that Lieut.-Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, then head of the War Division, urged that the Philippines receive the first priority on the warning message. "Tell them to give first priority to the Philippines."

There has been previous evidence that the warning to Pearl Harbor went by commerical facilities and was delivered three hours after the attack.

Hawaii Time Not Stressed.

Representative Gearhart (D.-Cal.) asked whether the officers who saw the Japanese message had not calculated that the 1 P. M., Washington hour, was dawn in Hawaii.

"I don't remember that that point was stressed," Miles replied.

Miles said, in response to further questions, that the time element caused much comment, but that he did not clearly remember the details of the discussion. He added that all had, however, thought it "extremely significant as a time factor."

"You contemplated," Gearhart pressed, "what 1 o'clock would be in Hawaii, the Philippines and Indo-China, did you not?"

The General leaned back in his chair and waited a moment before replying.

"I am trying to remember, but I do not recall that any such calculations took place," he explained.

But his recollection was, Miles went on, that all were concerned with the urgency of getting messages about the 1 o'clock engagement out to overseas posts.

How Messages Were Logged.

Records filed with the committee showed that the penciled warning message written by Marshall was dispatched to Lieut.-Gen. Walter C. Short, in command at Hawaii by Western Union at 6:47 A. M., Hawaii time, about an hour before the Japanese attacked. It had been taken to the War Department message center here at 11:50 A. M., Washington time, by Col. R. S. Bratton, the Miles memorandum showed. However, the log of the message center showed its receipt there at noon.

According to the log it was received in Honolulu at 7:33 A. M., a few minutes before the attack, and was not delivered to the signal officer by "an Oriental messenger" until 11:45 A. M. It was not finally decoded and delivered to Short's staff until 2:58 P. M., seven hours and three minutes after the attack began.

Col. W. B. Smith, then secretary to the general staff, said in a memorandum put in the record:

"The message center reports that a check from Honolulu indicates that on receipt this message was handed to an Oriental messenger . . . for delivery by hand to Army Headquarters."

Stark Apparently Concurred.

Miles said in his memorandum that after Marshall had drafted his message, he called Admiral Stark a second time and read it to him. Miles said Stark apparently concurred and asked that naval forces be informed, a notation that was added to the message.

The message, as finally sent, read: "529 7th Japanese are presenting at one P. M. Eastern standard time today what amounts to an ultimatum also they are under orders to destroy their code machine immediately stop Just what significance the hour set may have we do not know but be on alert accordingly stop Inform naval authorities of this communication. Marshall"

In a memorandum also made on December 15, 1941, Gerow said that Bratton was instructed to send the Marshall message to all the outpost commands "by the the most expeditious means."

Marshall Rushes to Office.

"Col. Bratton returned in a few minutes and informed Gen. Marshall that the message had been turned over to the message center and would reach destinations in about thirty minutes," Gerow's memorandum said.

In a memorandum dated June 8, 1942, Col. J. R. Deane, the only officer present at Marshall's headquarters at the time, told about the receipt of the message that Pearl Harbor had been attacked.

"At about 1:30 P. M., " Deane related, "an enlisted man from the Navy rushed into my office out of breath, with a pencil note which was supposed to have been from the Navy radio operator at Honolulu and which said, as I recall: 'Pearl Harbor attacked. This is no drill.'

"I immediately telephoned Gen. Marshall at his quarters at Fort Myer where he was having lunch and told him of the message. He directed me to contact Hawaii if possible and verify the message. Before I could do this another and more official message came, indicating the correctness of the first message that had been received.

"Gen. Marshall was in his office within ten minutes after I telephoned him and after remaining in the office for a short period he went to the White House, where he stayed until about 4:00 P. M."

warning message. There was some discussion as to whether the Philippines should be included or not, but I am not quite clear exactly when this discussion occurred. You again got Admiral Stark on the telephone and read the message to him. He apparently concurred, and asked that the naval forces be informed. You added that at the bottom of the message.

Gerow and Bundy Arrive.

At about this time Gen. (Leonard T.) Gerow and Col. Bundy arrived. You asked us in succession, beginning with me what we thought the Japanese reply and timing meant. I said that I thought it probably meant Thailand, but that the timing had some significance and warning messages should be sent. Gen. Gerow and Cols. Bratton and Bundy concurred. The message in your handwriting was then given to Col. Bratton to take immediately to the message center. There was a little discussion here as to whether it should go to Gen. Gerow's office for typing first, but time was then pressing and I gave it to Bratton for immediate delivery. Gen. Gerow said as Bratton was leaving, "Tell them to give first priority to the Philippines if there is a question of priority" or something to that effect. Bratton returned in a few moments and you directed him to find out how long it would take for the delivery of those messages. Again he went to the message center and returned and reported to you that they would have them encoded in three minutes, on the air in eight, and in the hands of the recipients in (I think) twenty).

Col. Bratton states that he looked at his watch on delivering your message to the Signal Corps, and the time was 11:50 A. M. He further states that the message center gave him no intimation that all four messages would not go over Army radio direct to the four Army headquarters.

December 7, 1941, that the Japanese might strike Thailand by 1 P.M., Washington time.

Miles, then head of the Army's Intelligence Division, read to a Senate-House inquiry committee a memorandum he had prepared December 15, 1941, for Marshall on the events of the day the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

The witness said that the delivery of the fourteenth part of an intercepted Japanese diplomatic message, plus a direction to the Japanese "peace" Ambassador to hand it to Secretary of State Hull at 1 P.M., convinced army leaders here that a hostile move might be in the offing.

Urged Areas Be Warned

"We thought it probable that the Japanese line of action would be into Thailand, but it might be any one or more of a number of areas," the memorandum said.

Miles said he urged that the Philippines, Hawaii, Panama and the West Coast be informed immediately. He said Marshall penciled out a message after talking to Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations.

The memorandum said that when Marshall put down the telephone, he said that "the Admiral did not think any further warnings necessary, since all of the forces had already been several times alerted."

Priority To Philippines"

Miles said in his memorandum that Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, then head of the war plans division, urged that the Philippines receive the first priority on the warning message.

He quoted Gerow as follows:

"Tell them to give first priority to the Philippines."

There has been previous evidence that the warning to Pearl Harbor went by commercial cables and was delivered three hours after the attack.

Representative Gearhart (D., Cal.) asked whether the officers who saw the Japanese message had not calculated that the 1 P.M., Washington hour, was dawn in Hawaii.

"I don't remember that that point was stressed," Miles replied.

"Caused Much Comment"

Miles said, in response to further questions, that the time element caused much comment, but that he did not clearly remember the details of the discussion. He added that all had, however, thought it "extremely significant as a time factor."

"You contemplated," Gearhart pressed, "what 1 o'clock would be in Hawaii, the Philippines and Indo-China, did you not?"

The General leaned back in his chair and waited a moment before replying. "I am trying to remember, but I do not recall that any such calculations took place," he explained.

But his recollection was, Miles went on, that all were concerned with the urgency of getting messages about the 1 o'clock engagement out to overseas posts.

Lucas Poses Question

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) said that Marshall would be asked why he didn't warn Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short that the anti-sabotage alert in effect at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese attacked was not sufficient.

Lucas said he thinks that is one of the most important questions the former army chief of staff will be called upon to answer when he testifies Thursday.

He said the same question will be asked of Gerow when he follows Miles to the stand, probably today.

Difference In Messages

At the same time, Lucas took issue with Gearhart over the significance of a difference in warning messages Marshall sent Short, as Hawaiian district army commander, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in command in the Philippines, on November 27, 1941.

The messages, which said that "negotiations with Japan appear to be terminated to all practical purposes," were similar except for the portion of one sentence.

In his message to Short, Marshall said: ". . . You are directed to undertake such reconnaissance and other measures as you deem necessary, but these measures should be carried out so as not to alarm civil population or disclose intent period."

Part Of Sentence Deleted

From the message to MacArthur the latter part of the sentence beginning with "but these measures . . ." was not included.

Gearhart told the committee yesterday that this seemed plain evidence to him that Short was "given definite instructions not to do something that General MacArthur was not warned against."

Lucas noted, however, that the instructions sent to the commanding generals of the Caribbean defense command were identical with those which went to Short.

"Everywhere where American citizens predominated in the population, the instructions were the same," Lucas said. "It was only in the Philippines that they were different."

of State Hull at 1 p. m. that day.

You then read aloud the Japanese reply, which was of considerable length; you then asked what Colonel Bratton and I thought should be done about it, or what it signified. We said that we believed there was important significance in the time of the delivery of the reply—1 p. m.—an indication that some military action would be undertaken by the Japanese at that time. We thought it probable that the Japanese line of action would be into Thailand, but it might be any one or more of a number of other areas.

Phone Call to Stark

I urged that the Philippines, Hawaii, Panama and the west coast be informed immediately that the Japanese reply would be delivered at 1 o'clock that afternoon, and to be on the alert. You then picked up the telephone and got Admiral (Harold R.) Stark, chief of naval operations. You told him you thought we should send out warning as indicated above. After Admiral Stark replied you put down the telephone and said that the admiral did not think any further warnings necessary, since all the forces had already been several times alerted. Colonel Bratton and I nevertheless urged that warnings be sent.

Thailand Was Believed Japs' Dec. 7 Target, Miles Says

Pearl Harbor Inquiry Texts

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP).—Following are the complete texts of a memorandum prepared by Major General Sherman Miles on Dec. 15, 1941, for General George C. Marshall, then Army chief of staff, setting forth his recollections of a conference held on the morning of Dec. 7, 1941; and of a Nov. 26, 1941, message from President Roosevelt to Francis B. Sayre, then High Commissioner of the Philippines:

GENERAL MILES'S MEMORANDUM

1. My recollection of what occurred in your office on that morning is as follows:

I found you alone in your office at about 11:25 a. m. We were almost immediately joined by Colonel R. S. Bratton, who brought in the Japanese reply and the Japanese directive that the reply be given to Secretary

You then wrote out the warning message. There was some discussion as to whether the Philippines should be included or not, but I am not quite clear exactly when this discussion occurred. You again got Admiral Stark on the telephone and read the message to him. He apparently concurred, and asked that the naval forces be informed. You added that at the bottom of the message.

Philippines Priority

At about this time General [Leonard T.] Gerow and Colonel Bundy arrived. You asked us in succession, beginning with me, what we thought the Japanese reply and timing meant. I said that I thought it probably meant Thailand, but that the timing had some significance and warning messages should be sent. General Gerow and Colonels Bratton and Bundy concurred. The message in your handwriting was then given to Colonel Bratton to take immediately to the message center. (There was a little discussion here as to whether it should go to General Gerow's office for typing, but time was then pressing and I gave it to Bratton for immediate delivery.) General Gerow said as Bratton was leaving, "Tell them to give first priority to the Philippines if there is a question of priority," or something to that effect. Bratton returned in a few moments and you directed him to find out how long it would take for the delivery of those messages. Again he went to the message center and returned and reported to you that they would have them encoded in three minutes, on the air in eight and in the hands of the recipients in (I think) twenty.

Colonel Bratton states that he looked at his watch on delivering your message to the Signal Corps, and the time was 11:50 a. m. He further states that the message center gave him no intimation that all four messages would not go over Army radio direct to the four Army headquarters.

ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE

A copy of a dispatch will be delivered to you by Admiral Hart with my approval, the C. N. O. (chief of naval operations) and C. O. S. (chief of staff) and dressed to the senior Army and Navy commanders in the Philippines. In addition you are advised that the Japanese are strongly reinforcing their garrisons and naval forces in the mandates in a manner which indicates they are preparing this region as quickly as possible against a possible attack on them by U. S. forces.

However, I am more particularly concerned over increasing opposition of Japanese leaders and by current southward troop movements from Shanghai and Japan to the Formosa area. Preparations are becoming apparent in China, Formosa and Indo-China for an early aggressive movement of some character, although as yet there are no clear indications as to its strength or whether it will be directed against the Burma Road, Thailand, Malay Peninsula, Netherlands East Indies or the Philippines. Advance against Thailand seems the most probable.

I consider it possible that this next Japanese aggression might cause an outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Japan. I desire that after further informing yourself as to the situation and the general outlines of naval and military plans through consultation with Admiral Hart and General MacArthur, you shall in great confidence, present my views to the President of the Philippine Commonwealth and inform him that as always I am relying upon the full co-operation of his government and his people. Please impress upon him the desirability of avoiding public pronouncement or action, since that might make the situation more difficult.

Charges Attempt to Weaken, Destroy Organized Labor Groups.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 4. — (AP) President Philip Murray of the C. I.O. tonight rejected President Truman's proposals for ending strikes and charged that the Federal administration has "completely ignored human rights" in the current industrial problems.

In an outright break with the administration, Murray asserted in an address prepared for radio delivery, that "the design of the specific legislative proposal" of the President "is to weaken and ultimately destroy labor union organizations." He added:

Fears Added Repression

"It can be but the first step for ever more savage repression. For this reason the C.I.O. shall mobilize its entire membership and the American people to defeat this specific measure and all similar attempts directed against labor."

The C.I.O. leader declared the administration is embarked "upon a policy of continued appeasement of American industry in the face of its contemptuous attitude toward the American people and the government itself.

This was Murray's reply to the President's message to Congress calling for legislation which would create fact-finding commissions to inquire into major disputes. President Truman had at the same time called on the C.I.O. United Auto Workers to go back to work and appealed to the C.I.O. United Steel Workers, of which Murray is also president, not to strike.

"Industry has refused to engage in collective bargaining," said Murray. "Industry has refused to accept voluntary arbitration in the automobile dispute. Industry has refused to meet with the union in the steel industry though specifically requested by the Federal government.

"To all this arrogance, the Federal administration yields in abject cowardice.

"Its rancor is confined to labor."

Cites Federal Report

Murray declared American industry had extracted "extortionate profits" during the war period and added:

"The Office of War Mobilization, through its staff experts, has in a recent report stated that American industry can raise wages and salaries 24 per cent and still earn more than twice as much take home profits as it did before the war.

"Let me repeat—industry can raise wages 24 per cent and still enjoy more than 100 per cent increase in net profits after taxes.

"Faced with these economic conditions—what has the Federal administration done?

"It has completely ignored human rights. But American industry has been appeased with ever greater opportunities for increased profits at the expense of the American people."

Murray continued:

"I am profoundly disturbed at the implications inherent in the President's proposal. It marks a very serious departure from the policies which the people of this country have repeatedly approved within recent years under the leadership of President Roosevelt.

"We have known of previous periods in American industry when rapacious industry, greedily seeking ever increasing profits, have for a time succeeded in the endeavor.

"But in the wake of these policies have come economic disaster. The economic debacle of 1929 followed a period where industry was given an open and free hand to run amuck. But the mass unemployment and human distress which followed will never be forgotten."

"The Federal administration has completely ignored the grave human problems which stand unsolved. x x x

C.I.O. Opposes Administration

"The C.I.O. is opposed to the basic policies thus pursued by the administration."

Murray declared "The American people have not participated with all of their energies and resources in the recent ferocious struggle against Fascism in order to have democracy weakened and threatened through proposals leading to industrial serfdom."

Reviews Industrial Disputes

Murray reviewed the history of several disputes in which C.I.O. unions are involved. General Motors, he said, refused suggestions of the union to arbitrate the issue of a wage raise and refused to continue collective bargaining negotiations. The U. S. Steel Corp., Murray continued, flatly denied union requests and refused to bargain.

When the U. S. government asked both companies to renew negotiations, the answer was "no," Murray asserted.

He went on:

"Confronted with situation, American labor, in self-protection and in the interest of the entire nation, have turned to their right to strike.

"This is what the workers of General Motors corporation were compelled to do.

"This is why over half a million steelworkers have voted five to one authorizing a steel strike.

"This is why electrical manufacturing workers, aluminum, packinghouse, and rubber workers and others are also voting overwhelmingly in favor of strikes.

"What is the answer of the Federal government to this diabolical plot of American industry?

Does the Federal Administration call to the attention of the American people the basic causes of this crisis?

"The sole answer of the Federal administration is to seek legislation directed against labor."

Murray said the American people "are not now getting radios, washing machines, children's underclothing and other much needed goods" because ther is "a sit down strike by industry" which "the Federal administration tolerates — without adverse comment."

Strikes are not responsible for the failure of industry to deliver these goods because there are no strikes in these industries, Murray declared, and he said:

"Here is why: The Federal administration very generously x x x repealed the excess profits tax as of Jan. 1, 1946. A company that sells goods this year is subject to a maximum tax of 85 1-2 per cent on each dollar of profit. But beginning next year, the maximum tax has been cut to 38 per cent.

"On every dollar of profit this year industry can only keep 14 1-2 cents, but next year, it can keep 62 cents out of every profit dollar.

"You are waiting for your goods —and as a tax payer you are financing industry holdup."

Committee to Meet

Murray disclosed earlier today that the C.I.O. steelworkers are referring Mr. Truman's no-strike request to the union's wage policy committee, which will hold a three-day meeting here starting next Monday.

The wage committee meeting was called last week after the steelworkers voted for strike action to back up a $2-a-day wage increase demand. More than 480,000 steel workers participated in the voting.

The wage programs of three C.I.O. unions, steel, auto, electrical workers—were discussed at a brief meeting of union chiefs with Murray here today. The officials included President R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers, key man in the work stoppage of 225,000 General Motors employes, and James Matles, director of organization of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

A strike vote has been set for Dec. 13 for 270,000 members of the electrical workers union at plants of the General Electric company, Westinghouse and the General Motors division. They, too, are seeking a $2-a-day raise.

G-M Vice President Hopes for Settlement

DETROIT, Dec. 4—(AP)—Hope that the strike of 175,000 General Motors employes could be settled without resort to President Truman's fact-finding board was expressed today by Harry W. Anderson, the corporation's vice president in charge of personnel.

Anderson made his comment at Washington as it appeared the Monday appeal by Mr. Truman for an immediate return to work by strikers had failed to dent the ranks of C.I.O. unionists seeking to enforce demands for a 30 per cent wage increase.

Opposition to such a move and to the President's proposal for the fact-finding board spread in United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) ranks today, with some leaders expressing belief a conference of U.A.W.-C.I.O. representatives from GM locals would reject the program by an overwhelming vote when they meet here Saturday.

Emerging from a conference with Edgar L. Warren, chief of the U. S. Conciliation service at Washington, Anderson said General Motors was prepared to bargain collectively with the union as soon as its complaint against "illegal picketing" was disposed of.

Representatives of corporation and union will meet here tomorrow to discuss management's charge that supervisory and office employes have been illegally barred from GM plants.

nual basis have been extracted from the pay envelopes of wage earners through wage cuts and unemployment.

Are these the conditions which furnish a basis for prosperity and security?

Faced with these cold hard facts, American workers through their unions have sought to engage in collective bargaining for an immediate wage increase.

Our objective is to restore the huge cut in the national pay envelope. Unless we do, clearly America faces bad times; if the workers do not have the purchasing power to buy the goods, the wheels of industry cannot keep turning.

Depressed wages means curtailed business. Depressed wages means continued and developing unemployment. Depressed wages means a decrease in farm income. Depressed wages means disastrous conditions for the small store keeper.

Calls Industry Arrogant

Text of Philip Murray Speech

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 4 (AP).—Following is the complete text of the radio address tonight by Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations:

A very serious crisis faces our nation today. It would be unwise and hypocritical not to face this fact.

After our historic victory over the Fascist forces—the nation turned with both relief and hope to tackle the problems of reconversion. The American people justly anticipated the opening of an era of unparalleled prosperity and international peace.

Have these hopes materialized?

Wage earners through reduced working time, down-grading to inferior jobs — have suffered direct pay cuts ranging from a minimum of 23 per cent to as much as 50 per cent. The Office of War Mobilization officially advises us—very blandly—that we can expect by the spring of 1946 approximately eight million people to be unemployed.

Official government figures reveal that since V-J Day approximately $25,000,000,000 on an annual basis have been extracted from the pay envelopes of wage earners through wage cuts and unemployment.

That is why—in seeking necessary wage increases—the C. I. O. seeks no special advantage but is endeavoring to help America.

But in collective bargaining management revealed a determined arrogance. They would not bargain. They ignored the facts. They simply said "No" to each suggestion offered by the unions.

In the case of the negotiations between the C. I. O. union and General Motors Corporation—the corporation insisted that its profits were irrelevant to the issue whether the employees were entitled to wage increases. To the suggestion of the union that the issue be arbitrated—the corporation said "No." To the suggestion of the union that the parties continue in collective bargaining to negotiate, the answer of the corporation was "No."

In the case of the collective-bargaining negotiations between the C. I. O. union and the United States Steel Corporation—the corporation took forty minutes in all to hand the union a letter flatly rejecting its demand for a wage increase.

The United States Steel Corporation did not discuss the issue. The United States Steel Corporation made no counter-offers. The United States Steel Corporation did not bargain. It just said: "No."

The United States government then offered to mediate both disputes.

But even to this suggestion of the government, General Motors Corporation said "no." The president of the corporation answered that he could not come to Washington to discuss efforts to reach an early settlement.

Cites U. S. Report on Profits

The Secretary of Labor asked the United States Steel Corporation and the union to renew their negotiations and collective bargaining. The United States Steel Corporation said "no."

The Federal government repeated its invitation to the corporation. Again the United States Steel Corporation said "no."

Twice—within one week—the United States Steel Corporation arrogantly and arbitrarily refused to heed the call of its Federal government to comply with their obligation to bargain with the union in good faith.

A full description of current conditions also requires a few facts covering the extortionate profits which American industry extracted during the war period and which they insist upon increasing during peace time.

The Office of War Mobilization, through its staff experts, has in a recent report stated that American industry can raise wages and salaries 24 per cent and still earn more than twice as much take-home profits as it did before the war.

Let me repeat—industry can raise wages 24 per cent and still enjoy more than 100 per cent increase in net profits after taxes.

Faced with these economic conditions—what has the Federal Administration done?

It has completely ignored human rights. But American industry has been appeased with ever greater opportunities for increased profits at the expense of the American people.

The Administration has given lip service to a suggested need for Federal legislation that would increase unemployment compensation benefits and acknowledge a Federal obligation for full employment. The complete failure to obtain such legislation has proven that the activities have been limited to a mere gesture.

But, at the same time, in the face of the astounding profits of American industry, legislation has been swiftly enacted to eliminate excess profits taxes so that these profits can become even more extortionate.

In addition, the Federal Administration tolerates—without adverse comment—a sit-down strike by industry—knowing that the American people are financing industry's arrogance and making it profitable.

Lack of Civilian Goods

You are not now getting radios, washing machines, children's underclothing and other much needed goods.

Why?

It cannot be because of strikes, because there are no strikes in these industries.

It is simply because industry is not producing these goods—this year—or it is holding them from this year's market. Here is why:

The Federal administration very generously, as I have said, repealed the excess profits taxes as of Jan. 1, 1946. A company that sells goods this year is subject to a maximum tax of 85½ per cent on each dollar of profit. But beginning next year, the maximum tax has been cut to 38 per cent.

On every dollar of profit this year industry can only keep 14½ cents, but next year it can keep 62 cents out of every profit dollar.

You are waiting for your goods—and as a taxpayer, you are financing industry holdup.

But that is not the entire story. Through tax laws which the Federal administration supports, any corporation is guaranteed by you as taxpayers, for two years, through tax refunds from the United States Treasury, against any loss and a minimum of net profits which will be in excess of their peace-time average.

State Labor's Stand

Is it any wonder that American industry can be arrogant and determined to smash labor unions, to break the O. P. A. and its price ceilings—because while doing so, failure to produce does not mean any financial loss, but is repaid by you, Mr. American Taxpayer.

Confronted with this situation, American labor, in self-protection and in the interest of the entire nation, have turned to their right to strike.

This is what the workers of General Motors Corporation were compelled to do.

This is why over half a million steelworkers have voted five to one authorizing a steel strike.

This is why electrical manufacturing workers, aluminum, packing house and rubber workers and others are also voting overwhelmingly in favor of strikes.

What is the answer of the Federal Administration to this diabolical plot of American industry?

Does the Federal Administration call to the attention of the American people the basic causes of this crisis?

Does the Federal Administration condemn the sit-down strike of American industry and put an end to the public financing of these outrageous practices?

The sole answer of the Federal Administration is to seek legislation directed against labor.

Industry has refused to engage in collective bargaining. Industry has refused to accept voluntary arbitration in the automobile dispute. Industry has refused to meet with the union in the steel industry though specifically requested by the Federal government.

To all this arrogance the Federal Administration yields in abject cowardice.

Its rancor is confined to labor.

Truman Message Noted

The recent message from President Truman to Congress calls for legislation which would authorize the President to establish fact-finding boards in major industries where industrial disputes may be threatened. In addition, it is recommended that where such boards are established it shall be unlawful for labor to strike during the pendency of the work of any such appointed board.

I desire to make it perfectly clear that labor has never feared the public disclosure of facts pertaining to a labor dispute. We awrmly welcome the public attention addressed to the facts which underlie our claims submitted in collective bargaining.

Only recently a report of experts of the Office of War mobilization was being buried by Mr. Snyder, its director. This report fully disclosed all the facts pertaining to the financial condition of American industry and the crying need for substantial wage increase. It was only through the determined efforts of the C. I. O. that this report became available to the American people.

The specific facts involved in the automobile and steel industries have been thoroughly analyzed and made public by several government agencies.

This should make it clear that President Truman's requested legislation cannot be justified on the ground that it is facts which are sought. There is some other design which prompts its recommendations.

Recently the labor-management conference held in the City of Washington unanimously agreed that there was a joint responsibility t engagee in genuine collective bargaining, and where this fails, to co-operate with conciliation and mediation.

On the basis of this agreement between prominent representatives of labor and management—why did not the Secretary of Labor or the President endeavor to bring the General Motors Corporation or the United States Steel Corporation into collective-bargaining conferences with the unions?

Instead—legislation is requested. Legislation that can have but a single purpose—the weakening of labor unions—the curtailment of the right of free men to retrain from working when they choose to do so.

I am profoundly disturbed at the implications inherent in the President's proposal. It marks a very serious departure from the policies which the people of this country have repeatedly approved within recent years under the leadership of President Roosevelt.

We have known of previous periods in American history when rapacious industry greedily seeking ever increasing profits have for a time succeeded in the endeavor.

But in the wake of these policies has come economic disaster. The economic debacle of 1929 followed a period where industry was given an open and free hand to run amuck. But the mass unemployment and human distress which followed will never be forgotten.

To date the Federal Administration has completely ignored the grave human problems which stand unsolved.

The Federal Administration instead is embarked upon a policy of continued appeasement of American industry in the face of its contemptuous attitude toward the American people and the government itself.

The C. I. O. is opposed to the basic policies thus pursued by the Administration.

It is within this framework that the proposed legislation of President Truman must be viewed and its real intent understood.

The design of the specific legislative proposal is to weaken and ultimately destroy labor union organizations. It can be but the first step for ever more savage legislative repression. For this reason the C. I. O. shall mobilize its entire membership and the American people to defeat this specific measure and all similar attempts directed against labor.

The American people have not participated with all of their energies and resources in the recent ferocious struggle against Foscism in order to have democracy weakened and threatened through proposals leading to industrial serfdom.

The C. I. O. is firmly of the belief that in pursuing its policy to achieve a higher standard of living for American wage earners it is serving the interest of the nation to assure the fulfillment of our national aspirations so eloquently expressed by President Roosevelt in his historic economic bill of rights.

We seek for all—jobs, security, full employment and peace.

To this objective—we dedicate the C. I. O. and its membership.

Unions, Management Clash on Labor Bills

AFL, CIO Denounce Anti-Strike Legislation; Industry Reveals Support.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 — (AP) Labor and business groups which had joined in President Truman's Labor-Management conference were in head-on conflict tonight over various labor bills pending in the House.

Leaders of the nation's biggest labor organizations, addressing a meeting of more than 100 House members, vigorously objected to proposed anti-strike legislation and a bill to include labor unions in the so-called anti-racketeering act of 1934.

Sees Labor United

A.F.L. President William Green said the legislation had united all of labor in "immovable opposition" and contended that such measures would endanger free enterprise and swing American labor "to the left, as the trend has been in other countries."

Other opposition speakers included President R. J. Thomas of the C.I.O.-Auto Workers, and representatives of the United Mine Workers and Railroad Brotherhoods.

Shortly before, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce had announced its support of the legislation which they denounced.

Resolutions re - affirming the chamber's stand were approved by the board of directors Friday, the closing day of the Labor-Management conference, but were not announced until tonight.

Neither the labor leaders nor the U. S. chamber referred to President Truman's message of yesterday, however, in which he asked for legislation to curb big strikes by creation of fact-finding procedure patterned after the Railway Labor act.

Special Hearing Called

The labor representatievs objected to bills reported out by the House Military and Judiciary committees, on which they contended there had been no opportunity for unionists to be heard. Rep. Sabath (D.-Ill.), chairman of the Rules committee which cleared the legislation for floor action, called the special meeting of House members to hear "labor's side."

"They don't have any strikes in Russia," Green said, "but do we want a strikeless nation under a totalitarian government?"

"American labor has made a record of production during the war unequalled by workers anywhere else under the sun," he added. "Are we now to be compensated by being reduced to a position of servitude and slavery?"

Thomas, who represented the C.I.O. in the absence of President Philip Murray, said the measures were designed "to smash the labor movement in this country."

Although no reference was made at the meeting to President Truman's program, elsewhere John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers issued an angry attack on the President's proposals.

The U.M.W. issued a statement calling the Truman recommendations a "fooler bill to revamp and strait-jacket American industrial relations."

"General MacArthur," said the statement, "has ordered an end to enslaved labor in Japan by ordering the repeal of an anti-strike law passed in 1938, sponsored by the Jap military authorities. Mr. Truman proposes to transplant it here."

The President called yesterday for legislation which would create fact-finding commissions to inquire into major disputes. Work stoppages would be barred while the boards were operating.

The President also announced he would name shortly fact-finding boards to look into the current General Motors strike, and the threatened steel strike. He called on the C.I.O. United Auto workers to go back to work, and appealed to the C.I,O. Steel Workers not to strike.

Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary, said at a news conference today that the General Motors fact-finders would be appointed in a day or two, and that the appointments in the steel case would follow soon afterward.

Hope for Early Settlement

A hope that the General Motors strike can be settled before the fact-finding board starts operations was expressed by H. W. Anderson, personnel vice president of General Motors corporation.

Here for a conference with Edgar L. Warren, chief of the federal Conciliation service, Anderson told reporters the company was prepared to continue general collective bargaining with the C.I.O. United Auto Workers if the question of "illegal picketing" was settled first.

On Capitol hill, acting Chairman

because I was far forward and was pretty busy," he acknowledged.

But he added that there were no general orders from the bridge over the public address system. He said he had a "pretty good idea" why not but the court refused to permit that observation as a "conclusion" of the witness.

McVay, slight but sturdy son of a former Asiatic fleet commander, took an active hand in his own defense, prompting his counsel to questions. His wife sat in the front of the court room; several dozen spectators sat in the rear.

McVay Court-Martial Testimony Begins

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d, skipper of the ill-fated cruiser Indianapolis, entered formal pleas of innocent to charges of negligence and inefficiency in the loss of the vessel, today.

The charges were read to him at his public court-martial and when asked how he pleaded he replied in a fim voice, "Not guilty."

Asked if he had any admission to make in open court with regard to the charges and specifications, he replied through his counsel, Capt. John P. Cady, that he was commanding officer of the cruiser Indianapolis on July 30, 1945, the date she was sunk and that the ship was en route from Guam to Leyte.

Made With His Consent

Captain McVay, in response to an inquiry, said these acknowledgements were made with his consent.

As court opened, counsel for the accused officer reported the defense was ready to proceed with the trial and the charges and specifications were read to him.

Convened Yesterday

The seven-man court, headed by Rear Admiral Wilder D. Baker, was convened yesterday, but granted the defense a 24-hour postponement to complete preparation of its case after rejecting a defense motion to quash one of the charges.

Defense counsel, Captain Cady, entered an objection to the charge that Captain McVay through "negligence" permitted his ship to be endangered by failing to order the ship to sail a zigzag course, although it was traveling without escort through an area in which enemy submarines might be encountered.

Argued Unsuccessfully

He argued unsuccessfully that the charge "failed to state an offense," but merely "set out a conclusion."

Although loss of the heavy cruiser has been officially attributed to "enemy action," there has been no explanation of exactly what caused the disaster. The ship, survivors related, sank in fifteen minutes. There were 100 per cent casualties among the ship's 1,196 personnel. Dead and missing totaled 880, and the remainder were injured.

The prosecution introduced testimony today through its first witness that the Indianapolis had been warned of submarine contacts "within 200 miles" of the route the cruiser was instructed to take.

This testimony was given by Lieut. Joseph J. Waldron, the convoy routing officer at Guam.

Instructions Outlined

The lieutenant described how the route was devised from Guam to Leyte and a copy of it and intelligence instructions was introduced.

The instructions were that the Indianapolis was to proceed on a specified longitude and latitude at 15 knots, arriving at Leyte on July 31. The commander was instructed to zigzag a this own discretion.

There were signs of submarines on three different occasions in the vicinity of the route, the report said. It added that several instances of floating mines had been noted "and a sharp lookout should be kept."

Escort Not Discussed.

Under cross-examination, Waldron testified that the question of a destroyer escort for the cruiser was not discussed with her officers. However, he checked with the area commander to inquire if one was available and was informed that one was not needed. He said he was told that a directive from fleet headquarters provided that under conditions then prevailing ships would sail the route without escort.

Under questioning by the Judge Advocate, the witness said he did not recall any other combatant vessel sailing the route about the same time without escort. Waldron also testified that the basic documents in possession of all commanding officers of combat vessels contained instructions for zigzagging in waters considered to be dangerous and therefore such orders were not specified in sailing orders for that specific voyage.

He then told the court that after the loss of the Indianapolis the route she took was abolished and new routes for comparable travel were devised.

FEDERAL AGENCY SEEKING TO EASE HOUSING PROBLEM

Surplus Property Chief Proposes Use of Idle U.S. Buildings.

DEC 5 1945

STATES WOULD AID

Veterans to Get Priority in Renting Homes, Leases to Be for Five Years.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 — (AP) The government may turn over surplus buildings to the states without cost to meet the housing emergency.

W. Stuart Symington, surplus property administrator was reported tonight by an official of his agency to be considering issuing such an authorization tomorrow. It would be effective at once.

Outlines Terms

The official, who asked that he not be named, said the terms as contemplated call for:

1. The states to maintain the property.
2. Houses to be rented first to veterans and after that to the general public.
3. Demountable (knocked down) houses in storage areas of various disposal agencies to be erected by the states on favorable federal sites.
4. Leases to be for a maximum of five years with permission to terminate on six months notice at the end of the housing emergency.
5. Rents in excess of maintenance costs to revert to the government.

The official said the order could be expected to authorize the Army and Navy specifically, together with other owning and disposal agencies, to make surplus housing available to the states.

The order would include barracks, cantonments, demountable houses and the like.

The worsening plight of veterans and others seeking homes prompted the government to call for help in getting full-scale housing construction underway.

Calls Conference Dec. 17

John B. Blandford, Jr., national housing administrator, invited representatives of contractors, labor, finance agencies and materials producers to a Washington conference Dec. 17 for advice on clearing away obstacles delaying quantity home production.

Along with this move Senator Meade (D-N.Y.) renewed appeals for funds to transfer temporary war housing and abandoned army barracks to cities.

Mead testified before the Senate Education committee in behalf of his resolution to provide $195,000,000 for "panelizing" war housing. This is a process of cutting up the temporary dwellings into panels for transportation and erection in localities which need them.

Government housing experts believe Mead's proposal would help but they oppose any widespread new building of temporary living quarters in the belief it would simply postpone the need for permanent housing.

Mead estimated his proposal would provide 100,000 temporary dwelling units for veterans. Against this, William Green, president of the A.F.L., said in a statement to the Senate Banking committee that at least 6,000,000 veterans' families will need housing within a year.

The conference called by Blandford had been suggested by Reconversion Director John M. Snyder as a step to find and eliminate "bottlenecks" in the way of home building. Those arranging the meeting said such subjects as price controls on homes and new government priorities on materials are sure to come up.

Rep. Patman (D-Tex) and Blandford agreed today, at a hearing of the House Banking committee, that release soon after V-J day of government allocation controls on scarce building materials has resulted in most of it going to commercial and industrial construction. Patman wants materials allocation controls and price ceilings.

Frank W. Cortright, spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders, told a reporter he doubted whether the pressure for building materials is severe enough to return to wartime priority controls but added "it's a matter of individual judgment."

"It looks," said Cortright, "like the veteran is going to have to go back to live with the folks for a year or so—but he'll have to wait that long for an automobile, an electric iron and a lot of other things."

U. S. CALLS FOR AID IN HOUSING CRISIS

DEC 5 1945

Contractors, Labor, Finance Firms to Study Removal of Obstacles at Parley

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—The plight of veterans and others seeking homes prompted the Government today to call for help in getting full-scale housing construction under way.

John B. Blandford Jr., National Housing Administrator, invited representatives of contractors, labor, finance agencies and material producers to a Washington conference on Dec. 17 for advice on clearing away obstacles delaying quantity home production.

At the same time Senator Mead of New York renewed appeals for funds to transfer temporary war housing and abandoned Army barracks to cities.

Mr. Mead testified before the Senate Education Committee in behalf of his resolution to provide $195,000,000 for "panelizing" war housing. This is a process of cutting up the temporary dwellings into panels for transportation and erection in localities which need them.

Predicts 100,000 Dwellings

Government housing experts believe Mr. Mead's proposal would help, but they oppose any widespread new building of temporary living quarters in the belief it would simply postpone the need for permanent housing.

The Senator estimated his proposal would provide 100,000 temporary dwelling units for veterans.

Against this, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said in a statement to the Senate Banking Committee that at least 6,000,000 veterans' families will need housing within a year.

The conference called by Mr. Blandford had been suggested by John M. Snyder, Reconversion Director, as a step to find and eliminate "bottlenecks" in the way of home building. Those arranging the meeting said such subjects as price controls on homes and new Government priorities on materials are sure to come up.

Patman for Price Ceilings

Representative Patman of Texas and Blandford agreed today, at a hearing of the House Banking Committee, that release soon after V-J Day of Government allocation controls on scarce building materials has resulted in most of it going to commercial and industrial construction. Mr. Patman wants materials allocation controls and price ceilings.

Frank W. Cortright, spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders, told a reporter he doubted whether the pressure for building materials is severe enough to return to wartime priority controls, but added "it's a matter of individual judgment."

May Act on Surpluses Today

The government may turn over surplus buildings to the States without cost to meet the housing emergency.

W. Stuart Symington, Surplus Property Administrator, was reported tonight by an official of his agency to be considering issuing such an authorization tomorrow. It would be effective at once.

The official, who asked that he not be named, said the terms as contemplated call for:

1. The States to maintain the property.
2. Houses to be rented first to veterans and after that to the general public.
3. Demountable houses in storage areas of various disposal agencies to be erected by the States on favorable Federal sites.
4. Leases to be for a maximum of five years with permission to terminate on six months' notice at the end of the housing emergency.
5. Rents in excess of maintenance costs to revert to the government.

The official said the order could be expected to authorize the Army and Navy specifically, together with other owning and disposal agencies, to make surplus housing available to the States. The order would include barracks, cantonments, demountable houses and the like.

6,000,000 VETS TO NEED HOUSES

Washington, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—William Green, president of the A. F. of L., said today that at least 6,000,000 families of returning veterans will need adequate housing within a year and that a large-scale housing program "is America's order of the day."

Green, in testimony prepared for the Senate Banking Committee, urged passage of the Taft-Wagner-Ellender housing bill as "the cornerstone to our nation's post-war reconstruction" and added: "A good American home has become a symbol of what Americans have fought for and what they have won. To provide that good home is one promise which America must not fail to fulfill."

The pending bill would consolidate all Federal housing activities in a permanent national housing agency and establish, as national policy, Government aid to private enterprise in home-building and aid in slum clearance.

3,000,000 New Marriages.

Green estimated that 1,500,000 service men are newly married. Another 1,500,000 probably will be married within the year, he said, and some 3,000,000 need housing immediately.

He urged prompt provision for needed temporary housing, but cautioned that this should not substitute for adoption of the "bold and comprehensive solution" offered in the Taft-Wagner-Ellender bill.

Green said that labor was particularly interested in provisions enabling private enterprise to "bring home ownership within the financial reach of families of moderate income." Further, he said, labor urged "clear-cut indorsement and unhesitating enactment" of sections which permit resumption of the low-rent public housing program, locally administered.

Republicans in Senate Study Party 'Platform'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4—(AP)—Senate Republicans were reported today to have reached a partial agreement on foreign policy and labor planks in a proposed mid-term affirmative party program.

There was considerable debate on other subjects, however, including farm and social welfare policies, and participants said another party conference will be held tomorrow.

House Republicans also will meet tomorrow morning to discuss the tentative draft of a "platform" which party leaders are striving to finish in time for consideration by the Republican National committee late this week in Chicago.

Statemen Expected

Considerable opposition to bringing out a platform at this time was voiced at today's meeting of senators, but Senator Taft (R-Ohio) predicted a six point, 1,500-word "statement of principles" would be adopted by party conferences in both houses.

Taft said the text of the statement will not be made public until the Senate group votes on it, probably tomorrow. The program was described by Taft as a supplement to the platform adopted by the 1944 national convention.

Chairman Herbert Brownell, Jr., of the National committee was among those initiating the mid-term program idea. He said the party should not have to wait four years for a convention to get an up to date program. If congressional Republicans get together on one, he said recently, the National committee will try to sell it to Republicans generally.

Some Opposition

Taft told reporters there was a "good bit of opposition" in today's Senate conference to the timing of the statement. Some participants cited upset conditions and the likelihood of much change between now and next November as reasons for withholding action.

"I have never been much for the idea myself," Taft told reporters. "But the National committee and the House want to do something and I think we should cooperate."

Taft predicted the statement would be criticized for its general nature, but said it could not be otherwise "when you try to get about 250 people together on something of this kind." There are 190 Republicans in the House and 39 in the Senate.

3 U.S. ALCOHOL PLANTS CLOSED

Reason: Oil Is Cheaper Synthetic Rubber Source

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—The country can get from oil all the synthetic rubber it needs, officials announced today, so $117,000,000 of wartime plants to make it from grain alcohol are being closed.

Oil versus grain as a source of butadiene, from which rubber is made, was a prime controversy early in the war. Farm state congressmen and agriculture groups urged the alcohol project to promote the use of grain.

G. B. Hadlock, associate director of the Office of Rubber Reserve, said that the reason for abandoning alcohol in favor of petroleum as a butadiene source "is purely dollars and cents."

Costs Compared

"Our cost of butadiene this year," he said, "was about 40 cents a pound from alcohol, compared with 8 to 10 cents a pound from petroleum. That made the cost of alcohol synthetic rubber around 24½ cents a pound, compared with 12 or 13 cent rubber from the petroleum butadiene plants on the Gulf Coast.

"We have a directive from the Office of Reconversion telling us to run synthetic rubber production on an 'efficient and economical basis in the best interests of the Government.'

"We construe that to mean that we run it on a businesslike basis."

Curtailment Fought

Agricultural groups and farm-state members of Congress have fought the curtailment of alcohol usage, since it provides a large outlet for grain which, under present plans to continue synthetic rubber output in peacetime, might last indefinitely.

Short of Government subsidies, however, there appears no way to make the alcohol plants economically feasible, Hadlock said, and Rubber Reserve, an RFC subsidiary which supervises the synthetic operations, has no authority to subsidize.

The Government-owned plants to make butadiene from alcohol which are being closed are at Institute, W.Va.; Kobuta, Pa., and Louisville. The last already has been closed. They will be kept in "stand-by condition," however, in case of emergency. The plants at Institute and Louisville, which actually make rubber from butadiene, will continue in operation indefinitely.

Styrene Plants Closing

The Government also is closing styrene plants at Kobuta and Institute which cost about $29,400,000. Styrene is the other main ingredient of synthetic rubber.

Three oil refineries which were re-equipped to make butadiene from petroleum at the height of the rubber crisis at a cost of $8,300,000 also are being closed because of high cost of operation.

They are the Humble Oil and Refining Company plant at Ingleside, Texas, already closed; and the Taylor Refining Company plant at Corpus Christi, Texas, and the Lion Oil Company plant at El Dorado, Ark., both in process of closing.

Small Part Contributed

The converted plants contributed only a small part of the national butadiene output, about 13,000 tons annually. The Government will restore them to condition for oil refining.

The three big alcohol plants, operators for the Government, construction cost and rated capacity are:

Institute—Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corporation, $39,000,000; capacity, 80,000 tons a year.

Kobuta—Koppers Company, Inc., $42,500,000; capacity, 80,000 tons a year.

Louisville—Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corporation, $35,500,000; capacity, 60,000 tons a year.

600,000 Tons Foreseen

Hadlock said that petroleum plants could produce enough butadiene to make 600,000 tons of general-purpose synthetic rubber annually.

The estimated need for the next twelve months is put at 550,000 tons, since the Government now estimates that 300,000 tons of natural rubber will come in from liberated and other areas. In addition, butadiene stockpiles are ample.

The Institute, Kobuta and Louisville plants were rated capable of supplying about one third of the country's butadiene capacity, but actually produced much more than that when pushed for wartime purposes.

LA GUARDIA SUGGESTS JUDICIARY TRAINING

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—Mayor La Guardia proposed today a new system for selecting members of the judiciary, from the lowest to the highest courts.

Addressing the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, he criticized the present manner of appointing and electing judges, and suggested this formula:

"After providing law candidates a full course, I would arrange for a test of the fundamentals of law, economics and government. Then I would give them two years of post-graduate work.

"Then these young men should be distributed throughtout the various departments of State and local government and then shifted around so that in five years they would have had the opportunity of first-hand contact with many phases of government."

The next step, the New York Mayor said, would call for appointment to membership on the lower courts.

"Let these young men sit for five or ten years on the lower courts and then promote them to the civil and criminal courts of unlimited jurisdiction, and then——

"After twenty-five or thirty years assign them to the highest courts. They'd still have fifteen years or so of great usefulness remaining."

"Then," he declared, "you'd have a real judicial system."

The Mayor described himself as critical of the law profession in general, mainly because of what he said was its unwillingness to submit to change.

"Where would the medical profession be," he asked, if it resented change? It governs itself much better than the law and it has made great strides."

Asserting that law had progressed little in fifty years, and had shown no indication "to handle the tools given it," Mr. La Guardia said:

"The law must do its share. It must specialize to meet changing conditions. It's slow and always behind."

ARMY TRANSFERS SHIPS TO PACIFIC

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—(AP) The Army is transferring 32 troop transports with a total capacity of 83,000 men from the Atlantic to the Pacific to speed up return of soldiers from that theater.

The War department said in a statement today all the ships would be through the Panama Canal this month.

Seventeen are fast troop transports, including the West Point, formerly the passenger liner America. The others are converted Victory ships.

The fastest will reach Japan in 23 days or the Philippines in 26, while the slowest will require about 30 days to Japan or 35 to Manila.

Present schedules call for return of about 376,000 soldiers to west coast ports in December, compared with 234,000 in November.

Terminal-Leave Pay Broadening Advocated

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—Favorable action on two bills calling for terminal-leave payments to enlisted men and noncommissioned officers of all services, was urged by Representative Wickersham (D., Okla.).

Appearing before the House Military Committee as a witness, Wickersham asked adoption of legislation to:

1. Grant enlisted men and noncommissioned officers the same terminal-leave payments granted officers, based on the service man's compensation.

2. All terminal leave for enlisted men or officers to be paid in cash, allowing them to accept nonmilitary Government jobs and go to work as soon as discharged.

Under present law, Wickersham explained, a service man cannot work in any other Government job while he is drawing terminal-leave pay.

"During my recent trip to 35 countries of Europe and the Near East, I found that our service men, including officers, were unanimously in favor of this type of legislation," Wickersham said.

Truman Urged to Back Palestine for All Faiths

Judaism Council Asks Immigration Be on Absorptive Basis

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—President Truman received today a proposed seven-point program for ending rioting and bloodshed in Palestine under which immigration would be maintained on the basis of "absorptive capacity."

Lessing J. Rosenwald, president of the American Council for Judaism, urged a United Nations declaration that Palestine be made a country in which peoples of all faiths could participate and not "a Moslem, Christian of a Jewish state."

He called on the President a short while after J. David Stern, publisher of "The Phialedlphia Record," who told reporters Mr. Truman is for "a free democratic Palestine based on equality of all races and creeds."

Stephens in New Red Cross Post

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—William A. Stephens of Brooklyn has been appointed American Red Cross commissioner for Great Britain and western Europe, Basil O'Connor, national chairman, announced today. He succeeds Frederick A. Carroll of Boston, who was killed in an automobile accident in France Oct. 16. Mr. Stephens has been overseas with the Red Cross for three years. He was regional director for northern Italy prior to his transfer to the western European theater. Before joining the Red Cross he was in the brokerage business in New York.

Polish Envoy in Washington

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP).—Dr. Oscar Lange, Ambassador-designate of Poland, established himself and his family at the Polish Embassy today following his arrival in Washington by plane. The former University of Chicago professor was greeted on his arrival from Poland last night by Mrs. Lange and their small son, who have been in Washington for the last week. He will present his credentials to President Truman in a few days.

EASTLAND HITS RUSSIA ON POLICY IN GERMANY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—Senator James O. Eastland, Democrat, of Mississippi, sharply criticized the Russian administration of eastern Germany today, and condemned also the de-industrialization of Germany.

Reading a prepared speech, Mr. Eastland declared that if the German people were held down to a bare subsistence level, and if their culture and self-respect were destroyed, they would be "driven into the arms of communism."

"Mr. President," he said, "the western powers cannot permit the German Reich to become a satellite of Russia. The Communists know that a hungry, chaotic Germany will and must embrace Communism, and that a Soviet Germany would lead to the Sovietizing of the smaller nations of western Europe and the collapse of democracy outside Britain and the United States.

"The American people must realize that Russia is a predatory, aggressor nation and that today she follows the same fateful road on conquest and aggression from which Adolf Hitler set the world on fire."

Mr. Eastland, a cotton planter, said that the stripping of Germany's industry would deprive the United States of one of its greatest foreign markets. He noted that in the Nineteen Twenties Germany took more than 2,000,000 bales of American cotton annually.

NAVY TO RELEASE 38-YEAR-OLD MEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. — (AP) The Navy today announced it will release all reserve enlisted men and women 38 years of age or older who had one or more dependents prior to Aug. 15.

The Navy estimated that there are about 35,000 enlisted personnel in this classification. However, most of these already have become eligible for discharge under the point system.

The new regulation does not apply to enlisted men in the regular Navy or to those undergoing medical treatment or disciplinary action.

The Navy previously has granted releases to enlisted men 42 years of age or older, regardless of their point score or dependency. Married enlisted WAVES have been eligible for release irrespective of age.

Under the new regulation, the wife of an enlisted man is counted as a dependent.

The Navy reported it has discharged a total of 826,187 from Aug. 17 to Dec. 1. In November alone, the Navy released 550,497 while voluntary enlistments for the month totaled 15,400.

Ramspeck (D-Ga) of the House Labor committee told reporters a bill embodying the Truman request will be introduced tomorrow. Hearings, he said, will be held to a minimum, with witnesses to appear for organized labor, the National Association of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce and the Labor department.

The House Military committee had considered tacking new labor legislation on to a pending bill revising the Smith-Connally labor disputes act, but Ramspeck said he understood the military group would defer action "for about a week in order to allow our committee to act."

fasten upon American working men and women this hangover concept which was first thought up by Wall Street and the military of the United States in the form of a labor conscription act, against which the people rebelled.

"Gen. MacArthur has ordered an end to enslaved labor in Japan by ordering the repeal of an anti-strike law passed in 1938, sponsored by the Jap military authorities. Mr. Truman proposes to transplant it here.

"The Truman proposal is an attempt on the part of the administration to serve the big interests in a manner indirectly to what the people refused to do directly."

United Mine Workers Attack Truman Plan to Curb Strikes

Call Proposal for Fact-finding in Labor Disputes a Bill to Strait-jacket American Industrial Relations.

Washington, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—The United Mine Workers today released an official statement criticizing President Truman's proposal for fact-finding procedure in labor disputes.

"President Truman's fooler bill to revamp and strait-jacket American industrial relations cannot be politically 'hawked' to any sensible person," the U. M. W. statement said.

John L. Lewis, president of the union, made no comment on the proposal in his own behalf.

"Simply because labor and management did not create utopia in a four weeks' meeting that was of a political design, and called without consultation with either labor or management, does not constitute an overt threat to government or the American way of life," the statement said.

"The Truman proposal is in direct opposite to the award that American labor should receive for its performance during the past five years. In no other country in the world was the productivity per man per day achieved equal to that of the American worker. Yet, Mr. Truman proposes to

G.M. Official Hopes Strike Can Be Ended Without Board

Detroit, Dec. 4 (AP)—Hope that the strike of 175,000 General Motors employés could be settled without resort to President Truman's fact-finding board was expressed today by Harry W. Anderson, the corporation's vice president in charge of personnel.

Anderson made his comment at Washington as it appeared that the Monday appeal by Mr. Truman for an immediate return to work by strikers had failed to dent the ranks of CIO unionists seeking to enforce demands for a 30 per cent wage increase.

Emerging from a conference with Edgar L. Warren, chief of the United States Counciliation Service at Washington, Anderson said General Motors was prepared to bargain collectively with the union as soon as its complaint against "illegal picketing" was disposed of.

Expresses Hope

Anderson was asked, "Do you think the strike can be settled without a fact-finding board?"

"I hope so," he replied.

Opposition to such a move and to the President's proposal for the fact-finding board spread in United Automobile Workers (CIO) ranks today, with some leaders expressing belief that a conference of UAW-CIO representatives from G.M. locals would reject the program by an overwhelming vote when they meet here Saturday.

The plan for such boards was assailed here by John W. Anderson, chairman of a UAW-CIO Veterans' Committee, as continuing what he termed "the wartime practice of denying the workers their just demands through an agency set up by the Goverment."

Leaves After Conference

R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO international president, who said he was opposed to Mr. Truman's proposals, conferred at Pittsburgh with Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and then left for Washington.

Whether he planned conferences at the Capital with high Government officials was undetermined. He said he would address a group of congressmen headed by Representative Sabath (D., Ill.), meeting to discuss labor legislation.

Representatives of corporation and union will meet here tomorrow to discuss management's charge that supervisory and office employés have been illegally barred from G.M. plants.

C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors; Thomas and Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, were invited by a citizens' group meeting in Detroit to present their views on the wage dispute and to answer questions.

Hears Transcript

The citizens' committee, meeting at the invitation of the UAW-CIO, today began to listen to a transcript of the seven sessions of wage negotiations—all held before the present strike started—engaged in by General Motors and union representatives. The group, headed by Dr. Henry Hitt Crane, Detroit Methodist minister, includes educators, churchmen and representatives of women's organizations and business.

The group, including former OPA Administrator Leon Henderson, said they planned to question both union and G.M. representatives Wednesday and then vote on

House May Have New Labor Bill In Two Days

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP) — The House Military Committee put on speed today in an effort to meet President Truman's pre-Christmas deadline for a law to forbid crucial work stoppages until the public can learn the facts.

Chairman May (D., Ky.) summoned his committee to a closed session to consider methods that would permit a House vote within a matter of days.

Specifically Mr. Truman asked Congress to authorize fact-finding procedures for important labor disputes, with strikes or lockouts barred for 30 days. He asked it to pass the law before it goes home for Christmas on December 20.

Action Thursday Possible

May said he favors adding this legislation to a bill that will be eligible for House consideration Thursday. That bill would repeal major provisions of the Smith-Connally War Labor Disputes Act.

Both Democrats and Republicans voiced strong support of May's move, and several committee members said they would insist on a decision today.

There were indications that the committee might go even further than the President requested by providing for arbitration machinery coupled with stiff penalties on unions or industries that refused to abide by recommendations of recommendations resulting from their study.

A telegram sent to Wilson by Robert E. Garrigan, assistant director of the new Council of American Business, Washington, a member of the committee, invited "you or a representative designated by you to appear tomorrow morning to present the General Motors viewpoint and respond to questions from members of the group."

In Saginaw, Mich., the tossing of a large log on the front porch of a home occupied by parents of William H. Doerfner, general manager of G.M.'s steering-gear plant No. 2, marked the third such incident of vandalism there within a week. Two bricks were tossed last week through dining-room windows of Doerfner's own home.

mediation commissions.

May Sees An Opportunity

May himself said he favored such action, adding:

"The President's message affords a splendid opportunity for the Congress to enact a fair and just labor statute covering both labor and management.

"The pending bill just recently reported [the War Labor Disputes Act repealer] is on the House calendar and should be so amended as to carry into effect the President's recommendations."

Truman Setting Up Boards

Without waiting for Congress to act, Mr. Truman said he will appoint fact-finding boards of the type he outlined for both the 20-state General Motors strike and the current steel wage dispute.

He asked the striking CIO United Auto Workers to go back to their jobs and appealed to the CIO steel workers not to walk out. He sent appeals too to General Motors and the United States Steel Corporation for full production while the fact-finding boards carry out their assignments.

Truman's View

In his message to Congress, Mr. Truman called attention to the failure of the recent labor-management conference to reach an agreement on how to avoid work stoppages and told Congress it should act "as quickly as possible—and certainly before its Christmas recess."

Under his fact-finding plan neither party would be bound by the findings but, the President said, "the general public would know all the facts."

"The result, I am sure," Mr. Truman declared, "would be that in most cases both sides would accept the recommendations, as they have in most of the railway labor disputes."

MARITIME UNION ENDS ITS PROTEST WALKOUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 4—(AP) Members of the C.I.O. National Maritime union were back at their jobs on ships and docks along the nation's shoreline today following a 24-hour work halt which Joseph Curran, N.M.U. president, said was in protest of what he called a delay in returning veterans from overseas.

Curran pronounced the action a success, but Capt. Hewlett R. Bishop, Atlantic coast director of the War Shipping administration, said it was ineffective.

The N.M.U. chief, asserting the union was protesting use of some ships for commercial purposes when they could be used to bring troops home, said union members did not quit work on troopships, relief ships, colliers, tankers and ships at sea.

Transport Planes Abroad Estimated

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—Foreign countries have 3,000 American-built transport planes obtained through lend-lease, an aviation-industry survey of Government records showed today, with expectations that about two thirds will be retained for permanent use.

The total number of planes overseas is about nine times those being used by all United States domestic airlines when the war started. This country built about 20,000 transports during the war.

Great Britain and Russia have 83 per cent of the total distributed through lend-lease.

Army C-47 Type

All are army C-47 type, a modification of the Douglas DC-3 which is used by most airlines. The British also received eleven C-54's, a four-engine plane, but is returning them to the United States.

Lend-lease C-47's are held by these countries: Australia, 139; Great Britain, 1,864; Canada, 47; New Zealand, 47; Bolivia, 4; Brazil, 11; Colombia, 1; China, 71; France, 53; the Netherlands, 23; Russia, 727; Norway, 7.

Government officials estimated 188 C-47 types might be sold overseas in addition to 383 already sold to 24 countries. The prospective market includes five planes for Norway, 143 for France, 10 for Belgium, 20 for Poland and 10 for India.

Planes Delivered Or Promised

Planes already delivered or committed to delivery include: Norway, 10; Sweden, 12; Ireland, 5; France, 83; Belgium, 6; The Netherlands, 14; Denmark, 8; Spain, 21; Portugal, 8; Switzerland, 3; Czechoslovakia, 12; Greece, 2; South Africa, 25; Egypt, 5; Saudi-Arabia, 5; Iran, 5; Ethiopia, 5; Lebanon, 5; India, 24; Indo-China, 30; Netherlands Indies, 21; Philippines, 5; China, 39; Australia, 30.

The United States has applications for 69 C-54 types, but has delivered only 15. It has allocated 55 among 12 countries and foreign airlines.

Applications For C-54's

The applications include Aeronaves of Mexico, 1; Mexican National Company, 4; Avianca of Colombia, 3; Panair do Brasil, 4; China National Aviation Company, 6; Cruzeiro of Brazil, 2; France, 20; Latin American Air, 2; The Netherlands, 19; Dodero, which operates in South America, 4.

Belgium and Sweden have no formal applications, but four C-54's have been allocated to each country.

House Group Okays New Job Bill

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—The House Expenditures Committee today approved legislation to declare a Federal policy of maintaining "a high level of employment" in the nation.

The measure is a substitute for socalled "full employment" legislation requested by President Truman.

The term "full employment" was stricken entirely in the substitute and the words "high level of employment" were used instead.

Breaks Stalemate

The committee's action broke a two-month stalmate on the legislation, which was passed in early October by the Senate.

During that time Mr. Truman criticized the expenditures group for what he termed "damaging delay" in handling the bill.

Whether the revised version will be acceptable to the President remains to be seen. In each of his appals for action he has asked for "full employment" legislation.

"Maxumum Opportunity"

The substitute measure says it shall be the Government's policy to create "in a manner consistent with the American system of free enterprise, the maximum opportunity for employment (including self-employment), to attain and maintain a high level of employment (including self-employment), production and purchasing power."

Under the bill, it would be the Government's policy to plan and adopt a program of "sound public works consistent with a financially sound fiscal policy" to aid in maintaining employment.

Others For Full Employment

The original Administration-backed measure by Representative Patman (D., Texas) would have "assured" all able-bodied Americans wanting jobs the opportunity to have them. This phrasing was rejected by the committee.

Under the substitute a three-member council of economic advisers would bet set up under the President.

60-Day Limit

This council would make recommendations to the President regarding ways to maintain "high levels of employment" and the President in turn would make recommendations to Congress.

The President would be required to submit his recommendations within 60 days after the start of each regular congressional session, beginning in 1947.

Also created would be a joint congressional committee which would study the President's message and make recommendations to the House and Senate regarding legislation.

Committee members told newsmen approval of the bill was by a vote of "about 13 to 7."

Russia And Atomic Energy

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—A Warsaw dispatch of the Polish press agency today quoted Adolf Berman, Under secretary of state in the Polish Council of Ministers, as saying:

"At the present time the atomic bomb is no longer the property of any one nation. The Soviet Union, which leads in scientific research, has conquered atomic energy."

It was not stated explicitly that Russia had an atomic bomb. V. M. Molotov, Foreign Commissar, promised the Russian people a month ago that the Soviet Union "shall have atomic energy and much else besides."

Share Atomics, Wallace Asks

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce, said tonight that the Government must control atomic-energy experiments within the United States but that "genius is world-wide" and the world must share the new power.

In an address at a mass meeting in Madison Square Garden arranged by the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, Inc., he declared that intelligent control of atomic energy could open up a new era of economic abundance, but added:

"A public agency must control the allocation of all fissionable material and know the purpose for which each gram is used.

Warns On Monopoly

"To permit private interests the right of unregulated manufacture or utilization of these materials would be equivalent to authorizing private armies or private arsenals.

"On the other hand, Government or private monopoly of any type of peaceful economic use of atomic energy must be held to a minimum. The application of atomic energy should be an open field for free competitive business enterprise."

"I say," he concluded, "that atomic eneregy constructively applied to raising the standard of living of all peoples will do infinitely more to eliminate war than any type of control over atomic bombs."

LEAHY PICTURES MERGER AS RADICAL

Washington, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Admiral William D. Leahy today opposed proposals for a single national defense department as "radical" and "revolutionary."

The wartime Chief of Staff to both President Roosevelt and President Truman told the Senate Military Affairs Committee he was offering "my own personal views."

"I am quite certain that naval efficiency would be seriously reduced," the Admiral told Senators in discussing recommendations by War Department officials and Army generals that a single post-war defense department be formed with Navy, Army and Air Force branches.

"It might improve War Department efficiency," the veteran naval leader said, adding that the War Department had been completely reorganized during the recent war and so "has not had the test of time of the Navy Department."

SAYS TRUMAN GAVE ATOM BOMB ORDER

Washington, Dec. 4 (A. P.).—Dr. Vannevar Bush said last night that the late President Roosevelt made the decision to burn out Japanese cities with new type incendiary bombs, but had nothing to do with the decision to drop the atomic bombs on Nagasaki and Hiroshima.

The Associated Press, in an account yesterday of Dr. Bush's testimony before the special Senate committee on atomic energy, erroneously quoted him as saying Mr. Roosevelt made the decision on use of both weapons.

Dr. Bush, who headed the war work of American scientific laboratories, pointed out later that the atomic bomb was not tested until after Mr. Roosevelt's death.

He told newspaper men that the decision to use the atomic bomb against Japanese cities was made by President Truman while attending the Potsdam conference.

'100 A-Bombs In U.S. Now'

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 4 (AP)—Dr. Linus Pauling, head of the chemistry department at California Institute of Technology, says that between 100 and 200 atomic bombs, all of the "small" variety, are now in existence in the United States.

The professor, addressing a conference last night of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions, said there is no reason to believe that there may not be 1,000 of the bombs in this country next year. He said larger bombs than those now developed will be made.

3 Of 6 Top Naval Jobs Are Given To Aviators

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—In recognition of the "increasingly dominant" role of aviation in the Navy Secretary Forrestal today announced a new organization plan which will give qualified naval aviators three of the six top jobs under the Chief of Naval Operations.

As further evidence of the evolution of air power within the Navy, he said, aviators will be given fleet commands.

Admiral John H. Towers, the Navy's No. 1 aviator and now commander of the 5th Fleet, eventually will relieve Admiral Raymond A. Spruance as commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, Forrestal disclosed.

Mitscher To Head 8th Fleet

He said Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher "in due course" will leave his present post of Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air to become commander of the 8th Fleet, based in the Atlantic.

"Because these men pioneered aviation in the Navy," Forrestal said, "the Navy looks to them, as well as to all their fellow-officers of all origins, to be equally and fully alert to the effect of new weapons on the further evolution of sea power."

The Office of the Chief of Naval Operations consists of six key positions under the chief—a vice chief of naval operations and five deputy chiefs.

King And Nimitz Agreed

Forrestal said he and Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, retiring chief, and Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz, successor to King, had agreed that three of them would be occupied by flying men.

"Also, in general," he added, "the officer next in status to the key aviation officers mentioned will be nonaviator whereas when a key officer is a nonaviator, the officer next in status will be an aviator."

Forrestal said the Office of Vice Chief of Naval Operations, now held by Admiral Frederick C. Horne, will be assigned to Vice Admiral D. C. Ramsey, a naval aviator and now deputy commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet.

Operations Leader

The deputy chief of naval operations for operations—an officer in charge of strategic plans, actual fleet operations and fleet readiness—will also be a naval aviator. He has been selected by Nimitz and will take over when he completes his present assignment. He was not identified.

Rear Admiral Richard L. Conolly, an amphibious commander, holds the post now.

The third key position assigned to a aviator will be that of deputy chief of naval operations for air, now held by Mitscher. The office has charge of all aviation plans, determination of aircraft characteristics and aviation logistics.

Present Assignments

The other three deputy assignments are now held by Vice Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, personnel; Rear Admiral Bernhard H. Bieri, administration, and Vice Admiral William S. Farber, logistics.

Forrestal called the changes "another stage in that evolution" which he described recently by saying:

"Aviation is an integral part of the Navy and is becoming increasingly dominant. The influence of air power on the Navy will be an evolution, not a revolution."

In making today's announcement, the Secretary said he wanted to "emphasize that, although the carrier is the cutting edge of the present Navy, it must be backed up by the full complement of a well-balanced fleet."

BYRON PRICE IN MOVIES POST

Becomes Vice President Of Producers And Distributors

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—Appointment of Byron Price as vice president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America was announced tonight by President Eric Johnston.

Price, who served during the war as director of censorship, will be in charge of the association's Hollywood office.

"All with whom I have talked in the motion-picture industry have great respect and admiration for Mr. Price," said Johnston in a statement. "All of us feel we are extremely fortunate in securing his services in behalf of motion pictures. Everyone knows his brilliant record in carrying out a difficult and delicate task during the war."

Hollywood Program

Johnston said the program in Hollywood will include:

Development of research directed toward improvement of techniques and toward wider use of the film.

Extension of the use of motion pictures in education and in training.

Development of enlightened labor-management relations.

"The success of the program lies in co-operative effort both within and without the industry," he added.

Price went to Europe last September as President Truman's special representative to study and report on conditions in occupied areas, particularly in Germany. His report was released by the White House last week.

The position Price will fill had been offered earlier to J. A. Krug, former chairman of the War Production Board, who turned it down. When Johnston announced the offer to Krug he said the salary would be $75,000 a year.

Price was a newspaper man for nearly 30 years. He joined the Associated Press in 1912 and he was chief of the Washington bureau of the Associated Press for ten years. He was executive news editor of the Associated Press in New York at the time he was granted leave of absence in December, 1941, to take over the censorship job in Washington, at President Roosevelt's request.

Price was born in Indiana on March 25, 1891, and was graduated from Wabash College in 1912.

OFFICER TESTIFIES IN SHIP SINKING

Heard No Order from Bridge to Abandon Cruiser, Lieutenant Says.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—(AP) An officer of the U.S.S. Indianapolis testified today that he heard no orders from the bridge to abandon ship after the 10,000-ton cruiser was apparently torpedoed July 30 with the loss of 880 men, one of the greatest disasters in naval history.

This information was given to a Navy court martial at the trial of Capt. Charles B. McVay III, the ship's commander. McVay pleaded innocent to charges of negligence and inefficiency.

The witness, Lieut. (j.g.) Charles B. McKissick, of McKinney, Tex., was one of only 15 officers to survive the sinking of the ship en-route from Guam to Leyte.

The court martial developed testimony from a half dozen witnesses, that:

1—Three submarine contacts had been made 72 to 105 miles from the charted course of the cruiser and any one of the submersibles could have crossed its path.

2—McVay ordered zig-zagging ceased at 8 p. m. July 29 because the weather had closed in—"pitch black."

3—Two "terrific" explosions rent the ship shortly after midnight of the 30th. It sank by the bow in 15 minutes.

The submarine contacts were explained by Lieut. Joseph J. Waldron, convoy officer at Guam. Lieut. Comdr. A. R. McFarland, of Wyncote, Pa., testified as an expert that he would have regarded them as something for considerable concern.

Astronomer Testifies

An astronomer of the naval observatory, Gerald Clemence of Washington, said the moon shed a fourth of full moon visibility the night of the sinking at the point of the explosions.

McKissick, a senior watch officer that night, said, however, that while he was on duty there were times when "you couldn't see two or three feet."

The prosecution sought to develop before the seven-man court that the zig-zag course should have been resumed once the moon gave any visibility.

McKissick said that had the darkness lifted while he was on duty he would have ordered zig-zagging "and Captain McVay would have been pleased." His watch ended several hours before the torpedoing, he said, and he did not know what the conditions were around midnight.

McKissick related that he was awakened by the explosions and managed to get to the main deck through smoke and fire. He estimated the vessel, hard hit on the starboard bow, listed almost immediately at a 45-degree angle. During the following 15 minutes it was afloat, he said, he did not hear any orders from the bridge to abandon ship and there were "none addressed to all hands."

Gave Order to Abandon Ship

McKissick took it upon himself, he said, to issue orders to his men to prepare to abandon ship when he saw conditions.

The lieutenant said he believed that about 850 of the 1,200-man ship's company got away before the vessel went down. He credited that to "no confusion—everyone was calm."

Defense counsel asked McKissick if it was possible that he couldn't have heard orders to abandon ship, where he was stationed.

"Yes, the order could have been given and I wouldn't have heard it

SHIP WITH TROOPS CALLS FOR HELP

Ten Marylanders Aboard Vessel In Distress On Atlantic

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 4 (AP)—The 7,200-ton merchant ship John Gibbon, bound from Lisbon for Baltimore, was reported by the Coast Guard to have gone aground tonight between Cape Henry Lighthouse and here during a storm. No casualties were reported.

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Aid for the Liberty ship Henry Ward Beecher, wallowing propellerless and helpless in the Atlantic with 541 American homeward-bound troops aboard, will not arrive before Thursday afternoon because rescue craft were given the wrong position, the 3d Naval District said tonight.

The Beecher first was reported in distress about 340 miles northeast of Bermuda, but corrected information tonight put her position 510 miles north-northeast of Bermuda, or about 170 miles farther away than originally given.

No Cause For Concern

The Navy, however, in its announcement tonight said there was no immediate cause for concern about the safety of those aboard—the 302d Military Police Escort Guard Company and the 542d and 544th Ordnance Heavy Maintenance companies—because there were no heavy seas or any storms reported heading that way.

The Beecher was en route from Marseille, France, to Norfolk, Va., when she lost her propeller. Without a controllable rudder the ship would be unmanageable and unable to keep headed into great waves, ship experts said.

It was added, however, that even in that event the ship's personnel normally would rig a sea anchor to keep her righted and avoid the impact of the sea.

Laski Picketed In N.Y. Talk

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Harold J. Laski, chairman of the British Labor party, says no nation "is fit to be trusted with the development of atomic energy."

"Every implication of this discovery means planned internationalism—economic, social, political," Laski told a dinner gathering last night closing a three-day atom bomb forum held by the Nation Associates.

As he spoke, Catholic pickets paraded outside the building carrying signs which read: "Franco saved Spain from the Reds, Mr. Laski," and "Oust Laski, the anti-Catholic hate monger."

"Secret" From Russia

Laski said one of the "major preoccupations of the great vested interests is now to keep the (atomic) 'secret'—which is no secret—from the knowledge of Russia."

"You know the result," he added, "a halt to confidence and the rise of ugly suspicion about the imminent chances of a third world war."

Laski said free enterprise economies should be scrapped because, he declared, they lead to war, which in the atomic age would destroy civilization.

"There is no middle way," he said. "Free enterprise and the market economy mean war; socialism and planned economy mean peace. All attempts to find a compromise are a satanic illusion. We must plan our civilization or we must perish."

SOUGHT TO NOTIFY SENATE, KENT SAYS

Planned To Give Congress Documents, Attache Avers

Hoboken, N.J., Dec. 4 (AP)—Tyler Kent, whose career as a junior American diplomat was halted in 1940 when the British imprisoned him on charges of larceny of an embassy document in London, said today he took several documents because they "contained information which the Senate and the people of the United States should know about."

Kent, 34, smartly dressed and smiling, made the remark as he debarked from the British steamer Silver Oak, on which he sailed from London twelve days ago.

He said at a news conference that he had planned to get before the United States Senate the documents he took from the embassy.

Given 7-Year Sentence

Kent served several years of a seven-year sentence after being convicted at a secret trial in Old Bailey Court of "violating the Official Secrets Acts."

"In due time," said Kent, "I will have something to say that will be of interest to the people of the United States.'

He declined to reveal the nature or number of the documents he took to his private apartment from the embassy, but said "they related to the foreign relations of the United States, and I don't want to be more specific at this time."

When asked how he had planned to get the documents to the Senate, Kent replied: "That is a method I had not worked out."

Denies Published Reports

He dismissed as "pure invention" and "strictly fiction" published reports that 15,000 coded messages were found in his apartment and that while officials were there a telephone call came from the Italian Embassy which led to discovery of an outlet by which contents of messages allegedly reached the Germans.

Kent also disclaimed reports that microfilm pictures of messages were found in possession of Anna Wolkoff, 42, daughter of a Russian admiral. She later was sentenced by the British to ten years' imprisonment.

The woman was convicted for violating the British Official Secrets Act in the case involving Kent.

"I do not think that there was any intention originally of making any charges whatever against me," Kent said. "I believe those charges were made as a result of pressure from officials of the United States."

Dismissed By Kennedy

He remarked that it was "at least two and a half months after Kennedy (Joseph P. Kennedy, then Ambassador in London) dismissed me before any charges were made against me," and that he believed he was tried in England instead of the United States because England had provision for secret trials of civilians and "no such trials were then being held in this country."

Asked about reports that keys to the embassy code and index rooms were found in his apartment, Kent said:

"Those keys were issued to me quite legally and officially."

With him as he talked was his mother, Mrs. Ann H. P. Kent, of Washington, who had fought for her son's release during the last four years.

When they met for the first time since May, 1940, he threw his arms around her and said "Darling, how are you?" and she said "I'm fine." Mrs. Kent said she never doubted his innocence and believed he would be vindicated.

Kent said he knew he had no right "under ordinary circumstances" to take the documents but that "under the special circumstances I considered I had a moral right."

He said he did not tell his superiors about it because "certainly the Ambassador (Joseph P. Kennedy) obviously was a friend of the Administration."

In answer to questions Kent said he was anxious to tell his story before United States officials and before the present congressional inquiry into Pearl Harbor if asked to do so.

After the interview Kent and his mother, accompanied by two private detectives and Charles Parsons, of Kennebunk, Maine, a retired Death Valley gold-mine operator, left for "somewhere in New York city" to spend a few days before a vacation trip in the South.

'Free To Speak,' Kennedy Says

In Chicago, Kennedy said he had no comment to make on Kent's remarks about him, but asserted Kent now is free to "speak out" with whatever he has to say.

"If Kent really has anything to say that would interest the people of the United States," Kennedy declared in a statement to the press, "and if there is any truth to his contention that his arrest in England prevented him from making any disclosures there, then now is the time for him to speak out, because the restrictions that he alleges existed certainly do not exist now that he is back in the United States."

Two Seamen Admit Spying

Portuguese Say Nazis Wanted Data on Jet Planes and Shipping

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4 (AP).—Two Portuguese seamen pleaded guilty in United States District Court today to charges of attempting to supply the Nazi espionage system information on American war production and shipping.

The two men, Emilio I. C. Hernandos and Pablo Mezo Legarreta, were arrested by F. B. I. agents June 23 in their bunks aboard the steamship Manuel Calvo and have been in jail in default of $25,000 bail each.

The F. B. I. said the pair were commissioned by the Nazis to obtain information on jet-propelled aircraft, shipyard activity and airplane plant production.

MME. CHIANG CHIDED BY MRS. ROOSEVELT

FORT DEVENS, Mass., Dec. 4 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today that Madame Chiang, wife of the Generalissimo, was typical of the Chinese in that "she can talk beautifully about democracy, but she does not know how to live democracy."

The former First Lady referred to Madame Chiang during a question period after speaking to patients at the post's Lovell General Hospital.

The inability to "live democracy," she said, was typical of the Chinese, "not because of any facetiousness, but because they never had an opportunity to see or practice democracy in action."

"Russia hasn't started any wars," she said in answer to a veteran's question about Russia as an agressor country.

REMARK EMBROILS WACS AND G. I.'S

Fort Devens, Mass., Dec. 4. (A. P.).—What looks like another war is brewing here over Lieut.-Gen. Eaker's statement that one Wac is worth two soldiers.

"I just don't agree," said Pfc. Ethel Myers, "one Wac is worth five soldiers any day. If not, why do the Wac points go down only two points while the soldiers' drop five or ten?"

"I'd say it's a lot of hooey," retorted Pvt. Chuck Cobb of the Reception Center Casual Detachment. "If they were the equal of even one, why weren't they used in combat? The Russian women were," said Corp. Mary Thomas.

"In an office any Wac is worth three soldiers," adding: "Of course, there are some Wacs that aren't worth very much, but some soldiers are worth even less."

Sneered Sgt. F. Pennone, Air Force man awaiting discharge, "I'd like to see a woman jump out of a plane at 400 or 500 feet. She's probably be worrying about her lipstick and powder."

Eaker, deputy commanding general of the Army Air Forces, told the officers' class of Wacs at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, on November 17, "I would exchange any two men for one woman in the Army."

Admiral Halsey Urges Free Navy

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 4 (AP)—Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., in a speech tonight before the Norfolk Association of Commerce, reiterated his opposition to the proposed merger of the Army and Navy, and declared that "to assume that this 'strange marriage' will bring about greater efficiency is pure bunk."

The former chief of the 3d Fleet, who arrived at the Norfolk Naval Air Station earlier today with Mrs. Halsey, said that "the complex administrative problems which would arise from this superficial union would more than likely mean that we would be there 'last with the least'—in short, it would be, at most, 'confusion slightly organized.'

Experiments Of Other Nations

"The adoption of a hastily and ill-conceived plan now may leave us stripped of a vital part of our national defense in the future," Admiral Halsey continued. "Until the proponents of this measure can give us some real proof that we stand to gain by it, let us keep free our victorious Navy—let us keep it intact and unshackled—keep it free and it will keep America free."

Admiral Halsey cited the experiments of Russia, Japan and Germany with unified commands and the resultant failures and declared that "to plunge headlong into this wildcat scheme, which has proved unsuccessful in the history of war, might well invite disaster.

Highly Specialized Roles

"If the Navy is expected to perform its highly specialized roles as our first line of defense—it must be given the privilege of free decisions," he said. "This can come only under a two-department system where the Navy is given intelligent, responsible and sympathetic leadership at the highest level."

Leahy Opposes Merger Plan

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—Admiral William D. Leahy today opposed proposals for a single national defense department as "radical" and "revolutionary."

The wartime chief of staff to both President Roosevelt and President Truman told the Senate Military Affairs Committee he was offering "my own personal views."

"I am quite certain that naval efficiency would be seriously reduced," the Admiral told senators in discussing recommendations by War Department officials and army generals that a single postwar defense department be formed with Navy, Army and Air Force branches.

"It might improve War Department efficiency," the veteran naval leader said, adding that the War Department had been completely reorganized during the recent war and so "has not had the test of time of the Navy Department."

Army Sending War Mother A Gardenia Bush

Camp Wheeler, Ga., Dec. 4 (AP)—In the spring of 1943 Lieut. Harold E. Winn picked a flower from a gardenia bush here and pinned it on his mother's coat.

A few minutes later he said goodby and was off to the wars. At St. Lo he was killed in action.

The mother, Mrs. George Winn, of Marion, Ky., recently wrote army officials here that memories of her son were now closely woven with the fragrance of gardenias.

"If I could but have a plant of the gardenia to grow outside my house," her letter said.

The Army lost no time in finding the precise plant from which the lieutenant had picked the farewell gift to his mother. An entomologist was called to inspect the bush. Then it was packed—150 pounds—for delivery to Mrs. Winn this week.

Girl From Britain Is "Hysterical"

Dubuque, Iowa, Dec. 4 (AP)—Mrs. Jean Carbone, 19, redheaded British girl who married an American lieutenant in England but came here to be with a captain who says he is the father of her unborn child, was said today to be "hysterical and exhausted" and remaining in bed.

The report of her condition was made by Capt. Darrell Beschen, 25, in refusing to allow her to be questioned on the statement by her husband, Lieut. Harold Carbone, now a student at the University of Rochester, New York, that he was not planning to give her an immediate divorce as she had requested.

Beschen said Mrs. Carbone would stay here at the home of his mother, Mrs. Emma Beschen—"until things straighten out"—while he reports for duty at Santa Ana, Cal., next week. He said he planned to leave tomorrow.

Mrs. Carbone, who wants to marry Beschen, expects her child early next year, the captain said.

"WE HAVE DECIDED TO DO THINGS IN OUR OWN WAY--AND I MEAN OUR OWN WAY," HE DECLARED AT A PRESS CONFERENCE. "WE ARE MASTERS OF OUR OWN HOUSE AND NOBODY--FOR INSTANCE, RUSSIA--HAS INTERFERED WITH US IF YOU HEAR OTHERWISE, DON'T BELIEVE IT."

THE CZECH FOREIGN MINISTER SAID THE QUESTION OF TESCHEN HAD NOT BEEN DISCUSSED WITH THE POLISH GOVERNMENT AND "FOR US AT THE MOMENT IT IS NOT DISCUSSABLE."

MASARYK'S ATTENTION WAS CALLED TO A POLISH BROADCAST DURING THE PAST FEW DAYS EXPRESSING IMPATIENCE AT CZECHOSLOVAKIA'S GOVERNMENT SILENCE OVER TEW-TESCHEN.

THE FOREIGN MINISTER SAID HE HAD RECEIVED A NOTE FROM THE POLISH GOVERNMENT ON NOV. 9 SUGGESTING A GET-TOGETHER TO DISCUSS ALL OUTSTANDING QUESTIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES.

"I REPLIED FOR MY GOVERNMENT," MASARYK SAID, "THAT WE WERE READY TO DISCUSS EVERYTHING EXCEPT TERRITORIAL CHANGES OF TESCHEN."

CZECHOSLOVAKIA HAD BASED ITS FOREIGN POLICY ON THE PACT WITH RUSSIA, WITH WHICH "WE HAVE THE CLOSEST AND MOST FRIENDLY RELATIONS," MASARYK SAID.

HE ADMITTED THAT CZECHOSLOVAKIA'S RELATIONS WITH POLAND WERE "NOT SO GOOD, BUT I AM NOT PESSIMISTIC ABOUT THE OUTCOME."

NIGHT LEAD INDIA
BY ROMNEY WHEELER

LONDON, DEC.4-(AP)-THE BRITIST GOVERNMENT REAFFIRMED TODAY ITS PROMISE OF SELF-RULE FOR INDIA, BUT WARNED SIMULTANEOUSLY THAT IT WOUL RESIST ANY ATTEMPT TO RESOLVE THE ISSUE BY FORCE.

IN A STATEMENT OF POLICY READ IN BOTH HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT, THE LABOR GOVERNMENT PROMISED TO TURN THE REINS OVER TO THE INDIANS WHEN A SUITABLE CONSTITUTION IS ADOPTED. BUT ESTABLISHMENT OF A CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY CAN SCARCELY BE CONTEMPLATED BEFORE THE INDIAN ELECTIONS NEXT SPRING, THE STATEMENT SAID.

MEANWHILE, A NON-PARTISAN PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE WILL BE SENT TO INDIA IMMEDIATELY TO MAKE INDEPENDENT OBSERVATIONS AND DRAFT UNOFFICIAL RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

LORD PETHICK-LAWRENCE, SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, AND HERBERT MORRISON, LORD PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL, READ THE STATEMENT IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS AND COMMONS, RESPECTIVELY.

THE STATEMENT SAID IT WAS IMPORTANT THAT MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO MEET INDIAN POLITICAL LEADERS AND LEARN THEIR VIEWS AT FIRST HAND, AND SAID THE COMMITTEE WOULD BE SPONSORED BY THE EMPIRE PARLIAMENTARY ASSOCIATION.

THE GOVERNMENT OBSERVED THAT IN THE TRANSITION TOWARD COMPLETE SELF-GOVERNMENT, INDIA WOULD PASS THROUGH DIFFICULT TIMES, AND ADDED:

"NO GREATER DISSERVICE COULD BE DONE TO A FUTURE INDIAN GOVERNMENT AND TO THE CAUSE OF DEMOCRACY THAN TO PERMIT THE FOUNDATIONS OF THE STATE TO BE WEAKENED, AND THE LOYALTY OF ITS SERVANTS TO THOSE WHO ARE IN AUTHORITY TO BE UNDERMINED, BEFORE THAT NEW GOVERNMENT COMES INTO BEING."

A164

"THEREFORE," THE STATEMENT CONTINUED, "THE GOVERNMENT CANNOT DIVEST ITSELF OF THE RESPONSIBILITY WHICH RESTS UPON IT AND UPON ALL PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS OF PRESERVING LAW AND ORDER AND OF RESISTING ANY ATTEMPTS TO RESOLVE THE CONSTITUTIONAL ISSUE BY FORCE.

"THE REALIZATION OF FULL SELF-GOVERNMENT CAN ONLY COME BY THE ORDERLY AND PEACEFUL TRANSFER OF CONTROL OF THE MACHINERY OF STATE TO PURELY INDIAN AUTHORITY."

THE STATEMENT MADE NO DIRECT REFERENCE TO RECENT DISTURBANCES IN CALCUTTA AND DEMONSTRATIONS IN BOMBAY, BUT SAID THE GOVERNMENT WOULD TOLERATE NO ATTEMPT TO "BREAK DOWN THE LOYALTY OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES OR OF THE INDIAN ARMED FORCES" AND WOULD GIVE FULL PROTECTION TO CIVIL SERVANTS IN THE PERFORMANCE OF THEIR DUTY.

IN THE DEBATE WHICH FOLLOWED, MORRISON WAS ASKED WHETHER INDIA--ONCE IT WAS GRANTED SELF-GOVERNMENT--WOULD BE PERMITTED TO WITHDRAW FROM THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH IF ITS LEADERS SO DESIRED. HE REPLIED THAT BRITAIN WOULD NOT IMPOSE ANY RESTRICTION ON THE POWER OF INDIA TO DECIDE HER FUTURE.
"IT IS NATURALLY OUR HOPE THAT INDIA WILL REMAIN OF HER OWN FREE WILL IN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH," HE ADDED.

GENERAL STAFF OFFICERS AS WAR CRIMINALS.

THE STOCKY AMERICAN PROSECUTOR, ANGERED BY THE ACCUSATIONS WHICH

WERE RE-PRINTED IN THE ARMY NEWSPAPER STARS AND STRIPES, DECLARED THE AUTHOR WAS "DISTORTING" THE FACTS AND SAID [redacted] HE HAD "QUITE OBVIOUSLY NEVER TAKEN THE PAINS TO READ MY OPENING STATEMENT IN THIS TRIAL."

"I POINTED OUT," HE SAID, "THAT WE ARE NOT PROSECUTING THESE

MILITARISTS FOR SERVING THEIR COUNTRY, BUT FOR MASTERING IT AND DRIVING

IT TO WAR; NOT FOR FIGHTING THE WAR, BUT FOR PROMOTING IT."

BY SUPPORTING HITLER AND PLANNING FOR AGGRESSIVE WAR, JACKSON

SAID, GERMANY'S MILITARY MASTERS FORFEITED ANY CLAIM TO BE TREATED AS SIMPLE "PROFESSIONAL SOLDIERS."

HE SAID THE PROSECUTORS DREW A DISTINCTION BETWEEN ARMY ~~EXPRESSMEN~~ AND NAVY OFFICERS WHO HAD CARRIED ON THEIR DUTIES AS PROFESSIONALS AND THOSE HIGH OFFICERS WHO ENTERED POLITICS AND SUPPORTED THE NAZIS IN THEIR PLANS FOR CONQUEST.

"THESE MEN WE HAVE NAMED FOR TRIAL DID NOT ACT ONLY AS PROFESSIONAL SOLDIERS," HE CONTINUED. "THEY PROMOTED AND SUPPORTED HITLER, AND IMMERSED THEMSELVES IN POLITICS BECAUSE THE NAZIS GAVE THEM WHAT THEY WANTED--WAR."

JACKSON DECLARED THE MILITARY LEADERS WERE ~~NOT~~ BEING TRIED BECAUSE ~~THEY OBEYED ORDERS~~ THEY PLANNED "AN AGGRESSIVE WAR WHICH BATHED THE WORLD IN BLOOD" AND SAID "ONE CANNOT DEFEND HIS CRIMINAL ACTS ON THE GROUND THAT IF HE A SOLDIER OR A LAWYER."

"THE POSITION OF THE AUTHOR AND THOSE FOR WHOM HE SPEAKS SO INACCURATELY," HE SAID, "SEEMS TO BE THAT IT IS ALL RIGHT TO PUNISH SOMEBODY FOR ILLEGAL WAR MAKING, SHOOTING AMERICAN PRISONERS OF WAR AND MURDERING AND ENSLAVING CIVILIANS--SO LONG AS YOU DON'T GET THE MEN WHO ACTUALLY DID IT. THIS MAKES NONSENSE TO ME."

Gen. EISENHOWER IS KNOWN TO HAVE SUCH STRONG FEELINGS ABOUT

A SOURCE CLOSE TO DONOVAN, HOWEVER, SAID [redacted] DONOVAN'S DEPARTURE DID NOT BEAR ON THIS POINT, BUT THAT HE AND JACKSON DID NOT SEE EYE TO EYE ON THE LEGAL MANNER IN WHICH THE CASE SHOULD BE PRESENTED.

EARLIER IN THE DAY LT. COL. MURRAY GURFEIN, ANOTHER MAN NAMED [redacted] BY THE ARMY-NAVY JOURNAL, [redacted] DENIED HIS DEPARTURE HAD ANYTHING TO DO WITH THE PROSECUTION OF GERMAN OFFICERS.

HE ISSUED THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT BY TELEPHONE FROM PARIS:

"THE STORY IN THE ARMY-NAVY JOURNAL ABOUT THE REASON FOR MY WITHDRAWAL FROM THE NUERNBERG PROSECUTION IS UTTERLY UNFOUNDED. IT WAS UNDERSTOOD WELL BEFORE THE OPENING OF THE TRIAL THAT I WOULD RETURN TO THE UNITED STATES DEC. 1 AND THAT I WOULD HAVE FINISHED MY ASSIGNED TASK BY THAT XXXX DATE.

"NOBODY IS BEING TRIED AS A PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER. THE ISSUE WHETHER CRIMES AGAINST PEACE AND HUMANITY HAVE BEEN COMMITTED BY POLITICIANS, STATESMEN OR PEOPLE IN UNIFORM, REGARDLESS OF PROFESSION THE TRIAL IS FAR TOO IMPORTANT TO MANKIND TO PERMIT FALSE RUMORS OR X X X TO GO UNCHALLENGED."

NUERNBERG, DECEMBER 4 - (AP) - RUDOLF HESS' SENSATIONAL ASSERTION THAT HE NOW WAS WILLING TO "PLAY BALL" AND CEASE SIMULATING AMNESIA HAD TWO UNEXPECTED EFFECTS ON HIS JAIL LIFE--ONE UNPLEASANT, THE OTHER IRKSOME.

CHUNGKING, DEC. 4-(AP)-A CHINESE PRESS DISPATCH SAID TODAY THAT INDEPENDENT MANCHURIAN FORCES HAD MARCHED INTO MUKDEN TO WELCOME NATIONALIST TROOPS ONLY 30 MILES AWAY.

THIS REPORT SAID THAT A BROTHER OF MARSHAL CHAN SUEH-LIANG--WHO ONCE ELECTRIFIED THE WORLD BY KIDNAPING GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK--HAD PROCLAIMED HIMSELF "AN ALLY OF THE NATIONALISTS" AND HAD SENT HIS TROOPS INTO THE KEY CITY.

DISPATCHES A FEW DAYS AGO HAD REPORTED THAT THE MARSHAL'S BROTHER, GEN. CHANG HSU-SHIH, WAS READY TO JOIN THE NATIONALIST CAUSE IF ASSURANCES WERE GIVEN THAT HIS BROTHER WOULD NOT BE MOLESTED.

A REPORT FROM YENAN, COMMUNIST CAPITAL, ALSO HAD CREDITED GEN. CHU TEH, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF CHINESE COMMUNISTS, WITH A STATEMENT THAT HIS FORCES HAD NO CONNECTION WITH THE ACTIVITIES OF MARSHAL CHANG'S FORMER NORTHEASTERN FORCES.

A DISPATCH FROM PEIPING ASSERTED THE NATIONALIST-HELD AIR FIELD AT CHINHSIEN, RAILWAY CITY ABOUT HALFWAY BETWEEN THE GREAT WALL AND MUKDEN, HAD BEEN REPAIRED AND GROUND CREWS ALREADY HAD ARRIVED THERE.

CHINHSIEN, MANCHURIA, DEC.3-(DELAYED)-(AP)-BOLSTERED BY AIRBORNE SUPPLIES, CHINESE NATIONALIST ARMIES IN MANCHURIA TODAY AWAITED A GREEN LIGHT FROMRUSSIA TO BEGIN A FINAL MARCH ON MUKDEN.

ALTHOUGH HIS MAIN FORCES ARE 130 MILES FROM MANCHURIA'S GREATEST CITY, THE NATIONALIST COMMANDER, LT.GEN.TU YUMING, EMPHASIZED THAT NO ENTRY WOULD BE MADE INTO MUKDEN UNTIL THE RUSSIANS COMPLETE OCCUPATION NEGOTIATIONS OR UNTIL IT DEFINITELY IS ESTABLISHED THEY HAVE WITHDRAWN AND IT IS NECESSARY TO BATTLE CHINESE COMMUNISTS FOR THE CITY.

(CHINESE CENTRAL NEWS AGENCY REPORTS IN CHUNGKING SAID NATIONALIST SPEARHEADS WERE WITHIN 30 MILES OF MUKDEN.)

THE GENERAL EXPRESSED ELATION OVER THE ARRIVAL OF 11 BIG CURTIS COMMANDO TRANSPORT PLANES BEARING MORE THAN 20 TONS OF CRITICAL SUPPLIES. THE PLANES WERE FLOWN BY CHINESE CREWS.

ORDERS FOR THE FINAL MARCH ON MUKDEN WILL COME FROM CHUNGKING, TU SAID. IN A BRIEF REVIEW OF NATIONALIST NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE RUSSIANS CONCERNING THE OCCUPATION OF MANCHURIA BY CENTRAL GOVERNMENT TROOPS,

HE DECLARED:
"WE MADE AN AGREEMENT WITH THE RUSSIANS THAT CHINESE NATIONAL ARMY FORCES WOULD LAND AT HULUTAO AND YINGKOW BEFORE NOV.10. NOV. 10 PASSED WITHOUT OUR BEING ABLE TO LAND. WE AGREED THAT BY NOV. 20 MUKDEN WOULD BE OPEN TO CENTRAL GOVERNMENT FORCES. THAT DATE ALSO PASSED WITHOUT FULFILLMENT.

"ON NOV.24 THE RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR SAID IN CHUNGKING THAT RUSSIA DEFINITELY WAS GOING TO HELP THE NATIONALISTS IN MANCHURIA. WE ARE STILL WAITING.

"I HAVE SENT A LETTER TO THE RUSSIAN COMMANDER IN MUKDEN ASKING FOR DETAILS ON THE OCCUPATION OF THE CITY BY OUR FORCES AND ITS TURN-OVER BY THE RUSSIANS. THEY ARE STILL IN MUKDEN AND I AM STILL HOPE-FUL OF AN ORDERLY ENTRY INTO THE CITY.

"I BELIEVE RUSSIA WANTS TO PRESERVE GOOD AND PROPER RELATIONS WITH CHINA AND WILL PRESERVE FAITH. BUT THE LOCAL PRACTICAL SITUATION INDICATES LEAKAGES HAVE OCCURRED."

HE INDICATED HIS STATEMENT ABOUT "LEAKAGES" WAS A REFERENCE TO THE PRESENCE OF TROOPS OF THE COMMUNISTS' FOURTH ROUTE ARMY GNAW-ING AT THE FLANKS OF THE NATIONALIST COLUMNS MOVING THROUGH MANCHURIA.

TU EXPRESSED CONFIDENCE HIS FORCES WOULD PIERCE ANY COMMUNIST OPPOSITION OUTSIDE MUKDEN. HE SAID NO SERIOUS STAND YET HAD BEEN MADE BY THE COMMUNISTS AND NO HEAVY FIGHTING HAD YET OCCURRED.

KONOYE SAID SUGIYAMA PRESENTED THE ORIGINAL ARMY-NAVY PLAN TO BEGIN THE WAR AROUND THE MIDDLE OF OCTOBER, BUT THE GOVERNMENT CONVINCED THE MILITARISTS TO REVISE THE SCHEME SO THAT PREPARATIONS ONLY WOULD BEGIN AT THAT TIME.

KONOYE SAID THE MILITARISTS UNITED IN SUPPORT OF THE PLAN, ADDING THAT CIVILIANS "STILL FELT THERE WAS A POSSIBILITY FOR NEGOTIATION SO WE WERE WILLING TO TAKE A CHANCE."

AS THE DEADLINE DREW NEAR WITHOUT A BREAK IN THE WASHINGTON STALEMATE, ANOTHER MEETING WAS HELD IN KONOYE'S PRIVATE RESIDENCE TO DISCUSS POSSIBILITIES OF A DIPLOMATIC SOLUTION OF THE PROBLEM. THE FORMER PREMIER SAID HE STILL BELIEVED THAT NEGOTIATIONS COULD BE SUCCESSFUL BUT THAT TOJO STRONGLY OPPOSED HIM.

AS A RESULT, KONOYE WAS FORCED TO RESIGN.

THE EMPEROR DID NOT ATTEND THIS SESSION.

TOJO THEN REITERATED HIS PREVIOUS STATEMENTS THAT WAR WITH THE UNITED STATES WAS INEVITABLE, WHETHER THE JAPANESE WITHDREW FROM CHINA.

HIROHITO SUMMONED THE SUPREME WAR COUNCIL ON THE BASIS OF THE SEPT.6 DECISION, SAID NISHIO, WHO THEN WAS A MEMBER OF THE COUNCIL AND PREVIOUSLY WAS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE CHINA FORCES AND INSPECTOR GENERAL OF MILITARY EDUCATION, ONE OF THE ARMY'S TOP JOBS. NISHIO WAS NAMED ON GENERAL MACARTHUR'S LATEST WAR CRIMINAL LIST.

NISHIO SAID THE WAR COUNCIL--COMPOSED OF 15 OR 16 GENERALS AND ADMIRALS--DISCUSSED THE IMPENDING WAR TWO OR THREE HOURS WITH THE CHIEFS OF STAFF. THE EMPEROR SAT SILENTLY THROUGHOUT THE SESSION AND TOJO--THEN PREMIER--ATTENDED AS WAR MINISTER, HIS CONCURRENT POST.

A132KX

NONE OF THESE SENIOR MILITARISTS OPPOSED THE OUTLINE OF THE WAR PLANS AS PRESENTED, NISHIO SAID, BUT THEY QUESTIONED THE CHIEFS OF STAFF GENERALLY ON "HOW LONG WOULD JAPAN BE ABLE TO CONTINUE WAR."

THERE WAS NO DEFINITE ANSWER, SAID NISHIO, BUT THE CHIEFS OF STAFF IN GENERAL SAID "THE WAR WOULD GO ALL RIGHT IN THE BEGINNING BEFORE AMERICA COULD BECOME PREPARED. AFTER THAT, NO ONE COULD TELL WHAT WOULD HAPPEN.

"THAT SATISFIED THE COUNCIL. THEY UNDERSTOOD IT WOULD BE HARD IN THE FUTURE."

NISHIO SAID THE SOLE FUNCTION OF THE WAR COUNCIL WAS TO ADVISE THE EMPEROR WHEN ASKED ON MILITARY QUESTIONS. THIS SESSION WAS "MORE FOR IMPARTING INFORMATION TO THE COUNCIL THAN ASKING ITS ADVICE."

YAMASHITA (240)
MANILA,DEC.4-(AP)-LT.GEN.TOMOYUKI YAMASHITA APPEALED TO THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT TODAY TO STOP HIS WAR CRIMES TRIAL AND LET HIM PLEAD HIS CAUSE IN WASHINGTON.

THE MILITARY COMMISSION, BEFORE RECESSING UNTIL TOMORROW, HAD ANNOUNCED IT EXPECTED TO DECIDE FRIDAY WHETHER YAMASHITA MUST PAY WITH HIS LIFE FOR THE ATROCITIES OF HIS JAPANESE TROOPS.

FOR THE SECOND TIME IN THE MONTH-LONG TRIAL, THE JAPANESE COMMANDER WHO WAS TROUNCED BY GENERAL MACARTHUR IN THE SECOND BATTLE FOR THE PHILIPPINES TRIED TO GO OVER THE COMMISSION'S HEAD.

YAMASHITA ASKED THE SUPREME COURT FOR A WRIT OF PROHIBITION TO HALT THE TRIAL, ORDER HIM RESTORED TO THE STATUS OF PRISONER OF WAR "IN CONFORMITY WITH THE GENEVA CONVENTION," AND ALLOW HIM TO APPEAR IN WASHINGTON FOR A SPECIAL HEARING.

HIS PETITION ASSERTED THAT "THERE WAS NO AUTHORITY TO APPOINT THE COMMISSION AND IT IS WITHOUT JURISDICTION" SINCE THE ISLANDS ARE NEITHER UNDER MARTIAL LAW NOR MILITARY GOVERNMENT RULE.

THIS WAS MUCH THE SAME ARGUMENT HIS COUNSEL PRESENTED BEFORE THE PHILIPPINES SUPREME COURT, WHICH ON NOV. 28 REJECTED HIS PETITION FOR A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.

THE MILITARY COMMISSION WILL BEGIN HEARING THE FINAL ARGUMENTS OF DEFENSE AND PROSECUTION TOMORROW.

THROUGHOUT THE TRIAL, YAMASHITA HAS MAINTAINED THAT HE WAS UNAWARE OF ANY ATROCITIES AS CHARGED BY THE PROSECUTION, THAT THE FORCES IN MANILA--WHERE MANY OUTRAGES WERE REPORTED-- WERE INDEPENDENT OF HIS COMMAND, AND THAT HAD HE KNOWN OF THEM HE WOULD HAVE PUNISHED HIS TROOPS UNDER STERN MILITARY LAW.

BY JAMES HALSEMA
MANILA, DEC.4-(AP)-CONSTANT ACTIVITY ALONG THE PHILIPPINE SEA FRONTIER INDICATES THE UNITED STATES NAVY DOES NOT INTEND TO BE CAUGHT UNPREPARED AGAIN--IN THE PHILIPPINES AT LEAST.

NAVY PLANS STILL ARE SHROUDED UNDER RESTRICTIONS, BUT EVEN A CASUAL TRAVELER CAN SEE SEADOGS PLANTING A FIRM WESTERN ANCHOR FOR A CHAIN OF BASES STRETCHING 6,000 MILES ACROSS THE PACIFIC FROM CALIFORNIA TO THE FRINGES OF ASIA.

THE PHILIPPINE SEA FRONTIER COMMANDER VICE ADMIRAL H.L. KAUFMANN, PREFERS TO DISCUSS LIQUIDATION OF A MYRIAD OF WAR-BUILT MINOR BASES SCATTERED THROUGHOUT THE ARCHIPELAGO AND DEMOBILIZATION. BUT SEABEES AND A NATIVE LABORERS ARE WORKING CONSTANTLY WITHOUT FANFARE, EXTENDING OTHER BASES.

AT SUBIC BAY ON THE NORTHERN END OF BATAAN PENINSULA, WHERE THE PREWAR ASIATIC FLEET HAD AN ANCIENT DRYDOCK AND A FEW MACHINE SHOPS THE NAVY MOVED THE ENTIRE NATIVE TOWN OF OLONGAPO TO A NEW LOCATION. QUONSET HUTS STRETCH FOR MILES ALONG THE ENCLOSED WATERS. ROADS IN THE VICINITY ARE BEING WIDENED, DOCKS ARE BEING BUILT.

WORK IS BEGINNING ON A NAVAL INSTALLATION ON LINGAYEN GULF AT SAN FERNANDO, LA UNION PROVINCE, SITE OF THE JAPANESE INVASION OF LUZON DEC 22, 1941. THIRTY MILES SOUTHEAST, HIGH IN THE MOUNTAINS, SEABEES ARE MOVING INTO THE LONG VACANT BAGUIO NAVAL HOSPITAL RESERVATION TO BUILD AN ADMIRAL'S RESIDENCE AND PERHAPS OTHER, UNDISCLOSED, FACILITIES.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE PHILIPPINE SEA FRONTIER OCCUPY THE ENTIRE GROUNDS OF THE EXCLUSIVE MANILA POLO CLUB. THE NAVY ALSO OCCUPIES MANY SITES NEARBY, AS THE JAPANESE DID BEFORE.

ACROSS THE BAY AT CAVITE, QUONSETS HAVE REPLACED THE WRECKAGE OF THE NAVY BASE POUNDED TO BITS IN THE FIRST JAPANESE RAIDS OF THE WAR. A BIG AIRSTRIP, ELABORATE RAMPS AND HANGARS OF FLEET AIRWING 10 OCCUPY THE LONG SANGLEY POINT SANDSPIT, WHERE SPANISH GALLEONS ONCE DOCKED.

THE LARGEST NAVAL INSTALLATION OF THE ISLANDS IS REPORTED TO BE AT GUIUAN, AT THE TAIL OF SAMAR ISLAND, ACROSS THE BAY FROM TACLOBAN, LEYTE. THE SAMAR SITE DOMINATES THE ONLY TWO ENTRANCES TO THE CENTRAL PHILIPPINES FROM THE PACIFIC--SAN BERNARDINO AND SURIGAO STRAITS, WHERE A DECISIVE SEA BATTLE WAS FOUGHT A YEAR AGO. ARTEMUS GATES, ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY, VISITED SAMAR LAST WEEK.

WHAT DISPOSITION IS TO BE MADE OF FORMER JAPANESE NAVAL BASES AT DAVAO AND CEBU AND THE UNITED STATES PT BASE AT BASILAN ISLAND, NEAR ZAMBOANGA, HAS NOT BEEN DISCLOSED HERE. NEITHER HAS IT BEEN DISCLOSED WHETHER THE NAVY PROPOSES TO UTILIZE DISCUSSED SITES AT CASIGURAN BAY, ON THE WILD EAST COAST OF LUZON, OR MALAMPAYA SOUND ON PALAWAN, DOMINATING THE SOUTH CHINA SEA.

HONOLULU, DEC. 4-(AP)-A SOLDIER NEWSPAPER THAT RAPS BRASS HATS, REBUKES CONGRESS AND SPEAKS ITS MIND ABOUT OFFICIAL DOUBLE TALK ON DEMOBILIZATION HAS BECOME THE BIBLE OF FREE EXPRESSION FOR PACIFIC SOLD AND SAILORS.

ITS MOST RECENT DISCLOSURE WAS THAT SEAMAN PAUL T. STEWART, SON OF SEN. TOM STEWART (D-TENN) HAD BEEN REASSIGNED TO DUTY AT NORFOLK, VA, ALTHOUGH HE HAD ONLY 18 DISCHARGE POINTS AND HAD BEEN OVERSEAS ONLY NINE MONTHS.

AS A RESULT, YOUNG STEWART REQUESTED THAT HIS ORDERS BE CANCELLED.

(THE NAVY DEPARTMENT IN WASHINGTON SAID LAST WEEK THAT YOUNG STEWART HAD BEEN ORDERED BACK TO A STATESIDE ASSIGNMENT "UNINTENTIONALLY." THE DEPARTMENT EXPLAINED THAT A DRAFT OF MEN FOR DUTY AT NORFOLK HAD BEEN MADE ON THE HAWAIIAN BASE WHERE STEWART WAS STATIONED AND HE WAS INADVERTENTLY INCLUDED IN THE CALL. SENATOR STEWART COMMENTED THAT "IT WAS ALL NEWS" TO HIM WHEN THE STARS AND STRIPES FIRST PUBLISHED REPORTS THAT HIS SON WAS MARKED FOR SHIPMENT BACK TO THE STATES. HE SAID HE HAD MADE NO REQUEST OR TAKEN ANY OTHER ACTION FOR HIS SON'S RETURN.)

THE STEWART CASE WAS ONLY ONE OF A LONG LINE OF FREE-SPEAKING INCIDENTS IN WHICH STARS AND STRIPES USED ITS POWERFUL INFLUENCE AMONG ITS 90,000 CIRCULATION IN THE PACIFIC AND LET THE BOYS KNOW THE PAPER IS ON THEIR SIDE WITH NO RESERVATIONS.

IT RECENTLY LASHED OUT AGAINST OFFICIAL DOUBLE TALK ABOUT DEMOBILIZATION WHICH IT SAID WAS CONFUSING PACIFIC SOLDIERS AND SAILORS AND CAUSING THEM MORE UNHAPPINESS THAN ANYTHING ELSE. ALTHOUGH IT IS AN ARMY PAPER, 40 PERCENT OF ITS CIRCULATION GOES TO THE NAVY.

ITS LIBERAL POLICY CAN BE TRACED TO LT. GEN. ROBERT C. RICHARDSON, JR., COMMANDER OF ARMY FORCES IN THE MID-PACIFIC THEATER, WHO CONSISTENTLY HAS SUPPORTED THE PAPER'S YOUTHFUL BOARD OF EDITORS WHEN ANY BRASS SUGGESTED EDITORIAL CONTROL.

LAST SEPTEMBER, A BRIGADIER GENERAL SUGGESTED SUPERVISION AND CONTROL OF ALL EDITORIAL MATTER IN THE PAPER, BUT RICHARDSON REFUSED. ON ANOTHER OCCASION, A COLONEL POSTED A NOTICE SAYING "ANY INDIVIDUAL DESIRING TO SEND INFORMATION, NEWS ITEMS OR GRIPES TO ANY SOURCE FOR PUBLICATION MUST FORWARD SAME THROUGH THE PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICE."

THIS CAME TO THE ATTENTION OF STARS AND STRIPES AND WITHIN 48 HOURS RICHARDSON HAD THE ORDER RESCINDED.

Negotiations Completed With U.S. for 4 Billion Loan, British Papers Say

DEC 6 1945

FORMAL REPORT ON HUGE CREDIT AWAITED TODAY

Approval of Congress Required Before Financial Transaction Is Complete.

2% INTEREST RATE SET

Repayment Would Be Over 50-Year Period, No Payments in First 5 Years.

LONDON, Thursday, Dec. 6 — (AP)—London morning newspapers said today that the United States and Great Britain had concluded negotiations for a loan of $4,400,000,000 to England.

Such a loan would be subject to approval by Congress.

The Labor Daily Herald, in reporting that an agreement had been reached in Washington on the loan, said repayment of the loan will be over a 50-year period starting from 1946, but no interest will be payable for the first five years.

During the remaining period, the Herald said, the rate of interest will be two per cent, or about $88,000,000 for the first year.

Formal Announcement Awaited

The Daily Mail said "the word 'go' and the News Chronicle also published special dispatches from Washington and New York stating that the loan agreement had been reached and that formal announcement would be made today.

The Sketch said the loan "will ease Britain's winter" and termed the money a "magna carta for world trade."

The Daily Mail sad "the word 'go' has been given to world trade by the great deal."

The Mail said the long and detailed document, listing the terms of the loan, included a provision that Britain work towards a reduction of the sterling debt and dissolution of the dollar pool. Another provision, The Mail said, was that Britain join with the United States in a long range plan to reduce tariffs and eliminate quotas and restrictions on world trade.

Bretton Woods Included

Another provision of the agreement, The Daily Herald said, calls for British support of the Bretton Woods international monetary plan.

The Herald, spokesman for the dominant Labor party, expressed the opinion "that the new arrangement will not prevent an expansion of trade within the commonwealth but will enable the dominions to make immediate essential purchases in the United States."

(The Berne radio in a broadcast reported by NBC said that $650,000,000 of the total of the loan is earmarked for settlement of England's Lend-Lease debts.)

British and American officials have disclosed at Washington during the course of negotiations that conferees agreed on a provision permitting Britain to waive interest payments in depression years if the Bretton Woods monetary fund certified that Britain's balance of payments did not permit her to pay the obligations.

Up to Wednesday, talks with the British officials, headed by British Ambassador Lord Halifax, had lasted 86 days.

Payments Delayed Five Years

One the provisions previously reported as agreed upon early in the conversations was that Britain need not pay any interest or principal for five years after the loan went into effect, or until 1951.

American officials said they agreed to this since they realized Britain would need that long to reconvert her economy from war to peace and begin earning money by exports.

The major share of the credit Britain was seeking would be placed in a fund in the United States where the British could draw upon it when they needed it, it was earlier reported at Washington.

Another phase of the discussions centered on how much additional credit Britain neded to settle her Lend Lease account and pay for quantities of American surplus goods in the United Kingdom she wanted to buy.

The latest figures mentioned in recent stages of the negotiation were a loan of from $3,500,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 plus at least $500,000,000 addition for Lend Lease settlement.

American officials early in the discussion made it clear to the British that the United States could charge no less than two per cent interest on the loan.

They adopted this attitude for fear Congress would reject any lower interest charge since it cost the United States government about two per cent to borrow the money from taxpayers.

Sought Lower Rate

The British were reported to have reluctantly agreed to this interest rate although they were understood to be asking a fractional interest rate in the early stages of negotiations.

In a recent speech at Charleston, S. C., Secretary of State Byrnes revealed that the British and American officials had agreed on a common approach to trade and commercial problems which they would present at a trade and international trade conference next summer.

The decision to hold such an international meeting was one of the first agreements reached by the Anglo-American negotiators. It was felt it would be necessary to establish an international code of commercial relations designed to promote increased multilateral trade with lowered tariff barriers.

The question of when Britain would lower its empire trade preferences would be discussed at this conference when the United States and other countries would consider lowering their tariff rates simultaneously.

International agreement on control of cartels, relaxation of import and export restrictions along with accords on subsidies would be on the agenda.

Loan Will Cover Lend-Lease Settlement

NEW YORK, Thursday, Dec. 6—(AP) The New York Herald Tribune, in a dispatch from Washington, said today that the United States and Great Britain had agreed on the terms of a $3,750,000,000 credit to the United Kingdom for reconstruction purposes, and an additional $650,000,000 for surplus property and Lend-Lease settlements.

The paper said formal signature by representatives of the two governments was expected today.

The Herald Tribune quoted a spokesman for the British delegation as saying "only a few formalities stand in the way of the announcement that the negotiations have been completed successfully."

According to the paper, immediate efforts will be made by the Labor government of Great Britain and the Truman administration to secure speedy legislative approval. The dispatch added that British treasury officials were reported from London to have disclosed that details of the loan would be read in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Details on British Loan Due Tomorrow

London, Dec. (A. P.)—Treasury officials indicated today that terms and details of the United States loan to Britain will be announced in Commons tomorrow afternoon by Prime Minister Attlee.

The statement in Commons is expected to coincide with a similar announcement by President Truman in Washington.

BRITISH REGIME UNDER ATTACK ON POST-WAR PLANS

DEC 6 1945 REAGH

LONDON, Dec. 5 — (AP) Britain's four-months-old Labor government was accused by its opposition tonight of "fumbling and fiddling" and of giving the United States a head start toward peacetime leadership by "stifling" the nation's recovery from the war.

Opening a two-day debate on a Conservative motion for a vote of censure against the Laborite government, Conservative Oliver Lyttelton attacked the Nationalization program and said the Socialists believe an "anemic" British industry could be sustained only "through the iron lung of government control."

Lyttelton was answered by Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the board, who declared the government intended to provide "a firm basis" for the social reconstruction it had promised, and said that the only persons who would benefit by a lack of government control would be the "profiteers and racketeers."

Debate will end tomorrow with speeches by Prime Minister Attlee and his predecessor, Conservative Leader Winston Churchill. The censure motion was admittedly already doomed by the Labor majority of more than 200 in Commons.

Lyttelton accused the government of pursuing "some visionary theory," while every effort to solve "the severest economic crisis" any nation ever faced was being "stifled by ineptitude and inefficiency and slowness."

He compared the "energy and audacity" of American demobilization and reconversion with what he called the "fumbling and fiddling" of the Attlee government.

Cripps charged the opposition with an "irresponsible advocacy of a policy of plenty at a time when there is a world-wide shortage of every kind of commodity."

CENSURE VOTE ASKED AGAINST ATTLEE REGIME

Lyttleton Says in Making Motion Laborite Policy Retards Industry.

IS FIRST FORMAL ATTACK

Conservatives' Spokesman Scores Nationalization Program and Slow Demobilization.

DEC 6 19

London, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Oliver Lyttelton presented an opposition motion of censure against Britain's Labor Government today with the declaration that industry was being kept "in a sort of Whitehall twilight" instead of being helped toward peacetime production.

Opening the Conservative Party's first formal parliamentary attack on the Laborite Government, the former president of the Board of Trade criticized the Attlee program to nationalize key industries and charged needless delay in demobilization of Britain's armed forces. In housing, he said, the contribution was "all words and no houses."

Lyttelton declared the labor administration believed that the breathing of war-depleted British industry could be sustained only "through the iron lung of Government control." The rate of release from the armed forces, he asserted, is only about half that of the United States because the Government is "fiddling and kowtowing to unconscionable demands." The greatest censure is justified, he added, because the demobilization policy "is utterly unfitted to the needs of the nation."

Parliamentary observers said the move was aimed at formally criticizing the Government and would not result in downfall of the Labor Government, since a vote on a major Government measure or a "no confidence" vote was not being asked.

Sees Threat to Unions.

Turning to the automobile industry, Lyttleton criticized the policy of favoring exports over the home market. He said it was not surprising that manufacturers were abandoning Government-built war plants which, "under a wiser policy, they could have used."

Then he said: "Under nationalization I see a threat to the trade union movement."

The Conservative party spokesman said that Britain had two jobs waiting for every man or woman coming out of the armed forces and rapped the Government for falling behind the United States in the rate of demobilization.

"We wanted men and women in industry as a crying need and Americans were more concerned at the moment with jobs than they were with men and women," he said. "But what happened? The positions were reversed and the energy and audacity was being displayed by Americans and they deserved the highest credit for it."

ATTLEE ADVOCATES AMITY OF NATIONS

London, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Attlee expressed hope

tonight that the "blackout curtains" of prejudice and suspicion between nations would be lifted soon. He called for friendship—but not "exclusive friendship"—between the United States and Britain at a dinner of the Pilgrims, an Anglo-American Friendship Society composed of English and Americans here.

"We want the full light of understanding to shine into the window of both our houses so that men and women may see that others are like themselves with the same hopes and fears, and the same basic needs and the same human sympathies," Attlee said.

The Prime Minister said that he hoped there would be a steady stream of visitors between Britain and the United States when travel facilities permitted and that they would not "be confined to those with long purses."

Bevin on Big Three Talks

He Hints He Agrees With Truman That They Aren't Necessary

LONDON, Dec. 5 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin hinted today he agreed with President Truman that Big Three meetings were no longer necessary.

Bevin was asked in Commons whether it was not necessary "to make a special effort to solve the differences between ourselves and Russia, instead of allowing the two countries to slowly drift apart."

"I do not accept that they are drifting apart," the Foreign Secretary replied. "Sometimes friendship grows stronger when you do not meet quite so often."

TRUMAN WON'T GO

Washington, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—The White House said flatly today that President Truman has no intention of attending a foreign secretaries conference in London.

The British Press Association quoted delegates to the United Nations preparatory commission as saying that Mr. Truman might substitute for Secretary of State Byrnes at an early meeting of foreign ministers there.

Eben Ayres, assistant White House Press secreatry, told reporters that the report "is not so" and the President "has no intention" of attending such a meeting. The reported meeting would include the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain, Russia, China and France.

Latin-Americans Vote For U.S. As UNO Site

London, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Latin-American delegates to the United Nations Preparatory Commission agreed unanimously today to vote for the United States as a permanent site for the United Nations Organization.

The action was taken at a special meeting to prepare for tomorrow's debate on the UNO site.

CUBA ATTACKS VETO OF BIG FIVE IN UNO

London, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Cuba spearheaded a small-nation drive today against big Power domination of the United Nations Organization, demanding revision of the San Francisco world charter to eliminate the veto power granted the five major nations.

Dr. Guillermo Belt, head of the Cuban delegation to the United Nations Preparatory Commission and Cuban Ambassador to Washington, attempted to rally smaller nations represented on the commission to his cause. He termed the veto clause an odious privilege, and said in a formal statement that he would propose revision. At least one small nation was opposed to the drive, however. Czech Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk told a press conference: "Let's stop messing about with the charter before the first general assembly or before it has had a chance to work. Talk of revising the charter is for the future."

Belt drew attention to China's pronouncement that she would renounce the veto power if France, Britain, Soviet Russia and the United States also would give it up.

HEALTH CHIEF FINDS NO EPIDEMIC LIKELY

LONDON, Dec. 5—(AP) Dr. Andrew Topping, European health director for UNRRA, said today that on winter epidemic of disease was likely in Europe.

Even if disease did break out on the Royal Sanitary institute, strict quarantine methods and emergency measures would prevent it from spreading.

$17,155,252 Reported As BBC Costs For Year

London, Dec. 5 (AP)—The cost of the British Broadcasting Corporation for the year ended March 31, 1945, amounted to £4,288,813 ($17,155,252), the BBC announced today.

A breakdown showed £1,474,612 went to artists, speakers and other program participants, £452,295 for performing rights, £$68,621 for news royalties and the balance went to pay engineering, rents and taxes.

War-Damage Claims In Britain

London, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Board of Trade announced today payments of £201,000,000 ($804,000,000) in war-damage claims through last March 31 and estimated claims for another £91,000,000 ($364,000,000) had been approved.

De Valera's Son Wins Seat

DUBLIN, Dec. 5 (AP)—Maj. Vivian de Valera, son of Eire's Prime Minister, was elected to the Dail today from Northeast Dublin. The vacancy was caused by the designation of Sean T. O'Kelly as Dail President.

Redeployment Timetable

PARIS, Dec. 5 (AP).—United States Army redeployment authorities have alerted men of the 95th Infantry Division and the 22d Corps Headquarters to be ready for shipment home shortly, the theater service forces headquartres announced today.

The two units were alerted while advance elements of the 26th Infantry Division began arriving in the Calais staging area near Marseille to await transportation to the United States.

The status of other units on redeployment lists was:

75th and 70th Infantry and 12th Armored Divisions—On the seas.

89th Infantry Division—In Le Havre staging area. Five thousand men are being shuttled this week to the United Kingdom and the remaining 10,000 will be shipped direct to the United States at an indefinite date.

90th Infantry Division—Now in the Calais staging area.

82d Air-Borne Division—Scheduled to arrive at Le Havre between Dec. 11 and 19. Advance elements will sail directly from Le Havre and the remainder will shuttle via the United Kingdom.

36th Infantry Division—First elements are on high seas andn the remainder in the Calais staging area.

16th Corps—Now in the Le Havre staging area.

Also alerted for shipment home but not yet moved to redeployment centers are the 29th, 80th, 84th and 100th Infantry Divisions and the 2d Armored Division.

FRANCE FACING UTILITY STRIKE

Paris, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—France's Central Council of Public Service and Utility Workers' unions issued orders today alerting its 1,000,000 members to stand by for "any call" raising the threat of one of the greatest strikes in French history.

The orders condemned "maneuvers" against the unions' "modest" salary demands.

U. S. CARRIER BARS 123 NEGRO TROOPS

Le Havre, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—United States Army officers said today that naval officers had barred 123 Negro troops from sailing for home with white soldiers aboard the aircraft carrier Croatan yesterday because there was no means of segregating them.

Col. Conrad H. Pederson of Hoboken, N. J., director of movement for the port, said he would ask the headquarters of United States forces in the European theater at Frankfurt for clarification on what to do if a similar case arose in the future.

The Army officers said they had refused to remove six high-point Negro casuals already aboard the Croatan when the naval objection was received. Difficulties over the redeployment of Negroes were said by officers here to have begun as soon as naval vessels were pressed into service as troop transports.

European Traffic Parley

16 Nations Meet in an Effort to Unsnarl Transportation

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Dec. 5 (AP).—Representatives of sixteen nations met here today in the first of a series of conferences designed to bring order out of the European traffic chaos. Primary task of the representatives is to sort out rolling stock and canal shipping equipment scattered throughout the Continent and return them to the rightful owners.

Represented are the United States, Great Britain, France, The Netherlands, Belgium, Yugoslavia, Luxemburg, Russia, Italy, Greece, Poland, Switzerland, Austria, Norway, Denmark and Sweden. Germany is represented by a four-power delegation from the Allied Control Council.

BRITISH REPORT ON NAZI TROOPS

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—(AP) Half a million Germans have been kept mobilized in the British occupation zone of Germany "either for employment on work of essential importance or for eventual transfer to the Russian or French zones," an official British statement said tonight.

The statement was issued after the Russians had charged the British with violating four-power agreements by their use of German military personnel. The charges are being studied by a coordinating committee which will attempt to draft rules to apply in all occupation zones.

The British statement said 2,000,000 armed Germans already had been disbanded in the British zone, and said that transfers to other zones had "not been found possible during the last few months," but soon would be speeded.

Earlier, Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery had said German naval units were being used for minesweeping, and that German officers still wearing uniforms were doing administrative statistical work which the British could not perform because of a personnel shortage.

The Russians complained in a meeting of the Allied Control council two weeks ago that the use of German troops in the British zone was a violation of the terms of the German surrender and the Potsdam agreement, which provided that "all German units shall be completely and finally abolished."

The Russians demanded an explanation.

After Montgomery made his statement yesterday, Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov replied that it was unacceptable, and the issue was sent before the coordinating committee. A concession to the British, meanwhile, allowed them to continue use of German troops pending efforts to settle the controversy.

BIG ESTATES BROKEN UP IN REICH LAND SHUFFLE

BERLIN, Dec. 5—(AP) One of history's great land shuffles has been almost completed in the Soviet-occupied zone of Germany, where 7,000 large estates belonging to Junkers and other big owners have been parcelled out to 281,155 small farmers.

This was announced today by Edwin Hornle, German Communist head of the Russian-supervised administration for agriculture and forestry, who declared the liquidation of "large properties of feudal masters"—in effect breaks up "the fundamental support of fascism and militarism in our country."

NAZIS PLANNED 1938 CONQUEST

Court Told Of Plot Against Six Neighboring Countries

Nuernberg, Dec. 5 (AP)—The British prosecution presented evidence before the international military tribunal today showing that as early as May, 1938, the Germans had envisioned the conquest of six neighboring countries.

This evidence, contained in a secret document written by Hermann Goering's Air Ministry, was one of the surprises produced by the British as they pushed their case against the twenty top Nazi defendants.

Tracing the Nazis' efforts to prepare for war while trying to "lull" the world with assurances of peace, the British prosecution also introduced evidence that the Germans had violated 69 treaties, agreements and assurances since 1933.

Goering Shakes Head In Negation

Col. Mervyn Griffith-Jones, assistant British prosecutor, disclosed the German plans for conquest when he produced a document, dated May 2, 1938, from the Luftwaffe files, which showed the Air Ministry had prepared a map and study which assumed that by 1942 Germany would have airbases in Estonia, Lithuania, Latvia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Austria, the latter already swallowed by Anschluss.

Goering, a defendant in the trial, shook his head in negation as the document was read into the record.

Most of the session was devoted to a recital of Nazi treaty breaking and the case of aggression against Poland, which the prosecutors said was planned a year before the attack actually took place.

Treaty Violations Reviewed

Sir David Maxwell-Fyfe, one of the assistant prosecutors, reviewed the treaty violations, starting with the Hague Convention and going down the long list through the Treaty of Versailles, the Locarno Treaty, the Munich Agreement and lesser pacts.

Griffith-Jones, after reviewing Polish and German agreements and treaties, said Germany started preparing to attack Poland as soon as Czechoslovakia was occupied in March, 1939.

"While Germany was giving assurance after assurance to the outside world to lull other countries, she was preparing to attack Poland," he declared.

Czech Conference Cited

The morning session was taken up by Assistant United States Prosecutor Sidney S. Alderman, who completed the case on the German aggression against Czecholovakia with a disclosure that Goering had threatened to lay half of Prague in bombed ruins in two hours if the Czech Government refused to hand over their country to the Reich.

Three of the defendants—former Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and Goering—were present at the conference at which Czech Premier Emil Hacha was forced "by pure international banditry" to surrender his country, Alderman said.

Hitler "invited" Hacha to ask for a protectorate, Alderman declared, after informing him that the German Army was going to invade at 6 o'clock the next morning and was prepared to break Czech resistance "by all means with physical force."

Kaltenbrunner Recovering

Goering's threat was made when the Czech Premier expressed fear that he might not be able to prevent some units of his army from opposing the Germans.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Ernst Kaltenbrunner, stricken by a brain hemorrhage two days before the trial opened, will be returned from the 116th United States Army Hospital to the prison dispensary Thursday or Friday.

Medical sources said the former chief of the German security police had recovered sufficiently for the transfer, but that it might be 30 days before he would be able to appear in court. He is being tried in absentia.

American psychiatrists, trying to explain the case of Rudolf Hess, issued a 1,000-word statement which found in substance that Hess's confession of faked amnesia proved he was "unstable" and, therefore, supported the findings of Allied psychiatrists that he was a victim of "selective amnesia."

Germans Eyed 7 Nations In '38

DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 5 (AP)—German Air Force records placed before the International Military Tribunal today disclosed that Hitler had made definite plans by 1938 to conquer at least seven neighboring countries, including Poland and Czechoslovakia.

British prosecutors at the trial of 20 top Nazi leaders accused of war crimes introduced a German Air Force document on plans for establishment of airbases in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia and Austria. The document was dated May 2, 1938—more than a year before World War II actually began.

The threat that brought unwilling Czechoslovakia into the Reich in 1939 was Hermann Goering's ultimatum that "half of Prague would lie in ruins from aerial bombardment within two hours" if there was resistance, according to other evidence laid before the four-power tribunal.

American prosecutors, at the trial of Goering and nineteen other Nazi leaders accused of war crimes, laid before the court official German records and French and British diplomatic reports disclosing the Hitler pattern of threats, treachery and broken promises that crushed the Czechs only five months after the Munich Pact led British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain to proclaim "peace in our time."

Threat To Hacha

In cold detail, the prosecution disclosed the ordeal of Czechoslovakian President Emil Hacha when he was imperiously summoned to Berlin the day before German troops marched across the border on March 14, and was told that Prague would be bombed if the Czechs fired on the Nazi invaders.

Goering bullied Hacha with the bombing threat if he did not immediately "invite" German troops into his country, according to the report of French Ambassador Robert Coulondre read into the evidence.

The prosecution then read British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson's report that Goering in an interview later did not deny the threat but gave as his alibi that he intended only to unleash the Luftwaffe "if German lives were lost."

Germans Crossed Border

Under the pressure, German records showed, President Hacha finally gave in and the next morning the Germans poured over the border without opposition.

Hitler's seizure of Czechoslovakia was described as "pure international banditry" by Assistant United States Prosecutor Sidney S. Alderman, who introduced documents showing how the Führer called Czech and Slovak leaders to Berlin.

Hungary's part in the partition of the little country was shown by a letter to Hitler from Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent to Hungary, in which he told of plans to manufacture a "frontier incident" on March 16, 1939, as a pretext for the invasion of Ruthenia, one of the Czechoslovak provinces.

Negligible Opposition

Horthy, however, did not need to fake an "incident." Hitler's troops moved into Czechoslovakia on March 14, 1939, and Hungary took the opportunity to seize Ruthenia with negligible opposition.

The stage for invasion was set on March 13, 1939, prosecution documents disclosed, when Hitler ordered Slovak Premier Joseph Tiso to the Wilhelmstrasse and threatened to let Hungary invade Slovakia unless Tiso renounced union with the Czechs immediately. Two of the trial defendants, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and former Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, were present at the meeting. Tiso gave in.

The day before the German troops poured across the Czech border, Hacha was called to Berlin to receive the ultimatum. Hitler told Hacha, German records introduced as evidence disclosed, that the army would move at 6 o'clock the next morning prepared to use "physical force." Hitler added:

"London and Paris were not in a position to really stand up for Czechoslovakia."

Autonomy Promised

Hitler promised a "generous life, autonomy and a certain national liberty" for the Czechs and Hacha reluctantly broke down and agreed to "invite" the Germans to establish a protectorate, the records showed.

Prosecutor Alderman declared, "The rape and destruction of the brave little Czechoslovakia has always seemed to me to be one of the saddest chapters in human history."

Resuming for the British prosecution staff, Sir David Maxwell-Fyfe listed Germany's violation of 60 treaties, agreements and assurances following the rise of Hitler to power in 1933.

Obviously bored as the Briton started reading the dates and provisions of German promises to refrain from war, Field Marshal Keitel munched on pieces of cracker. Ribbentrop, who negotiated many of the agreements, scribbled notes.

Maxwell-Fyfe said that the British would call on witnesses for oral testimony.

Word On Kaltenbrunner

Meanwhile, it was learned that Ernst Kaltenbrunner, former chief of the Nazi security police, who was stricken with a brain hemorrhage November 18 two days before he was to face the tribunal as an accused war criminal, will be returned from the 116th United States Army Hospital to the Nuernberg prison dispensary late this week.

Medical sources said it might be 30 days before he is strong enough to appear in court with the other defendants.

Nuremberg Mayor Dismissed

NUREMBERG, Germany, Dec. 5 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Carylye Klise, commanding officer of the Nuremberg Military Government, has suspended Lord Mayor Martin Treu because of the latter's disagreement with the German Regional President over denazification. Herr Treu protested against complete denazification of his office, expressing fear that it would cause an administrative collapse. Hans Ziegler was appointed acting head of the Nuremberg City Administration.

HEALTH OFFICIAL RAPS CONDITIONS IN JEWISH CAMPS

J. KING

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 5.—(AP) Dr. Leo Srole resigned today as an UNRRA public health official in American-occupied Germany in protest over "neglect and indignities" in Jewish refugee camps, and denounced the entire Army program for handling displaced persons.

Srole asserted that "a disastrous epidemic is expected to strike at any hour" in the Jewish camp at Landsberg.

NIGHT

Lt. Gen. Walter B. Smith promised a quick investigation, and said Jews from all eastern Europe were crowding into the U. S. zone, necessitating a return to simple "rescue" work and curtailment of the rehabilitation program.

Smith, chief of staff of American occupation forces, invited newsmen to leave with him on the midnight train tonight to inspect the Landsberg camp.

Srole, a Hobart college sociologist, charged that UNRRA had "been placed in a weak position" because of army policy, and that American military government on lower levels "tends to protect and often coddle the Germans, and otherwise neglects the elementary human needs of those who were first declared enemies of Nazism."

He said AMG policy "occasionally actively inflicts indignities" upon the Jewish refugees.

In a detailed statement, described by Smith as "a very serious indictment," Srole scored the army's handling of displaced persons, and said that inadequately clothed Jews in the Landsberg camp were crowded into wooden shacks condemned as unfit for German prisoners.

He said Jews were sleeping two and three to a single bed, and were packed 12 to 15 "in space no larger than the entrance to an average American house."

Smith said the army program for displaced persons recently had been revised because of the influx of Jews into the American zone from Poland, and from the Russian and British zones of occupation.

He said some Jews had been repatriated to Poland three times, and had returned bringing "recruits" with them. The general declared the American zone had become a "haven or staging area for all the Jews of eastern Europe."

Smith added that the army—on the suggestion of Jewish advisors—had taken "on steps to close the border," but was forced to curtail rehabilitation work and revert to "rescue" work alone.

He described the camps as growing in population from 300 to 500 every week, and said the total population would run between 250,000 and 300,000. Smith said the whole question would probably have to be left for "governmental decision."

QUITS UNRRA POST IN PROTEST OVER CAMPS FOR JEWS

Official Expresses Fear of Epidemics—Accuses Army of Neglect.

DEC 6 1945

Frankfurt, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Dr. Leo Srole resigned today as an UNRRA public health official in protest against health conditions in Jewish refugee camps in American-occupied Germany. The Army promised a prompt investigation of his charges.

Dr. Srole, Hobart College sociologist, left his post as health officer of an UNRRA field team with the declaration that United States Army "neglect" might result in widespread epidemics among thousands of Jews streaming into the American zone from central and eastern Europe.

Calling Dr. Srole's charge a serious indictment, Lieut.-Gen. Walter B. Smith, chief of staff of American occupation forces, announced that he would make a personal investigation tomorrow of conditions at the Landsberg camp for Jewish refugees, where the public health officer asserted a disastrous epidemic is expected to strike at any hour.

Charges Callous Neglect.

Srole charged that the Army administration "callously neglects the elementary human needs" of refugees, and that UNRRA had been placed in a weak position by Army policies.

Jews in the Landsberg camp, housing some 6,200 refugees, Srole said, are crowded into wooden shacks condemned as unfit for German prisoners of war, two or three persons are forced to sleep in single beds, and from twelve to fifteen packed into spaces "no larger than the entrance to the average American home," he declared. He said clothing was inadequate.

"I protest," said Srole, "against the refusal of the United States Army command to adequately face problems of thousands of refugees fleeing for their lives from pogroms in Poland to the safe haven of displaced persons centers in the American zone of Germany.

"I protest against the policy of the American Military Government on local levels which, contrary to the letter and spirit of Gen. Eisenhower's directives, on one hand tends to protect and often coddle the Germans and on the other callously neglects the elementary human needs of those who were first declared enemies of Nazism, and occasionally actively inflicts indignities upon them."

Smith said at a press conference that Jews were flocking into the American zone from Poland and the Russian and British sectors. Some Jews who have been repatriated to Poland as many as three times have returned, often bringing "recruits," he said.

The American policy has been to do nothing to stop their migration into the American sector, he said, but the increasing Jewish population has forced the Army to suspend its program of rehabilitation for those already here in favor of a rescue program.

The fact that the Jews keep coming back to the American zone, he added, is "conclusive proof that our efforts are better than elsewhere, as there has been a large drift even from the British zone."

Hitler Was a Raving Madman In Last Hours, Aviatrix Says

By JAMES F. KING

OBERURSEL, Germany, Dec. 5—(AP) A graphic eye-witness account of Adolf Hitler's last hours today pictured the Fuehrer as a raving madman, alternately rehearsing suicide and "directing" a phantom rescue army, which had been wiped out days before.

The dramatic description, often bordering on comic opera, was given to U. S. army investigators by Capt. Hanna Reitsch, and was released with the comment that it was "probably as accurate" an account as will be obtained. Her story was told today through an American interrogator.

The blonde 33-year-old pilot said Hitler and Martin Bormann, his missing deputy, had joined in a suicide pact a few hours before the fall of Berlin, but said she had left upon the Fuehrer's orders before the suicides were carried out.

Tracing Hitler's actions as he and a little group of associates huddled in a bunker under the reichschancellery while the Russians closed in, she said the Fuehrer, raving and ranting, repeatedly berated Hermann Goering, Heinrich Himmler and other Nazi leaders as traitors who deserted him in an attempt to save their necks.

As the intensity of the Russian artillery barrage increased, Capt. Reitsch said, the shaking Fuehrer, on the verge of collapse, called repeated suicide rehearsals while special SS (Elite Guard) men, charged with destroying the bodies, stood by.

Until the last, however, she said Hitler pinned his hopes on the arrival of an army, commanded by a General Wenck, which he believed was driving up from the south to rescue him. This army, she learned later, had already been destroyed by the Russians.

"Hitler's manner and physical condition sank to lower depths," she said, describing his actions as she last saw him. "Occasionally, he still seemed to hold to a hope of General Wenck's success in breaking through. He talked of little else.

"He would stride about the shelter waving a road map that was fast disintegrating from the sweat of his hands, and planning Wenck's campaign. He was the picture of a man running almost blindly from wall to wall in his last retreat, waving papers that fluttered like leaves in his nervous twitching hands, or sitting stooped and crumpled before his table to represent his non-existent armies x x x like a young boy playing at war."

Talked of Goering's 'Betrayal'

Hitler's raving reached its height when he talked about Goering's "betrayal." His "head sagged, his face was deathly pallid and his hands shook" as he shouted:

"Nothing has been spared me. No allegiances are kept, no honor lived up to, no disappointments that I have not had, no betrayals that I have not experienced, and now this above all else. Nothing remains.

Every wrong has already been done me."

Hitler then told how he had had Goering arrested. Lt. Gen. Ritter von Greim, who had been flown to Berlin by Capt. Reitsch on a frantic call from the Fuehrer, was to be Goering's successor, Hitler said.

No less dramatic than Hitler's actions were those of the group gathered in the besieged bunker with him. The Fuehrer's propagandist, Joseph Goebbels, surrounded by his wife and six children, launched into bursts of oratory with all the theatrics of a ham actor.

Hitler's mistress, Eva Braun, engaged most of the time in changing clothes and polishing her nails, remarked over and over again: "Poor, poor Adolf, deserted by everyone, betrayed by all."

Borman, now being tried in absentia at the war crimes trial in Nuernberg, sat at his desk, "recording the momentous events in the bunker for posterity."

Goebbels' children, ranging in age from three to 12, sang for "Uncle Fuehrer" and seemed to enjoy being "in the cave."

One of Hitler's "suicide councils" was called on the night of April 27, when the Russian bombardment reached its peak, Captain Reitsch said.

All Pledged Allegiance

"All plans as to the destruction of the bodies of every one in the shelter were gone over," she declared, "and then every one made little speeches swearing allegiance to the Fuehrer and to Germany."

The news of Himler's armistice bid to the Allies on April 29, she said, came as "the greatest blow of all. Hitler raged as a mad man . . . sank into a stupor, and for a time the entife bunker was silent."

With the report that the Russians had launched an attack to overrun the chancellery on the morning of April 30, Hitler came to her and said, "Hanna, you belong to those who will die with me. Each of us has a vial of poison such as this." He handed her one for herself and one for Von Greim.

"I do not wish that one of us falls to the Russians alive, nor do I wish our bodies to be found by them," he told her. "Each person is responsible for destroying his body so that nothing recognizable remains. Eva and I will have our bodies burned."

At the end, however, Hitler changed his mind, and ordered Captain Reitsch and Von Greim to make a getaway to deliver an order calling for air support for the phantom army.

Bormann Joined Hitler In Suicide Pact In Bunker, German Aviatrix Says

J. KING

Oberursel, Germany, Dec. 5 (AP). Capt. Hanna Reitsch, German aviatrix who flew the last Nazi plane out of Berlin, has told United States counterintelligence investigators that the missing Martin Bormann joined in a death pact with Hitler a few hours before the German capital fell.

DEC 6 1945

The blond 33-year-old pilot gave a graphic description of the final hours of Hitler and his companions in a Reichschancellery bunker, but said she left upon the Führer's orders before suicides were carried out.

The Army took her story off the secret list today with the comment that it was "probably as accurate a description as will be obtained of those last days."

Tried In Absentia

Bormann, aide to Hitler, chief of the Nazi S.A. (Storm Troops) and head of the Volkssturm, the people's militia called to action the final weeks of the war, is being tried in absentia by the international military tribunal at Nuernberg for war crimes.

The drama of the end bordered on comic opera as Russian shells burst overhead, according to Captain Reitsch. She said Hitler berated Goering, Himmler and others as traitors while going through the motions of directing a phantom rescue army that had been wiped out days before.

She reported further:

Goebbels, surrounded by his wife and six children, launched into bursts of oratory with all the theatrics of a ham actor. Eva Braun became disgustingly dramatic. Blank-faced Bormann kept at his desk, writing a historical record of the finish of Nazism.

Suicide Rehearsals

As the intensity of the Russian barrage increased, the shaking Führer, on the verge of collapse, called for repeated suicide rehearsals. S.S. guards, charged with seeing that the bodies were destroyed, stood by.

Captain Reitsch, who claims the world's glider record and once flew in a V-1 bomb as test pilot, said she flew into Berlin April 26, 1945, with Lieut. Gen. Ritter con Greim, who had received a frantic call from Hitler after Goering had reportedly attempted to take over as Führer. Greim was wounded when Russian planes jumped them.

Her story, as told through an American interrogation officer:

"First to meet them was Mrs. Goebbels, who fell upon Reitsch with tears and kisses. Hitler came into Greim's sickroom with his face showing deep gratitude over Greim's coming.

Goering "A Traitor"

"Hitler asked, 'Do you know why I've called you? Because Hermann Goering has betrayed and deserted both me and his fatherland. Behind my back he has established connection with the enemy. His action was a mark of cowardice. And against my orders he has gone to save himself at Berchtesgaden, prepared to rule in my place.'

"Hitler shouted, 'Nothing has been spared me. No allegiances are kept, no "honor" lived up to no disappointments that I have not had, no betrayals that I have not experienced, and now this above all else.'"

Greim and Captain Reitsch were promised they could stay after they asked to remain in the bunker.

Gave Her Poison

Afterward Hitler came to her and in a low voice said: "Hanna, you belong to those who will die with me. Each of us has a vial of poison such as this," and handed her one for herself and one for Greim.

"I do not wish that even one of us falls to the Russians alive, nor do I wish our bodies to be found by them," said Hitler.

Hitler told her how he was counting on the army of a General Wenck, moving up from the south, to drive the Russians back. Later she learned that Wenck's forces had been wiped out days before.

She identified, among others in the bunker, Goebbels, his wife and their six children, State Secretary Neaman Havel from Ribbentrop's office, Admiral Fosz, as a representative of Doenitz; General Krebs, of the infantry; Bormann, Eva Braun, Hitler's personal pilot, Hansel Bauer, and Obergruppen Führer Fegelein, husband of Eva Braun's sister.

Fegelein Disappeared

Fegelein disappeared late the next afternoon, reportedly attempting to escape in civilian clothes as a refugee. He was ordered shot as a deserter.

Goebbels was "insanely incensed over Goering's treachery. He strode about his small luxurious quarters like an animal."

Frau Goebbels was "a very brave woman." Goebbels children, ranging in ages from 3 to 12, sang for their "Uncle Führer" and seemed to enjoy being in "the cave."

Eva Braun spent most of her time "polishing her fingernails and changing her clothes," remarking over and over again: "Poor, poor Adolf, deserted by everyone, betrayed by all."

Bormann "moved about very little. He kept instead very close to his writing desk."

Hitler Waved Road Map

Hitler's manner and physical condition had "sunk to the lower depths. He would stride about the shelter waving a road map that was fast disintegrating from the sweat of his hands, planning Wenck's campaign. He was like a young boy playing at war."

On the night of April 27, as the Russian bombardment reached its highest peak, "another suicide council was called by the Führer. The last instructions were given. The group was hypnotized. Then everyone made little speeches, swearing allegiance to the Führer and to Germany."

The news of Himmler's armistice bid to the Allies on April 29 came as "the greatest blow of all. Hitler raged like a madman. He sank into a stupor and for a time the entire bunker was silent."

Chalk-White Face

With the report that the Russians would launch an attack to overrun the Chancellory on the morning of April 30, Hitler, with a chalk-white face, went to Greim's room and slumped down on the edge of the bed.

"Our only hope is Wenck," he said, "and to make his entry possible we must call up every available aircraft to cover his approach."

Hitler then ordered Greim and Captain Reitsch to make a getaway to deliver the order, as communications had failed. A small armored vehicle took them to a plane and they took off on a broad street leading from Brandenburger.

109 FLYERS' GRAVES LOCATED IN REICH

DAY

Hereford, Germany, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—The bodies of 109 American airmen, at least thirty-five of whom are believed to have been murdered, have been exhumed at the Baltic port of Luebeck, the head of the U. S. War Crimes Investigation Section in the British zone said today.

The airmen had bailed out of damaged planes, made forced landings or were shot down in raids on Kiel. A senior officer said it was a trick of the Germans to bury murdered airmen in their own cemeteries and fake the grave records.

Austrians Arrest Schmidt

VIENNA, Dec. 5 (AP)—Guido Schmidt, the last Austrian Foreign Minister in the Government of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, was arrested today. The present provisional government named Schmidt yesterday as a war criminal, charging him with having participated in preparations for the country's annexation by Germany.

'Pravda' Assails Procope

MOSCOW, Dec. 5 (AP).—Konstantin Demidov, "Pravda" commentator, in an article criticizing the delay in Finland's war crimes trial, today described Hjalmar J. Procope, former Finnish Minister to Washington, as an "old Finnish Hitlerite who should be on the bench of defendants himself." Procope is chief of defense counsel at the trial.

Production Speedup Reported In Russia

Moscow, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Moscow News, biweekly English-language newspaper, said today Soviet industrial and factory workers were responding to a production speedup drive designed particularly to give the country more consumer goods.

"The new drive has assumed a scale that outstrips all wartime highs," the writer reported, despite the fact the nation has reverted to the eight-hour working day from the wartime day of eleven hours.

3 ITALIANS BALK ON CABINET SEATS

Rome, Dec. 5—(AP) A source close to premier-designate Alcide De Gasperi said tonight that three former Italian premiers had refused to enter the new government.

Inclusion of the former premiers—Vittorio Emanuele Orlando, Italy's World War I leader, Ivanoe Bonomi and Ferruccio Parri, all independents—was demanded by the Liberal party as a condition for its adherence to the cabinet of De Gasperi, leader of the Christian Democrat party.

If the Liberals continue to insist on participation of the three men, the inforamtion said, it was quite probable that DeGasperi would have to give up his attempt to form a new cabinet.

Premier Ferruccio Parri's government fell 10 days ago when the Liberals withdrew their support.

Pope Receives General Clark

Vatican City, Dec. 5 (AP)—Pope Pius XII today granted an audience to Gen. Mark Clark, although audiences usually are suspended during the spiritual exercise week which ends Saturday.

It was the second time the Pope and General Clark had met in the last four months.

Party In Power Wins All Seats In Albania

Tirana, Albania, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Democratic Front party of Premier Enver Hoxha won all 82 seats in elections for Albania's Constituent Assembly, polling 95 per cent of all the votes cast Sunday, official returns disclosed today. It was the only full ticket in the field.

In the first Albanian elections in 24 years, 555,271 of a total of 603,556 persons eligible cast their ballots. There were scattered votes for some "Independents." The Assembly will draft a new constitution and determine the method of selecting a chief of state.

20,000 Turks in Anti-Red Riot

Mob Swarms Through Istanbul Smashing Newspaper Plants and Book Stores.

Istanbul, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—More than 20,000 persons surged through Istanbul in a wild demonstration yesterday, smashing newspaper plants and book stores, and crying "Kill the communists!"

The demonstration appeared to develop suddenly in the old Istanbul city, across the Golden Horn, before the police and soldiers restored order and threw a heavy guard around the Russian embassy. Many persons were injured, chiefly from falling glass.

The modern publishing plants of the newspapers Tan and La Turquie were destroyed as the demonstrators—led by Istanbul University and high school students—plunged through the shops, smashing all equipment.

Each paper had been critical of President Ismet Inonu and often had been accused by other papers of having Leftist leanings.

The demonstration came at a moment when Turkey was concerned admittedly over future relations with the Soviet Union. Russia canceled her treaty of friendship and non-aggression with Turkey a month ago.

30.24 - 32-14

Near Tacsim Circle, the demonstrators destroyed the interior of a Russian-owned bookstore. They marched past the guarded Russian embassy, wrecked La Turquie, cheered the American and British legation offices as they swung past, and moved back across the Golden Horn bridges.

Mass Meetings Banned.

All kinds of mass gatherings "are from now prohibited in Istanbul," as a result of the recent anti-Communist demonstrations in that city, Radio Ankara reported today. CBS recorded the broadcast here.

SOVIET SEES AFFRONT IN TURKISH DISORDERS

LONDON, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Moscow radio, quoting a dispatch by Tass, Soviet Government news agency, from Ankara, Turkey, said tonight that yesterday's demonstrations in Istanbul, which witnesses called anti-Communist, were held "with obvious encouragement on the part of the police."

"The character of this demonstration revealed that it had been prepared by authorities beforehand," the Moscow broadcast said. "Demonstrators instigated special meetings, headed toward buildings occupied by the editorial offices of Turkey's few democratic publications * * * and committed many Fascist acts of hooliganism."

Istanbul reports said that the police and soldiers had restored order after the mob, estimated to number 20,000 and led by Istanbul University and high school students, had surged through the streets crying, "Kill the Communists," and had smashed the plants of the newspapers Tan and Laturquie.

"The Fascist demonstrators shouted slogans directed against the Soviet Union," the Moscow broadcast added. "Despite this, certain officials in Ankara and Istanbul are endeavoring to represent these street disorders as a manifestation of some kind of 'democracy,' while, according to San Telegraf, the chief of police described the events in the Istanbul streets as a 'patriotic demonstration.'"

Reds Reiterate Iran Stand In New Note

Tehran, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Russians have refused, in a second note to the Iran Government, to permit entrance of additional Iranian troops into the troubled northwestern province of Azerbaijan, it was disclosed today.

The new Soviet note came during a tense political situation, with Iranian Premier Hakimi threatening to resign unless the dispute over the province was settled by direct negotiation with Moscow.

Iranian troops, ordered to the province, which is the scene of a local autonomy movement, were still bivouacked at Sharifabed, where they were halted November 20 by the Russians. Soviet troops have occupied the province since 1941, when they were sent to guard the Russian lend-lease supply lane.

Dated December 2

The new Russian note, dated December 2 and delivered by the Soviet Embassy in Tehran, said:

"The Soviet Embassy in Iran presents its compliments to the Iran Ministry of Foreign Affairs and in answer to its notes dated November 20 and November 22 declares that, concerning the request of the Iran Foreign Ministry for immediate Soviet authorization for Iran troops to move northward, the Soviet Embassy reiterates that it has given its definite answer in the note of November 26."

In the November 26 note the Russians said their refusal was based upon the opinion that the arrival of Iran Government troops in the province would provoke bloodshed.

U.S., British Notes

Both the United States and Britain have dispatched notes to Moscow on the situation, the United States suggesting withdrawal of all Allied ocupation troops from Iran, the British urging that Iran troops be given freedom of movement. The Russians were reported to have rejected the suggestion for withdrawal of Allied occupation troops by January 1.

The original Soviet note to the Iran Government said that should bloodshed break out in Azerbaijan because of the arrival of Government troops, "the Soviet Government would be forced to bring additional troops to Iran for their troops' protection. Since the Soviet Government does not wish to send more troops to Iran, they do not deem it wise for further Iran troops to be sent to the north province."

Premier Hakimi's Cabinet had been called into emergency session yesterday, probably to consider the new Soviet refusal, and there had been reports that some Soviet proposal had been made to the effect that certain Iranian wishes would be met if the Iran Government treated the Azerbaijan question as a matter concerning only Iran and the Soviet Union.

U. S. Still Awaits British Reply

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP)—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes disclosed today that no reply had been received from Britain to the United States proposal that all American, Russian and British troops evacuate Iran by Jan. 1. Moscow rejected the proposal.

CHINESE TROOPS APPROACH MUKDEN

CHUNGKING, Dec. 5 — (AP) Chinese Nationalist troops were nearing Mukden today after thrusting more than 210 miles into Manchuria in three weeks and a triumphant entry into the city appeared imminent.

Formal entry might be delayed until the completion of negotiations with Russia for moving of troops by air, but apparently no Chinese Communists stand between the Nationalists and Mukden.

Liu Cheh, vice minister of foreign affairs, announced that negotiations for the air movement to Mukden and the capital at Changchun and for taking over the administration throughout Manchuria would be concluded within a few days.

Asked whether Nationalist troops would be permitted to go on in overland, now that they are so near Mukden, Liu replied: "I've not said anything to exclude that possibility."

Spearheads of the Nationalist advance already have passed through Sinmin, railway town only 30 miles west of Mukden, Chinese dispatches said.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's elder son, Chiang Chung-Kuo, and several other senior Nationalist officers returned to Changchun, 170 miles north of Mukden, to resume conferences with Marshal Malinovsky, the Russian commander.

Gen. Hsiung Shih-Hui, head of the generalissimo's branch headquarters in Manchuria, said here that the Nationalist advance would continue until the entire territory was recovered.

While the advance into Manchuria continued unopposed, other Chinese dispatches declared Chinese Communists were gathering for a new attack on the walled inner Mongolian city of Kweisui.

These accounts said the Communists were ready to move on this capital of Suiyuan province after seizing 1,000 sheep form farmers, driving them forward and exploding the minefields guarding Kweisui.

Brisk fighting also was reported along the Great Wall south of Kupehkow, one of the main passes leading from China into Manchuria. The Nationalist objective is the Communist-held Chengteh, 300 miles west of Mukden.

Admit Grenade Attack

An official dispatch from Kunming, where 6,000 students are on strike in protest against the civil war, said that two former soldiers had admitted they threw the hand grenades which killed four students and injured nine others Dec. 1. The dispatch alleged that one soldier asserted he was acting under orders of "certain Communist elements."

K. C. Wu, Minister of Information, said he understood that Chou En-lai, Communist leader, would return from the Communist capital at Yenan next Monday to resume peace talks.

P. H. Chang, a Cabinet spokesman, announced that China's Executive Yuan (Cabinet) would meet in Nanking after Dec. 15 and that Premier T. V. Soong also planned to move to the former capital. Chang said, however, that Chungking would remain the government seat until March.

brisk fighting the past few days along the Great Wall south of Kupehkow, one of the main passes leading from China proper into Jehol. The main Nationalist objective in this drive was reported to be Chengteh, capital of Jehol province.

The Generalissimo's elder son, Chiang Chung-kuo, and several other Nationalist officials reached Changchun, Manchurian capital, today to resume Sino-Russian negotiations.

The threat of greater internal violence remained grave as Communist circles charged the Nationalists are carrying out large-scale conscription in six North China provinces and rumors circulated that the Chinese Communists have an airforce ready to strike against Lieut. Gen. Tu Yu Ming's forces, now nearing Mukden.

Jap Planes Reported Seized

Correspondent Olen Clements reported that Tu's armies seized 70 former Japanese airplanes in a raid on a Communist airdrome near Chinhsien, 130 miles southwest of Mukden.

Communists' sources in Chungking charged that the Nationalists planned to draft 100,000 men in Honan province alone.

next March. Fifteen hundred Government workers will be flown to Nanking before December 15, he said.

Air Troops To Move Soon

Meanwhile, Liu Chieh, vice minister for foreign affairs, announced that Russian-Chinese negotiations for the airborne movement of Nationalist troops into Mukden and Changchun, Manchuria, would be concluded within a few days.

Liu said the troops would take over provincial and municipal administrations in the rich northern province.

The Nationalists' overland drive already has passed the rail town of Sinmin, 30 miles west of Mukden, and is heading for the historic city itself, press dispatches said.

Some press reports described

Chinese Will Move Seat Of Government To Nanking

Chungking, Dec. 5 (AP)—A Cabinet spokesman said today that China's executive Yuan would meet in Nanking after December 15 and that under present plans Premier T. V. Soong also would move to the former capital.

The spokesman, P. H. Chang, announced that personnel from various ministries would be established at Nanking within ten days, although the Government would remain at Chungking, possibly until

Madame Chiang Silent About Mrs. Roosevelt

Chungking, Dec. 5 (AP)—Madame Chiang Kai-shek declined to comment today on the statement made by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday that the wife of China's Generalissimo was typical of the Chinese in that "she can talk beautifully about democracy but does not know how to live democracy."

Asked for reaction, Madame Chiang replied emphatically, "no comment."

Mrs. Roosevelt made the statement at Fort Devens, Mass., during a question period after speaking to soldier patients at the post's Lovell General Hospital.

Reds Employ Stilted Tactics

Chungking, Dec. 5 (AP)—Borrowing a trick the Germans tried at Anzio, Chinese Communists were reported by Chinese press dispatches today to have used 1,000 requisitioned sheep to explode mine fields protecting suburbs of the walled Inner Mongolian city of Kweisui.

The dispatches also claimed the Communists trained unwilling local conscripts as a "stilt squadron" so they could walk over the city's electrified barbed-wire barricades.

Provincial dispatches said a renewed big-scale Communist attack on Kweisui was imminent.

Allied Leaders To Discuss Java

Batavia, Java, Dec. 5 (AP)—Fighting subsided in Java after sporadic outbursts in three cities, the British said tonight, while Dutch and British leaders sped to Singapore for high Allied conferences on critical problems in both the East Indies and in Indo-China.

Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied Southeast Asia commander, called the Singapore meeting.

A British statement said fighting again broke out at Ambarawa in Central Java last night and early this morning.

The British denied an Indonesian radio broadcast saying a truce had been arranged in Bandoeg, the summer capital, and said Indian troops had attacked an Indonesian-held building there, backed by tanks and artillery.

Meanwhile, it was reported in Batavia that nearly eight battalions of fresh Dutch troops, or about 6,000 men, were being given intensive training at garrisons on the Malay peninsula, and might be ready for action in two months. The Dutch troops were issued British jungle-green battle dress, it was said.

Java Peace Rumor Denied By British

Batavia, Java, Dec. 5 (AP)—An Indonesian nationalist radio announcement that a truce had been arranged in embattled Bandoeng was denied promptly today by British authorities, who said British Indian troops, supported by tanks and artillery, attacked an Indonesian-held building in that summer capital.

Fighting also was reported in Ambarawa last night and today, while in Semarang, Indonesians fired mortar shells against an airfield, the British said.

Reinforcements Rushed

The press statement said Indonesians in Semarang also were tampering with the water supply, booby-trapping water installations.

The British reported yesterday that reinforcements were being rushed to Bandoeng by air, even as representatives of the unrecognized Indonesian republic were on their way to the summer capital in an attempt to halt the fighting there.

The Indian attack in Bandoeng recovered quantities of explosives, arms, ammunition and a high-power radio transmitter, the British said. Thirty women and children were evacuated by the British from a village northeast of Bandoeng last night.

In Semarang, Nationalists fired on an airfield with mortars, the British headquarters said.

Headquarters also announced that seventeen Royal Air Force men had been killed so far in Java, including nine by hostile action, five in crashes, and three in other accidents. Two other RAF men are missing.

It was reported in Batavia that nearly eight battalions of fresh Netherland troops, about 6,000 men, were training at garrisons in Malaya and might be ready for action in two months. The troops received British jungle-green uniforms, it was said.

ABDICATION TALK AROUSES LEADERS IN JAPANESE DIET

TOKYO, Dec. 5 — (AP) A Diet member shattered precedent today

by asking if Emperor Hirohito would abdicate, bringing a quick government response that "such a thing could not occur."

Kyodo news agency said the question was put to Minister of State Joji Matsumoto in the House of Representatives by Ikuji Tanaka, independent member.

Tanaka said some circles thought abdication was possible after Prince Konoye discussed the subject with foreign correspondents recently. He wanted to know what the government thought about it.

"Even to express in public such a thing as abdication is too awesome," Matsumoto replied, adding that those who harbored such a "mistaken idea" as abdication were the exception.

The Emperor at the time was meeting with the privy council, his inner circle of advisers, but without the council's president, Kiichero Hiranuma, who is on the latest Allied list of suspected war criminals.

A plenary session of the Diet's budget committee was told meanwhile that the Japanese government expected to be out of the red after 1947.

Finance Minister Keizo Shibusawa, Governor of the Bank of Japan, said he planned to use income from the property tax and war-time profit taxes, ordered by General MacArthur to recover huge war profits, to buy back government bonds.

MacArthur ordered the Japanese government to impound all funds of Japan's securities exchange.

The government used the funds to stabilize the securities market. The account on Sept. 30 had a balance of 288,000,000 yen (about $19,000,000 at the current rate).

MacArthur also authorized the Japanese government to complete construction of 10 naval escort vessels and one minelayer to be used in repatriating Japanese nationals. The ships will be inspected constantly to see that they are kept demilitarized.

abdicate?—were out in the open today.

Isanji Tanaka, independent Diet member, asked Minister of State Joji Matsumoto what the Government thought about abdication of the Emperor, Kyodo news agency said. Tanaka indicated some circles thought abdication possible after Prince Konoye's discussion on the subject with foreign correspondents.

Kyodo quoted Matsumoto as replying that "even to express in public such a thing as abdication is too awesome." The Minister added that those who contemplate such a "mistaken" idea were the exception.

Discussion of whether Hirohito helped push Japan into the war caused an equal stir.

The unprecedented question was asked at a plenary session of the House of Representatives Budget Committee. In reply, Premier Shidehara said he personally believed Hirohito had no war responsibility, and added that occupational authorities have not raised the question with the Government.

Tells Of Secret Meeting

Today a retired Japanese general, Toshizo Nishio, told the Associated Press that Hirohito attended a secret conference held at the Imperial Palace in late November or early December, 1941, just before the war's outbreak. Nishio said the Mikado informed the Supreme War Council that "Japan might have to fight if things didn't improve."

Nishio added, however, what other Japanese have said—the Emperor wasn't told a sneak attack on Pearl Harbor would open the conflict.

Another Secret Meeting.

Additionally, it was learned that when Prince Fumimaro Konoye recently described to authorities another secret conference held at the Palace September 6, 1941, he disclosed that Hirohito was present. The September 6 conference, held when Konoye was Premier, included War Minister Hideki Tojo, who later replaced Konoye as Premier. The conferees decided that Japan would begin preparing for war in the middle of October unless there was a decided improvement in negotiations in Washington. No proposal was made at the conference to remove the chief stumbling block to the Washington negotiations, the requested removal of Japanese troops from China.

Inosuke Furuno, who as president of the recently dissolved Domei Agency has been added by Gen. MacArthur to the list of war criminal suspects, said in an interview that the press could not prevent war because militarists controlled the sources of news. He said that field dispatches of Domei correspondents were censored at the source during the war and "even when they returned to give the true situation we had no way of getting it into print."

Furuno, who plans to surrender shortly before the December 12 deadline set by MacArthur, said Japan's Navy Department delayed announcement of the Pearl Harbor attack and he first heard about it "through monitoring an Associated Press broadcast" from the United States.

Meanwhile Hirohito met with his Privy Council, which decided to send to the Diet a bill asking the return of rank and medals of the war crimes suspects to the Emperor. The council president, Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, who is on MacArthur's list of war crimes suspects, did not attend the meeting.

Hirohito's War Guilt, Abdication Discussed

Emperor Is Reported To Have Delayed War

Tokyo, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Japanese army and navy drew plans to launch the war with the United States in mid-October of 1941, two months before Pearl Harbor, but were stayed by the Government and Emperor, it was learned authoritatively today.

This was brought out by American Army officers who interrogated Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Premier when Japan talked of peace and prepared for new wars.

A reliable source said the Army-Navy war plan was presented by the late Field Marshal General Sugiyama, then chief of the army general staff, at a secret imperial conference in Emperor Hirohito's Palace September 6, 1941.

Konoye was quoted as saying that the militarists unitedly supported the plan, but "we (the government) still felt there was a possibility for negotiation so we were willing to take a chance."

The prince said Hirohito emphasized "the need for carrying on negotiations with America."

Midway Balked Japan's Plans

BEING NIGHT DEC 6 1945

Tokyo, Dec. 5 (AP)—American pilots who turned back the powerful Japanese fleet in the "David-and-Goliath" victory at Midway in June, 1942, wrecked Tokyo's plans to win a compromise peace by holding the Pacific in a stranglehold of outlying bases.

That was disclosed today by Capt. Toshikazu Ohmae, former chief of the naval operations sections of the Navy Ministry, in revealing details of what Japan considers one of the two decisive naval battles of the war.

Contrast In Strength

Japan sent 11 battleships and 76 other combat vessels against the tiny sandspit island, which was defended by a relatively handful of American planes and 23 warships. The heaviest United States fleet elements were five cruisers under Admiral Raymond A. Spruance.

The objective was to occupy Midway with 3,500 Marine and Army infantrymen, who were carried aboard sixteen transports. The fleet, Chmae said, had no intention of attempting a Hawaiian landing. Midway was considered the key to a vast co-ordinated naval offensive designed to secure advanced aerial observation bases from the Aleutians to New Hebrides. It was timed to coincide with the capture of Kiska.

Smashed On First Day

But divebombers and fighter planes smashed the Midway thrust in the first fiery day—June 4, 1942. They sank four carriers and destroyed the Japanese air strength. The late Admiral Isoruku Yamamoto, who directed the assault, abandoned the campaign without attempting to send his overwhelmingly superior surface forces against the defenders.

Four carriers of Vice Admiral Chuichi Nagumo's task force launched 150 planes for the preinvasion assault upon Midway at 4 A.M. from a point 250 miles north-northwest of the island.

Twenty-four American divebombers roared over the Japanese task force three hours later as the Japanese planes were returning. Nine direct hits sank the carriers Akagi Kaga and Soryu at 7.26 A.M. A fourth carrier, the Hiryu, was damaged attempting to escape and sunk early that afternoon by the United States submarine Nautilus.

Chmae said the dive-bombers dropped 500-pounders at altitudes of less than 1,500 feet. More than 100 torpedo planes and other bombers also joined in the fight. They scored no hits, but some near misses showered the ships with spray.

Yamamoto Withdraws

At the first American air assault, Yamamoto pulled back his main surface forces to prepare for a night action. Then, at dusk, the Admiral learned the Americans still had carriers which he believed had been destroyed. Yamamoto promptly abandoned his original occupation plans.

While the bulk of his fleet was withdrawing toward a distant rendezvous for return to Japan, Yamamoto sent four heavy cruisers toward Midway for a final bombardment. During the night they encountered United States submarines and, while maneuvering to avoid them, the cruisers Mongami and Mikuma collided.

Carrier planes found the crippled Mikuma early June 5 and sank her. The Mongami limped to Truk for repairs.

Losses Compared

The Japanese lost four carriers, a heavy cruiser, 258 aircraft (42 of them in combat) and 2,500 men. The Americans lost the carrier Yorktown and the destroyer Hammond, which was sunk by one of ten Japanese submarines in the area.

Chmae said the Japanese Navy originally planned to maintain a defense perimeter anchored in the mandated islands, Wake and New Guinea until the Doolittle raid demonstrated the vulnerability of the Japanese homeland. Then encouraged by the relative ease of early naval operations, the admirals agreed to establish a more extensive defense perimeter which would spot United States task forces and afford more time for interception.

Key Role For Midway

Midway was to become an airbase and key outpost. Its seizure was the foundation of the plan, which included occupation of the Solomons. The admirals believed this tightened defense would prolong the war and lead America to accept a compromise peace.

Chmae said the bombardment of Dutch Harbor on June 3-4 and the occupation of Kiska and Attu were conducted by relatively small 5th Fleet units. The Coral Sea battle May 3-8 "only postponed" a correlated plan to occupy Port Moresby.

"The Midway defeat changed the course of the war—and our defeat in the first battle of the Philippine Sea was the turning point, because then we lost the ability to defend Japan," Chmae declared.

Jap Crosses Mark Yank Flyers' Graves

Hiroshima, Japan, Dec. 5 (AP)—Crosses, bearing Japanese characters, which read "brave American soldiers' grave," mark the burial places of seven bomber crewmen whose plane crashed in flames two weeks before Japan surrendered.

The 41st Division located the graves. Lieut. John Day, of Topeka, Kan., and Capt. Kenyon S. Jonckes, of Huntington, W.Va., said eyewitnesses told them that only one of the airmen succeeded in bailing out and his parachute failed to open.

Alert 60-Point Men in Honshu

KYOTO, Japan, Dec. 5 (AP).—The 6th Army today ordered all 60-point enlisted men to report to the 11th Replacement Depot at Okazaki, on southern Honshu, by Dec. 10. The move affects 6,100 troops and brings to more than 28,000 the total released in the last eight days.

Redeployment of occupation forces was also speeded in the 8th Army area where the 27th Infantry Division and 14th Corps were relieved of all occupation duties in preparation for their return to the United States this month.

The 8th Corps will take over most of the 14th's occupational area. The 97th Division, participant in the Ruhr pocket and Czechoslovakian campaigns, will relieve the 27th.

GENERALS PONDER YAMASHITA'S FATE AS HIS TRIAL ENDS

MANILA, Dec. 5 — (AP) Five American generals pondered behind closed doors tonight the fate of Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, after hearing the final arguments of counsel in his month-long trial on war crimes charges. Their verdict is expected Friday.

The penalty of death by hanging was demanded by Chief Prosecutor Maj Robert M. Kerr, but defense counsel [illegible] Clarke in an impassioned plea urged the commission to "exemplify the concepts and standards of American justice, the keystone of American democracy, by returning a finding of not guilty."

Kerr talked for nearly three hours, summing up the tragic story of mass murder, rape and other atrocities attributed to Yamashita's men by prosecution witnesses and hammering home the argument that Yamashita failed to prevent these crimes because he simply "did not care."

The chief prosecutor ridiculed Yamashita's contention that he was too busy to visit prisoner-of-war and internee camps and neither ordered nor condoned nor even heard of any atrocities.

Kerr also assailed the defense contention that most of the atrocities were committed by battle-crazed men in an army which had gotten out of hand in the confusion of disaster.

"In many of the cases before this commission," he said, "these acts were under the leadership of commissioned officers and were planned military acts."

In the light of all the evidence piled up against the defendant, Kerr concluded, "anything less than a death sentence would be mockery."

Capt. Adolph Reel of the defense staff argued eloquently against condemning Yamashita for the crimes of others. He insisted that the general "neither knew about, permitted or condoned" atrocities, which "in fact were in complete disregard of any of his oorders about the treatment of the Filipino people."

"When we judge him," the Boston, Mass., attorney concluded, "we must put ourselves in his place; and I say that unless we are ready to plead guilty before the world to the charge of hypocrisy, to the charge that we supinely succumbed to mob desire for revenge, then we must find Yamashita not guilty."

Yamashita, who had sat with poker-faced placidity through weeks of horror-packed and sometimes hysterial testimony by prosecution witnesses, was so moved by this speech that he grasped Reel by the shoulders and exclaimed:

"Thank you! Thank you!"

we recommended that the sentence, if death, be carried out by hanging."

"Devastating" Witnesses

Kerr charged that "every reasonable doubt has been shattered by devastating witnesses" against the Japanese army commander, who is accused of condoning innumerable atrocities by his troops in the Philippines.

"There is no doubt of his responsibility and negligence," Kerr said in asking a verdict of guilty and the death sentence.

Col. Harry Clarke, concluding Yamashita's defense arguments, asked the commission to "exemplify the concepts and standards of American justice, the keystone of American democracy, by returning a finding of not guilty."

Decision Friday

The commisison, which has heard more than 200 witnesses and received more than 100 documents from both sides in the 32-day hearing, recessed until Friday, when its decision will be announced.

Defense attorneys closely followed this argument:

1. Yamashita did not permit atrocities.

2. He did not condone, nor did he know of, their commission.

Capt. Milton Sandberg, of New York, argued that civilians in Manila—where many atrocities occurred—had been warned many times to evacuate.

Navy Troops Berserk

He asserted that Japanese navy troops in Manila were "trapped in the doomed city and went berserk and unloosed their pentup emotions. Does rape in the Bayview Hotel by these now dead troops bear responsibility for Yamashita, who was 100 miles away and had no control of their actions?"

Yamashita had testified that he had no control over the Navy troops. Prosecution witnesses testified that Japanese troops committed brutal, day and night-long mass rape of girls and young women at the Bayview.

Departure Of Terauchi

After Field Marshal Count Terauchi, commander of the Southern Regions, left Manila, November 17, 1944, it was difficult to control civilians and Yamashita could only warn his troops to treat civilians kindly, Sandberg argued.

He contended that the testimony of Colonel Nishiharu, Yamashita's judge advocate, was inaccurate and largely untrue.

"Japanese methods of trial are foreign and repugnant to the American system," Sandberg said of the execution of Filipino guerrillas but added: "There is no provision in international law for such trials" except for armed bands of war criminals.

Question Of Command

Capt. Adolph Reel, of Boston, Mass., touched on charges of ill-treatment of prisoners of war and internees at Santo Tomas and Los Banos camps and of mass executions at Palawan. He argued that there was no connection of these instances to Yamashita's command; that in each instance other commands were responsible.

Reel concluded:

"When we judge him (Yamashita), we must put ourselves in his place, and I say, unless we are ready to plead guilty before the world to the charge of hypocrisy, to the charge that we sublimely succumbed to mob desire for revenge, then we must find Yamashita not guilty."

Yamashita, visibly moved, took Reel by the shoulders and said, "Thank you! Thank you!"

Yamashita Awaits Decision Of Court

Manila, Dec. 5 (AP)—A five-general United States military commission recessed to ponder the fate of Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita today after hearing final summations in which the prosecution demanded the death penalty and the defense pleaded for "American justice—acquittal."

It promised a verdict Friday.

Major Robert M. Kerr, of Portland, Ore., chief prosecutor, declared that "in view of the aggravated nature of the crimes and in view of the measures of the crimes,

Philippines To Have Hydroelectric System

Manila, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Philippines Government is planning a huge hydroelectric power system to overcome the archipelago's lack of coal and petroleum and expects to get a large part of the necessary machinery and equipment in the form of reparations in kind from Japan, with financial aid from the United States also playing a vital role.

The National Power Corporation, it was disclosed, is asking General MacArthur through President Osmena for the equipment of Japanese electric generating plants and transmission lines to replace millions of dollars worth of material stolen or destroyed by the Nipponese during their occupation of the islands.

A major item in the Government's plan is erection of a 90,000-horsepower development on Lake Lanao, Mindanao, with seven generating stations utilizing a 2,300-foot drop in the 20-mile course of the Agsu

Dutra Maintains Lead In Returns From Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 5 (AP)—Latest unofficial returns tonight in Brazil's presidential contest showed Army General Eurico Gaspar Dutra well ahead of Air General Eduardo Gomes, with two civilian candidates lagging far behind. About fifteen per cent of the vote has been tabulated.

On the third day of vote counting, Dutra, backed by former President Getulio Vargas, had 359,242 votes to 220,[illegible] for Gomes, leader of the anti-Vargas forces. Communist presidential candidate Yeddo Fiuza had 103,985 and Rollim Telles, Agrarian party candidate, had 895.

Complete official returns from this first Brazilian presidential election in fifteen years are not expected before next week.

Nazis Expelled, Argentine Says

Buenos Aires, Dec. 5 (AP)—Juan I. Cooke, Foreign Minister, said tonight that the Argentine Government "always has tended" to expel Nazi agents from the nation "because these persons are considered dangerous for the security of the country and the continent."

His statement was in reply to one made in Washington today by Secretary of State Byrnes, who said that in so far as the United States has been able to deteremine, Argentina has not deported a single one of 71 Nazi agents despite promises to do so.

Cooke said the Argentine Government had not concluded "any formal promise regarding deportation of Nazi agents."

He said three Nazis in Argentine had filed writs of habeas corpus to prevent their deportation, another had escaped, a fifth was ill and a sixth was held under a charge of theft. Cooke referred only to these and made no mention of the 71 Byrnes said Argentina had promised to deport.

OUSTED DIPLOMATS GOT VITAL JOBS, HURLEY CHARGES

Former Ambassador Testifies Two Were Assigned to MacArthur's Staff.

HITS AT BRITAIN

General Declares London Government Opposed U.S. Policy of Unified China.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 — (AP) Snowy-haired Patrick J. Hurley, his voice flaring with anger, asserted today that two career diplomats who favored "collapse" of the present government of China had been given vital assignments with Gen. Douglas MacArthur after Hurley sent them home from Chungking.

Also, in the course of two and a half hours of impassioned testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations committee, Hurley made these other major assertions:

That Britain was opposing United States policy for the unification of China at the very moment that Gen. Hurley, then ambassador at Chungking, was trying hardest to negotiate an agreement between the Chinese Communists and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Supported Imperialistic Bloc

That some of the career men in China supported an imperialistic bloc of nations and were perfectly willing to use Lend-Lease to subjugate people contrary to the policies of the Atlantic Charter. Hurley named the "imperialistic bloc" as consisting of Britain, France, the Netherlands, to a less important extent Belgium and Portugal; and, before the war, Germany and Japan.

That at the moment none of the big powers, Russia, the United States and Britain, is helping the Chinese Communists and without such help the Communists are not, in Hurley's opinion, a major threat to the control of China by Chiang Kai-shek.

That some American diplomat "leaked" to the Communist leaders in north China a policy agreed upon by President Roosevelt at the Yalta Big Three conference that the United States would arm either Nationalist or Communist troops when its forces invaded China, depending on what troops it found in the territory where the invasion occurred. As a result, Hurley said, he suddenly discovered that the Communists were concentrating troops toward one port so that they would be sure to get American arms.

That he resigned last week as ambassador to China because he discovered that the "career men" who had been fighting his policies in China were attacking him again even through speeches delivered by congressmen on the floor of Congress. "I was left naked to my enemies and the enemies of America," Hurley proclaimed to the committee, "and I decided to begin fighting."

That in January 1945 he received a telegram signed with the name of Secretary of State Stettinius ordering him to stop negotiating for settlement between the Chinese Communists and the Nationalists. He said that he had been told that Stettinius did not actually send the telegram and anyway he ignored it because he did not believe there could be such a reversal of policy.

Names Atcheson, Service

Hurley's appearance before the committee was packed with drama from start to finish. He had resigned as ambassador with a blast at State department career men and he hammered home his criticisms of their "sabotage" of his efforts in China repeatedly. He named five men as having been "disloyal" to him. They included the two now serving with MacArthur. These two are George Atcheson, Jr., who was counselor of embassy in Chungking and is now diplomatic advisor to MacArthur, and John S. Service who was second secretary in Chungking and is now with Atcheson on MacArthur's staff.

The other three men whom Hurley named in this connection were John Davis, formerly second secretary at Chungking now on duty at Moscow; Fulton Freeman, former third secretary under Hurley and now in the State department; and Arthur R. Ringwalt, former second secretary at Chungking and now in the Chinese division of the State department.

Hurley told the committee that Atcheson had once advocated furnishing Lend-Lease arms to the Chinese Communists because he "wanted to destroy the Nationalist government of China—the government I had been sent there with instructions to support."

Service, Hurley declared, proposed in October, 1944, that the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek should be allowed to collapse.

Hurley said both these suggestions were over-ruled and no arms were ever given to the Communists. What annoyed him most, he said, was that when the two men involved were removed from Chungking they were given positions in the State department in which they actually seemed to supervise his work. It was in this connection that he told of the telegram that he said had been signed with the name of Stettinius. He said he did not know who sent the telegram, but had heard it was not Stettinius.

The British incident was brought up by Hurley as an illustration of how the career men in his opinion had "sided with the imperialist bloc" of nations. He said during the time he was negotiating with the Communists a "Col. Ride" of the British army talked with Gen. Li of the Chinese central government army and outlined the reasons for which Britain opposed the American policy of unification in China.

Arthur Ringwalt, Hurley continued, obtained a report on these reasons from the British embassy

HURLEY SAYS ATCHESON SOUGHT ARMS FOR CHINESE COMMUNISTS

Charges Former Embassy Aid Would 'Destroy' Regime of Chiang Kai-shek.

NAMES OTHER DIPLOMATS

Asserts Service Suggested Permitting Nationalists to Collapse.

Washington, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Patrick J. Hurley today named two of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's present political advisers in Tokyo as diplomats who went contrary to him when he was Ambassador to China. They were, he said, George Atcheson Jr. and John S. Service, career men in the State Department.

Both saw service in China during Hurley's tenure as Ambassador to Chungking, and both have since been assigned by the State Department to MacArthur in Japan.

In discussing the background of his resignation as Ambassador a week ago, Hurley told an open session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that Atcheson had advocated furnishing lend-lease arms to the Chinese Communists, and that Service had once proposed in October, 1944, that the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek be allowed to collapse.

The Atcheson suggestion, Hurley asserted, would "destroy" the Chungking regime, if carried out.

No arms were given to the Communists, however, Hurley added, and Atcheson was subsequently recalled to the United States.

Clashes With Connally.

Hurley and Senator Connally, committee chairman clashed sharply during the closing phases of today's session. Hurley had acknowledged that prior to his resignation both Byrnes and President Truman had assured him full backing if he returned to China.

"You keep saying you want a public statement," Connally remarked. "You just want something in the newspapers."

Hurley's face flushed. He leaned forward angrily.

"I resent that," he shouted. "That is not true. I don't want my Government pussyfooting."

There was a moment's pause, then the crowd in the hearing chamber broke into lour applause.

An earlier outburst also involved Senator Green (D.-R. I.), who questioned Hurley persistently about the career men Hurley said had worked against him.

"I'm not going to be led as though I am a bootlegging witness on the stand," Hurley shouted. "I have been asked questions when I said I can't answer. I've been questioned like a witness by a prosecutor."

Connally sailed into this protest by saying: "Please control your emotions, General."

"I am not emotional," Hurley thundered.

Names Four More.

His testimony at this stage added three more names to the list of those he said had been "disloyal" to him in Chungking. This brought those named to Atcheson, former counselor; Service, former second secretary; John Davies, former second secretary, now in Moscow; Fulton Freeman, former third secretary, now in the State Department, and Arthur Ringwalt, former second secretary, now in the State Department.

Connally asked Hurley what reason Atcheson gave for his request—did he recommend that the Communists be armed so they could help fight the Japanese?

"His reasons were that he wanted to destroy the Nationalist Government of China, the Government I had been sent there with instructions to support," Hurley asserted in a loud voice.

Wants People to See Letter.

Hurley invited Connally to get Atcheson's letter and read it. He said he was willing for the American people to inspect it.

Hurley said the diplomat's letter was dated last February 28.

Hurley said that when he saw the letter he declared if that was the policy of the United States Government Atcheson had better be left in China and he himself allowed to remain in the United States.

"After days of argument, Mr. Atcheson was recalled," he said.

Throughout the morning, Senators La Follette (Prog.-Wis.) and Vandenberg (R.-Mich.) pressed Hurley to get down to cases.

"I'd like to know who did what that you object to, when he did it and what he did," Vandenberg said.

It was then that Hurley leveled his charge against Atcheson.

Connally questioned Hurley at length concerning his relations with Gen. Stilwell, commander of American forces in China. Hurley said the two had never had a word of controversy, but he declared that Vinegar Joe and Chiang Kai-shek were "incompatible."

In his testimony referring to Service, Hurley said that the latter was under Stilwell, then commander in China, when he made the proposal about allowing the Chungking government to collapse.

Hurley testified the Atcheson incident occurred after he had left China on a trip to Washington. He said Acheson wrote a letter to the Secretary of State advocating furnishing lend-lease arms and equipment to the Communist forces, and claiming that he had the support of every official member of the American embassy in that recommendation.

Acheson is currently on duty for the State Department in Tokyo as a political adviser to General of the Army Douglas A. MacArthur.

Later Stilwell was removed from China by President Roosevelt and Service was transferred to Hurley's embassy staff. He ranked as second secretary until he was sent home. He is now on duty under MacArthur in Tokyo.

Hurley made the assertions about Service and his connection with Vinegar Joe Stilwell in opening testimony before the committee. He said the central issue was what he called the "defeat" of American policy in China by career diplomats of the State Department.

Policy Not Entirely Defeated.

But, at another point, he said American policy actually was not entirely defeated but only "to some extent." He declared that in line with that policy he had succeeded in sustaining China as an ally, sustaining the government of Chiang Kai-shek, keeping the Chinese Army in the war and maintaining harmonious Chinese-American relations.

Connally said to Hurley: "Well, you say you succeeded in all these enterprises so these men in the State Department didn't defeat your purposes in China during the war?"

Connally had put several questions to the witness before that. Hurley almost shouted back the reply to that one.

"On the 30th day of October, 1944, he said, "John S. Service sent in a report to the State Department. I believe it was his report No. 40. It was a general statement of policy proposing to let the Government that I was sent over there to sustain fall—and that report was circulated among the Communists."

Connally said, "Was he under you?"

Hurley replied that Service was a diplomat assigned to United States commander in China, Gen. Stilwell.

To Submit List.

The ex-ambassador then proposed to submit to the committee a list of documents he wanted introduced as evidence from State Department files. He had said earlier that they were of great importance to the foreign policy of the United States and could only be paraphrased for the public record because they had originally been sent from China in code.

So when he offered to submit his list, Connally said that the committee should receive it only in secret session and take it up with the State Department privately since the documents were of such importance.

Hurley said he was "not going to be belligerent" about his testimony and would do what the committee wanted but he added in table-thumping tones:

"Most of these documents have been given out already by career men in the State Department and the only difference is that they were trying to give them to people who were trying to defeat the policy of the United States, while I would call them to the attention of you gentlemen."

Hurley said there were no conflicts between him and Byrnes on United States policy in China. He said this after reading Byrnes's letter to Anderson into the record.

Earlier in his testimony Hurley said that he would not have resigned as Ambassador to China if Secretary of State Byrnes had made an earlier pronouncement on the United States policy in the Far East.

He read the committee a letter from Byrnes, addressed to Representative Anderson (R.-Cal.) stating, "We favor the creation of a strong, united and democratic China which will contribute to peace and stability in the Far East and which will enable China effectively to support the United Nations Organization."

Anderson made the letter public only yesterday in the House and had it inserted in the Congressional Record. It was dated November 30—three days after Hurley announced his resignation.

Senator Connally invited Hurley to make any statement he desired concerning his resignation or American Far Eastern policy.

Hurley said he wanted to make it clear that he did not ask for the hearing and had not discussed with any member the facts he intended to present.

Denies Partisan Alliance.

"The reason for this statement," he explained, "is that I am convinced this committee is beginning a hearing on the foreign policy of the United States. Such a hearing should not be partisan. I will decline to ally myself with any partisan group or with any minority."

Hurley said he had read in the newspapers some time ago that certain members of the foreign service of the State Department had "presented, given or sold" certain secret State Department documents to persons not entitled to see them.

He said he did not know the nature of all the confidential papers, "but I have been advised that my reports to the State Department were among them."

SENATE REMOVES FREE PRESS RIDER FROM UNRRA BILL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 — (AP) The Senate passed an UNRRA appropriation bill today without a "free press" rider which the House had added. But the original sponsor of the amendment served notice he would try to attach it to another UNRRA measure which the House is considering.

Rep. Brown (R.-Ohio) said he would try tomorrow to attach the amendment to a bill authorizing $1,350,000,000 for UNRRA in its next fiscal year. The House began consideration of this measure today and heard Chairman Bloom (D.-N. Y.) of the Foreign Affairs committee plead:

"The nations of the world are hanging upon our action. We must show that we mean to help bind up their wounds and that we will do so without imposing political conditions or extorting concessions as the price of our humanity."

On the other hand Rep. Eaton

30-24-32145

(R.-N. J.) of the committee declared that "our people are entitled to know where their money goes. We have had only one instrumentality in getting that information —the public press."

Brown's amendment would prohibit use of the funds in countries which deny American reporters free access to news of UNRRA activities there. The House attached it originally to a bill appropriating $550,000,000 for UNRRA use this fiscal year.

A Senate committee struck the restriction from the $550,000,000 appropriation, however, and it was this bill that the Senate passed.

Today by voice vote. It now goes back to the House; that chamber may agree to the Senate action or request a conference. Brown told a reporter he did not know that any effort would be made to reinsert the amendment in that bill.

Senator McKellar (D.-Tenn.) argued that the appropriation bill was no place for such restrictions. He promised to "go the limit" when the other measure, carrying the question of whether America's part in UNRRA shall be continued, comes before the Senate.

Going along with McKellar as to the press amendment on the present bill, Senator Brooks (R.-Ill.) welcomed McKellar's promise of future support.

"The American people are going to insist that the people of the world know that it is we who are feeding them," Brooks said.

The $550,000,0000 appropriation is the remainder of the first $1,350,000,000 authorized by the United States as its 72 per cent share of the agency's operating funds. The apportionment was made on the basis of each of the 46 participating nations' contributing one per cent of its 1943 income.

FRENCH PROGRAM MAY BE IGNORED IN OCCUPIED AREA

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5. — (AP) Secretary of State Byrnes said today that the United States, Britain and Russia might act without France to centralize transportation and currency in their three occupation zones of Germany.

Byrnes told his news conference he had informed Paris that the U. S. might suggest such a course if French representatives of the Allied council in Berlin continue to block action agreed upon by the Big Three powers at Potsdam.

The secretary outlined the situation thus:

1. The Big Three believe it is essential that central agencies be set up immediately to take charge of transportation and currency for all Germany.

2. France is using the unanimity rule on the Berlin council to veto creation of those agencies on grounds that the Allies first should determine finally whether the Ruhr and Rhineland are to be separated from Germany.

The secretary said he was entirely in accord with French proposals that the Ruhr and Rhineland matters be investigated but that he was entirely opposed to any government's blocking all council action until it got specifically what it wanted.

Behind the French stand is the fear that if Germany retained the industrially-rich Ruhr it might be able to prepare another war. The French also point out that Germany has mounted three invasions from the Rhineland.

If the Big Three should adopt Byrnes' proposal, the central agencies presumably could not administer the Rhineland because that province is a part of the French zone. The agencies could, however, administer the Ruhr which is in the British zone.

Byrnes also disclosed:

That Mark F. Ethridge, Louisville publisher, had returned from the Balkans and soon would report to Byrnes his findings on whether the Bulgarian and Rumanian governments were representative and whether their plans for national elections were democratic.

That so far as this government has been able to determine, Argentina has not deported a single one of 71 Nazi agents despite promises to do so.

That no reply had been received from Britain to the U. S. proposal that all American, Russian and British troops evacuate Iran by Jan. 1. Moscow rejected the proposal.

Mrs. Luce Finds Many Errors In Colleague's Praise of Reds

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 — (AP) Representative Clare Boothe Luce (R-Conn) accused Rep. Delacy (D-Wash) today of presenting the House an "encyclopedia of error" in a recent speech on the part played by Chinese Communists in the war.

Delacy, who made the speech Nov. 26, was not present when Mrs. Luce spoke.

Quoting Delacy as saying that the Japanese were disarmed more quickly in areas where Communist-led troops were strong, Mrs. Luce said:

"Anyone who will take the trouble to look at a map of China will see that on V-J day the Japs occupied in China, not counting Manchuria, at least 50 cities of 100,000 population or more. Three months after V-J day the Chinese Communists had succeeded in taking over from the Japs exactly one of these cities, the city of Chefoo.

Meanwhile, the government troops in some important cases with American help, but in the great majority of cases without any help from us, had taken over all the other cities and had disarmed at least two-thirds of all Japanese soldiers in China."

Asserting that "another part of the Communist line is that the Chinese Communists did a better job during the war" than Chiang Kai-Shek's troops," Mrs. Luce said "this can be punctured with figures—grim figures."

A Japanese audit shows more than 2,000,000 Japanese killed and wounded in China, Mrs. Luce said, and the Communists "know they would be laughed at if they claimed even as many as 200,000 Jap casualties."

Gerow Takes Responsibility For Not Warning Pearl Harbor

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 — (AP) Lt. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, brushing aside a suggestion that "higher-ups" might share it, assumed full responsibility today for any War department failure to send additional warnings to Pearl Harbor before the Japanese attack.

In a dramatic moment of the Pearl Harbor inquiry, the tanned officer solemnly told the Senate-House committee:

Accepts Responsibility

"If there [illegible] War department responsibility [illegible] failure to send additional warnings to General Short, it must fall on the War Plans division and as chief of the division at the time, I accept the responsibility."

William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, suggested that the reply of Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, commander at Hawaii, to a warning from Washington "went higher" but Gerow interposed.

It was his job, Gerow said, to check operations messages from overseas stations and he had 48 officers to help him. He would take the responsibility.

Mitchell had developed that, from the routing sheet record and initialing, both Secretary Stimson and General George C. Marshall apparently saw Short's reply to a Nov. 27, 1941, message from Marshall saying hostilities with Japan might be near.

Short's message said he had alerted for sabotage and established liaison with the Navy. It developed after the Dec. 7, 1941, attack that the command was alert only against sabotage.

Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, an earlier witness, had expressed the opinion that Short's reply was "totally inadequate".

Led Troops in Europe

Gerow left the War Plans division early in 1942, later took part in the Normandy landings and commanded troops in Europe.

Mitchell read to him a statement Stimson made last fall in connection with an Army board's report on Pearl Harbor. Stimson had said "A keener sense of analysis and a more incisive comparison of the messages exchanged would have invited further inquiry by the War Plans division of General Short, and his failure to go on the necessary alert might well have been discovered."

The committee counsel asked whether Gerow considered that a "fair" statement.

"Yes, sir, I do," the witness replied.

Marshall will be the witness tomorrow, giving the committee the opportunity to go into the same subject with him.

These other major points were developed from Gerow's testimnoy or documents introduced while he was in the witness chair:

1. The Army and Navy had been at odds since February, 1941, over proposals for attaining more unity of command at frontier positions, such as Hawaii. After Pearl Harbor, it was decided that the Navy should have the top post in Hawaii.

2. Gerow said he deleted from the Nov. 27 message to Short a reference to precautions against sabotage because he wanted the message "interpreted as warning x x x only of an attack from without." Separate warnings against sabotage were sent by Miles and the Air corps.

3. Gerow gave an unqualified "no" when asked whether he knew before Pearl Harbor of any commitment for the United States to go to war.

Mitchell asked: DEC 6 194

"When you were in the War Plans division, did you ever see or hear of an agreement by any executive officer of the United States, War or Navy, including the President, to bind the United States to engage in war before Japan attacked the United States?"

"No, sir," the three-star general replied emphatically.

Conferred with Other Nations

A brisk-spoken witness, Gerow related that months before the Japanese attack of Dec. 7, 1941, military conversations were held with the British here in Washington, with the British and Dutch in Singapore, and with the Canadians here.

The purpose was to determine what would be the best disposition and use of each nation's armed forces in event the United States should become involved in war, Gerow said, but "no political commitment" was implied.

Three separate plans were drawn. Gerow said the Washington action on each was:

Canadian-American defense plan. Endorsed by top officials here and approved by President Roosevelt Aug. 29, 1941, with the notation, "O.K., F.D.R." (in 1939, Mr. Roosevelt had announced publicly that the United States would not "stand idly by" if Canada were attacked.)

British-American plan, dealing particularly with the Atlantic. Approved by Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox, but returned from the White House June 7, 1941, without the President's approval.

Mitchell submitted in evidence a memorandum from Lt. Col. W. P. Scobey of the Army general staff which said that Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, the President's military aide, advised:

"The President has familiarized himself with the two papers; but since the report of the United States-British staff conversations, ABC-1, had not been approved by the British government, he would not approve the report at this time; neither would he now give approval to joint Army and Navy basic war plan—Rainbow No. 5, which is based upon the report ABC-1. However, in case of war the papers would be returned to the President for his approval."

The Singapore plan. Gerow said this was never approved by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, or by any other top Washington official. To the best of his knowledge, he said, the President never saw it.

Ready for Marshall

Much of Gerow's testimony appeared to be designed to round out background for tomorrow's questioning of General Marshall.

Gerow identified a two-foot high stack of documents detailing the plans and agreements between the Army and Navy for defense of Hawaii.

DEC 6

In summary, Gerow said:

"The Navy was primarily responsible for close and distant aerial reconnaissance and offensive air operations against hostile surface craft. The Army was primarily responsible for defensive air operations. Regardless of the service primarily responsible, the opposite service was charged with supporting the operation within the means available to it."

Marshall is expected to be questioned about these plans and the military talks as well as about handling of warnings to Hawaii.

In testimony earlier this week, the committee heard from Gen. Miles, 1941 head of military intelligence, that a warning message dispatched to Pearl Harbor the morning of Dec. 7 did not reach Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, Hawaiian commander, until after the Japanese attack.

It developed that information on which the message was based was available hours earlier. Miles said the warning was drafted after a conference in Marshall's office and that the chief of staff had not arrived until about 11:25 a.m.

Marshall was criticized in an Army inquiry board's report on the ground that he should have sent more information to Hawaii during critical phases of Japanese-American negotiations.

GEROW ACCEPTS RESPONSIBILITY IN MINOR ALERT

Says if Short Should Have Had More Warnings, It Was Up to Him.

NO FOLLOW-UP TO REPLY

Roosevelt in 1941 Tabled Joint War Plan Until Hostilities Should Break Out.

Washington, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow testified today that he is willing to accept responsibility for the War Department's failure to send Lieut.-Gen. Walter C. Short additional warnings to put Hawaii on a full alert before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

Gerow told a Senate-House inquiry committee that, as far as he knew, the War Department did not follow up the receipt of a message from Short which said the outpost forces had been "alerted to prevent sabotage." Short was the Army commander in Hawaii.

Gerow, war plans chief in 1941, contended that a warning sent on November 27, 1941, to Short over the signature of Gen.

George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, should have brought a full alert in Hawaii, in which every man would have been at his battle station.

Witness Admits Truth.

But when William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, brought out that Short's reply message had prompted Secretary of War Stimson to remark months later that a "keener sense of analysis" would have shown the Hawaiian department was not ready for attack, the witness said that was true.

"If there is any War Department responsibility for failure to send additional warnings to Gen. Short, it must fall on the war plans division and as chief of that division at the time, I accept the responsibility."

Earlier congressional investigators learned that the late President Roosevelt declined to approve on June 7, 1941, a British-American plan for joint military operations in the event that the United States became involved in war.

This was brought out in records submitted to the committee. They showed, however, that Mr. Roosevelt's military aid, Major-Gen. E. M. Watson, told War Department officials that "in case of war, the papers would be returned to the President for his approval." They also showed that on August 29, 1941, Mr. Roosevelt approved a joint Canadian-United States basic defense plan.

Mitchell read the records in the course of questioning Gerow about military staff conferences which had been held with the British before the Pearl Harbor attack. Gerow told of conferences in Singapore and Washington in 1941, when military leaders of the two nations agreed on joint plans of operation, contingent on American involvement in the war.

Known as ABCD Plan.

Gerow said the plans drafted at Singapore, widely known as the ABCD (American, British, China, Dutch) plan, were preliminary and never received formal approval from any one in Washington, including the Chief of Staff. So far as he knows, he said, they never were submitted to the President.

Mitchell read a letter dated June 2, 1941, from Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, and the late Frank Knox, then Secretary of the Navy. Addressed to President Roosevelt, it said that Stimson and Knox had approved a joint Army and Navy basic war plan—"Rainbow No. 5"—prepared by a joint board and recommended Mr. Roosevelt's approval. The letter added:

"Joint Army and Navy basic war plan—Rainbow No. 5 states the concept of war and provides for initial dispositions and operations of United States forces, should the United States associate in war with the democracies against the totalitarian Powers. As such it constitutes the basic directive for United States Army and naval forces in a war effort."

On June 9, however, Lieut.-Col. W. P. Scobey, then secretary of joint Army-Navy board, said in a memorandum to Marshall that the President had returned the two subject plans two days earlier without his approval.

DEC 6 1945

Chiang Asked for Air Aid.

The committee also heard that on October 28, 1941, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek pleaded that a high-ranking American officer "be sent to take over his air force." The request was forwarded to Washington from Chungking by Brig.-Gen. John Magruder, head of an American military mission to China. It included a plea that British and American air forces be thrown into combat against the Japanese.

Chiang "quickly singled out aviation as the most pressing problem," Magruder reported in a message released by the committee.

Magruder reported that Chiang was desperately worried about what he thought was an imminent Japanese attack on Kunming.

"By a concentration of his land forces he could resist this attack, he said, but only if he had air support, reported Magruder, adding Chiang asked that President Roosevelt "intercede with London to make available the Singapore air forces to support his defenses."

Direct Appeal by Chiang.

Also into the committee record went a direct appeal from Chiang to President Roosevelt, dated November 2, 1941, asking the United States to "draw on its air arm in the Philippines to provide either an active unit or a reserve force in the combined operation (to defend Kunming and the Burma Road)." It added: "I am convinced that unless Japan is checked sharply and at once, she is on the verge of winning a position from which she can deal with each of us separately and in her own time."

But a November 5, 1941, memorandum for the President from Marshall and Admiral Harold R. Stark, then Chief of Naval Operations, discounted Japanese chances for success then in an offensive against Kunming and the Burma Road. They also said they felt United States military operations to prevent cutting of the Burma Road "however well-disguised, would lead to war." Marshall and Stark concluded: "Until such time as the Burma Road is closed, aid can be extended to Chiang Kai-shek by measures which probably will not result in war with Japan. These measures are: Continuation of economic pressure against Japan, supplying increased amounts of munitions under the lend-lease, and continuation and acceleration of aid to the American volunteer group."

Code Message Never Sent.

At the opening of today's session, the investigators were told that the Japanese never broadcast a so-called "winds" message signalling a break with the United States prior to the attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

Committee counsel told members that a check through Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Tokyo failed to disclose evidence that the Japanese sent the pre-arranged signal to their consuls.

The "winds" message has been the subject of sharp controversy in several inquiries into the Pearl Harbor disaster.

On November 19, 1941, the Japanese sent to their diplomatic representatives a message setting up a code under which the inclusion of certain words in the noon Tokyo radio broadcast would mean that relations with Britain, the United States and Russia were "in danger" and there was likelihood that ordinary communications would be broken off. The consuls were instructed to burn their papers if they heard the words. In the case of the United States, these words were "East wind rain."

British Flash Broadcast.

Mitchell said that a witness will testify that a Federal Communications Commission monitoring station picked up, before the Pearl Harbor attack, a message "north wind cloudy," which would have meant a break with Russia.

Mitchell added that on the afternoon of December 7, 1941, hours after the attack on Pearl Harbor, another station picked up the broadcast "west wind clear," which he said meant "war with England."

He said he regarded the first message, warning of a break with Russia, as "false" in the code sense. He asserted it must have been an actual weather broadcast instead of the prearranged signal. He said he regarded as genuine the message referring to British relations, since it was not sent until after the attack.

In addition to a check by MacArthur, Mitchell said that Australian authorities had advised they never intercepted such a message. Word has not yet been received from the British and Dutch in response to a request for similar information, he added.

Senator Brewster (R.-Me.) recently sought committee permission to look at Navy Department files, where Brewster said there was a vacant file that might once have contained a copy of the "winds" message.

Mitchell's report touched off a brief flareup. Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) demanded to know whether any witnesses would be produced who thought that a "winds" message had been received.

DEC 6 1945

Mitchell replied that there still was a great deal of controversy about that and witnesses from all of the monitoring stations involved would be summoned.

Mitchell added that he thought that even if a "winds" message had been intercepted, "we would have known little more than we already knew"—that a break in Japanese-American relations was in prospect.

"Is the counsel passing on what the evidence will be?" Ferguson asked.

"I have my opinion," Mitchell replied sharply. "My words speak for themselves."

Mitchell said he was informed by Navy officials that even if an "East Wind Rain" message had been intercepted, it would not have been placed in No. 7001—the vacant file which Brewster said he wanted to inspect. Brewster was not present when Mitchell made his statement today.

Ferguson told a reporter he wants to find out from Gerow how far pre-Pearl Harbor military agreements between the powers went.

DEC 6 1945

Anglo-U.S. Pact Hit By F.D.R., Probe Hears

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP) — Congressional investigators learned today that the late President Roosevelt declined to approve on June 7, 1941, a British-American plan for joint military operations in the event the United States became involved in war.

This was brought out in records submitted to the Senate-House committee investigating the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor December 7, 1941. They showed, however, that Mr. Roosevelt's military aide, Maj. Gen. E. M. Watson, told War Department officials that "in case of war, the papers would be returned to the President for his approval."

Okayed Defense Plan

They also showed that on August 29, 1941, Mr. Roosevelt approved a joint Canadian-United States basic defense plan.

Earlier, the committee was told there was no evidence that the Japanese ever broadcast, prior to the Pearl Harbor attack, the so-called "winds" message signaling a break with the United States.

William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, read the records in the course of questioning Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, former head of the Army's War Plans Division, about military staff conferences which had been held with the British before Pearl Harbor.

Military Leaders Agreed

Gerow told of conferences in Singapore and Washington in 1941 when military leaders of the two nations agreed on joint plans of operation, contingent upon American involvement in the war.

Gerow said the plans drafted at Singapore, widely known as the ABCD (American, British, China, Dutch) plan, were preliminary and never received formal approval from anyone in Washington, including the chief of staff.

So far as he knows, he said, they never were submitted to the President.

Mitchell read a June 2, 1941, letter from Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, and the late Frank Knox, then Secretary of the Navy.

Approved By Knox, Stimson

Addressed to President Roosevelt, it said Stimson and Knox had approved a joint Army and Navy basic war plan—"Rainbow No. 5"—prepared by a joint board and recommended Mr. Roosevelt's approval. The letter added:

"Joint Army and Navy basic war plan—Rainbow No. 5 states the concept of war and provides for initial dispositions and operations of United States forces, should the United States associate in war with the democracies against the totalitarian powers.

Called Basic Directive

"As such it constitutes the basic directive for United States army and naval forces in a war effort."

On June 9, however, Lieut. Col. W. P. Scobey, then secretary of the joint Army-Navy Board, said in a memorandum to Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, that the President had returned the two subject plans two days earlier without his approval.

Mitchell told the committee that a check through Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Tokyo failed to produce any evidence that the Japanese had sent their prearranged "winds" message to their consuls.

Subject Of Controversy

The "winds" message has been the subject of sharp controversy in several inquiries into the Pearl Harbor disaster.

On November 19, 1941 the Japanese sent to their diplomatic representatives a message setting up a code under which the inclusion of certain words in the noon Tokyo radio broadcast would mean that relations with Braitain, the United States and Russia were "in danger" and there was likelihood that ordinary communications would be broken off. The consule were instructed to burn their papers if they heard the words.

In the case of the United States, these words were "east wind rain."

Mitchell told the committee that so far as he has been able to learn, those words were never broadcast.

Mitchell said that a witness will testify that a Federal Communications Commission monitoring station picked up, before the Pearl Harbor attack, a message "north wind cloudy," which would have meant a break with Russia.

Mitchell added that on the afternoon of December 7, 1941, hours after the attack on Pearl Harbor, another station picked up the broadcast "west wind clear," which he said meant "war with England."

He said he regarded the first message, warning of a break with Russia, as "false" in the code sense. He asserted it must have been an actual weather broadcast instead of the prearranged signal.

British Reference "Genuine"

He said he regarded as genuine the message referring to British relations, since it was not sent until after the attack.

In addition to check by MacArthur, Mitchell said that Australian authorities had advised they never intercepted such a message. Word has not yet been received from the British and Dutch in response to a request for similar information, he added.

Senator Brewster (R., Maine) recently sought committee permission to look at Navy Department files, where Brewster said there was a vacant file that might once have contained a copy of the "winds" message.

Mitchell said he was informed by navy officials that even if an "east wind rain" message had been intercepted, it would not have been placed in No. 7001—the vacant file which Brewster said he wanted to inspect. Brewster was not present when Mitchell made his statement today.

Mitchell told the committee he was explaining what committee counsel had found out, because he knew that Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, former head of the Army War Plans Division, and Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, would be questioned about it.

Gerow took the stand today and Marshall will testify tomorrow.

Brief Flareup

Mitchell's report touched off a brief flareup. Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) demanded to know whether any witnesses would be produced who thought that a "winds" message had been received.

Mitchell replied that there still was a great deal of controversy about that and witnesses from all of the monitoring stations involved would be summoned.

Mitchell added that he thought that even if a "winds" message had been intercepted, "we would have known little more than we already knew"—that a break in Japanese-American relations was in prospect.

"Is the counsel passing on what the evidence will be?" Ferguson asked.

"Words Speak For Themselves"

"I have my opinion," Mitchell replied sharply. "My words speak for themselves."

The committee wanted to question Gerow about a November 27, 1941, memorandum he gave to Marshall. This reported that Henry L. Stimson opposed any Army-Navy recommendation for continuance of diplomatic negotiations with the Japanese at that time.

ANTI-STRIKE BILL OFFERED IN HOUSE

Proposal Follows Truman's Suggestions—Hearings to Be Called Immediately.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—(AP) A bill to carry out President Truman's recommendations for "fact-finding" and "cooling-off" in industrial disputes was introduced in the House today amid new expressions of labor's displeasure.

It was offered in the name of Chairman Norton (D-N.J.) of the Labor committee and referred immediately to that group. Rep. Ramspeck (D-Ga.), acting chairman during Mrs. Norton's illness, said hearings would be expedited and the House would be asked to act before Christmas as Mr. Truman requested.

Green Opposes Plan

William Green, president of the A.F.L., reiterated his opposition to the plan after a White House visit. He told reporters, however, that he thought the President was "sincere" and disagreed with the view of Philip Murray, C.I.O. president, that the proposal was designed "to weaken and ultimately destroy labor union organizations."

Legislative draftsmen were busy preparing a bill for the House Labor committee along the exact lines of the President's message of Monday. Acting Chairman Ramspeck (D-Ga.) said labor spokesmen would be given an opportunity to voice their opposition at committee hearings but he predicted the House would pass it.

Rampeck commented to newsmen that the President should be given "what he asked for, and let him try it out."

Byrd Pledges Support

Senator Byrd (D-Va.) issued a statement pledging his support to Mr. Truman "in the fullest measure in his efforts to stop existing strikes and to avert new ones."

Green said he called at the White House primarily in behalf of civilian A.F.L. unionists employed at Navy yards who might be affected by the proposed merger of the War and Navy departments.

But the President's proposal for handling industrial disputes came in for discussion. Green said the President told him that the plan was aimed at preventing "vicious anti-labor legislation." Some other labor bills are pending in the House.

Green contended that fact-finding was a delaying process and would cause "feeling and unrest." Principally he opposed the "cooling off" period in which strikes would be banned.

Mr. Truman's proposal called for fact-finding bodies to investigate and make recommendations in labor disputes which vitally affect the national public interest. These bodies would have access to the records. During their deliberations and for at least five days afterwards strikes would be forbidden.

DEC 6 1945

Bill Embodying Truman Plan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP).—Text of the labor bill carrying President Truman's proposals and introduced today in the House by Chairman Mary Norton, Democrat, of New Jersey, of the Labor Committee:

To provide for the appointment of fact-finding boards to investigate labor disputes seriously affecting the national public interest, and for other purposes.

That this act may be cited as the "labor fact-finding boards act."

CERTIFICATION OF DISPUTES

Section 2. Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds—

(1) That there is a labor dispute in which the agencies of the government charged with the functions of mediation and conciliation have been unable to bring the parties to agreement and have been unable to induce the parties voluntarily to submit the controversy to arbitration, and

(2) That a stoppage of work seriously affecting the national public interest and affecting interstate or foreign commerce, or the national defense, or commerce within the District of Columbia or any territory or possession of the United States, has resulted or threatens to result from such dispute, the Secretary shall certify such findings to the President. Any such certification of the Secretary shall be published in "The Federal Register" and shall designate the employer or employers involved in such dispute, the groups or units of employees involved in such dispute, and the representative or representatives of such employees. The employers, employees and representatives so designated shall, for the purposes of this act, be regarded as the parties to the dispute. Whenever a question arises concerning the representation of such employees, the Secretary of Labor may request the National Labor Relations Board to certify to him the names of the representatives of such employees, and such board shall determine the names of such representatives in the manner provided in Section 9 of the national labor relations act and shall certify such names to the Secretary.

FACT-FINDING BOARDS

Sec. 3. (A) At any time within five days after the date of such certification by the Secretary of Labor, the President, in his discretion, may appoint a board to investigate such labor dispute and to make a report containing its findings of fact and recommendations with respect to such dispute. Such board shall be composed of three or more persons, none of whom has any pecuniary or other private interest in the employers or employees who are parties to the dispute. The board shall proceed expeditiously to make a thorough investigation of all facts which it deems relevant to the dispute. The board shall give the parties to the dispute a full and fair hearing, which shall include an opportunity to present evidence in support of their claims and an opportunity to present their case in person, by counsel, or by their representatives. Within twenty days after the date of its appointment, the board shall submit to the President a report containing its findings of fact and such recommendations concerning the dispute as the board deems appropriate. The time for submitting the report of the board may be extended by agreement of the parties, or their representatives, with the approval of the President. Any agreement extending such time shall be published in the Federal register.

(B) The provisions of Section II of the national labor relations act (relating to the investigatory powers of the National Labor Relations Board) shall be applicable with respect to any board appointed under this section, and its members and agents, and with respect to the exercise of their functions, in the same manner that such provisions are applicable with respect to the National Labor Relations Board and the powers vested in it by Sections 9 and 10 of the national labor relations act.

WAITING PERIOD

Sec. 4. (A) During the period of five days following the date on which the Secretary of Labor makes a certification to the President under Section 2 with respect to a labor dispute, and, if a board is appointed under Section 3 to make an investigation concerning such dispute, during the period beginning when such board is appointed and ending five days after the date on which it submits its report—

(1) The parties to such dispute shall continue or resume work and operations under the terms and conditions of employment which were in effect immediately prior to the beginning of such dispute, except that such terms and conditions may be changed by agreement between the parties, and

(2) It shall be unlawful for any person to coerce, instigate, induce, conspire with, or encourage any person to interfere with or prevent such work or operations by lock-out, strike, or otherwise, or to aid any such lock-out or strike or other means of interfering with or preventing such work or operations by giving direction or guidance, or by providing funds for the conduct or direction thereof or for the payment of strike or other benefits to those participating therein.

(B) Nothing in this act shall be construed to require an individual employee to render labor or service without his consent, nor shall anything in this act be construed to make the quitting of his labor or service by an individual employee an illegal act; nor shall any court issue any process to compel the performance by an individual employee of such labor or service, without his consent.

EXEMPTION

Sec. 5. Nothing in this act shall be applicable with respect to any labor dispute subject to the provisions of the railway labor act, as amended.

APPROPRIATIONS

Sec. 6. Such appropriations as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of this act are hereby authorized.

TEXTILE WORKERS PROTEST TRUMAN STRIKE CONTROLS

BOSTON, Dec. 5—(AP) The National Executive Council of the Textile Workers Union of America (CIO) voted today to call on all members of its organization to oppose what it called "President Truman's strike-control" proposals.

The group termed the President's current recommendations to Congress on labor legislation as "interference with labor's rights." Mr. Truman has offered proposals to Congress intended to end strikes.

At today's meeting, the executive committee named Atlantic City, N. J., as the site for the annual national convention of the union, opening on April 23, 1946.

Back Auto Workers

The committee, in another resolution, "Affirms its support of the United Automobile Workers and their striking members, and condemns most strongly the irresponsible and arrogant attitude of the (General Motors) corporation."

It called the General Motors Strike "one of the most crucial in the whole history of organized labor," adding that "It must be won, for defeat would break the back of organized labor x x x."

Another resolution placed the committee on record as supporting "the drive, led by the Congress of Industrial Organizations, to increase wages paid to American wage earners, in order to build and maintain an improved American standard of living x x x."

This resolution declared that the Little Steel formula limited wage increases to 15 per cent during the war "while the cost of living rose to at least 33 per cent x x x and the gap between wages and prices widened sharply as the war ended x x x thus sharply reducing the standard of living of millions of American workers x x x."

Still another resolution called on President Truman to send a message to Congress, urging a comprehensive housing program "calculated to meet both a long and short range need of the situation."

As one item of such a message, the committee suggested the President "By executive order at once place all building materials under control" so that they "may be devoted on house building rather than on industrial construction x x x."

Such a program, the committee contended, was needed to meet "a nation-wide housing crisis of record-breaking proportions."

ending strikes was "not acceptable or satisfactory" to the AFL, he thought the President was "sincere" in offering it.

Answering a question, Green said his principal opposition was to the 30-day "cooling-off" period suggested in Mr. Truman's Monday message to Congress recommending fact-finding procedure in wage disputes.

Sees "Delay" And "Unrest"

Green asserted the plan would cause "much delay" and result in "unrest."

He said he favored voluntary arbitration with both sides being able to suggest arbitrators and added that the fact-finding boards could put labor "at a disadvantage if it had no choice in the selection of them."

But the President, he said, "is sincere in what he is trying to do."

Quotes Truman On Aim

"I disagree with the charges by Mr. Murray, as reported in the headlines, that the President is seeking to destroy unions. I don't feel that he is trying to do that."

He said the President told him his proposal was aimed at preventing "vicious anti-labor legislation."

Green told the reporters he had called on Mr. Truman primarily to talk about proposals for the unification of the Army and Navy.

Service Merger Vs. Jobs

He said civilian navy workers who are members of his union were apprehensive over the effect of unification on them, since they have had a long and satisfactory relationship with the Navy Department. He said he asked the President to make a full investigation before

AFL Backs Truman Against CIO But Fights His Plan

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor today disagreed with CIO Chief Philip Murray's conclusion that the design of laws proposed by President Truman is to "ultimately destroy" labor unions.

Emerging from a conference with Mr. Truman, Green told reporters that while the President's latest proposal for making his own decision.

Charles G. Ross, the White House press secretary, declined to discuss the speech in which Murray last night assailed Mr. Truman's proposals.

No Decision On Truck Plea

He said that a fact-finding board Mr. Truman intends to name in the General Motor's strike controversy was "in process of selection." A similar board in the steel wage case, he said, will be selected subsequently.

Meanwhile there was no decision from the White House on a request that the President intervene in the mid-West truck strike. Ross said that a petition from mid-Western senators that the President set up a fact-finding board for that industry had come in only yesterday.

Work On Bill Pushed

The CIO's open break with the Administration aligned labor's big three in solid opposition to President Truman's program for fact finding.

Congressional leaders were hurriedly trying to determine how seriously this united front of the CIO, AFL and UMW would threaten enactment of the law Mr. Truman asked in a special message on Monday. But they went ahead with their plans to draft a bill to carry out his program and to introduce it today if possible.

Murray Last To Line Up

Murray made the break in a broadcast from Pittsburgh, where he is directing the strategy of the CIO steel workers in their impending strike against the United States Steel Corporation.

The AFL, through President Green, and John L. Lewis's United Mine Workers had previously contended that Mr. Truman's plan would shackle labor.

Murray went further. He accused the Administration of "abject cowardice," and declared "the design" of laws proposed by President Truman "is to weaken and ultimately destroy labor union organizations."

"The CIO," he declared, "is opposed to the basic policies thus pursued by the Administration."

Bill's Passage Forecast

Despite Murray's blast, however, and the opposition of other labor leaders, Acting Chairman Ramspeck (D., Ga.) of the House Labor Committee said he believes the House will approve Mr. Truman's proposal.

Taking note of Murray's assertion that Mr. Truman's plan "can be but the first step for ever more savage repression" and that the CIO would mobilize "its entire membership and the American people to defeat this specific measure and all similar attempts directed against labor," Ramspeck commented:

"He'll find the American people don't agree with him on that. The plan has worked for a good many years on the railroads, and they seem to like it."

Mr. Truman's proposal was patterned after procedure set up for handling railroad labor disputes.

Byrd Backs Truman

Senator Byrd (D., Va.), in a statement today, pledged his support to the President "in the fullest measure in his efforts to stop existing strikes and to avert new ones."

"Continued strikes will do more than anything else to destroy prosperity and imperil the financial stability of our Government," Byrd said. "The only way the United States can finance our huge debt and meet our obligation is to maintain a high level of production."

G-M HEADS, UNION TO RESUME TALKS ON WAGE DEMANDS

DEC 6 1945

Negotiations on 30% Increase Will Be Reopened This Afternoon in Detroit.

CHRYSLER PACT ENDS

Workers Continue Without Contract Pending Action on Plea for Pay Boost.

DETROIT, Dec. 5—(AP) General Motors Corp. and the C.I.O. United Auto Workers agreed tonight to resume negotiations, as the government flashed the auto industry a green light to seek new car prices in line with wage increases.

Philip Murray, C.I.O. president, announced at Pittsburgh that negotiations on all disputed points will be resumed Thursday in Detroit between GM and the U.A.W.-C.I.O. The session is scheduled for 2 p.m.

The corporation confirmed his announcement, adding that today's unheralded meeting at Pittsburgh, agreed tonight to continue work without a contract pending a response to their request for government conciliation of their dispute with the company. Negotiations between company and union leaders had been kept secret at the union's request.

Previously the corporation had insisted that a general resumption of negotiations, including the U.A.W.-C.I.O.'s 30 per cent wage increase demand, must await settlement of what it termed "illegal" picketing by its 175,000 striking production workers.

Action on Prices

In Washington, Stabilization Administrator John C. Collet announced that any pay increase raising wages up to 33 per cent above January, 1941 levels may be used as a basis for seeking higher prices.

General Motors has insisted that it cannot meet the union's wage increase demands within its present new car pricing structure.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. in return, has demanded that any wage increase be excluded as a basis for raising prices.

The corporation made—and later withdrew—an offer to raise the rates on all jobs by 30 per cent over 1941, which C. E. Wilson, company president, estimated would amount to a 10 per cent wage increase.

Attending today's conference in Pittsburgh with Murray were Lee Pressman, general counsel for the C.I.O.; R. J. Thomas, U.A.W.-C.I.O. president; George Addes, secretary treasurer of the U.A.W.-C.I.O.; Walter P. Reuther, U.A.W.-C.I.O. vice president in charge of GM units; James J. Matles, director of organization for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers; Neil Brant, international representative for the U.E.; Harry W. Anderson, vice president of GM; H. W. Coen, S. M. Dubrul, and Louis G. Seaton, also of GM.

Cool to Truman Proposal

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. has bitterly denounced President Truman's request for a fact-finding body to intervene in the two-weeks-old strike. GM also has been cool to the President's proposal, expressing a hope that the strike may be settled before the government fact finders move in.

Two Federal conciliators sat in an empty conference room at the General Motors building here most of this afternoon, awaiting a scheduled company-union conference on the illegal picketing charge. They said they had received no notification that the meeting had been postponed.

Delegates from U.A.W.-C.I.O. locals in plants of the Chrysler Corp. broken off and the working contract terminated after both sides rejected offers for its continuance.

Swift moves along the automibile dispute front brought these developments during the day:

1. After termination of the Chrysler contract which covered more than 50,000 employes, leaders of U.A.W.-C.I.O. workers who had voted 8 to 1 to authorize strike action if necessary, met to consider their position.

2. Reuther told a citizens committee assembled at union invitation to study the GM dispute that the strike involved not only wage demands but also the workers' rightful place in the economic structure.

3. The committee, having received no reply to its invitation for General Motors to send a representative to meet with it, started an executive session to consider possible recommendations.

Ford Local Active

4. U.A.W.-C.I.O. Ford Local 600 asked its 51,000 members to join "Detroit's largest mobile picket line" Saturday, planning an automobile cavalcade about Detroit GM plants and the General Motors building during the hours when delegates from GM local unions meet to consider President Truman's back-to-work appeal.

5. George F. Addes, U.A.W.-C.I.O. secretary-treasurer, urged presidents of more than 1,000 union locals to telegraph their congressmen and Mr. Truman expressing opposition to the President's legislative proposals for dealing with strikes. He said the proposals were "designed to weaken and eventually destroy labor."

End of the Chrysler agreement with the union was not expected to result in an immediate interruption of work. Norman Matthews, U.A.W.-C.I.O. Chrysler director, said the situation would be discussed with the international union's strike strategy board which does not meet before the end of the week. U.A.W. members on previous occasions have continued on their jobs in an interim period without a formal contract.

Chrysler management offered to extend the previous contract for a year, which the union rejected, and a U.A.W.-C.I.O. request for an extension to Jan. 15 was declined by the company.

Robert W. Conder, Chrysler director of labor relations, said the union made no wage offer except its 30 per cent demand, and that it had rejected all company proposals. To union reference to rumors of a management conspiracy to shut down automobile plants "on any available excuse," the company said its offer of a year's extension showed no such conspiracy existed.

G. M. CONFERENCE DEFERRED

51,000 Ford Workers Are Called On to Stage Vast Motorized Picketing Demonstration.

Detroit, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—While a deadlock persisted today in the strike of General Motors employees, negotiations between the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers and the Chrysler Corporation on wage demands were broken off and the working contract was terminated.

Robert W. Conder, Chrysler director of labor relations, said the U. A. W.-C. I. O. had rejected a company offer to extend the contract for a year, and that the company had declined a union request that it be extended for six weeks.

No interruption of Chrysler operations was expected to result from the contract termination. On previous occasions, during contract negotiations, U. A. W.-C. I. O. members have continued to work pending a new agreement.

Conder said the union had made no offer on wages other than its original demand for a 30 per cent increase, and had rejected a company proposal that new rates "reflect the same percentage increase over the period prior to the Little Steel formula as the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows living costs increased since then."

Thomas Writes to Keller.

In the final negotiating session the union presented a letter from R. J. Thomas, U. A. W.-C. I. O. president, addressed to K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler, saying there were "persistent and disturbing rumors that a conspiracy exists in the automotive industry to have plants other than those in which a work stoppage now exists, cease production on any available excuse."

The company said its offer of a year's contract extension showed no such conspiracy existed as far as Chrylser was concerned.

Resumption of negotiations between striking members of the U. A. W. and General Motors on the company's complaint of illegal picketing activity were postponed today at the request of the union. Walter P. Reuther, vice-president of the U. A. W., announced the postponement of the conference, which had been scheduled for this afternoon, saying he had been called out of the city and would be unable to participate. Reuther would not disclose his destination or the reason for his departure. Later Reuther's office said he was going to Buffalo, N. Y., to address a mass meeting of General Motors strikers there tonight.

The picketing negotiations have been regarded by General Motors as a prelude to resumption of collective pargaining on the union's demand for a 30 per cent wage increase within the corporation's present price structure.

Additional moves to intensify the U. A. W.-C. I. O. strike which has made more than 200,000 G. M. employees idle came today as Ford Local 600, the nation's largest local union, announced plans for motorized picket columns at General Motors plants here Saturday. Handbills distributed to its members by Local 600 called on all of its more than 51,000 members to participate in "Detroit's largest mobile picket line" and said that starting from the local's headquarters at 10 A. M. the line of automobiles would picket G. M.'s Cadillac, Ternstedt, Chevrolet forge, Chevrolet axle, transmission and Diesel plants and the General Motors Building.

The time of the motorized picketing was set to coincide with a conference of 250 delegates from U. A. W.-C. I. O. locals who will assemble here to consider President Truman's appeal for an immediate return to work. The G. M. conference will formulate recommendations to be submitted to local unions throughout the country.

Reuther made his announcement today at a meeting of the citizens' committee invited by the union to study the wage dispute that has affected more than seventy General Motors plants. He addressed the committee at its request, saying the strike was called not only to obtain higher wages, but also to determine the worker's rightful place in the economic structure.

Reuther, meanwhile, joined labor's attack on President Truman for intervening in the General Motors strike. Reuther declared at a Detroit rally last night:

We need collective bargaining, not new laws. Why doesn't Truman enforce the one (the National Labor Relations Act) on the books now?"

The 500 union men at the rally booed at mention of the President's name.

Reuther described Mr. Truman's labor stand as a clean-cut break with Roosevelt's policies, and said that the President "thinks he can put labor relations, like the secret of the atomic bomb, under his coat."

PRICE INCREASE SYSTEM REVISED

Industry Permitted to Ask for Boost Covering 33% Climb in Wages.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—(AP)

30.24 - 32149

The government, in an action which may have a bearing on some labor disputes, tonight told industry it could apply for price increases to offset wage boosts up to 33 per cent above the levels of January, 1941.

Previously wage increases up to 30 per cent above that date could be used as a basis for asking price rises.

Whether the action, taken by Stabilization Administrator John C. Collet, might eventually aid in settling such wage disputes as the General Motors strike was not known. General Motors corporation and the C.I.O. United Auto Workers agreed tonight to resume negotiations Thursday in Detroit.

Collet said in effect that if a manufacturer grants wage raises up to 33 per cent, as compared with January, 1941, wages, he can use the increases as a basis for an application to OPA to raise prices.

The Collet order did not say that the OPA would actually grant the price increases. (Some government economists expressed the view that OPA might want to wait to see whether expected high production and possible lower production costs might make price increases unnecessary.)

Collet accepted a new Labor department estimate that living costs had increased 33 per cent since January, 1941, if deterioration in quality of some goods bought by consumers is considered.

Hence, he said, the stabilization agency, which in most cases would be the War Labor board, may approve pay rises to compensate for the increased living costs, and the employer "may use these increases as a basis for seeking an increase in price ceilings or for increasing costs (of this product) to the government."

Collet said the Labor department had advised him that a wage increase of 33 per cent most accurately reflects the increase in the cost of living since January, 1941. Average straight time hourly earnings in all manufacturing industries, however, have risen 40.5 per cent since then, according to Labor department figures.

Observers immediately noted that General Motors, in countering the C.I.O. United Auto Workers union demand for a general 30 per cent increase, had offered to raise the rates on all jobs by 30 per cent over 1941 in all cases where such increases were not already in effect. C. E. Wilson, company president, estimated that this would bring at least a 10 per cent increase.

Apparently A Valid Argument

The Labor Department previously had estimated that living costs based on prices had risen 29.5 per cent since 1941. A special presidential committee headed by William H. Davis reported last spring that an additional three or four per cent should be added for depreciation in quality of goods and absence of cheap items from the market.

Collet apparently found this a valid argument and increased the estimate of the cost of living rise to 33 per cent.

Price increases are to be limited "to the fullest practicable extent" to cover only wage increases which the employer already has put into effect.

The regulations provide that stabilization agencies shall not consider a proposed wage or salary increase which appears to be conditioned on obtaining higher prices, Collet said.

Reconversion Problems Capable Of Solution, Truman Tells Industry

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—The nation's top industrialists, gathered amid labor-management deadlocks, strikes and threats of strikes, were told today by President Truman that reconversion problems are "capable of orderly solution and speedy solution."

The President and Secretary of Commerce Wallace praised the wartime role of industry.

In a letter to the National Association of Manufacturers read at the opening of the "Golden Anniversary Congress of American Industry," President Truman said manufacturers, together with their workers, had "provided the tools for victory."

Truman On Reconversion

Wallace said it was fitting to open the congress "with a strong word of praise for the great job which American industry did during the war."

Discussing reconversion, President Truman said its problems were "due to many factors, some unavoidable, perhaps, but all capable of orderly solution and speedy solution."

"Much depends upon such a solution for these problems," he said. "I am hopeful, therefore, that the manufacturers of America will approach the problems which confront us now in the spirit with which they approached their problems during the war. This will require not only determination, but the spirit of tolerance and ability to see the other fellow's viewpoint, which is characteristic of our democracy."

Wallace's Comments

Secretary Wallace, long identified with the liberal wing of the New Deal in the minds of many NAM members, expressed these views:

"We can't spend our way into good business conditions just by dipping freely into the Federal Treasury."

"Satisfactory profits for stable enterprises and higher rewards for venture capital in new undertakings are essential."

"Increased output per worker is essential to a steady rise in real wages." "Call it by any name you like—full employment, full production, or plain, ordinary 'good business conditions'—we do have universal agreement that that is what we want."

Full Employment

Wallace said his full-employment plan was "fundamentally a declaration of policy and an assumption of responsibility by the Federal Government that it will assist and not hinder the private-enterprise system in operating at a high level of production to bring about adequate employment opportunities and a better standard of living for all."

The Secretary added: "Obviously, the answer isn't simply one of raising wages, then raising costs, then raising prices, and going on into a vicious spiral of inflation. What we do need is a genuine increase in mass purchasing power. We are up against nothing less than the necessity for raising the American standard of living—well above prewar levels—and that means making more goods and selling more of them to more people than ever before."

Deflation Warning

Wallace warned of the danger of deflation, declaring the incomes of farmers and wage and salary earners in the next few years would be substantially lower than during the war, and that "the long-run solution to our problem lies in the direction of seeking profits through mass production and mass consumption."

Philip Murray, president of CIO, who had been scheduled to speak, sent word last night that he would be unable to attend.

Ira Mosher, president of N.A.M., said 4,500 industrialists were registered for the three-day sessions.

Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president of the United States Steel Workers of America, spoke in Murray's place and presented CIO's pledge that it would work for full production if labor's purchasing power were raised.

Talk For Management

He was answered by F. C. Crawford, president of Thompson Products, Inc. Speaking for management and referring to Murray's break with the Administration last night in Pittsburgh, Crawford said: "Murray has now taken on a bigger problem in tackling President Truman and no doubt is too busy to keep his date here with us."

Crawford declared: "I want to dispel a notion that is widespread among management—the idea that the boss can't talk to his men. Our constitution guarantees the right of free speech. The right extends to any subjects, including national labor unions—so long as we don't threaten or slander.

"Use your right of free speech to attain full productivity. Our courts will back you up."

Unionist Replies

Bittner said: "We can lick unemployment in America easier than we licked Hitler, if we pull together.

"No organization believes in private enterprise more than does the CIO. We want you in industry to make a decent profit, and we want to make a decent wage so we can live as we should."

SUGGESTS SHORTER WEEK

Schwellenbach Study Proposal Also Covers Work-Day

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP)—Secretary Schwellenbach suggested today consideration of a shorter work-day and work-week in industry.

Addressing the Twelfth National Labor Conference, which has drawn State labor officials and labor delegates from forty-one States, he said the meeting "might offer a good moment to review the efficiency of your peacetime hour standards."

Last year, he noted, the conference had urged provision in State laws for a basic eight-hour day and forty-hour week.

"Can they be further shortened in keeping with the heightened pace of post-war industry?" he asked. "We learned a great deal during the war about speeding production."

He described as "obsolete" the 40-cents-an-hour minimum wage now prescribed in the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act.

GOP Group Asks World Curb On Arms

DEC 6

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—House Republicans today approved a policy statement rejecting "great power domination of the world" and advocating agreements "to stabilize military establishments."

The Republicans, in a statement of "aims and purposes," agreed to behind closed doors, also rejected "the thesis that world peace requires us to indorse alien doctrines or to abandon efforts to seek justice for the weaker peoples of the world."

Subject To Senators' Okay

The statement was accepted at a party conference and is subject to approval by the Senate Republican membership.

The only major change in the statement as drafted by a seven-man subcommittee struck out this language:

"No organization of capital or labor should be permitted, directly or indirectly, to use its funds for any political party or candidate."

Top-Heavy Vote To Remove

Several members told reporters this section was removed by a top-heavy vote after debate because many Republican representatives received election support from union labor.

The 1,500-word declaration, which Republican Leader Joe Martin, of Massachusetts, referred to as a "document," was not made public. And Martin said it would not be until after Senate Republicans considered it at a later session.

Each Republican representative was required to turn in his copy of the program as he left the meeting.

"Few" Dissenting Votes

The declaration, which Republicans hope will aid them in capturing congressional seats in the 1946 elections, was approved, Martin said, with "a few dissenting votes." It was drafted by a seven-man policy committee.

Reported Declarations

Otherwise, these members said, the program made these declarations:

Wholehearted support for an effective organization for international peace, without mentioning the United Nations Organization.

Approval of the general principle of collective bargaining between management and labor and emphasis on the sanctity of contracts once they are entered into by unions and employers.

Continued Federal aid to states for assistance to needy persons unable to care for themselves.

National Defense Stand

Maintenance of an "adequate" national defense supported by large reserve forces and a broad program of scientific research. No reference was made to the controversial issue of universal military training.

Criticized "regimentation" and excessive spending and called for strict economy in Government operation.

DEC 6 1945

Republicans' Statement

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP).—The following is a statement of "aims and purposes" approved today, with minor editorial revisions, by House Republicans. It is subject to approval by Senate Republicans prior to presentation to a Republican National Committee meeting in Chicago, Dec. 17:

Republican members of Congress, supplementing the 1944 Republican platform, present this statement of our aims and purposes.

Tdoy's major domestic issue is between radicalism, regimentation, all-powerful bureaucracy, class exploitation, deficit spending and machine politics, as against our belief in American freedom for the individual under just laws fairly administered for all, preservation of local home rule, efficiency and pay-as-you-go economy in government, and the protection of the American way of life against either Fascist or Communist trends.

We believe that genuine social and economic progress can be achieved only on these American Constitutional principles, and it is our purpose to give our citizens this clean-cut choice.

In foreign affairs we shall continue to strive to avoid partisanship. But we shall also seek to avoid secrecy, inefficiency and drift.

To these purposes we dedicate the following statement:

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

We support the United Nations Organization for international peace. We look with particular hope to the General Asesmbly as the "town meeting of the world" wherein the organized conscience of mankind shall find effective expression in behalf of peace with justice.

We support the indispensable inter-American system as a regional part of the international organization.

We will engage in essential international relief as a humanitarian obligation and to prevent chaos through misery. We demand sound management and protection against exploitation in this connection. We will assist other nations to rehabilitate themselves under arrangements consistent with intelligent American self-interest and overall limitations that shall not jeopardize our own economic recovery and stability.

We believe in fulfilling to the greatest possible degree our war pledges to small nations that they shall have the right to choose the form of government under which they will live and that sovereign rights and self-government shall be restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them. We deplore any desertion of these principles.

We will seek to find common policies with the other great powers. But we reject great power domination of the world and the thesis that world peace requires us to indorse alien doctrines or to abandon efforts to seek justice for the weaker peoples of the world.

We advocate ultimate international agreements to stabilize military establishments. We demand open diplomacy, at home and abroad, and free communication throughout the world.

We consider that the maintenance of a strong, solvent, free America is the basis of our greatest contribution to world order.

NATIONAL DEFENSE

We stand for a well trained and fully equipped Army, Navy and Air Force adequate to meet any emergency under future conditions of warfare. It must be supported by the most modern scientific research, a strong industrial system and reserves of trained men with weapons and equipment.

DOMESTIC AFFAIRS

Government alone cannot feed the people, nor employ them, nor make the profits from which new enterprises and new jobs are born. Government can help its people to prosperity by lightening the burdens of debt and taxes, laying down the rules of life play and protecting those whose own strength and resources are not sufficient to protect themselves.

We believe that equality of opportunity should be available to all, regardless of race, creed or beginnings. Every individual should be afforded an opportunity to prosper according to his talents, his abilities and his diligence subject only to a like right for his neighbor.

We deplore the political tactics which have resulted in class consciousness and strife. We oppose those who would destroy us through the continuation of such strife and struggle.

Our tax burden must be equitably distributed. Taxes must be so imposed as to stimulate creative enterprise, not destroy it, and to afford the individual adequate purchasing power. Tax forms and tax paying must be simplified. There must be an incentive for business to expand production and employment and for the individual to invest his savings in such expansion. There must be a fair return to both labor and investors if we are to have jobs for the workers, goods for the consumers and adequate revenue for the government.

The solvency of our government must be assured. Outlay must be brought in line with income. The value of the dollar must be maintained.

Economy in government spending must be achieved. Extravagant government spending now advocated by the Administration in every field can lead only to ruin. Programs involving expenditure of Federal funds should not be undertaken unless the justification therefor is clearly established.

War-time limitations, restrictions and controls must be removed. The instant a right or liberty can be returned to the people, it shall be returned. Neither the war nor any other excuse shall be justification for fastening regimentation permanently upon the American people.

Bureaucracy, with its thirst for power and self-perpetuation, must be drastically reduced. The number of government employees must be cut to an efficient minimum.

DEC 6 1945

We reaffirm our belief in the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively with employers as one of the cornerstones of competitive enterprise. The processes of such bargaining must be protected and strengthened if we are to have real jobs and prosperity for all.

For that purpose we believe that governmental decision must not be substituted for free agreement, but governmental machinery to promote peaceful settlement of disputes should be improved.

Demands by either side must be kept within the bounds of reason and fairness and both sides must recognize the rights of the general public.

The desired end of bargaining between management and men is a contract. Once that contract is made, it should and must be equally binding on both parties as to agreements made.

Free collective bargaining and contracts resulting therefrom must not be nullified or destroyed by resort on either side to willful violence or unlawful destruction of property.

We favor Federal aid to the extent necessary to states, and through states to their subdivisions to assist them in affording subsistence, shelter and medical care to all their citizens who are unable to provide for themselves. Such aid, including unemployment compensation, must be based on state and local initiative, operation and responsibility, without Federal bureaucratic interference. It must avoid any socialization of the medical profession or of any other activity. Federal aid must be in amounts which do not impose an unreasonable burden of taxation on the rest of the populaton who pay the bills.

We have pledged stability of farm prices during the reconversion and readjustment periods. We will carry out those pledges. We will support sound, permanent proposals to give farmers expanding markets and their fair share of the national income. We reaffirm our long-standing support of soil and water conservation. We shall support measures designed to better rural living.

A grateful nation demands that those who fought in its defense, their widows and orphans, must never be forgotten. The best of medical care and rehabilitation, education and training for all desiring it and efficient assistance in securing homes, farms, businesses and real jobs, must be provided for the veteran. Nothing in the Federal program should lessen the responsibility of each local community to provide for the return to civilian life of its gallant sons and daughters in a spirit of understanding, helpfulness and dignity.

BOWLES URGES NEW HOUSING PRICE CONTROL

OPA Head Asks Congress to Thwart Inflation in the Cost of Homes.

CITES NEEDS OF VETERANS

Builders Caught Making an Undue Profit Could Be Sued for Damages.

Washington, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Chester Bowles, price administrator, called upon Congress today to invoke new controls on housing prices and on the use of building materials "to head off a wild inflation in the prices of homes."

"There is a desperate and immediate need," he told the House Banking Committee, "to provide some shelter for the homeless veteran with a family." Then he declared:

"I am convinced that the nation's whole effort to maintain a stable economy during the critical months ahead may easily be exploded by an inflationary fire in the real estate field."

Decrying "the dangerous defeatism" of some people who argue that the line against post-war inflation cannot be held, he attributed responsibility for this frame of mind to "certain groups who feel that a little inflation would serve their selfish interests."

Bowles appeared on Capitol Hill in support of a bill by Representative Patman (D.-Tex.) which would give the Government authority to channel scarce construction materials into "reasonably priced" homes with veterans having first priority on purchase or rental.

DEC 6 194

Supports Patman Bill.

A builder would be allowed "a full legal price" on his materials and services, plus current labor costs, plus the same margin of profit that was made on comparable construction in 1941. Any builder caught making an "excessive profit, over and above that enjoyed by the industry in 1941," would be liable to a suit for damages from the purchaser for three times the amout of the excess profit."

Bowles opposed one provision of the Patman bill that would set up a new Federal housing stabilization office, which opponents have termed a "czar" proposal. Existing agencies could handle the job if Congress confers the powers, Bowles said.

Several members of the banking group have criticized the Government for repealing wartime controls on building materials on October 15, and argue that these controls can be restored without further legislation. Bowles pointed out that the present authority is embodied in the second war powers act which expires January 1, and that the extension of this act, under legislation now pending, would be only to next June 30.

The new authority he requested, Bowles said, "would clearly strike only at the profiteer and the fly-by-night operator."

Opposed by Bankers.

American Bankers Association witnesses today opposed the Federal credit features of the Taft-Wagner-Ellender low-cost housing bill on the ground that ample private credit is already available. The measure would authorize about $1,000,000,000 for public housing and home building advances to private industry and sets up a permanent over-all Federal Housing Office.

Frank G. Addison Jr., chairman of the A. B. A.'s committee on Federal legislation, told the Senate Banking Committee that material and labor shortages are the bottlenecks and not credit and guaranty devices dealt with in the bill.

"This bill would ultimately add more than $4,000,000,000 to our Federal debt, but it still does nothing to increase the supply of building materials or to divert such materials to home construction. Neither does it increase the supply of skilled labor," he said.

UP-TO-DATE PARITY IS AIM

Agriculture Secretary Finds Present Formula Faulty

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Clinton P. Anderson, Secretary of Agriculture, called tonight for an "up-to-date" Government parity formula for determining fairness of prices farmers receive.

He said the present formula, which is based upon farm legislation enacted in the early days of the Roosevelt Administration, provides too high a price yardstick for some commodities and too low for others.

As a consequence, he said, it stands in the way of sound agricultural planning.

Present Formula "Patchwork"

The formula now in use, he said, actually has become "a patchwork of special provisions that for many commodities have little relationship to reality at present, and even less to our goals of the future."

Anderson's plea for new farm price legislation was made in a speech at a dinner attended by state and national agricultural officials meeting here on 1946 farm production plans.

The Secretary also asked for a "national program to stabilize the consumption of farm products" at a high level. He did not give details.

DEC 6 1945

Inequities Illustrated

Anderson explained that the Government is required by law to support most farm commidities at not less than 90 per cent of the present parity formula prices for two years after the war. He said the result would be something like this:

"Milk returns are now about 110 per cent of parity, and we haven't been getting all that we needed. At 90 per cent of parity we would come a long way from having enough milk. Dairy farmers would be losing money so fast that herds would be slaughtered right and left for beef."

FOREIGN ASSET CURBS RELAXED

Controls Lifted Today, Except In Cases Of 8 Countries

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—The United States tomorrow will relinquish control of new assets and transactions with all nations except Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Leichtenstein, Tangier, Germany and Japan.

However, existing assets will remain under control temporarily, the Treasury announced.

The foreign nations and their nationals will be able to transact business with the United States and accumulate assets here free of all but routine controls and restrictions.

As soon as the United States can work out arrangements under which existing assets can be shown to be owned by the countries or their nationals and not to be camouflaged enemy holdings, these existing assets will be freed.

Some In Separate Category

Of the nations unblocked by tomorrow's order, however, Italy, Bulgaria, Hungary and Roumania will be treated in a separate category as to the unfreezing of old assets because of the United States

Schoenfeld Is Named Minister To Hungary

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP) — The White House today formalized the resumption of diplomatic relations with Hungary by naming H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, of Providence, R.I., as United States Minister to Budapest.

President Truman, in announcing the appointment, thus took the last step necessary to recognition of the present Hungarian regime, and Schoenfeld becomes the first formal American diplomatic representative in that former enemy country since the end of hostilities. He has been in Budapest as an American "political representative" since May 11, 1945.

Free-Election Provision

On September 22 the United States delivered a note to the Hungarian Foreign Minister indicating its willingness to resume diplomatic relations if Hungary gave "full assurances for free and untrammeled elections for a representative government" and provided for "freedom of political expression for democratic parties."

Four days later the Hungarian Foreign Minister stated in a note to the United States that Hungary was in a position to offer full guarantees under the conditions set forth.

Schoenfeld is a veteran State Department foreign service representative. He was Minister to Finland from 1937 to 1943 and has been a State Department consultant since June 30, 1944.

declaration of war against them. The procedure to be followed has not been determined.

The controls still obtain against Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Liechtenstein because, said the Treasury, "these countries cannot be accorded the privileges being made available to other countries until they have taken effective action to search out, immobilize and control all enemy assets within their jurisdiction, and until a satisfactory solution has been reached concerning the disposition of these enemy assets."

Stand In Regard To Tangier

The Treasury said that since the provisional international regime at Tangier has only recently been established and is currently investigating problems relating to the control and disposition of enemy interests, Tangier is not for the present to be one of the licensed countries.

Under an existing Treasury regulation, securities and currency still may not be imported into the United States from the majority of foreign nations, regardless of licensing or unblocking.

GI CLOTHING SUPPLIES LOW

Army's Statement "Contrary To Published Reports"

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Army reported today on its current stocks of clothing and other items, contending that some supplies were "barely enough" to carry through the winter and that others are insufficient for even one month's requirements.

In a statement the War Department also declared that "contrary to published reports" it does not have 60,000,000 pairs of dark glasses and more than 500,000 wrist watches on hand. Its stocks as of October 31, the department said, totaled 2,500,000 pairs of glasses and a "few more than 29,000 wrist watches."

3 Months' Blanket Supply

The stocks of blankets on hand on November 20, the Army said, totaled 3,902,000. Since more than 1,000,000 blankets were issued during October, the stocks on hand represent "a little more than three months' supply on this basis," the Army said.

The statement reported the following items and the period for which they would last:

Flannel shirts, 3,682,000, 1.7 months supply; wool trousers, 1,450,000, .7 months supply; socks, 41,082,000, 8.2 months; overcoats, 574,000, .4 months; cotton shorts, 12,102,000, 6.7 months; fatigue jackets, 9,273,000, 17.9 months; fatigue trousers, 7,986,000, 13.9 months; shoes and boots, 12,014,000, 8.7 months.

The department said that fatigue jackets and trousers covered the only items in more than a year's supply and these are articles which are turned in by soldiers leaving the service.

Re-Enlisted Men's Return Plan Hit

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—The War Department's practice of returning low-point men from the Pacific on condition they re-enlist has been criticized by Senator Robertson (D., Wyo.).

Robertson, who planned to leave by plane today for a study of shipping and demobilization of service men in the European area, said in a statement that the practice had been productive of too much dissatisfaction among high-point men eligible for discharge.

Robertson said he has arranged to have 25 enlisted men selected by their fellow soldiers flown to Paris for a discussion of the discharge situation.

Army Confers D. S. M. On Four Jersey Generals

Honors Evans, Parks, Berry and Powell for Leadership

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP).—The War Department announced today the award of the Distinguished Service Medal to four New Jersey generals for exceptionally meritorious service.

Receiving the award were: Major General Vernon Evans, of 99 Central Avenue, Montclair; Major General Floyd L. Parks, 707 North Broad Street, Elizabeth; Brigadier General Robert W. Berry, Clinton Place, Hackensack, and Brigadier General Carroll A. Powell, 604 Irving Place, Long Branch.

General Evans was decorated for meritorious and distinguished service as chief of staff, India-Burma Theater, from October, 1944, to September, 1945.

General Parks received the medal for services as chief of staff of the 1st Allied Air-borne Army from October to Dec. 16, 1944, and from Jauuary to May, 1945.

The citation for General Berry listed his work as deputy assistant chief of staff with the War Department from February, 1944, to October, 1945.

General Powell was decorated for "exceptionally meritorious service as commanding general, Delta base section, communications zone, European theater of operations, from February to May, 1945."

Awards Given Two For Service to Navy

Washington, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Under-Secretary of the Navy Artemus L. Gates yesterday presented the Legion of Merit award to Capt. Charles B. Harding for services as head of the personnel accounting, statistical control section of the Bureau of Navy Personnel. He is a native of Philadelphia and lives in Rumson, N. J. He is now on terminal leave.

Commander Christopher S. Sargent received the award for services as assistant director of planning and control, Bureau of Navy Personnel, and special assistant to Under-Secretary Gates.

Byrnes Denies FBI Spy Inquiry Was Blocked

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Secretary of State Byrnes today branded as untrue reports that the State Department kept the FBI from investigating an alleged Soviet agent who sought to learn America's top wartime secrets.

Byrnes told a news conference he had never heard of such an incident and asserted the State Department never had requested [illegible] one not to investigate or arrest [illegible] alleged foreign agent.

Ethridge in U. S. With Report

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP).—James F. Byrnes, Secretary of State, said today that Mark Ethridge, Louisville publisher, has returned from his mission to Bulgaria and Romania. After Mr. Ethridge has submitted his final report, Secretary Byrnes told a news conference, the State Department will issue a statement. Mr. Ethridge was sent abroad to find out whether provisional governments in the two countries were representative of the people and whether all factions could participate in elections.

MAJOR ELIOT HITS MERGER

It Would Injure Our Armed Power, He Tells Senators

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP)—Maj. George Fielding Eliot told the Senate Military Committee today that merger of the armed forces would eventually "destroy" either American land, sea or air power.

The military commentator said he did not know which one it would be, but he asserted his belief that a single Cabinet officer for all three services would inevitably work to the detriment of one branch.

Major Eliot advocated a trial period for a plan outlined by Secretary Forrestal for separate Army, Navy and Air Departments operated with close coordination through a joint chiefs of staff setup.

Philippine War Loss Bill Passes Senate

Washington, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—The Senate today passed and sent to the House legislation providing for an estimated $450,000,000 war damages to the Philippines. The chamber also approved a bill providing for national elections in the islands by April 30, 1946.

Tanker Cedar Mills Hits Mine Off Italy

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—The American tanker Cedar Mills struck a mine off Italy several days ago and is "probably a total loss," the War Shipping Administration reported today.

Two crew members were seriously hurt, and one was reported missing in the blast, which WSA said resulted in beaching of the ship near Ancona.

The Cedar Mills was operated for WSA by the American Petroleum Transportation Company, New York.

A few weeks ago the vessel received WSA's gallant ship award for rescuing most of the crew from the French destroyer, Le Triomphant, during a storm in December, 1943.

Unemployment Of Veterans Rises

DEC 6 1945

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Unemployment among World War II veterans still is on the upgrade.

In the week ended Novemebr 17, the Veterans Administration reported today, 225,579 ex-service men received readjustment allowances aggregating $5,233,209. This was an increase of 18,237 individual payments over the preceding week when 207,342 unemployed ex-service men received $4,799,439.

Army Inactivates 7 More Divisions

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Seven more army combat divisions have hung up their weapons, bringing to 26 the number put on the inactive list since V-J day.

The War Department said today the recently inactivated divisions are the 34th, 38th, 43d and 66th Infantry and the 3d, 8th and 13th Armored.

NO ALARM BLOWN ON INDIANAPOLIS

Bugler Testifies at McVay Trial That He Failed to Get Order to Sound 'Abandon Ship'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 (AP)—Donald F. Mack, a bugler who was standing watch on the cruiser Indianapolis when she was sunk, told a Navy court-martial today that he never sounded abandon ship on his bugle.

NIGHT

The sailor testified that he was scheduled to be on watch from midnight to 4 A. M., July 30, and had just reported when two terrific explosions blasted the ship, sinking her in fifteen minutes.

He appeared before the court-martial, which is trying the commander of the Indianapolis, Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d, on charges of negligence and inefficiency in the loss of the vessel en route to Leyte from Guam.

The bugler said that when it became obvious the ship was in a sinking condition, he was ordered to go over the side.

"Did you ever sound abandon ship on your bugle?" he was asked.

"No, sir, I did not," he replied.

Lieut. Comdr. Richard B. Redmayne, the ship's engineering officer, told the court earlier that he was on the bridge during the 8 P. M. to midnight watch.

The ship's navigator came on the bridge about 9:30, he said, and informed all watch officers that a Navy patrol bomber and a destroyer escort were searching for a submarine reported in an area the Indianapolis would pass about 8 A. M.

He said the report did not cause any particular concern, and that he heard no discussion of resuming the "zig-zag" course which had been discontinued at 8 P. M.

He said the officer of the deck and the supervisor of the watch, neither of whom survived, were the officers responsible for reporting any change of condition and making recommendations to the captain.

Commander Redmayne testified that during the first three hours of his watch visibility was very poor, with no moon and a very cloudy sky, but about 11 P. M. the moon rose and thereafter visibility was intermittently good when the moon broke between clouds.

He said after the explosions he at no time received or heard any orders of any kind which would have emanated from the bridge. He estimated that about 800 members of the ship's company got off the ship. Only 316 of the total of 1,196 survived four days in the water.

Cruiser's Last Night Described

Watch Officer on Sunken Indianapolis Is Witness at McVay's Trial.

Washington, Dec. 5 (A. P.).—The night watch aboard the cruiser Indianapolis in the hours before she was sunk between Guam and Leyte last July was described before a naval court-martial today.

The witness, Lieut.-Commander Richard B. Redmayne of Norwood, Mass., an engineering officer, told the court that officers standing the 8 P. M. to midnight watch had been notified that a search was in progress for a reported submarine in an area that the Indianapolis was due to pass about 8 A. M.

The court is trying Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d, skipper of the cruiser, on charges of negligence and inefficiency in the loss of the vessel.

Redmayne, who was supervising the watch, said that at about 9:30 P. M. the ship's navigator came on teh bridge and informed watch officers that a patrol bomber and a destroyer escort were conducting the search for a submarine in waters ahead of the Indianapolis. He said he himself was not worried by the report and that no other officer present appeared to show concern. Throughout his watch the Indianapolis was steering a straight course, he said. He added thaet he did not discuss wit hthe officer of the deck the advisability of returning to a zigzag course because it did not appear to him that such a step was necessary.

Redmayne testified that he left the bridge around midnight and was preparing for bed when the fatal explosions shook the ship.

Commander Lewis L. Haynes of Manistee, Mich., chief medical officer aboard the Indianapolis, testified that he was awakened by the first explosion and was on deck when the second explosion shook the ship.

"My rom was filled with fire," Haynes said. "There was fire every way I turned."

He said that no time did he hear a call to abandon ship.

Asked by the judge advocate if he had any reason to believe that the ship was passing through waters through which enemy submarines were likely to be encountered, Haynes said that at the evening meal the navigator jokingly remarked that the ship would pass an enemy submarine during the night.

Rubber Plants' Decoy Invasion Confused Nazis

Phantom Army, Like Macy Parade Dummies, Kept Popping About Channel

AKRON, Ohio, Dec. 5 (AP).—One of the closest guarded secrets of the war—the part rubber companies played in the United States' "illusionary warfare"—was unveiled by the War Department today.

Now can be told the story of a giant deception that caused the Germans, just before D Day, to see fleets of invasion craft that didn't exist, loaded with weapons that never were forged and pointed for attacks that never were planned.

PT boats complete with armament, and landing craft and barges carrying tanks, field artillery and other combat equipment, appeared and disappeared overnight and in great numbers along the English Channel coast in the hectic days preceding June 6, 1944, much to the confusion of German observers and the high command.

Vast Decoy Operation

The huge ruse was made possible by production, with great speed and under highest priorities, of pneumatic, balloon-fabric models of the craft and equipment required for this vast decoy operation.

Built to size, and with a close resemblance to the real thing that made them, when inflated, utterly deceiving to German reconaissance pilots, these "ships" and their cargoes were allowed to be seen in the waters of British ports from which Allied supreme headquarters had no intention of launching an attack.

Having served their confusing purpose in one locality, they were deflated and moved by truck to another false base, again to distract enemy attention and further muddle his defense preparations.

The companies involved quickly adapted themselves to the project when called upon by the Army and Navy to fashion psychological weapons of war out of the same fabrics and skills that in peacetime had produced gargantuan figures for Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York and for other parades.

DEC 6 1

Phantom Invaders

Landing craft of various kinds, PT boats and barges, tanks, tank destroyers, field and heavy artillery, combat vehicles and other equipment with which to load them were designed and patterned on drawing boards.

As fast as the dummies were completed they were turned over to the Army and Navy for shipment to Europe, deflated and folded and with a minimum demand upon precious cargo space. The last shipment, with D Day knocking on the door, was rushed to England by plane.

Inflated Bofors guns, airplanes, half-tracs and tanks also were designed by Army camouflage experts to create the illusion, from the air, of actual mobile armament. Thus it was possible for tacticians to place an "entire army" in the field at some point which would serve to confuse enemy observers, while the actual armed unit moved under cover of darkness or camouflage to some point isolated from the illusionary army of balloon-like equipment.

Companies which participated in the decoy program included Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, General Tire and Rubber Company, United States Rubber Company and Dunlop Rubber Company.

TALBOT IS CRITICAL OF ATOMIC BOMB POLICY

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 5.—(AP) A British-American policy of retaining the secrets of atomic energy will result in a frantic race by scientists of all nations to duplicate the achievement and to build up arsenals of atomic power, Rep. Joseph E. Talbot (R-Conn) declared today.

Talbot told members of the National Association of State Auditors, Comptrollers and Treasurers expectation that the secret of atomic energy can be preserved was "foolhardiness of the first order."

He declared that the world organization responsible for prohibition of atomic force as a destructive agent of aggression must have access to "every laboratory and every industrial plant in every nation of the world."

STRENGTH NEEDED, GEN. WING ASSERTS

BANGOR, Me., Dec. 5—(AP)—Maj. Gen. Leonard F. Wing asserted tonight that he was "not impressed by any claim that we are going to prevent wars by relying on the atomic bomb or on the fact that we once had a powerful army and navy."

"Our nation must be so strong," said the Rutland, Vt., citizen-soldier who commanded the 43rd "Winged Victory" division in the Pacific, "that no nation will dare attack us x x x."

"How will this be brought about?" he asked members of James W. Williams post, American Legion, and its auxiliary. "I don't know."

"I'll leave it to the politicians," he said, "but you, and good citizens like you, can influence our postwar policy."

He addressed the Legion group a few hours after he opened a three-day visit to Maine by presenting to the state the battle flags carried in the Pacific by Maine's 152nd field artillery.

"One thing is sure," he said tonight. "Everyone in America is sick and tired of war. We must be sure that the loss in treasure and life and human happiness shall not occur again."

Compton Protests Destruction Of Jap Cyclotrons by Army

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 5. —(AP) Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, tonight said the Army's destruction of Japanese cyclotrons was "an act of utter stupidity" and added that "some housecleaning" is called for among those responsible.

In a letter to Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Compton said that he was "confident" that neither the secretary nor General MacArthur was responsible for the order and added:

"But somewhere up or down the line there is some officer or official or group whose judgment or competence is inadequate for the authority exercised, and I believe that some housecleaning in the spot is called for."

Pointing out that he participated in the drafting of regulations under which nuclear scientists might carry on their work, Compton said:

"The regulations were simple and wholly adequate to safeguard against any Japanese work in this field which could possibly be dangerous. As a matter of fact, the cyclotron is not an instrument capable of producing atom bombs."

Compton made public his letter tonight after returning from a trip to London.

He said that the destruction of the cyclotrons was "an act of utter stupidity which seriously set back public confidence in the military" and added that it had brought "both censure and ridicule on us from intelligent people of other countries."

Declaring that "very rarely have I been willing to make a public protest, and I greatly dislike so doing," he added "but in this instance I feel such action to be justified."

Peanuts are now being manufactured into meal and flour, as well as salad oil, oleomargarine, peanut butter, and candy.

JAP ENVOYS DEFENDED

DEC 6 1945

Missionary Lauds Go-Between Efforts For Peace

DEC 6 1945

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—Dr. E. Stanley Jones, Methodist missionary who described himself as a go-between for Japanese envoys and the United States Government in the dark days before Pearl Harbor, said today the envoys made "desperate attempts" to avert war.

The missionary, who spent many years in the Orient, said it was at the suggestion of the Japanese representatives that the late President Roosevelt sent a last-minute personal message to Emperor Hirohito.

[A. Stanley Jones has been mentioned in testimony before the Senate committee investigating Pearl Harbor.]

Asked For Roosevelt Move

In an article entitled "An adventure in failure—behind the scenes before Pearl Harbor," and written for the December issue of the magazine, Asia and the Americas, Dr. Jones said the envoys asked him "to urge the President to send a cable to the Emperor as a final attempt to preserve peace."

Dr. Jones said he delivered the request in a personal interview with Roosevelt December 3, 1941.

"It (the request) shows the desperate attempts of the Japanese envoys to find a solution other than war," the missionary wrote.

Emperor's Action Final

"I knew that the Emperor seldom interfered in the conduct of his government, but once he did interfere, his action was final and the nation submitted unquestioningly. The Japanese representatives insisted that if the Emperor would act in behalf of peace, then the war party would have to submit. Their face would be saved, for they could say, 'we did not do it, the Emperor ordered it.'

"I explained to Mr. Roosevelt that the request to send the cable to the Emperor originated with the Japanese. The President said that he had already thought of sending a cable to the Emperor, but hesitated to do so because it might offend the Japanese envoys if he went over their heads to the Emperor.

"I replied, 'But I've come to tell you that the Japanese have asked me to request you to send it.'

" 'Then,' said the President, 'That wipes my slate clean. I can send it.' "

Apparently Sent Dec. 5

Dr. Jones said the cable apparently was dispatched December 5 but that records of Joseph Grew, former Ambassador to Japan, show that the cable "did not get to the Emperor until after the attack upon Pearl Harbor."

Dr. Jones said:

"There is no doubt in my mind that special envoy Kurusu came to the United States with specific orders from the Emperor to arrive at a basis for peace if possible."

Convinced Of Land Need

The missionary wrote that long before Pearl Harbor he was convinced "Japan would have to be provided with some territory by peaceful means, or she would try to get territory by force" because of her large population and limited land space.

As a solution, Dr. Jones said he proposed that Japan be given New Guinea. He said Australia was sympathetic to the proposal, that some high United States officials looked upon it with favor, but that the Chinese Ambassador "was not at all favorable."

"Obviously, he was anxious for America to get into the war," Dr. Jones added. "I am sure that if this proposal had been boldly carried out, it would have swung Japan on our side."

Forrestal Urges Navy Security Plan

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, said tonight he did not expect another war but that the surest way to invite it "is to be unready to fight one."

In an address before the St. Nicholas Society, he urged the Navy's proposal for a "systematic integration" of War, Navy and State departments and other Government agencies concerned with security as opposed to proposed merger of War and Navy departments.

Military policy is inextricably intertwined with foreign policy as evolved by the Department of State and the President, Forrestal noted.

But national security, he added, also must deal "with such questions as the machinery for the vast and complex mobilization of resources, manufacturing capacity, manpower, shipping, technical skills, research, education, which we found necessary during the war just finished."

Three Troopships Disabled In Storm

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—Two ships carrying more than 1,000 United States soldiers home from Europe were in distress tonight in a storm-tossed sea off Bermuda, while a third troop carrier was under tow in the same waters and a merchant ship was aground off the Virginia coast.

Rescue craft were en route to the two stricken transports, the Liberty ship Henry War Beecher and the merchantman George W. McCrary. The Navy said neither vessel was in immediate danger.

The Beecher — its propeller sheared off while en route from Marseille to Norfolk, Va.—rolled helplessly in the heavy sea some 500 miles north-northeast of Bermuda, its meat supplies running low.

The navy tug Restorer was plowing along at ten knots in an effort to reach the ship, carrying 541 homeward-bound war veterans. Several other vessels also were en route.

The McCrary, with 586 troops aboard, radioed it had boiler trouble about 900 miles from Bermuda. A patrol craft was dispatched from the naval operating base at Bermud to tke her in tow if necessary.

The Greek vessel Navarchos-Koudouriotis, which also lost its propeller, was taken in tow by an "all sea" rescue craft about 250 miles off Bermuda and was heading toward New York.

Meanwhile, the 7,200-ton American merchant ship John Gibbons was aground in a rough sea in Lynnhaven Roads, Va. Efforts to tow her out have been futile.

Storm, Tug Both Near Drifting

30-24-32153

Beecher

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—The propellerless Liberty ship Henry Ward Beecher, with 541 home-bound war veterans aboard, still wallowed in stormy waters north of Bermuda today, but the navy tug Restorer, struggling along at ten knots, is expected to reach it "sometime today," the Navy announced.

The Air-Sea Rescue Office of the Navy's Eastern Sea Frontier reported the Beecher, which lost its propeller while en route from Marseille, France, to Norfolk, Va., had "drifted nearly 35 miles southward" during the night and had reported a shortage of meat to feed its passengers.

In "No Real" Danger

Although the Beecher was "on the edge of a storm headed northward" and floundering in a 33-mile wind, the Navy expressed belief it was as yet in no real danger.

"Weather indications give no cause for alarm," said the report, which nevertheless predicted increasing winds today, with rain tomorrow.

Also Short On Meat

The destroyer escort Muir reported receiving a message about the Beecher's meat shortage. The Muir said it, too, was short of supplies and "unable to assist."

Last night the Beecher was reported 510 miles north-northeast of Bermuda. Several vessels besides the tug were reported going to the rescue.

Help would have reached it earlier, the Navy said, had not rescue craft been given erroneous directions as to the troopship's location.

2 Pearl Harbor Victims Return to Dock in U. S.

The California and Tennessee Home 4 Years After Attack

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5 (AP).—The battleships California and Tennessee, two victims of the Pearl Harbor disaster, return home to the United States tomorrow almost four years to the day when Japanese planes made their sneak attack.

Both ships, completing the last leg of a 15,000-mile journey begun Oct. 15 when they lifted anchor in Tokyo Bay, will make Philadelphia their first port of entry in the United States since Japan surrendered unconditionally.

The California, sunk at Pearl Harbor, will debark 820 officers and enlisted men of the 2,000 now aboard. The Tennessee, battered by Nipponese bombs, will debark 1,059 of her 2,013 crew.

Raised from Pearl Harbor on March 24, 1942, the California was recommissioned and put back into action in 1944.

Russ Called Dictators

Harrisburg, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Soviet Union exercises "the prerogatives of a dictator" in its relations with conquered European nations, says George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor.

Meany was the guest last night of the Pennsylvania Council of Public Employés, which gave him its annual award for "making the most outstanding contribution to the welfare of the workers."

Devoting most of a speech to Russia, Meany said that in addition to acting as a dictator in Poland, eastern Germany, Czechoslovakia and the Balkan nations, the Soviet Union was "assuming a dominant anti-democratic position in eastern Asia."

He declared that "we want peace, but we don't want peace at the price of having commissars giving orders at the White House."

British Girl Explains Failure To Tell Mate Love for Him Died

DUBUQUE, Ia., Dec. 5.—(AP) Mrs. Jean Carbone, 19, London-bred wife of a Rochester, N. Y., air forces lieutenant who came to this country last week to join another man, the father of her unborn child, said today she had been too much of a coward to tell her mate she no longer loved him.

Shortly before the man she now wants to marry, Capt. Darrell Beschen, departed for Santa Ana, Calif., for further Army duty, red-haired Mrs. Carbone said in an interview with The Telegraph-Herald that soon after her marriage last year to Lt. Harold Carbone, now a student at the University of Rochester, Carbone underwent an appendectomy.

"I saw him briefly on each of seven days during his stay in the Army hospital and as soon as he was able to be moved he was sent back to the states," she said. "It was during those few days that I saw we were not compatible, that we never could make a go of our marriage, but, coward that I was, I was unable to tell him so.

"When I met Darrell I fell in love with him immediately. I didn't tell him of my marriage until too late, until we were so desperately in love that we knew we were meant for each other and wanted to be together always."

Beschen, who revealed he had engaged an attorney, Herbert J. Hoffman, to represent Mrs. Carbone, who will stay here with the captain's mother, issued a statement asking "in humanity's name and for the sake of our expected child" that Mrs. Carbone be allowed to rest.

"Constant ringing of the telephone at my mother's residence with repeated demands to talk to Mrs. Carbone have helped unnerve her, a 19-yearold girl in a strange land beset, as the world well knows, by grave and perplexing problems that are great enough by themselves to tax the strongest nerves," he said.

In Rochester, Lt. Carbone said today he would ask the Catholic church to decide whether he should obtain an annulment of his marriage.

"Whether or not it (an annulment) could be granted is entirely in the province of the church," he said.

Carbone and the former Jean Gloor of London were married Nov. 8, 1944, in St. Anthony's Catholic church, London.

HOPE ABANDONED FOR LOST FLYERS

Portland, Ore., Dec. 5 (A. P.).—Authorities directing a search of the storm-battered Pacific Northwest and Alaska for twenty flyers, a civilian mail pilot and nineteen service men, missing as a result of six airplane losses in the last ten days, expressed doubt today that many will be found alive.

Rescue crews late yesterday reached wreckage of a Navy Ventura plane that crashed a week ago near Mount St. Helens. Four Navy airmen are missing. One Army passenger is the only known survivor.

About the same time yesterday bodies of four Army airmen were removed from one B-24 that disappeared November 1. It was doubted the second B-24 with five aboard would be spotted until after the spring thaw.

Latest of the planes reported missing is a small Army training plane which disappeared after leaving Red Bluff, Cal., for Hamilton Field, Cal.

A Navy Privateer transport with twelve men aboard is missing after leaving Kodiak, Alaska, November 29. Near Nome, Alaska, rescuers were attempting to reach a mail-plane which crashed a week ago. East of Coos Bay, Ore., ground units continued looking for trace of a twelfth man unaccounted for in the crash of an Army C-46 on November 26. Search was also continuing in the Klamath, Ore., region for a Navy Hellcat bound from Pasco, Wash., for Red Bluff, Cal.

1,400 Arrive From Philippines

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4 (AP).—Fourteen hundred Army veterans stepped ashore tonight from the Dutch transport Weltvreden, including members of Ohio's "Buckeye Division," the 148th Infantry of the 37th Division.

The "Buckeye Division," made up originally of Ohio men and overseas since May 26, 1942, fought in the Fiji, New Georgia and Phillippine Campaigns and aided in capture of the Munda Airstrip on Bougainville.

The 148th arrivals, of which only 160 were from Ohio, was the vanguard of the division which will arrive in San Francisco next week. In addition to members of the 148th, there were about 300 men aboard from the 76th Tank Battalion, attached to the 77th Division.

Midway Marine Group Home

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5 (AP).—Marine Aircraft Group 22, organized at Midway after Pearl Harbor, stepped ashore here today—1,400 strong—from the transport Sea Sturgeon. Returning from Kyushu, southernmost of Japan's home islands, the marine group had fought its way across the Pacific from Midway through the Marshall Islands to Okinawa, earning the only Presidential citation awarded a marine air group.

LONDON, DEC. 5-(AP)-THE MASSIVE MILITARY POWER WHICH THE UNITED NATIONS BROUGHT TO BEAR AGAINST THE AXIS AGGRESSORS IS DIMINISHING AT AN EVER-INCREASING PACE AS MEN AND WOMEN IN UNIFORM RETURN TO PEACETIME PURSUITS.

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS SURVEY OF SEVERAL WORLD CAPITALS REFLECTS THE SPEED WITH WHICH, IN THE SEVEN MONTHS SINCE THE FIRST HALF OF THE STRUGGLE WAS CLIMAXED ON V-E DAY, DEMOBILIZATION HAS PROGRESSED.

ON V-E DAY, THE U.S.ARMY HAD REACHED A PEAK OF 8,300,000 TROOPS. IN JULY THE NAVY--INCLUDING MARINES AND COAST GUARD--HAD REACHED 4,050,000. THE ARMY HAS DEMOBILIZED 3,634,000 AND THE NAVY, 1,012,000.

DEC 6 1945

ESTIMATES OF CURRENT ARMY AND NAVY STRENGTH ARE PLACED AT 5,300,000 AND 2,660,000, RESPECTIVELY. SEVERAL MILLION MORE PERSONNEL WILL BE RETURNED TO CIVILIAN LIFE BY THE END OF THE FISCAL YEAR NEXT JUNE 30. ON THAT DATE, THE ARMY EXPECTS TO BE DOWN TO 1,630,000 AND THE NAVY, TO 505,000.

SINCE THE END OF THE WAR AGAINST GERMANY, THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAS DEMOBILIZED APPROXIMATELY 3,723,000 TROOPS AND WHEN THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1946 ARE GONE, EXPECTS TO HAVE 4,500,000 MORE IN MUFTI.

BRITAIN'S EXACT WARTIME STRENGTH NEVER HAS BEEN DISCLOSED BUT ITS PEACETIME SERVICES TOTALED 1,483,000 MEN.

FIGURES ON RUSSIA ARE UNAVAILABLE BUT GENERALISSIMO STALIN RECENTLY TOLD AN AMERICAN CONGRESSIONAL DELEGATION THAT THE SOVIET UNION WAS DEMOBILIZING TWO-THIRDS OF THE RED ARMY. EVIDENCE OF LARGESCALE RELEASE OF TROOPS IS SEEN IN THE NUMBERS OF DEMOBILIZED SOLDIERS IN MOSCOW, AND DAILY NEWSPAPER STORIES CONCERNING THE RETURN OF SOLDIERS TO THEIR PEACETIME JOBS.

FRANCE HAS RELEASED 500,000 TROOPS, LEAVING 800,000 UNDER THE TRICOLOR; AN ADDITIONAL 110,000 MEN WILL BE DISCHARGED BY THE FIRST OF THE YEAR. CURRENTLY, CABINET MEMBERS ARE DEBATING THE SIZE OF THE PERMANENT ARMY, WITH THE MINISTER OF NATIONAL ECONOMY FAVORING A SMALL, HIGHLY-TRAINED REGULAR ARMY, AND THE MINISTER OF WAR DECLARING FOR A LARGE (ABOUT 800,000) FORCE AND COMPULSORY SERVICE.

CANADA HAS STRIPPED THE STRENGTH OF HER ARMED FORCES BY ALMOST 300,000 MEN AND WOMEN AND IS PROGRESSING TOWARDS FINAL DEMOBILIZATION AT THE RATE OF 65,000 MONTHLY. ON V-E DAY, CANADIAN FORCESV

DEC 6 1945

AT THE RATE OF 65,000 MONTHLY. ON V-E DAY, CANADIAN FORCES NUMBERED APPROXIMATELY 781,000 MEN AND WOMEN.

AUSTRALIA HAD MORE THAN 604,000 IN UNIFORM WHEN JAPAN SURRENDERED AND SINCE HAS DEMOBILIZED 106,000. THE GOVERNMENT EXPECTS TO COMPLETE THE JOB BY THE MIDDLE OF 1946. THE SIZE OF AUSTRALIA'S FUTURE DEFENSE FORCE HAS NOT BEEN ANNOUNCED BUT IT IS EXPECTED TO BE CONSIDERABLY HIGHER THAN THE OLD PEACETIME FIGURE OF 12,900 MEN IN ITS ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE.

PARIS, DEC. 5-(AP)-HOMESICK AMERICAN SOLDIERS UNBURDENED THEMSELVES OF REDEPLOYMENT COMPLAINTS TODAY TO A SENATOR WHO PROMISED HE WOULD TELL CONGRESS AND THE ARMY ABOUT IT.

SEN. EDWARD V. ROBERTSON (R-WYO.) INVITED 35 ENLISTED MEN FROM DEPOTS WHERE THEY ARE AWAITING SHIPMENT HOME. HE TOLD THEM THERE WOULD BE NO RETALIATION FROM THE "BRASS HATS" FOR ANYTHING THEY

30.24 - 32157

SAID, SO THEY COULD TALK FREELY.

THEY DID.

SGT.STEPHEN BOROWSKI OF BUFFALO,N.Y., STARTED THE SESSION BY SAYING THAT MEN IN HIS CAMP WERE ANNOYED OVER THE FACT SOME SOLDIERS WITH LOW POINTS MANAGED TO GET BACK TO THE UNITED STATES ON TEMPORARY DUTY OR DETACHED SERVICE AND ONCE HOME, WERE RELEASED FROM THE ARMY.

T/4 HERBERT O.HOOVER OF JOHNSTOWN,PA., SAID HIS GRIPE WAS THAT HIGH POINT MEN IN KEY JOBS WERE DECLARED ESSENTIAL BY THEIR COMMANDING OFFICERS BECAUSE REPLACEMENTS COULD NOT BE OBTAINED.

"IT'S THE FAVORITISM THAT IS SHOWN IN GETTING MEN OUT," SAID T/4 ROBERT O.HOUGHTON OF SAN FRANCISCO. "THEY LET ACTORS AND FOOTBALL PLAYERS OUT. IS THERE ANY WAY A CHECK CAN BE PUT ON THAT?"

DEC 6 1945

THE SENATOR RESPONDED THAT THE ONLY METHOD HE KNEW WAS TO FOCUS PUBLIC ATTENTION ON THE SITUATION, ADDING: "MUCH OF CONGRESS' POWER HAS BEEN TAKEN AWAY BY THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OF THE GOVERNMENT DURING THE WAR EMERGENCY, AND PRESIDENT TRUMAN HAS NOT YET SAID THE WAR IS OVER."

T/4 JOHN C.WAGNER OF BALTIMORE,MD., CHARGED THAT AT HIS STATION, OUTSIDE MARSEILLE, "THERE SEEMS TO BE NO ORGANIZATION."

"WE ARE TOLD THERE IS A SURPLUS OF SHIPPING IN MARSEILLE, SO WHY DO WE HAVE TO LIE AROUND CAMP FOR DAYS?" HE ASKED. "BUT THE BIGGEST GRIPE THE MEN HAVE ARE THE SANITARY CONDITIONS. THERE ARE 1,100 MEN IN MY UNIT AND THERE'S ONLY ONE SHOWER. AND THERE'S HOT WATER FOR ONLY TWO OR THREE HOURS A DAY."

THE SENATOR SAID HE WOULD BRING TO THE ATTENTION OF THE PROPER AUTHORITIES HIS KNOWLEDGE THAT SHIPS WERE SAILING FROM MARSEILLE "WITHOUT THEIR FULL COMPLEMENT."

"I THINK," SAID SGT.LOUIS SCHIFF OF NEW YORK CITY, "THAT A GREAT DEAL OF SECRECY SURROUNDS REDEPLOYMENT TO COVER UP A LOT OF DISORGANIZATION AND LACK OF PLANNING."

ROBERTSON CAME HERE ON THE FORERUNNER FLIGHT TO TWA'S REGULAR WASHINGTON-PARIS SCHEDULE. THE SENATOR, WHO IS A MEMBER OF THE SENATE NAVAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE, WILL LEAVE FRIDAY ON THE RETURN TRIP TO WASHINGTON.

NUERNBERG, DEC. 5-(AP)-ALLIED PSYCHIATRISTS, COMMENTING ON RUDOLF HESS' ADMISSION THAT HE HAD BEEN FAKING LOSS OF MEMORY, STUCK TO THEIR GUNS TODAY AND SAID THAT THE BLACK-BROWED NAZI'S THEATRICAL COURTROOM CONFESSION PROVED HE WAS "UNSTABLE" AND SUFFERING FROM "SELECTIVE AMNESIA."

IN A 1,000 WORD STATEMENT GOING INTO TECHNICAL DETAIL ON THEIR EXAMINATION OF HITLER'S ONE-TIME DEPUTY, THREE DOCTORS POINTED OUT THAT HESS HAD TOLD THE TRIBUNAL THAT HIS MEMORY WAS "AGAIN IN ORDER" AND THEY OFFERED THE CONCLUSION THAT HE HAS "SELECTIVE AMNESIA, HYSTERICAL IN TYPE."

DEC 6 1945

HESS STOPPED A COURT HEARING ON HIS MENTAL CONDITION LAST WEEK WITH THE ADMISSION THAT "THE REASON WHY I SIMULATED LOSS OF MEMORY WAS TACTICAL" AND DECLARED THAT HE WOULD STAND RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL OF HIS ACTIONS. THE COURT, AFTER RECEIVING PSYCHIATRISTS' REPORTS THAT HESS WAS SANE BUT WAS SUFFERING FROM A DEGREE OF AMNESIA, RULED THAT THE NAZI LEADER MUST STAND TRIAL.

"IT IS NOW THE CONCENSUS AMONG PSYCHIATRISTS," THE DOCTORS TODAY DECLARED, "THAT ONLY AN UNSTABLE PERSON CAN OR DOES USE THIS METHOD OF DEALING WITH THE MAJOR ISSUES OF LIFE AND THERE IS SUFFICIENT AMOUNT OF EVIDENCE IN HIS PERSONAL HISTORY TO INDICATE THAT HE HAS BEEN UNSTABLE PERSONALLY AND HAS A NEUROTIC CHARACTER WHICH HAS EXPRESSED ITSELF IN HYSTERICAL SYMPTOMS FROM TIME TO TIME."

"HE THEREFORE HAS SELECTIVE AMNESIA, HYSTERICAL IN TYPE, UTILIZING A DEFENSE MECHANISM OF AN EMOTIONAL NEUROTIC NATURE,"

THE STATEMENT ADDED.

CAPT.SIXTUS R.O'CONNOR (ROMAN CATHOLIC) OF OXFORD,N.Y., AND CAPT. HENRY F.GERECKE (LUETHERAN), OF ST.LOUIS, MO. (3204 HALLIDAY ST.), SAID AN UNFAILING TOPIC OF CONVERSATION WHEN THE NAZIS TALKED TO THE CHAPLAINS WAS THEIR DESPAIR OVER GERMANY'S RUIN SINCE "OUR PLAN FAILED."

DEC 6 1945

THIRTEEN OF THE DEFENDANTS ARE LUTHERAN, AT LEAST NOMINALLY, BUT CHAPLAIN GERECKE SAID FOUR WERE "IRREGULARS"--HERMANN GOERING, RUDOLF HESS, WALTHER FUNK AND WILHELM FRICK.

GOERING ATTENDED THE FIRST PRISON SERVICE TWO WEEKS AGO. "HE

IN DAILY VISITS, THE CHAPLAINS HAVE BECOME ACQUAINTED INTIMATELY WITH A NUMBER OF THE PRISONERS, BUT SAID IT WOULD NOT BE APPROPRIATE TO IDENTIFY THOSE WHO ADMITTED THEIR REMORSE.

CHAPLAIN SAID THAT ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS, SOME OF THE PRISONERS WEPT.

NUERNBURG, GERMANY, DEC. 5---(AP)---DOCUMENTS IN POSSESSION OF THE AMERICAN PROSECUTION STAFF AT THE WAR CRIMES TRIAL REVEAL THAT EVEN THE WILDEST RUMORS REGARDING THE HARSH TREATMENT RECEIVED IN BERLIN BY IN MID-MARCH, 1939, BY THE FEEBLE, OLD CZECHOSLOVAK PRESIDENT, EMIL HACHA, WERE AN UNDERSTATEMENT.

DEC 6 1945

TO THOSE OF US WHO STOOD AT THE POTSDAMER RAILWAY STATION IN THE CENTER OF BERLIN THAT NIGHT, IT WAS CLEAR THAT THE FRAIL, HARRASSED MAN WHO STEPPED OFF THE TRAIN WOULD NEVER BE EQUAL TO THE BROW-BEATING OF HITLER, GOERING, FIELD MARSHAL WILHELM KEITEL AND OTHER TOP NAZIS WHO WERE AWAITING HIM IN THE REICHSCHANCELLORY.

OUTWARDLY, AS USUAL, THE NAZIS GAVE THE IMPRESSION OF HAVING DUE RESPE FOR THE HEAD OF A FOREIGN STATE. AN HONOR COMPANY OF THE WEHRMACHT WAS DRAWN UP. THE CHIEF OF PROTOCOL STOOD AT ATTENTION AWAITING HACHA'S DESCENT FROM THE TRAIN.

I STILL SEE HACHA, LOOKING SOMEWHAT BEWILDERED AT THE HUGE NAZI FLAG ON DISPLAY AS HE REMOVED HIS HAT. UPON LEAVING THE TRAIN.

THROUGHOUT THE NIGHT WE WAITED FOR NEWS OF THE MEETING WITHIN THE CHANCELLORY BUT NOTHING OFFICIAL WAS ANNOUNCED UNTIL THE FORENOON. MEANWHILE, RUMORS WERE THICK THAT HACHA WAS BEING PUT UNDER TERRIFIC PRESSURE; THAT HE HAD "ASKED" FOR A GERMAN PROTECTORATE OVER HIS COUNTRY; THAT HE HAD BEEN GIVEN A HARSH ULTIMATUM.

DEC 6 1945

CAPTURED MINUTES OF THE HISTORIC MEETING NOW PROVE THOSE RUMORS TRUE.

HITLER TOLD HACHA IT WAS "ONLY A MATTERS OF HOURS UNTIL GERMANY WILL INTERVENE X X." HE HAD GIVEN THE ORDER TO GERMAN TROOPS TO MARCH INTO THE CZECH REPUBLIC AND INCORPORATE IT INTO THE REICH, AND AT 6 A.M. THE GERMAN ARMY AND AIR FORCE WOULD PROCEED TO CARRY OUT THE COMMAND.

HIS OFFER TO "PROTECT" CZECHOSLOVAKIA WAS THE LAST "GOOD DEED" HE COULD OFFER THE CZECH PEOPLES, HITLER SAID.

30.24 - 32161

HACHA PLAINTIVELY ASKED THE FUHRER HOW THE CZECH PEOPLE COULD BE RESTRAINED FROM RESISTANCE. HITLER TOLD HIM TO CONSULT HIS OWN OFFICIA ABOUT THAT.

AT ONE POINT HACHA COLLAPSED AND WAS GIVEN MEDICAL ATTENTION. WE CORRESPONDENTS WERE WARNED AGAINST RELAYING RUMORS AND WERE TOLD HACHA'S ILLNESS WAS ASCRIBED TO HIS ADVANCED AGE.

THE CAPTURED DOCUMENTS NOW PROVE THAT THE RUMORS WER WE HEARD FAILED TO REVEAL THE FULL MEASURE OF CYNICISM AND BRUTALITY THROUGH WHICH HITLE ESTABLISHED HIS CZECH "PROTECTORATE."

OTHER WIDESPREAD DISEASES ARE TYPHOID, DYSENTARY, DIPHTHERIA AND VENEREAL DISEASES.

THE COAL SHORTAGE ALSO IS SERIOUSLY AFFECTING OPERATIONS OF THE ELECTRIC POWER PLANTS AND IN WARSAW ALL LIGHTS FREQUENTLY GO OFF EARLY IN THE EVENING.

IN THE SILESIAN COAL AREA MINERS PRODUCED 108,000 TONS DAILY, BUT THE NEWSPAPER POLSKA LUDOWA SAID ~~THAT~~ DURING THAT MONTH 350,000 TONS WERE LEFT NEAR THE MINES AND LATER WERE DESTROYED BY FIRE. WARSAW, DEC.5-(AP)-POLAND, THE GREATEST COAL PRODUCING COUNTRY IN EUROPE, IS FACING A COLD, BITTER WINTER BECAUSE OF THE LACK OF SUFFICIENT TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES TO HAUL HEATING FUEL FROM THE MINES TO URBAN CENTERS.

DEC 6 1945

SHIPPING FROM BALTIC PORTS ALSO HAS BEEN HARD HIT, SINCE POLAND IS UNABLE TO FULFILL HER COMMITMENTS FOR THE EXCHANGE OF COAL WITH SWEDEN, NORWAY, DENMARK AND OTHER COUNTRIES FOR MACHINERY AND FOODSTUFFS.

WHAT COAL DOES LEAVE THE SILESIAN MINES VIA RAILWAYS SELDOM REACHES ITS DESTINATION INTACT. GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS ESTIMATE CONSERVATIVELY THAT 15 PER CENT OF ALL COAL SHIPMENTS IS STOLEN ENROUTE.

INADEQUATE COAL SUPPLIES FINALLY DELIVERED TO BIG CITIES BRING FANTASTIC PRICES. IN KRAKOW AND KATOWICE NEAR THE SILESIAN MINES, COAL SELLS FOR 400 ZLOTYS (ABOUT $20) A TON. IN WARSAW THE PRICE

RANGES FROM 6,000 TO 14,000 ($300 TO $700), BEYOND THE REACH OF THE POOR POLISH WORKER WHO EARNS ON THE AVERAGE EIGHT ZLOTYS (40 CENTS) AN HOUR.

CITIES LIKE WARSAW, LODZ, GDYNIA, GDANSK AND BYDGOSZCY ARE FACING NOT ONLY A COLD WINTER BUT ALSO A DARK ONE, FOR THE ACUTE LACK OF FUEL IS SERIOUSLY AFFECTING OPERATIONS OF ELECTRIC POWER PLANTS. YENAN, CHINA, DEC. 5-(AP)-A HIGH COMMUNIST SPOKESMAN DECLARED TODAY THE PARTY WAS OPPOSED TO RUSSIAN-STYLE COMMUNISM IN CHINA AND ITS FIRST CONCERN WAS THE FOUNDING OF A DEMOCRATIC COALITION GOVERNMENT.

LIU SHAO-CHI, SPEAKING FOR COMMUNIST CHARIMAN MAO TSE-TUNG, TOLD CORRESPONDENTS THE PARTY WAS SO ANXIOUS FOR A DEMOCRATIC COALITIO THAT IT WAS NOT INTERESTED IN A SEPARATE COMMUNIST GOVERNMENT, EVEN IF THE FORTHCOMING PEACE TALKS IN CHUNGKING FAIL.

GEN. CHU TEH, THE COMMUNIST COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, SAID AT A SEPARATE PRESS CONFERENCE THAT CHINESE COMMUNISTS DID NOT DISPUTE THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT'S SOVEREIGNTY OVER MANCHURIA.

THE COMMUNISTS APPROVED THE RUSSIAN WITHDRAWAL IN FAVOR OF THE NATIONALISTS, CHU ASSERTED, "BUT WE WANT A GOVERNMENT THERE BASED ON DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES."

LIU, ONE OF THE 10 MEMBERS OF THE POWERFUL COMMUNIST POLIT-BUREAU, SAID THE PARTY BELIEVED THAT CHINA COULD BEST REVIVE UNDER A LONG PERIOD OF POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC DEMOCRACY.

THE CHINESE COMMUNIST PLAN, HE ASSERTED, WAS NOT INSPIRED BY RUSSIA AND HAD NO SIMILARITY TO THE SOVIET COMMUNISM.

AT THIS POINT LIU DECLARED THAT CHINA NEEDED ECONOMIC DEVELOP-MENT UNDER A DEMOCRACY WITH CAPITALISTIC INCENTIVE, AND THE PARTY ITSELF WOULD BE THE FIRST TO OPPOSE POLITICAL OR ECONOMIC COMMUNISM ANYWHERE IN CHINA.

"MAKE NO MISTAKE," LIU ADDED, "THE MAIN COMMUNIST PHILOSOP Y IS MARXISM, BUT IT IS BEING APPLIED TO INTERPRET CURRENT CHINESE PROBLEMS RATHER THAN AS A GOVERNMENTAL SYSTEM."

BENNETT SAID THE EXPERIENCE AND PECULIAR KNOWLEDGE OF NOVEL JAPANESE JUNGLE TACTICS HE HAD ACQUIRED IN MALAYA WOULD HAVE BEEN OF THE UTMOST VALUE TO AUSTRALIA.

ASKED, DURING HIS TESTIMONY IN THE WITNESS BOX, WHETHER HE WAS THINKING OF HIMSELF OR HIS COUNTRY WHEN HE ESCAPED, BENNETT REPLIED, "WE ESTIMATED ON THE TRIP THAT IT WAS A 100-TO-ONE CHANCE WE WOULD GET THROUGH."

BENNETT TOLD THE COURT THAT, ALTHOUGH HE HAD CONSIDERED ESCAPE LONG BEFORE THE "CEASE FIRE" WAS ORDERED, IT WAS NOT UNTIL A FEW MINUTES BEFORE THE ORDER THAT "I FINALLY CRYSTALLISED MY DECISION TO ESCAPE". HE SAID THAT ON HIS RETURN TO AUSTRALIA HE PREPARED THE FIRST ARMY TEXT BOOKS ON JUNGLE TACTICS AND TRAINED TROOPS IN JUNGLE WARFARE.

THOSE TACTICS, HE SAID, WERE FIRST EMPLOYED ON THE KOKODA TRAIL IN NEW GUINEA, WHERE THE JAPANESE WERE FORCED TO RETREAT FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE PACIFIC WAR.

Yamashita Guilty; Sentenced to Death For Jap Atrocities

GENERAL IS FIRST JAP WAR LEADER TO BE CONVICTED

Army Military Court Orders Hanging as Penalty for Atrocities.

DENIAL OVERRULED

Manila Trial Verdict Condemns Yamashita for Condoning Cruelties.

MANILA, Friday, Dec. 7.—(AP) Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, Japanese commander in the Philippines, today was convicted of condoning atrocities by his troops and sentenced to death by hanging.

Maj. Gen. Russell B. Reynolds, president of the five-general military court which tried Yamashita, read the verdict.

Nearly 200 prosecution witnesses in three weeks of testimony related story after story of mass horrors—rape, cremation alive in flaming gasoline and other atrocities—committed by Yamashita's troops.

Yamashita never once was accused of personally having harmed anyone, nor of having witnessed any of the uncounted brutalities charged to troops of his command.

Never Prevented Atrocities

He was accused, however, by witnesses who were close to him, of never once having lifted a finger to prevent atrocities.

Yamashita was the first of the top Japanese accused as war criminals to be tried.

In his own behalf, Yamashita denied that he even knew of such atrocities as he heard described daily in the courtroom. His defense was that he was too busy trying futilely to defend the Philippines to know what was going on in prisoner of war or internment camps, or in Manila itself as that city became a battleground.

He also contended that he was only indirectly responsible as commander, for he was subject to orders from Tokyo and from Count Terauchi, commander of the southern regions, which included Manila.

Horror Story Written Into Records of Trial

An epic of wholesale horror—the blood-chilling, monstrous story of Japanese lust and cruelty in the Philippines—was written into the records during the month-long war crimes trial of Lt. Gen. Tomoyuko Yamashita.

It was a story fantastic in the volume and variety of mass murder, rape and fiendish cruelty depicted. Yet not one of the long procession of prosecution witnesses pictured the defendant personally so much as twisting the arm of a Filipino or speaking harshly to a prisoner of war.

Precedent Breaking Trial

It was a precedent-breaking trial; for the prosecution at the outset announced it would not try to prove Yamashita himself had committed any atrocity, but that he had failed to prevent the brutal excesses of his troops.

It was blazing a new path in international law, for in previous wars top military leaders have not been held responsible for the crimes of individuals under their command.

The prosecution did call two witnesses who testified they had heard—or heard someone else who had heard—Yamashita confirming issuance of an order to "kill all Filipinos."

The defense attacked the credibility of both these witnesses on the ground that they themselves were awaiting trial and hoped to get immunity by accusing Yamashita.

Chief Prosecutor Maj. Robert M. Kerr based his demand for a guilty verdict on the contention that Yamashita failed to prevent atrocities because he "did not care" what his subordinates did.

Defense counsel, led by Col Harry E. Clarke, maintained that the five-general American military commission had no legal right to try Yamashita; that he should be tried, if at all, by Philippines civilian courts.

Clarke and his colleagues repeatedly protested that no connection was being shown between Yamashita and the atrocities depicted by witnesses. The commission, however, rejected every challenge of its jurisdiction and regularly overruled defense objections.

Yamashita's petition to the Philippines Supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus taking him out of the jurisdiction of the military commission was rejected by the commonwealth's high tribunal Nov. 28. His attorneys then petitioned the United States Supreme court to halt the trial here and transfer Yamashita to Washington for a hearing Indications in Washington were that this move also would fail.

In his final plea to the commission for a verdict of acquittal Clarke urged the five generals to uphold the "concepts and standards of American justice, the keystone of American democracy, by returning a finding of not guilty.'

Courtroom Stunned

The picture drawn by prosecution witnesses of Japanese atrocities in the Philippines left the crowded courtroom stunned. Much was told by survivors still bearing the marks of brutal treatment on their bodies. Some of them who had lost fathers, mothers, wives, husbands or children in a mass butchery of civilians wept as they testified. Several became hysterical and frantically cursed Yamashita.

ATOMIC BOMB CURB FORCED ON JAPAN

BRINES

Potential War Minerals Are Placed on Banned List; Konoye Arrested.

TOKYO, Friday, Dec. 7—(AP) General MacArthur today took steps to make certain that Japan—the country that shuddered under two atomic bombs—never can develop an atomic bomb of its own.

The action came only a few hours after MacArthur had ordered the arrest of two of Emperor Hirohito's most trusted advisers—Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Marquis Koichi Kido—and seven other top criminal suspects.

Minerals to Be Taken

MacArthur's headquarters announced in its newest order that every mineral resource which might permit creation of an atom bomb will be taken from Japan, even if it means shipping such minerals out of the country. Wherever possible, mining of such minerals will be banned absolutely.

Under direction of Lt. Col. H. G. Schenck, director of MacArthur's natural resources section, every potential war mineral is being studied for a place on the ban list. All mining will be limited to peacetime needs and research for war will be outlawed. A staff of civilian scientists already is undertaking an exhaustive study.

More than 5,000,000 soldiers and sailors have been demobilized, and just to assure they never make more trouble, occupation officials are making certain they do not get key jobs where they might build up militarism.

Seven Others Seized

Ordered arrested with Konoye and Kido were seven other top military and civilian war mongers.

Konoye, three times premier, member of the royal family and vice premier of the surrender cabinet, had been writing a new Japanese constitution and preening himself for a re-entry into politics.

Kido, maker of premiers such as Hideki Tojo, confidant of the emperor throughout the war, was keeper of the privy seal until that position recently was abolished.

General MacArthur also ordered the arrest of seven others, reaching into Japan's highest military and civilian circles just as he did Sunday when he posted a list of 59 wanted Japanese.

The impact of this mounting toll of Japan's suspected war makers was falling heavily upon the cabinet of Premier Kijuro Shidehara, threatening its life.

Shidehara appearing before the Diet said his government was in no position to criticize the Allied orders, nor could he say who might be named next.

Arrest Sought by China

China had been reported clamoring for the arrest of Konoye, because the first time he was premier, from June 1937 to January 1939, Japan marched into China.

When Konoye was premier from July, 1940 to July 17, 1941, Japan signed the fateful tripartite pact with Germany and Italy, aligning the nation formally with the aggressors of the world.

Journalist Listed Again

The other seven ordered arrested were:

Vice Admiral Takuo Godo, former Cabinet member and unofficial envoy to Germany.

Taketora Ogata, prominent Japanese journalist, secretary of the surrender Cabinet who was on MacArthur's first wanted list but later removed.

Count Tadamasu Sakai, member of the House of Peers.

Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, instigator of the tripartite pact as Ambassador to Berlin.

Shigeo Odate, politician and economist.

Viscount Masatoshi Okochi, industriallist.

Yakichiro Suma, former councillor of the embassy in Washington.

The Communist party announced it would release at mass rallies tomorrow its list of 1,000 alleged Japanese war criminals headed by the Emperor and the Empress, Kyodo reported.

Konoye, Kido, 7 Others Put On

Crimes List

SPENCER

Tokyo, Dec. 6 (AP)—Two powerful political figures whom many of the Japanese themselves consider among their top war criminals—Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Marquis Koichi Kido—were ordered arrested as war crimes suspects by General MacArthur today.

Seven other men whose activities date back to the imperialistic preludes of the Pacific war were also listed as wanted.

Konoye, the dashing Prince who served as one of Japan's most-prized "front men" had been Premier three times. Kido, a small, shrewd wheedler, served as Emperor Hirohito's right-hand man throughout the war.

Communists List Criminals

Jittery Tokyo received another shock before it had recovered from MacArthur's announcement. Japanese Communists announced that they would release Saturday a anese Communists announced a list of 1,000 asserted Japanese war criminals, including the Emperor and Empress.

In the Diet, Premier Kijuro Shidehara declared that his Government was in no position to criticize the Allied lists. He said he had no information on how many persons the occupation authorities intended to indict or try.

Kyodo news agency said that Shidehara's cabinet had received a serious blow when it failed to obtain an Allied reprieve for Prince Morisama Nashimoto, who was named as a war crimes suspect several days ago. Rumors are circulating that the Cabinet will be forced to resign at the end of the Diet session, Kyodo reported.

Godo, Odate, Ogata Named

Reaching into the highest circles the supreme Allied commander named as the other seven wanted:

Vice Admiral Takuo Godo, who was unofficial envoy to Germany to present Japan's side of the China incident, also former Cabinet member.

Shigeo Odate, long-time politico-economist.

Taketoro Ogata, vice president of the Tokyo newspaper Asahi and a foremost Japanese journalist.

Viscount Masatoshi Okochi, industrialist.

Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, who had been Japanese Ambassador to Berlin since 1938 and arrived in Japan only today.

Count Tadamasu Sakai, member of the House of Peers.

Yakichiro Suma, long-time diplomat, formerly councilor of the Japanese Embassy in Washington.

Konoye Much Talked About

Konoye, who was Premier at the time of the China incident and held the post the last time just before Pearl Harbor, when he was succeeded by Hideki Tojo, has been one of the most talked about men in postwar Japan. Recently he had been reported active in revision of the constitution and had asserted he was doing the work at the request of MacArthur although MacArthur denied this.

He is a member of the Japanese royal family.

Kido, who held the recently abolished post of Keeper of the Privy Seal, was Emperor Hirohito's closest adviser and had helped elevate to office such premiers as Tojo.

Follows Earlier List

The new arrest order came only a few days after Japan had been deeply shaken by another list of war criminal suspects which included high Japanese financial, military and political leaders, including Prince Morisama Nashimoto.

Kido, who held the recently abolished position of Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, was one of the closest advisers to the Emperor.

Konoye, who was Premier just before the start of the Pacific war, also held that post during the China war.

Konoye had as his war minister Hideki Tojo, who now is held as the number one war criminal suspect. Konoye's third Cabinet was succeeded by one headed by Tojo.

The arrest order reached into the propaganda field with orders for the apprehension of Admirals Godo and Ogata. Godo's specialty before and during the war was propaganda. Ogata, who was former Premier Higashi Kuni's Cabinet secretary, headed the Cabinet Board of Information, a recognized wartime propaganda agency.

Oshima, as Ambassador to Germany, generally was considered one of the instigators of the tripartite pact.

Godo retired from naval service fifteen years ago and since then has been active in business and government.

Kido is the son of Marquis Takamasa Kido and grandson of the restoration leader Koin Kido, upon whom the title was first bestowed. He held such posts as Secretary of the Fisheries Bureau, chief of the industrial section of the Agriculture and Commerce Ministry, chief secretary to the Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, and director of the peerage bureau of the Imperial Household Ministry.

Kido's Record

Kido served as Minister of Education from November, 1937, to May, 1938. In January, 1938, he took over as Welfare Minister and held the post until the fall of the first Konoye Cabinet in January, 1939, when Keichiro Hiranuma made him Home Minister. In June, 1940, the Emperor appointed him Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, a position he held until he was abolished last month.

Okochi was an adviser to the Tojo Cabinet from March, 1943, to July, 1944, and was councilor of the Board of Technology in 1944.

Oshima Envoy To Reich

Oshima, military attaché to Germany in 1936, became Ambassador to Germany in 1938 and retained the post throughout the war. Before the fall of Berlin he was evacuated to Badgastein, Bavaria, with his staff. Later he was taken to the United States and interned. He arrived in Tokyo only today.

Sakai, a member of the House of Peers in 1923, was Minister of Agriculture and Forestry in the Cabinet in 1939-40. He became chairman of the Imperial Agriculture Association in 1940, was director of the Imperial Rules Assistance Association from 1942 to 1944, and vice president of the House of Peers in October, 1944.

Suma In Many Posts

Suma had held a long list of important Foreign Office posts since 1923, when he was appointed secretary to the embassies in England and Germany. After holding various posts in China, Suma was made councilor of the embassy at Chungchun, Manchuria, in 1939 and became director of the Foreign Office information bureau later in the year. From 1940 to 1945 he was Minister to Spain.

The House of Peers, which had six of its members on the last list of suspects, had been asking itself who would be next. The answer which came today was certain to deliver a second heavy blow, for the austere upper house had been badly shaken when the previous list was made public.

PROGRAM DRAWN TO STRIP JAPAN

Pauley Recommends Industrial Equipment Be Seized to Prevent Another War.

FALON

TOKYO, Dec. 6.—(AP) Edwin W. Pauley, U. S. reparations commissioner, recommended today that Japan be stripped of all assets abroad, virtually all chemical, steel and shipbuilding capacity and half her electric power and machine tool industries.

NIGHT

Pauley said in a formal statement that he was recommending this course to President Truman to destroy any possibility of Japan ever waging war again and to reimburse the countries she victimized.

"Equipment built up in Japan during the past generation consisted of plants for the purpose of waging wars of aggression," Pauley said, and "despite all wartime destruction," there still is more than twice as much in usable condition as when Japan started her aggressive course in Manchuria 14 years ago.

"That surplus must be taken out," he declared.

Treasure to Be Seized

These industrial facilities would be shipped to other countries, along with all Japanese capacity for producing many specified light metals, while all the nation's gold and precious metals would be sent to the San Francisco mint to be held pending decision on its disposal.

Equipment used solely for making arms and ammunition "will be destroyed," Pauley stated flatly.

Previously Pauley had indicated that while Japan's industrial equipment would not be desirable in the United States it would be welcome in China and the Philippines.

His formal recommendations today were made, he noted, on the fourth anniversary of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor.

Demilitarization of Japan by removal of her surplus production potential, Pauley explained, "will not mean complete deindustrialization."

Will Aid Rest of Asia

On the contrary, he asserted, its removal, especially to other Asiatic countries, "will help to raise their living standards without depressing the standards of Japan—since only excess capacities are in question. I want to be emphatic on that point.

"Lowered standards in Japan are primarily a question of political and administrative disorganization naturally resulting from a thoroughly deserved military defeat. It is up to the Japanese to elect themselves a government which will clean up that part of the mess."

As an initial step in his plan to remove all war production potentialities, Pauley said he was recommending to Truman an interim program of removals to be started as soon as the "where, when and how" of shipments can be determined by Allied supervisors.

These interim shipments, he explained, probably will be below the total sum which Allied governments eventually will allocate as reparations. Interim removals, he added, should eliminate all doubts on the subject of Allied policy, and set the pattern for implementing action later.

Possessions of the Zaibatsu—Japan's monopolistic family industrial combines which are in process of dissolution—should be the first taken away, Pauley said.

Steel Production to be Cut

His program would reduce Japanese steel production from more than 11,000,000 annual tons to 2,500,000, estimated to be ample for civilian needs; would remove everything from 20 shipyards except what is necessary "for the repair of shipping essential to the occupation"; and would cut light metal industries down to processing of scrap already available.

Twenty of Japan's 41 modern caustic acid plants and the most modern of its four large Solvay soda ash plants would be removed along with all coal-burning electric generating plants except those needed as stand-by substitutes for hydroelectric plants.

Recommendations for confiscation of assets called for depriving Japanese, including the government, the Emperor and the Imperial household, of all holdings outside Japan's home islands.

"All Japanese financial and economic penetration of other countries must be wiped out," Pauley said.

In announcing his program to newsmen, Pauley remarked that it was based on observations by myself and my staff."

"Because Japan surrendered without a last-ditch stand," he said, "Many people assumed that she now is helpless industrially. The appearance of many of her bombed cities encourages this easy view.

"But the fact is, Japan's industrial equipment was designed overwhelmingly for war, and despite all wartime destruction Japan still retains in workable condition more plants and equipment than its rulers ever allowed to be used for civilian supply and consumption, even in peaceful years.

"In steel, machine tools and other machinery made from steel, Japan's own figures show she still has in workable condition more than twice the facilities she had when she invaded Manchuria in 1931."

Japs Suspected We Had Broken Code

Tokyo, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Japanese suspected that the United States had deciphered Japan's military code after Admiral Isoruku Yamamoto's plane was shot down on the "milk run" between Rabaul and Bougainville April 18, 1942, a Japanese naval officer said today.

Capt. Toshikazu Chmae, former senior staff officer of the Japanese Southeastern Area Fleet, also disclosed that Vice-Adm. Matomei Ugaki, chief of staff, and other flag officers survived the strafing, in which United States Capt. Thomas Lanphier killed Yamamoto. He said Ugaki was wounded but recovered.

'Scrapped' Naval Guns Found On Jap Islands

Sasebo, Japan, Friday, Dec. 7 (AP). American Marines have discovered on the little islands of Kamino and Shimono off the coast of Kyusu guns they believe Japan had agreed to scrap under terms of the 1922 Washington disarmament agreement.

Fifth Division units found two 40-cm. cannons—equivalent of United States battleships' 16-inch guns—and two 30-cm. guns, equal to 12-inchers.

The two 30-cm. weapons were believed taken from the scrapped Japanese battleship Settsu. They were to have been destroyed along with the ship.

CENSURE MOTION DEFEATED EASILY BY LABOR PARTY

WHEELER

LONDON, Dec. 6—(AP) By a 381-to-197 vote, the House of Commons tonight rejected a Conservative party motion of censure after a two-day debate in which Winston Churchill charged that the Labor government was leading Britain "day to day nearer disaster."

Prime Minister Clement Attlee clashed with Churchill in the closing hours of the debate denying the Conservative leader's charges that the Labor government had "fettered and hobbled" industry and enterprise, and impeded the nation's reconversion and demobilization.

Churchill Offers Motion

Churchill had introduced the censure motion, which from the start had seemed certain of defeat by the predominantly Labor house.

Attlee declared during debate: "This vote of censure seems more to be a vote of censure against the electors. It seems to be a terrible shock that a government should come in, which was prepared to carry out its policies."

Stating that British reconversion lagged at 43 percent at the end of September while American reconversion then had reached 92 percent, Churchill claimed that industry and enterprise were "fettered and hobbled at every step by an ever-spreading network of controls and regulations."

(President Truman told a press conference Nov. 29 that the job of reconverting plants was virtually completed with 93 percent of all plants being cleared for peace work in 60 days or less after request.)

Churchill said the Labor government had kept men and women in the armed forces "doing nothing, or toiling at artificially-invented work," he asserted.

"It is certainly an astounding fact that at the end of this year we will be employing 670,000 more workers, making obsolete weapons to add to enormous dumps, than in 1939."

Churchill described the motion for censure as a "spur" which should be applied to a government which "after having held out enormous expectation, have produced so meagre and disappointing results,results which lead day to day nearer disaster."

Attlee, in answer, said a certain amount of munitions making had to go on, and that his government was pursuing the demobilization plans advocated by Churchill himself. He added that no less than 80 new factories were being built for peacetime production.

He said 100,000 men a week were being released, and that 1,500,000 will have been discharged by Jan. 1.

Striking at the opposition's denunciation of the nationalization program, Attlee declared that Laborites have "stood for a nationalization program for 40 years or more, and even members opposite might have realized by now that when we got a majority we would naturally bring nationalization. We put it clearly in the King's speeches that we intended to nationalize certain industries."

Churchill Argues Attlee Bungles Conversion

London, Dec. 6 (AP)—Winston Churchill charged the Laborite Government with "confidence-killing" policies today in debate with Clement R. Attlee, his successor as Prime Minister, on the Conservative party's move to censure the new regime.

Accusing the Laborites of bungling revival of industry, housing and demobilization with Socialist projects, Churchill declared for the first time that he would have sought to form a new coalition government for postwar unity if he had been re-elected.

Attlee, confident that his strong Labor majority in Commons would smother the Conservative censure motion, denied Churchill's charge that reconversion was proceeding at a sluggish rate.

Complaint Analyzed

Churchill's complaint against Socialist policies, Attlee added, sounded as if he meant: "Why, when you were elected to carry out a Socialist program, did you not carry out a Conservative program?"

The Conservative leader charged that the Laborities were keeping thousands in the army and navy "doing nothing." Attleee said he was following the demobilization program previously advocated oy Churchill and discharging 100,000 men and women a week.

Gains Lost, He Says

Opening his attack, Churchill declared he was remaining in politics because "I think it my duty to try to prevent the great position which we won in the war from being cast away by folly."

On the second day of debate on his motion of censure, Churchill declared the Labor Government was "deliberately encouraging partisan and factional interests at the cost not only of national unity but of our recovery and our vital interests."

"There has never been a government which set out to revive our prosperity on such a confidence-killing, impulse-sapping theory as this," Churchill said.

Doing Nothing, He Says

Ripping into Laborite opponents with his old vigor, Churchill castigated Attlee's housing and export policies.

Churchill declared that the Government was keeping large numbers of men and women in the armed forces "doing nothing or toiling at artificially-invented work" and added:

"It certainly is an astounding fact that at the end of this year we are employing 670,000 more workers making obsolete weapons to add to already enormous dumps than in the summer of 1939."

The former Prime Minister accused the Labor Government of spreading "doubt and dismay" in the building-material industry with proposals of Government competition.

Then jabbing at Sir Stafford Cripps, advocate of austerity at home to build exports abroad, Churchill said Cripps's activity as president of the Board of Trade "has not only been a disappointment to his friends but disaster to us all."

ATTLEE NOTES POINTS ON LOAN

Tariff Preference Question Emphasized In Commons

London, Dec. 6 (AP)—Prime Minister Attlee told Commons tonight that the British Government was willing to reduce or eliminate Empire preferences provided there was "adequate compensation" in the form of reduced tariffs and general improvement of world trading conditions.

Addressing the House on the terms of the $4,400,000,000 loan to Britain by the United States, the Prime Minister emphasized "points to be noted," including the "question of tariff preference." This, he said, "is of especial interest and importance to the British Commonwealth and Empire."

British Contributions

"The American document," Attlee said, "sets forth the procedure to be followed by common consent in considering in context a general lowering of tariffs and other trade barriers, what contributions can be made from our side by way of reduction or elimination of preferences.

"We for our part are ready to agree that the existing system of preferences within the British Commonwealth and Empire will be contracted, provided there is adequate compensation in the form of improvement in trading conditions between the Commonwealth and Empire countries and the rest of the world."

Fundamental Fact Noted

The document, Attlee said, recognizes this fundamental fact: That "it is essential to clear the obstacles to our exports of manufactured goods without abandoning the right to control our imports, so long as this is essential to our balance of international trade."

Attlee said that in negotiations for reduction of tariffs the "parties concerned will not refuse to discuss modification of particular preferences on the ground these are subject of prior commitments."

"On the contrary," he asserted, "all margins of preference will be regarded as open to negotiation.

"It is recognized that reduction or elimination of preferences can only be considered in relation to and in return for reduction of tariffs and other barriers to world trade in general."

Looks To Summer Conference

Attlee said it was "hoped that at an international conference" which is proposed for next summer "these negotiations will be completed on a full international basis and an international trade organization can be brought into being."

A full dress debate on the loan which must be ratified by Congress and Parliament will be held in Commons next week with the emphasis on the implied adherence by Britain to the gold standard.

Commenting on the loan, Harry Pollitt, general secretary of the Communist party in Britain, said it was a "terribly hard bargain" and that Britain would have found a "better response" if she had appealed to Russia.

Britain's 1946 Deficit May Be $3,000,000,000

London, Dec. 6 (AP)—Britain's deficit of gold and dollar reserves for 1946 may reach £750,000,000 ($3,000,000,000) although money spent by the American armed forces has helped build up the reserves from the 1941 low level, a White Paper revealed tonight.

The Government paper said the deficit might be increased by £500,000,000 ($2,000,000,000) for 1947 and 1948 plus "a more modest deficiency" for 1949 and 1950.

Although gold and dollar reserves fell to £3,000,000 ($12,000,000) in 1941, the paper said, they had been built up "largely because of the pay of United States forces in the sterling area brought considerable dollar sums into the country." The sterling area includes the Empire and Commonwealth countries and Iran, Iraq and Egypt.

Current reserves are below prewar level and "manifestly inadequate in relation to the immediate needs of the United Kingdom itself and to the problem of releasing accumulated sterling balances."

During the year British export trade shrank to less than one third of its prewar volume, the governmental paper said, and "may be expected to cover in 1946 not more than one half of the essential expenditure of the country on the purchase of a minimum volume of imports and other necessary payments overseas."

Redeployment Timetable

PARIS, Dec. 6 (AP).—The first elements of the 89th Infantry Division will sail for home from Le Havre tomorrow, United States Army redeployment authorities announced today.

Ten thousand members of the 89th are in Le Havre and will go home directly from there, while the remaining 5,000 are being shuttled via the United Kingdom.

The box score on other units redeploying from Europe:

75th Infantry Division—First elements at home.

79th Infantry and 13th Armored Divisions—On the high seas.

26th Infantry Division—Now arriving in the Calais staging area near Marseille.

90th Infantry Division—Now in Calais staging area.

82d Air-Borne Division—Scheduled to arrive at Le Havre between Dec. 12 and Dec. 19. The advance elements are to sail directly for the United States and others are to shuttle to the United Kingdom.

16th Corps—Now in the Le Havre staging area.

36th Infantry Division—First elements on the high seas and the remainder in the Calais staging area.

Alerted for shipment home but not yet moved to redeployment centers are the 29th, 100th, 84th, 80th and 94th Infantry Divisions, the 2d Armored Division and the 22d Corps Headquarters.

RAEDER PLANNED NORWAY INVASION

Nazi Admiral Wanted Bases for Atlantic U-Boat Fleet.

NORGAARD

NUERNBERG, Dec. 6 — (AP) Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, seeking U-boat bases, planned the invasion of Norway from the moment the war started in 1939, and with Dr. Alfred Rosenberg easily sold Adolf Hitler the idea, the Nazis' own official records disclosed today.

A story of cold-blooded treachery against the Norwegian government, which was lulled by German assurances of good will, was unfolded before the International military tribunal by the British prosecutors.

War Delayed Seven Days

Earlier the British introduced a statement of Hermann Goering in which the Reichsmarshal said that the British pledge to aid Poland in the event of hostilities delayed the start of the war for seven days, while Hitler sought to keep the British neutral.

Texts of pleas for peace or negotiations from President Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, French Premier Eduard Daladier and Pope Pius XII, which the Fuehrer rejected in the three weeks before launching his attack on Poland, were submitted as the British sought to give the full story of Hitler's decision to go to war.

The British also introduced the minutes of the August 12, 1939, meeting, between Hitler and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, in which Mussolini's son-in-law indicated almost child-like surprise at Hitler's announcement that he planned to strike at Poland.

Italy Unprepared

Ciano claimed his country was unprepared for the general European war that would result. Other documents disclosed that Mussolini had pleaded with Hitler for an armistice 24 hours after the Germans drove into Poland but the plea met with a cold reception from a hot-for-war Hitler.

A Wehrmacht directive dated April 3, 1939, showed the German army had been ordered to be ready for the Polish invasion "at any time from Sept. 1, 1939, onwards."

For the first time in the trial Raeder and Rosenberg heard themselves portrayed as the evil geniuses who actually talked Hitler into betraying Norway.

A grim frown creased the stolid visage of Raeder, who had taken the pose of an old sea dog who only did his duty for his country, when the prosecution read from an official German war diary showing Raeder had demanded from the Nazi naval war staff a report on gaining bases in Norway.

The demand was made on Oct. 3, 1939, only a month after Great Britain and France had entered the war. Raeder was then chief of the naval staff.

Apparently Raeder intended that the Russo-German non-aggression pact then in effect be utilized to its utmost, for the entry read "it must be ascertained whether it is possible to gain bases in Norway under the combined pressure of Russia and Germany."

Negotiations With Quisling

The prosecution asserted, however, that the groundwork for the betrayal of Norway had been laid well in advance by Rosenberg and his foreign affairs bureau of the Nazi party—a supersponsor of fifth-column activities which had been working quietly for years among the Scandinavians after Hitler came to power.

During the winter of 1938-39 Rosenberg and his organization found the tool they needed—Vidkun Quisling, who later began a series of visits to Berlin.

A naval war plan signed by Admiral Karl Doenitz, another of the defendants, showed he wrote on October 9, 1939, that he favored establishing a submarine base at Trondheim with a possibility of a second base at Narvik.

The Nazis, aided by Quisling's fifth column, invaded Norway April 9, 1940. Quisling was executed last October 24.

Britain's Stand Put Off War: Goering

Nuernberg, Dec. 6 (AP)—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, newly designated commander of United States forces in Europe, declared today that he was in "full agreement" with the principle of trying German military leaders on charges of conspiracy to launch aggressive war.

Nuernberg, Dec. 6 (AP)—Britain's pledge to aid Poland in the event of hostilities delayed the start of World War II seven days as Hitler unsuccessfully tried to keep Britain neutral, according to a statement by Hermann Goering filed at the war-crime trial today.

Allied prosecutors filed the statement with the international military tribunal. Goering, one of the twenty Nazi leaders on trial, said Hitler originally had planned to invade Poland August 25, 1939, but held up his attack until September 1, while his diplomats sparred to try to "eliminate British intervention."

"In Contact With Halifax"

The Goering statement said Britain's signing of the Polish Assistance Pact on August 25 made Hitler pause. Goering added that he had been in secret contact with Lord Halifax, then British Foreign Minister, "to do everything to stop war with England."

Describing Hitler's last-minute efforts to keep Britain out of the war, Col. Merwyn Griffith-Jones, assistant British prosecutor, described the diplomatic maneuvering as "a bogus offer of negotiation intended simply to bribe or otherwise keep England from assisting Poland."

Hitler Phone Call

"On the day when England gave her official guarantee to Poland the Führer called me on the telephone and told me he had stopped the planned invasion of Poland," Goering said in his statement, which was given to Col. John H. Amen, of New York, an assistant United States prosecutor.

"I asked him then whether this was just temporary, or for good," the Goering statement continued. "He said: 'No, I will have to see whether we can eliminate British intervention.'

"So then I asked him: 'Do you think it will be any different within four or five days?' "

At this point the court was recessed momentarily without further reading of the statement when Lord Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence, presiding, asked the marshal to investigate the odor of burning electrical wiring. It developed the odor came from a ventilator motor.

Earlier in the statement Goering said he was "in connection with Lord Halifax by special courier outside regular diplomatic channels to do everything to stop war with England."

"Is it not a fact that preparations for the campaign against Poland were originally supposed to have been completed by the end of August, 1939?" Amen asked, according to the transcript of the interrogation. Goering answered "Yes."

Appeal From Roosevelt

Giving the full story of Hitler's decision to go to war, the prosecution submitted the texts of pleas from President Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, French Premier Edouard Daladier and Pope Pius which the Führer rejected in the three weeks before he launched the attack on Poland.

Hitler's decision to strike in the fall of 1939 was made five months earlier, when he ordered the army to be ready to strike by September 1, 1939.

[The Goering statement indicated that Hitler had advanced the date a week in the interval.]

Raeder's Part Told

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, German naval commander and another of the defendants, was disclosed by one of his own memoranda introduced as evidence as taking a leading part in planning the occupation of Norway by introducing Vidkun Quisling to Hitler.

Raeder in a confidential memorandum said he had sold Hitler on the idea of occupying the Norwegian coast, had the Norwegian Nazi leader brought to Berlin and added:

"On the ground of the Führer's discussion with Quisling and Hagelin (William Hagelin, Minister of Internal Affairs in the Quisling Government after the Nazi occupation) on the afternoon of December 14, 1939, the Führer gave the order that preparations for the Norwegian operations were to be made by the supreme command of the armed forces."

Three weeks after Der Tag had been set, Hitler made a speech to the Reichstag on April 28 in which he shouted that he "had no thought of proceeding in any way against Poland," according to other documents introduced as evidence at the trial of 20 top Nazis accused of war crimes.

Germany's Axis partner, Italy, was not let in on the plan to invade Poland, until August 12, 1939, and Mussolini made an urgent but fruitless request for Hitler to postpone the war for, two or three years to permit Italian rearmament to progress, other documents showed.

Letter Shows Aid by Funk

NUREMBERG, Germany, Dec. 6 (AP)—The name of defendant Walther Funk (former Reichsbank President) was brought into the trial today for the first time with the submission of a letter from Funk to Hitler in which the former told of ways in which the Reichsbank had prepared for war, and had put the Nazis "in a position to cope with all demands on finance and economy without any serious shocks."

JACKSON DEPLORES NUERNBERG RECESS

NUERNBERG, Dec. 6—(AP) Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief U. S. prosecutor at the war crimes trial, deplored the Dec. 20 to Jan. 2 Christmas recess announced by the court today, and said the United States case now would have to be revised and shortened.

Over-ruling American objections, Lord Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence, presiding judge, said "there must be a recess sometime in a trial of this length and complexity," and that "it seems best that it should come at Christmas." Lawrence said defense lawyers had asked for a three-week recess for further preparation of their case.

Jackson termed the long holiday recess a disappointment, but said it was a tribunal decision to be accepted "in good sportsmanship."

"With support of the Soviet delegation," said Jackson, "I suggested that a recess be taken only on Christmas day . . . We are particularly opposed to the contention that defendants at this stage of the prosecution's case were entitled to a recess."

Since the recess has been set, Jackson said, it might be possible to release some of the American staff personnel and get them home before Christmas, but he appealed "to those who can not be spared to stand by their posts. The honor of our country is involved in completely doing our share in this case.

"We will so far as possible rearrange the case, even at the expense of orderly presentation, in order to advance those parts of the case which will release the maximum number of personnel."

Trial of German Officers Backed By McNarney

He Sides With Jackson on Nuernberg Policy; Urges Central Rule for Nation

NUERNBERG, Dec. 6 (AP).—General Joseph T. McNarney, successor to General Dwight D. Eisenhower as commander of American forces in Europe, declared today he was in "full agreement" with the principle of trying German military leaders on charges of conspiracy to launch aggressive war.

General McNarney, asked to comment on "The Army and Navy Journal's" charge that placing of German military leaders on trial was discrediting the profession of soldiering, said he sided with Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief American prosecutor, in holding military leaders as well as politicians responsible for conspiracy in planning aggression.

The American Army European chief visited the courtroom today. He is the highest ranking Allied officer to attend the trial thus far.

Commenting on the divided control of occupied Germany, McNarney declared that a "central government in Germany is necessary." He said, however, that he had received no directive from Washington to form a centralized, tripartite government body with the British and Russians. France, the fourth occupying power, has resisted suggestions that administration of the four zones be centralized.

McNarney added that he did not think it would be physically possible for the Army to meet President Truman's proposal to set up administration of the American-occupied German zone on a civilian basis by June 1, 1946.

Forced To Hang 800, Nazi Tells U.S. Court

Dachau, Germany, Dec. 6 (AP)—Hangman Emil Erwin Mahl today told the United States Military Court trying Dachau concentration camp personnel on war crimes charges that he was compelled to adjust nooses about the necks of between 800 and 1,000 prisoners.

Mahl, one of the defendants, declared that he was a prisoner and was forced to act as hangman.

"As a walking corpse myself," he said, "I had to do horrible things here. My soul was ruined by what I had to do."

DEC 7 1945

Christmas Season Opened By Germans

Berlin, Dec. 6 (AP)—Amid chill and shortages, Germans opened the Christmas season today with the celebration of St. Nikolaus Day, an overture to Christmas on which children put their shoes outside the bedroom doors for parents to fill with sweets and fruits.

A commentary on the postwar observance was a Berliner Zeitung cartoon showing a parent approaching a door and finding a pair of shoes there chained and locked. The caption read: "Safety first on St. Nikolaus Day."

The Christmas mart will open Saturday at the Lustgarten near the bomb-blasted Hohenzollern castle. There will be a children's fair and concessions for the sale of small toys.

The first Christmas trees arrived in the city today. Between 70,000 and 100,000 have been promised Berlin from the Soviet zone and another 10,000 from the British-occupied zone.

Siegfried Line To Be Destroyed

Berlin, Dec. 6 (AP)—A quadripartite co-ordinating committee, acting on behalf of the Allied Control Commission, said today that the Siegfried Line and all other military installations, above and underground, will be destroyed to strip Germany of land defenses.

4 Nazi Industrialists Held

British Seizures Bring Bag of Steel Leaders in Ruhr to 80

ISERLOHN, Germany, Dec. 6 (AP).—Four more German industrialists have been arrested in the Ruhr by British security police, bringing the total bag of steel leaders to eighty. The heavy-industry czars were sent to an internment camp in the British zone for interrogation.

The latest to be arrested in the roundup which started last Friday were Dr. Robert Rottman, manager of the Stahl Union Export, of Duesseldorf; Wilhelm Janaschek, managing director of Huttenwerke Siegerland, of Siegen; Kurt Schmitz, chairman of Ruhrstahl at Witten, and Wilhelm Steinberg, official of the Vereinigte Stahlwerke of Duesseldorf.

Three Church Leaders End Study In Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 6 (AP). Three representatives of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America left Frankfurt tonight after studying conditions in Germany and indicating they would make recommendations to President Truman.

Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, president of the council; Episcopal Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill, of Massachusetts, and Dr. Franklin Fry, president of the United Lutheran Church in America, conferred with both Protestant and Catholic leaders in Germany as well as military government officials. They said they could make no comment on their impressions until they had made a formal report to their organization. They expect to be in the United States within a week.

Czechs Held in Plot on Benes

PRAGUE, Dec. 6 (AP)—Security police announced today a number of arrests during investigation of what they said was an attempt to assassinate President Eduard Benes in Ziliha last May. Three Czech youths are listed among those apprehended. The police charged the youths had been trained in sabotage by the Germans.

ARMY FINDS CAMP OF JEWS CROWDED

Holds, However, Inmates and Some UNRRA Officials Responsible for Conditions

LANDSBERG, Germany, Dec. 6 (AP)—High-ranking United States Army officials, investigating the displaced persons camp here, today found 6,200 homeless Jews jammed into a space designed for 4,200, with many living in filthy conditions. They placed much of the blame on the Jews themselves as well as on United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration officials operating the camp.

The inspection group was headed by Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, United States Chief of Staff in the European theatre; Lieut. Gen. Lucien K. Truscott, United States Third Army commander; Maj. Gen Albert W. Kenner, surgeon general for the European theatre, and Simon H. Rifkind, United States Army adviser on Jewish affairs.

Accompanied by a score of news correspondents, they came here by special train from Frankfort-on-the-Main through a snowstorm to investigate charges by Dr. Lee Srole, the camp's welfare officer, that the inmates were under-fed, ill-clothed, overcrowded in unfit quarters and menaced by the threat of a "disastrous epidemic."

After a day-long inspection, the Army officials asserted there was no imminent danger of an epidemic.

Unsanitary conditions in many of the barracks were appalling. Human defecation littered the floor of some of the rooms. When General Smith saw this, he turned to the UNRRA camp director, A. A. Glassgold of 222 West Twenty-third Street, New York, and said:

"I would be ashamed."

Later he told a committee of camp inmates that "you folks are not doing your part to keep the place sanitary."

General Smith also attributed much of the overcrowding to Jews who were slipping unauthorized into the United States zone from the British and Russian areas at the rate of nearly 3,000 weekly. Nearly 80 per cent of them are coming from Poland.

General Smith estimated that 90 per cent of the Jews repatriated to Poland were returning, with many bringing their relatives.

General Kenner said the food at the camp was adequate, though monotonous and too starchy. He said that he had found no evidence of malnutrition. He also said that he had found that the Jews were warmly clad, though short of undergarments. All quarters, he added, are sufficiently heated by stoves.

General Smith told the inmates' committee that the Army would seek additional housing, the lack of which he attributed partly to the UNRRA officials for their failure to make proper requisitions in writing.

Reports that many real deficiencies were caused by the inmates' trafficking in the black market with their supplies were discounted by both Army and UNRRA officials, although they admitted some black marketing had been going on.

Dr. Srole, who announced his resignation yesterday in making public his charges, said tonight that he had reconsidered and would remain on the job.

For the last month censors have been passing foreign correspondents' copy without deletions, although Soviet censorship machinery has never stopped functioning.

Outgoing Associated Press dispatches have had nothing censored since Nov. 6, although on Dec. 2 there was a delay of several hours before the censor passed a story saying the Soviet Union had turned down an American suggestion that Allied troops be withdrawn from Iran by Jan. 1.

Nahas Pasha Escapes Injury By Explosive

Cairo, Dec. 6 (AP)—Mustafa Nahas Pasha, five times Premier of Egypt and leader of the powerful opposition Wafdist party, narrowly escaped injury tonight when an explosive was hurled at his automobile.

Four women passengers, identified as civilian employes of British headquarters near by, were reported injured.

Nahas Pasha had just arrived at party headquarters, to make a speech on the occasion of the Arabic New Year, when the explosive was thrown. It made a small hole in the rear of his automobile.

He proceeded with his speech.

It was the second attempt on his life, the first having been in 1937.

Greece Seeking British Loan

ATHENS, Dec. 6 (AP).—An authoritative source said today Greece was seeking a loan of $46,800,000 from Great Britain and the release of part of her reserve funds now held by British banks with the intention of using the entire amount to help stabilize the drachma.

Rebels Blamed For 30 Killings In Azerbaijan

Premier Demands Freedom Of Movement For Iranians To 'Redress Grievances Of People'

Tehran, Dec. 6 (AP)—Rebels have killed 30 persons in new attacks in Azerbaijan province, official reports from Tabriz announced tonight, and Premier Ibrajim Hakimi demanded freedom of movement into the Soviet-occupied area for the Iranian Government to "redress the grievances of the people."

Insurrectionist Democrat party members attacked troop billets at Sarab, killing 21 gendarmes and two officers, the reports relayed by the Tabriz radio said.

Six other persons were reported killed near Marand, between Tabriz and the Russian frontier, and the police chief at Tabriz was killed in another clash, the radio said.

Police Chief Reported Slain

The local police chief and president of the local tribunal were slain in the Marand fighting, Tabriz reported.

[The Moscow radio said tonight in a broadcast heard in London that Persian soldiers garrisoned at Tabriz opened fire with machine guns on a crowd "taking part in a religious ceremony" and wounded four persons.

[The radio, quoting a Tass dispatch, said soldiers arrested "a few persons and beat them heavily" and added that "this unprecedented violence or Iranian military authorities in Tabriz evoked indignation among the population."

Bandar Shah Capture Reported

[Also broadcast by Moscow under the heading of "incidents in Tabriz" was a report that local military authorities were organizing "armed gangs to commit acts of terror and to fight against followers of the rebel movement in Iranian Azerbaijan." The radio said the gangs "receive uniforms of Iranian soldiers as well as arms and great amounts of money."]

In Tabriz itself, capital of troubled Azerbaijan province, insurrectionists tried to occupy the military garage, but were prevented by Governor Bayat, who just recently took the governorship at Tabriz, the broadcast said.

Additional advices received in the capital said the insurrectionists had captured the Caspian port of Bandar Shah, 130 miles northeast of Tehran, and had occupied Government buildings.

More Hurley-Connally Clashes

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said there was an "urgent need" for the Iranian Government to ask the United Nations Assembly in January to send a Russian-British-American commission to Iran to investigate conditions.

Elections were completed at Tabriz today for National Assembly posts, and a Democrat party announcement said 700 Democrats were elected.

Earlier, Hakimi charged that "only about 200 genuine rebels" were involved in the Azerbaijan uprising, and declared Iran "wants freedom of movement for the redress of the grievances of the people."

The Iranian government, blocked by the Russians from sending troops into Azerbaijan, insists that rebels there are trying to establish autonomy. Moscow newspapers have said police and large land owners had interfered with democratic mass meetings and elections, precipitating fighting. Tehran reports say the rebels have marched into two other provinces.

billets, the radio said. Six others were reported killed by the insurrectionists in the vicinity of Marandn midway between Tabriz and the Soviet frontier. Among the dead, it was said, were the local police chief and the president of the local tribunal.

Gov. Bayat, newly appointed to his post at Tabriz, prevented the insurrectionists from occupying the miilitary garage at Tabriz, but the police chief was slain, the broadcast reported.

Iran Head Denies He Will Quit

Tehran, Dec. 6 (AP) — Iranian Premier Ibrahim Hakimi said today that he had no intention of resigning and asserted his intention of continuing attempts to settle the problem of Azerbaijan province, where the Government charges separatists are agitating for independence.

Reports were widespread during the past week that the Premier would resign because of the situation in the northwest province, and that he would be succeeded by a Government that would favor the views of the Soviet Union, whose frontier borders Azerbaijan.

"The so-called Azerbaijan Assembly (created following a recent insurgent rising in the province) is completely illegal, and the Government will issue a statement shortly about it," the Premier told a press conference.

"Only 200 Rebels"

"To understand the real situation in northern Persia," he continued, "the world should know there are only about 200 genuine rebels. My Government wants freedom of movement for the redress of the grievances of the people. There are difficulties all over the country, especially in Azerbaijan, where there has been no governor general during the past seven months."

The Russians, who have been occupying the province since 1941, when troops were sent to guard the lend-lease supply route, halted Iranian troops which had been on the march toward the province to put down the reported rising. The Russians claimed the order was justified on grounds that "fighting and bloodshed would break out" if Iran Government troops entered the region.

Tehran, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Official radio reports from Tabriz tonight said thirty persons had been killed in new outbreaks in Russian-occupied Azerbaijan province.

Twenty-one gendarmes and two officers were reported slain at Sarab when rebel Democrat party members attacked troop

Arabs Oppose Joint Inquiry On Palestine

Criticize U. S.-British Plan; Assert Many Jews Desire to Leave the Holy Land

CAIRO, Dec. 6 (AP)—Abdel Rahman Azzam Bey, Secretary General of the Arab League, declared today that the league opposes a joint Anglo-American commission to investigate Palestine because it would be "inquiring into the same question" that has concerned other commissions in other parts of the world.

Pointing to Arab rights and Arab desires for self-determination, Azzam Bey asserted continued immigration of Jews into Palestine is "a persecution of the Arabs not less cruel than the lamented persecution of the Jews in other countries."

Azzam Bey gave the formal league answer to British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's Nov. 13 Palestine declaration disclosing the Anglo-American commission and calling for interim continuation of Jewish immigration at the mandate rate of 1,500 a month.

Asserting that "Nazi-Zionist terrorism" dominates Palestine, Azzam Bey asked if it would not be "more reasonable and just" to permit Jews who wish to leave Palestine to depart, rather than agree to "further Zionist immigration." He said many Jews in Palestine want to leave.

Exchange Of Population Agreement Is Reached

Prague, Dec. 6 (AP)—The Hungarian Government has agreed in principle to exchange some of its Slovak population for Hungarians whom Czechoslavakia wants to repatriate, Czech Deputy Prime Minister Vilemsiroki told a press conference today.

The exchange is subject to negotiation by Hungarian Foreign Minister Janos Gyongyosy, now here. Czechoslovakia's projected expulsion involves upward of 3,000,000 Germans and Hungarians. Czechoslovakia in return wants about 300,000 Slovaks from Hungary.

Admiral James Reaches Greece

Athens, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Rear Admiral Jules James arrived at Piræus aboard the United States cruiser Providence today to honor the Greek Navy for its contribution to the Allied victory. James is commander of United States Naval forces in North African waters. Premier Themistokles Sophoulis and the Greek regent, Archbishop Damaskino, arranged to receive him.

SEEKS NEW ISTANBUL CURB

Government Wants Martial Law Extended for Six Months

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Dec. 5—(Delayed) (AP)—Extension of martial law in Istanbul for another six months was asked by the Government today as an aftermath of the destructive student demonstration here Tuesday in which there were cries of "kill the Communists."

The Government request was directed to the General Assembly. Istanbul, under a state of siege three years, had expected to return to civil rule at the year end.

Premier Sukru Saracoglu said at a press conference in Ankara that a full investigation of the demonstration was to be made and that conclusions reached would be announced.

Sino-Russian Treaty Ratified

MOSCOW, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Tass news agency announced today that Soviet Russia had exchanged with the Chungking government official ratifications of the treaty of friendship between the two countries, signed at Moscow last August.

MOSCOW, Dec. 6—Three foreign correspondents said tonight that Soviet censors within the last two days had deleted small amounts of material from their news dispatches. They were Farnsworth Fowle of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Brooks Atkinson of THE NEW YORK

CHINESE READY TO ENTER MUKDEN

CHUNGKING, Dec. 6 — (AP) Chinese Nationalist columns were idling 25 miles from Mukden today awaiting Russian permission to enter that greatest city in all Manchuria, a field dispatch reported.

The Russians were in Mukden while Nationalist negotiators were arranging for the entry of their troops in conversations with Soviet Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky at Changchun, the capital to the north.

While these conversations were reported "progressing smoothly," a dispatch to the new Szechwan daily alleged Chinese Communists were poised to enter the city of Harbin, 300 miles north of Mukden.

Chinese Communists in their headquarters at Yenan were quoted by Associated Press Correspondent John Roderick as saying the question of peace or war hung on Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's acceptance of a plan for a democratic coalition government.

They asserted that any idea that Chiang was ready to give in on that issue or had even offered to take Communists into the government at once was false.

Roderick said Yenan believed that Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley's mission as United States ambassador failed because he was unable to convince Chiang of the need for a broad coalition government.

Communist delegates are expected here shortly from Yenan to resume the peace talks.

Nationalists Defer Entry To Mukden

Chungking, Dec. 6 (AP)—Chinese Nationalist forces are within 25 miles of Mukden, but will delay their entry until Russia approves, a Manchurian dispatch reported today.

Soviet troops are garrisoning Mukden; there are no Chinese Communists in the city, the report said.

Negotiations between Nationalist officials newly returned to Changchun and Soviet Marshal Rodion Malinovsky were reported resumed and "progressing smoothly." The conferees were arranging, among other things, early entry of airborne Nationalist troops into Manchuria.

Reds Near Harbin

Chinese Communists, whose opposition to the 200-mile northward thrust of the Nationalist ground forces has been only sporadic, now are poised to enter Harbin, more than 300 miles north of Mukden, a dispatch to the New Szechwan Daily reported.

The dispatch reiterated the claim that the Chinese Red forces have come into possession of "a great number" of airplanes, and said that Gen. Tu Yu Ming, commander of the Nationalist Peace Preservation Corps in Manchuria, had no air support. Communists destroyed all Japanese planes in Chinhsien before Tu occupied it, the report added.

China Reds Ask Coalition Rule As Peace Price

Lay Hurley's Failure to His Inability to 'Sell' Chiang on a Democratic Regime

YENAN, China, Dec. 6 (AP).—The question of peace or war in China hinges on acceptance by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of the broad general principle of a democratic coalition government, Chinese Communist leaders at this Communist headquarters city said today.

Inability to "sell" that point to the Generalissimo caused the failure of Major General Patrick J. Hurley's mission as American Ambassador, they aver. Any impression that Chiang was ready and willing to give in on that subject, and even had offered to take Communists into the government immediately, is totally false, Yenan leaders assert.

The approaching peace talks at Chungking, likely to decide the entire course of the future, would be helped by considering the little-publicized Communist demands, Yenan says.

Mao-Tse-tung, the Communist leader, in a recently published book "On Coalition Government," forecast the election of a central government dedicated to pushing a policy of "state-managed, private-managed, cooperative-managed economy." The culture of this new state should be "commonly owned by the ordinary people," not "for the small, privileged minority," he wrote.

Mao calls this "a bourgeois democratic revolution" which can be accomplished only through the unified employment of "vast private capital in a co-operative economy," which postpones to the distant future realization of the party's Marxist social aim.

"To think of establishing socialism on the debris of a Colonial, semi-Colonial and semi-feudal China is an empty dream," he declared.

To those who lift their eyebrows at Communist willingness to include capitalism in the present program, Mao replies: "Our answer is simple: To replace foreign, imperialist and native feudalist oppression by development of a capitalistic class as well as a proletariat. What exists in present-day China is a superfluous foreign imperialism and native feudalism. We realize that under present conditions in China besides the state's economy, individual economy of toiling masses and co-operative economy, private capitalistic economy should be given the facilities for development. Without it everyone would be building on ashes."

To the fear of some that after the Communists come into power "they will perhaps, following the example of Russia, establish a proletarian dictatorship and one-party system," Mao answered: "Chinese history will create a Chinese system."

"For a long period," he said, "there will come into existence a special type of system which is entirely necessary and reasonable for us, but different from that of Russia—a new democratic state and government with a union of several democratic classes."

Mao's concrete program asked for "abolition of Kuomintang (Nationalist) one-party dictatorship," punishment of pro-Japanese elements and traitors, abolition of all secret political police and concentration camps, and abolition of all laws suppressing freedom of the press, speech, assembly and association.

On Oct. 10 Mao and Chiang reached an agreement on three principles. They were: termination of the period of political tutelage with the calling of a National Assembly, agreement in principle to legalize political parties, and release of political prisoners other than traitors.

Young Chiang In Parley

Peiping, Dec. 6 (AP)—Arrangements for the air transportation of Chinese National Government troops to Russian-occupied Changchun, snow-covered capital of Manchuria, were reported under discussion today at Changchun.

Chiang Ching-kuo, eldest son of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, is in conference there with Soviet Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky, commander of Russian occupation forces.

Young Chiang, accompanied by Chang Chia-au, chairman of China's economic council for Manchuria, were met by Malinovsky on arrival at Changchun airfield December 4 and escorted into the capital by Russian troops.

The World Daily News said Chairman Chang has notified members of the Manchurian mission still in Peiping that the situation in the northeast is "greatly improved" and urged them to be ready for speedy return to Changchun.

Yanks At China Airfield Get Blood Purge Threat

Hong Kong, Dec. 6 (AP)—Chinese guards around an American operated airfield at Canton were increased today following the disclosure by American officers that an annymous note threatened an "American blood purge" had been delivered at the field.

A 6 P.M. curfew was imposed on United States personnel in the Canton city area by the commander of the United States Air Transport Command.

Rumors have been rife in Canton over Communist infiltrations and minor raids by irregulars.

Approximately 100 Americans are billeted in the European colony on Skamgen Island.

Prisoners' Ship Hits Mine

Singapore, Dec. 6 (AP)—A Japanese ship carrying Japanese military prisoners to internment on the Island of Rembang struck a mine outside the Singapore breakwater late today and was reported sinking fast.

Last Wacs Leave India by Plane

Calcutta, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Thirty-two Wacs, the last contingent in the China-India-Burma zone, departed today by plane for the United States.

Twelve of the more than 100 Wacs who served here since August, 1944, were married during their tour of duty—ten to Americans and two to British R. A. F. sergeants.

RAF PLANES BATTER BANDUNG BARRIERS

Smash Indonesian Quarters—British and Dutch Ready for Singapore Parley

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 6 (AP)—Four British bombers smashed today at two houses in Bandung serving as headquarters for Indonesian resistance forces, and an official British statement said thirty-eight Indonesians had been killed in skirmishes in the Surabaya sector.

These scattered military actions were announced as Netherlands and British leaders were scheduled to begin a conference in Singapore called by Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied Southeast Asia Commander, to deal with the troubled situation in the Netherlands Indies and French Indo-China.

Six minutes before the British Mosquito bombers attacked at Bandung, one plane dropped 1,000 leaflets in the area warning civilians to evacuate.

Road Blocks Blasted From Air

The Indonesian buildings were strong points blocking a narrow road over which British troops were attempting to evacuate a number of Eurasian women and children from the troublesome southern districts of the Java summer capital to the northern half, which has been cleared of Nationalists.

The British said their troops had cleared the area after the bombing and had resumed movement of the evacuees.

An earnest attempt was being made by Indonesian Government officials to aid at Bandung, but considerable doubt existed as to their power to control the more extreme elements, the British declared.

The Indonesians sent Government representatives to explain to the Bandung population the nature of British duties in restoring order. The natives have been boycotting Europeans in Bandung, refusing to sell them food, and the Netherlanders have complained that kidnaping of Europeans by Indonesians was continuing.

38 Indonesians Killed

Twenty Indonesians were killed in an encounter south of Surabaya, the British said, and Indian troops clearing the railroad station of Kandangang immediately west of the big naval base city killed seven more in dispersing a crowd.

British tanks dispersed another crowd of about thirty south of Surabaya, killing eleven, the British statement added.

Meanwhile in Sumatra, where conditions have been relatively quiet, Royal Air Force Spitfires put on a small-scale demonstration of British air power after a British brigade major and a woman Red Cross worker had been reported missing.

The Britsh said that the two were believed to have been kidnapped at Padang. The strongest representations were made to Indonesian authorities over the incident. The names of the two were withheld.

38 Indonesians Reported Killed

Batavia, Java, Dec. 6 (AP)—Thirty-eight Indonesians have been killed in recent skirmishes in the Soerbaja sector, the British Army announced today. Thirty-one were killed in brushes south of the city and seven by Indian troops clearing a railway station immediately west of the naval base.

Indonesian extremists at Padang, a city halfway down the west coast of the 2,200-mile-long island of Sumatra, to the northwest of Java, have kidnapped the brigade major of the 71st Brigade, a communique from Allied headquarters stated today, according to a Reuter dispatch.

Food Shortages Reported

Food shortages plagued Europeans at Bandoeng it was reported.

The European residents in the summer capital have been boycotted by native merchants for two weeks and have been unable to buy fresh vegetables, eggs or milk during that time.

Dutch Complain

Dutch spokesmen complained that in the southern sections of Bandoeng, Indonesians still carried on a program of kidnapping and intimidation of Europeans and Eurasians, and have asked permission from the British to carry arms. The British have given no answer.

There were no new reports of fighting in such troubled areas as Bandoeng, Semarang and Ambarawa, where sporadic outbreaks had been reported as late as yesterday.

French "Mop Up" in Saigon

SAIGON, Indo-China, Dec. 6 (AP).—Strong French forces with naval support are engaged in "a big mopping-up operation" near Saigon to clear out bandits accused of murder, arson and kidnapings in the last two months, an Anglo-French statement said today.

[In London unofficial Whitehall sources said British and Indian troops are being withdrawn from Indo-China and are being replaced by French troops, now arriving in sufficient numbers to maintain law and order.]

British Withdrawing From Indo China

London, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—British and Indian troops are being withdrawn from Indo-China, it was disclosed unofficially in Government quarters today.

BENNETT JUSTIFIES FLIGHT

Did Not Quit Singapore Until Yamashita Took Over, He Says

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 6 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett said today that before he escaped from Malaya, where he was in charge of Australian troops, British Malayan headquarters had been captured by Gen. Tomoyki Yamashita.

General Bennett told a commission of inquiry that the final order from headquarters was not that of Lieut. Gen. Sir Arthur Ernest Percival, commander of Allied troops in Singapore, but of the Japanese commander.

Testifying that he had not informed General Percival of his intention to escape, General Bennett said:

"I wasn't bound to tell him. I was under Percival for operational purposes. When hostilities ceased I was no longer under him. From 8:30 P. M. on Feb. 15 we were under the Japanese."

General Bennett maintained that his first duty after unconditional surrender occurred was to escape. Admitting that he would have been a deserter if he had escaped before the cease fire order, General Bennett presented evidence in an effort to prove he did not leave his headquarters until about ninety minutes after the order had been issued.

Bennett Defends Escape From Japs

Melbourne, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett, whose escape from the Japanese while serving as commander of Australian troops in Malaya is being investigated, asserted today that he felt it was his duty to try to get away as soon as the unconditional surrender at Singapore occurred. Bennett, testifying at an official inquiry, denied he had ever issued an order forbidding his men to escape.

Dutra Expands Lead In Brazilian Elections

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 6 (AP)—Army General Eurico Gaspar Dutra continued to expand his lead in the Brazilian presidential elections tonight with the latest unofficial tabulation giving him 767,227 votes.

The midnight vote counting gave Dutra's closest contestant, Air General Eduardo Gomes, 433,399. Communist candidate Yeddo Fiuza received 147,736 votes and Rollim Telles, Agrarian party candidate, 1,627.

U.S. Plane Reported Found With 14 Dead

Buenos Aires, Dec. 6 (AP)—A farmer from the interior of the Argentine province of Corrients reported tonight that an American C-47 transport plane believed to be one missing since Monday had crashed 20 miles south of Colonia Pellegrini and that all fourteen occupants were dead.

The farmer said the plane came down on the edge of a small lake and burned.

The transport was carrying members of a United States Army geographic mission from Asuncion, Paraguay, to Montevideo, Uruguay. When last reported it was flying in a southeasterly direction through a heavy wind and rainstorm.

The mission had been in Paraguay since last July.

In addition to the crew and members of the mission, the legal attache of the United States Embassy at Asuncion was aboard en route to the United States to take up another post.

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—A search of the Argentine-Brazilian border area continued without result today for a United States Army C-47 transport plane missing since Monday with fourteen persons aboard.

The Brazilian Air Ministry said that the Fifth Air Base headquarters at Porto Alegre reported no trace had been found of the plane, reported carrying a party of United States scientific explorers from Asuncion, Paraguay, to Montevideo, Uruguay.

Spanish Firm Sues Mexico

Mexico City, Dec. 6 (AP)—The Trans-Atlantic Company, of Barcelona, Spain, has filed suit in the Mexican Supreme Court against the Mexican Government for indemnity in an unspecified sum for the ship Arnus that brought Republican refugees here. The Government took over the vessel in 1936.

JAPANESE FAILED TO MAKE FULL USE OF NAVAL POWER

PEARL HARBOR, Dec. 6—(AP) The Japanese failed to wipe out the United States' first line of defense in the Pacific in their attack on Pearl Harbor because they did not "fully appreciate" seapower as an offensive weapon, Adm. Raymond A. Spruance said today.

The fighting admiral, now commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, made the observation in a pre-anniversary statement on the sneak attack, which fell four years ago tomorrow.

"Fortunately," said Spruance, "while the enemy knew the importance of seapower and while he understood that he must first eliminate our seapower, he did not fully appreciate its use as an offensive weapon.

"Instead of following up his initial successes, the enemy diverted his navy, which then far outclassed ours, to support of troop movements in the southwest Pacific."

Since seapower was America's first line of defense, the Japanese might have won a quick and decisive victory had that line been smashed, the admiral said.

Despite the heavy ship damage, Pearl Harbor's dry docks, machine shops, fuel storage facilities and supplies came through almost intact he added.

"This base enabled remaining elements of our navy, which included all carriers then in operation, all submarines and a sizeable force of cruisers and destroyers, to take the offensive," Spruance said. "The Japs had lost forever the opportunity to score a knockout blow. For while our navy was already whittling down his superiority in warships and thinning the line of merchant craft supplying his widely scattered troops, the farms and factories of America were welding the sinews that were to make our seapower second to none."

The Japanese were on the defensive after the Battle of Midway, (June 4-6, 1942), Spruance asserted, and after the great naval and air engagements of the Philippine sea (in 1944) the Japanese cause was irretrievably lost.

WOMAN AT SEA 30 DAYS PICKED UP BY NAVY LST

PEARL HARBOR, Dec. 6—(AP)—Tonya Jones, who boldly sailed for the United States in an old 30-foot sloop last month, was picked up at sea by a Navy LST 390 miles northeast of Honolulu today.

The skipper of the LST radioed Pearl Harbor "have picked up Tonya Jones, lone occupant of sloop Audacious off Honolulu. Sloop still adrift."

The message said nothing of the woman's condition. She had been at sea 30 days.

Britain Agrees to Ease Curbs on Empire Trade

Commercial Reforms Are Pledged in Terms of 4 Billion Dollar Loan.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—(AP) The Truman administration agreed today to grant Britain a $4,400,000,000 credit in return for British steps to promote world trade—and battle lines immediately formed in Congress.

The British promised to carry out a broad program of commercial and financial reforms if Congress approved the credits.

The "if" may be a big one. Even before the official announcement was released at 5:30 p. m. some congressmen were on their feet in both chambers with objections.

Loan Opposed in House

In the House, Rep. Celler (D-N.Y.) shouted that the loan "will promote too damned much socialism at home and too damned much imperialism abroad." Rep. Short (R-Mo.) asserted he would not vote one dollar "as long as they've got the crown jewels in London."

In the Senate, Senator Moore (R-Okla.) demanded that the balance of a $390,000,000 RFC loan made in 1941 be liquidated by the British before new credits are given.

But Senator Hill (D-Ala.), majority whip, told reporters:

"The loan should be made. In making it we are promoting the interests of the United States as well as the stability and peace of the world."

Administration officials were ready with comment, too. Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve board released a statement saying that the decision on making the loan "will largely determine whether we will revert to a world of economic blocs, which make for political blocs and hence for war." Assistant Secretary of State William L. Clayton told a news conference in advance that the agreements would "open up the markets of the world to our goods."

The exact form in which Congress will be asked to approve has not been decided, officials said. But efforts are being made to reach a decision within the next few days and some authorities thought President Truman would send a message to Congress.

Other Credits Requested

As soon as the British loan is out of the way the administration is expected to go to work on requests from other countries. Russia once informally suggested a $6,000,000,000 loan but has made no formal request. France and China have talked in terms of billions to meet their needs.

The agreements were completed at a brief ceremony in Secretary of State Byrnes' office. Secretary of the Treasury Vinson signed for the United States and Ambassador Halifax for Britain. Halifax and Byrnes also initialed agreements for organizing world trade on a free trade basis at an international conference to be held next spring or summer.

Here are the main provisions of the accords worked out after 87 days of negotiation:

The United States agree to lend Britain $3,750,000,000 as soon as it can be put through Congress to finance Britain's reconversion to peace. The British will repay neither principal nor interest for five years. In 1951 they would begin repayments at two per cent interest over a 50-year period.

On the same terms they would have about $650,000,000 with which to pay the U. S. for goods they received under Lend-Lease before and after V-J day which have not already been wiped off the books. The United States furnished Britain approximately $29,000,000,000 of Lend-Lease, most of which has been written off, and received from the British $4,000,000,000 by reverse Lend-Lease.

The principal and interest payments on the $650,000,000 are to be on the same terms as on the $3,750,000 so that in effect the British are obtaining a credit of $4,400,000,000. The money actually remains in the United States for them to draw upon as they want it. The terms mean that they must repay it by the year 2001, returning to the United States in cash approximately $7,000,000,000.

The British agreed that within one year they would wipe out the entire dollar pool set up in wartime to give Britain absolute control over dollars flowing into the Middle East, India, and other empire regions whose currency was based on the pound sterling. American business men have been critical of this dollar pool on the ground that it prevented them from doing business freely in India and the Middle East.

The British also agreed to begin negotiations with empire countries, particularly India and the Middle East, for a reduction in the $16,000,000,000 debt which Britain owes them. The American negotiators, Vinson and Clayton, insisted this debt, piled up during the war, had to be cut very substantially if Britain's economic position were to be sound.

Then the British further agreed to support American proposals for removal or reduction of barriers to international trade. The British had argued that unless they got the loan they would not be able to promote world trade outside the empire and would in effect be forced into economic isolationism.

Byrnes commented that the financial and trade agreements represented an effort "to establish one world economically."

Halifax said at the signing that the cooperation of Britain and the United States "has not ended with the end of the war."

A high British official who spoke quite frankly behind a cloak of anonymity said the negotiations were "not too bad although we didn't get as much as we wanted."

The British had asked up to $6,000,000,000 free of charge when they first came over here. American officials had initially favored a loan of about $5,000,000,000 but decided later that Congress would not approve any such sum.

U. S. Seeks to Break World Trade Barriers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—(AP) The United States, with the backing of Britain, proposed today that the nations of the world act collectively to break down international trade barriers and promote full employment.

In a detailed "white paper," issued with the announcement of the British-American financial agreement, this government strongly opposed high tariffs, trade preferences and cartels.

Although conceding that "no government is ready to embrace 'free trade' in any absolute sense," the document proposed that the nations make a determined start in that direction through:

1. An international conference on trade and employment, to be convened next summer under United Nations sponsorship.

2. A permanent international trade organization, to be set up under the United Nations as the central agency for promoting world trade.

The document declared collective action to prevent economic warfare is a necessary supplement to efforts of the United Nations organization to prevent military warfare.

A joint statement on commercial policy said Britain was "in full agreement on all important points" in the American proposals and accepted them "as basis for international discussion."

The white paper said international trade was curtailed by four general factors:

1. Government restrictions such as tariffs, export licenses, import quotas, and exchange controls.

2. Restrictions by private combines and cartels, which divide the world into exclusive markets; stifle competition; keep prices up and production down.

3. Fear of violent and sudden changes in the demand for and supply of certain primary commodities.

4. Wide fluctuations—and the fear of them—in production and employment.

This government proposed that negotiations for widespread reduction of tariffs and other government-imposed barriers be started even in advance of the international conference.

Use of authority granted to the President to reduce tariffs under the Reciprocal Trade Agreements act, renewed by Congress in June, is one of the most important contributions the U. S. can make toward that end, the document said.

DEC 7 1945

London Reports Amount.

London, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—An American loan of $4,400,000,000 to Great Britain, subject to approval by Congress and Parliament, was announced in the British press today and hailed as a boon to world trade. Concurrent official announcement of the agreement by both governments, following twelve weeks' negotiation at Washington, was expected tonight.

The London press said the pact calls for repayment over a fifty-year period, starting from 1946, and declared that no interest will be payable for the first five years and that thereafter the rate of interest will be 2 per cent—about $88,000,000 for the first interest-paying year.

None of the London newspapers commented editorially, but the tenor of their prominent headlines indicated enthusiastic approval of the agreement both by the Conservative and Laborite press.

Quoting their Washington correspondents, the newspapers said that the agreement provides that of the total amount of the loan, $650,000,000 would cover payment for goods in process of delivery to Britain when lend-lease was ended, and that the loan itself—$3,750,000,000—plus the $650,000,000 lend-lease aid settlement will be repaid on precisely the same terms.

The Daily Herald correspondent said that acceptance by the British of the Bretton Woods monetary plan was a condition of the loan, and that Congress will be kept in session to ratify the loan simultaneously with the passage of the Bretton Woods bill by Parliament.

OLD BRITISH DEBT IS $6,400,000,000

Washington, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Aside from any new loans, Britain still owes about $6,400,000,000 to the United States on its world war I debt. This figure was supplied by the Treasury today in reply to a reporter's question.

The original loans, made both before and after the 1918 armistice, totaled only $4,277,000,000. Accumulating interest has brought the debt to $6,400,000,000 despite the fact that Britain paid more than $2,000,000,000, before ceasing payments in 1933.

WORLD TRADE PLAN DRAFTED

White Paper Also Deals With Promotion Of Employment

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—The United States, with the backing of Britain, proposed today that the nations of the world act collectively to break down international trade barriers and promote full employment.

In a detailed "White Paper," issued with the announcement of the British - American financial agreement, this Government strongly opposed high tariffs, trade preferences and cartels.

International Parley Proposed

Although conceding that "no government is ready to embrace 'free trade' in any absolute sense," the document proposed that the nations make a determined start in that direction through:

1. An international conference on trade and employment, to be convened next summer under United Nations sponsorship.

2. A permanent international trade organization, to be set up under the United Nations as the central agency for promoting world trade.

The document declared collective action to prevent economic warfare is a necessary supplement to efforts of the United Nations Organization to prevent military warfare.

A joint statement on commercial policy said Britain was "in full agreement on all important points" in the American proposals and accepted them "as a basis for international discussion."

Factors Curtailing Trade

The White Paper said international trade was curtailed by four general factors:

1. Government restrictions such as tariffs, export licenses, import quotas and exchange controls.

2. Restrictions by private combines and cartels, which divide the world into exclusive markets, stifle competition, keep prices up and production down.

3. Fear of violent and sudden changes in the demand for and supply of certain primary commodities.

4. Wide fluctuations—and the fear of them—in production and employment.

This Government proposed that negotiations for widespread reduction of tariffs and other government-imposed barriers be started even in advance of the international conference.

Use of authority granted to the President to reduce tariffs under the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, renewed by Congress in June, is one of the most important contributions the United States can make toward that end, the document said.

in my opinion, not justify the credit.

In granting this credit to Britain, at this time, to do the immediate and urgent things that I have just indicated to you, we also enable Britain to undertake, with the United States, a full partnership in the enterprise of restoring the world to a multilateral trading basis and getting it off the bilateral

Clayton's Credit Statement

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 (AP).—Following is the text of remarks by William L. Clayton, Assistant Secretary of State, at a press conference today discussing the Anglo-American trade-financial talks:

In order to understand the British position and the need for an extension of credit at this time, we have to bear in mind two very important things. One is that Britain lives by imports, which is another way of saying that she lives by exports, perhaps more than any other major country in the world. And the other is that, in order to prosecute the war and mobilize her human and material resources to the greatest degree, she sacrificed her export trade.

At the time of V-J Day her exports were running at about 30 per cent of pre-war. Now, due to her great mobilization for war and the scattering of her man power over the world, it is going to take her a long time to reconvert to peace-time production and to recover the export trade which is so essential as a means of providing payment for her necessary imports. It is estimated that this reconstruction may take upwards of three or four years. During that period Britain will obviously run very heavy deficits in her balance-of-payments position with the rest of the world. The granting of this line of credit is primarily for the purpose of assisting her to meet those deficits.

How U. S. Would Benefit

If that were all that the credit did, it would not provide sufficient consideration to the United States. To be sure a large part of this money would be spent, in due course, in the United States. Our industries and our workers would obviously benefit from it. But if that were all, it would, barter and quota system that developed to such a great degree between the two world wars and, of course, was extended during this war. With the aid of this credit Britain is enabled to abolish the sterling area dollar pool arrangement within one year from the effective date of the agreement, so that whatever sterling is earned in Britain by any part of the world will no longer be treated as a frozen balance to be paid only with British or sterling area goods, but will become a balance which can be used for buying in any country in the world. That is the first very obvious and concrete consideration and benefit that the United States will derive.

Perhaps of even greater long-term importance is the fact that Britain will be enabled by this credit to join with the United States in full partnership in supporting our proposals for the expansion of world trade and employment. These proposals have been in preparation in our government since the spring of 1943. We are now delivering them to the other countries of the world. They are to be considered in a world trade conference that we expect to have called for the summer of 1946. We have discussed these proposals with the British in great detail and our two countries are in agreement on all of the substantive portions of our document.

The American proposals are comprehensive. They deal with tariffs, preferences, cartels, quota arrangements, discriminations, possible commodity agreements, and so on. If we can achieve the objectives outlined therein, we will get the world out of the nationalistic, autarchic form of trading which has grown up in the last twenty-five years, and get it back on a multilateral world trading system. This, from our point of view, is of enormous importance. It will open the markets of the world in the United States. Nor is its importance solely economic. It has great potentialities, as well, for world peace. We cannot long have co-operation in the political and military field if economic warfare should continue.

The British Alternative

Consider what Britain's alternative would be if she were not able to get this line of credit from the United States. Britain, as you know, is the greatest importer of goods in the world. She would be thrown back on defensive methods of trading. She would be compelled to confine her purchases to those countries which would be willing to accept, in payment, sterling in London, and this sterling would have to be spent for goods or services produced in Britain or elsewhere in the sterling area. You would therefore have a system which would prevent the buyer from buying in the cheapest market and the seller from selling in the dearest market. Instead, this system would require the channeling of all trade within the narrow limits which might be fixed by governments.

That is the sort of a system that we want to get the world away from if we possibly can. The agreement that has just been reached with Great Britain would make this possible; it would put Britain in a position to join in full partnership with us in bringing about a multilateral, non-discriminatory trading system throughout the world. This, in our opinion, is the consideration of the greatest value to the United States. It will open up the markets of the world to our goods and should lay the foundation for a period of expansion in production, consumption, and the exchange of goods and services, and a rising standard of living for all peoples everywhere.

Text of the Joint Statement by Truman and Attlee on the American Loan to Britain

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—Following is the text of the statement on the American loan to Great Britain, as issued in Washington by President Truman and in London by Prime Minister Attlee:

The economic and financial discussions between officials of the United States and United Kingdom Governments meeting in Washington have now been completed.

These discussions have been concerned with the major problems affecting the basic economic and financial relations between the two countries, in the light of the provisions of Article VII of the mutual-aid agreement between their governments signed February 23, 1942.

They have covered the questions of financial assistance from the United States to the United Kingdom, the demobilization of wartime trade and monetary restrictions, the settlement of lend-lease, the disposal of surplus war property in the United Kingdom owned by the United States, and, finally, long-range commercial policies in the broad sense, embracing the fields of trade barriers and discriminations, policies in respect of commodities in world surplus, cartels, an international trade organization, and international aspects of domestic measures to maintain employment.

The purpose of the discussions has been to arrive at mutually advantageous solutions of these problems which the two Governments would commend to the peoples and legislatures of the two countries and to the world as a whole.

Both sides have been fully conscious of the significance to other countries, as well as their own, of the outcome of these discussions, and they have from the beginning had continuously in view the common interest of their governments in establishing a world trading and monetary system from which the trade of all countries can benefit and within which the trade of all countries can be conducted on a multilateral, non-discriminatory basis.

The discussions have been successful.

Agreement has been reached, subject to the approval of the legislatures of both countries, for the extension by the United States to the United Kingdom of a line of credit of $3,750,000,000 on the terms stated in the financial agreement signed this day, for the following purposes:

To facilitate purchases by the United Kingdom of goods and services from the United States, to assist the United Kingdom to meet transitional post-war deficits in its current balance of payments, to help the United Kingdom to maintain adequate reserves of gold and dollars, and to assist the United Kingdom to assume the obligations of multilateral trade.

This credit would make it possible for the United Kingdom to relax import and exchange controls, including exchange arrangements affecting the sterling area, and generally to move forward with the United States and other countries toward the common objective of expanded multilateral trade.

Agreement has been reached for the final settlement of lend-lease and reciprocal aid, the disposal of surplus war property in the United Kingdom owned by the United States, and the final settlement of the claims of each Government against the other arising out of the conduct of the war.

Agreement has been reached on the broad principles of commercial policy for which the two Governments will seek general international support.

These arrangements, if carried out, will put an end to the fear of an economically divided world; will make possible, throughout the world, the expansion of employment and of the production, exchange and consumption of goods; and will bring into being, for the first time, a common code of equitable rules for the conduct of international trade policies and relations.

The realization of these proposals will depend upon the support given them by the peoples and Legislatures of the United States and the United Kingdom; and, where they envisage measures requiring broad international collaboration, the support of other countries.

The following documents resulting from these discussions are being issued by the two Governments:

Financial agreement.

Joint statement regarding the understanding reached on commercial policy.

Joint statement regarding settlement for lend-lease and reciprocal aid, surplus war property, and claims.

JOINT STATEMENT BY THE UNITED STATES AND THE UNITED KINGDOM REGARDING THE UNDERSTANDING REACHED ON COMMERCIAL POLICY

The Secretary of State of the United States has made public today a document setting forth certain "proposals for consideration by an international conference on trade and employment." These proposals have the endorsement of the executive branch of the Government of the United States and have been submitted to other Governments as a basis for discussion preliminary to the holding of such a conference.

Equally, the Government of the United Kingdom is in full agreement on all important points in these proposals and accepts them as a basis for international discussion; and it will, in common with the United States Government, use its best endeavors to bring such discussions to a successful conclusion, in the light of the views expressed by other countries.

The two Governments have also agreed upon the procedures for the international negotiation and implementation of these proposals. To this end they have undertaken to begin preliminary negotiations at an early date between themselves and with other countries for the purpose of developing concrete arrangements to carry out these proposals, including definitive measures for the relaxation of trade barriers of all kinds.

These negotiations will relate to tariffs and preferences, quantitative restrictions, subsidies, state trading, cartels and other types of trade barriers treated in the document published by the United States and referred to above. The negotiations will proceed in accordance with the principles laid down in that document.

JOINT STATEMENT REGARDING SETTLEMENT FOR LEND-LEASE, RECIPROCAL AID, SURPLUS WAR PROPERTY AND CLAIMS

1 The Governments of the United States and the United Kingdom have reached an understanding for the settlement of Lend-Lease and reciprocal aid, for the acquisition of United States Army and Navy surplus property, and the United States interest in installations, located in the United Kingdom, and for the final settlement of the financial claims of each Government against the other arising out of the conduct of the war. Specific agreements necessary to implement these understandings, setting forth the terms in detail, and consistent herewith, are in the course of preparation and will shortly be completed.

2. This settlement for lend-lease and reciprocal aid will be complete and final. In arriving at this settlement both Governments have taken full cognizance of the benefits already received by them in the defeat of their common enemies. They have also taken full cognizance of the general obligations assumed by them in Article VII of the mutual aid agreement of February 23, 1942, and the understandings agreed upon this day with regard to commercial policy. Pursuant to this settlement, both Governments will continue to discuss arrangements for agreed action for the attainment of the economic objectives referred to in Article VII of the mutual aid agreement. The Governments expect in these discussions to reach specific conclusions at an early date with respect to urgent problems such as those in the field of telecommunications and civil aviation. In the light of all the foregoing, both Governments agree that no further benefits will be sought as consideration for lend-lease and reciprocal aid.

3. The net sum due from the United Kingdom to the United States for the settlement of lend-lease and reciprocal aid, for the acquisition of surplus property, and the United States interest in installations, located in the United Kingdom, and for the settlement of claims shall be $650,000,000 subject to the account adjustment referred to below. This amount consists of (a) a net sum of $118,000,000 representing the difference between the amount of the services and supplies furnished or to be furnished by each government to the other government after V-J Day through lend-lease and reciprocal aid channels, less the net sum due to the United Kingdom under the claims settlement, and (b) a net sum of $532,000,000 for all other lend-lease and reciprocal aid items, and for surplus property and the United States interest in installations located in the United Kingdom and owned by the United States Government. The actual amounts due to the respective governments for items included in (a) above other than claims will, however, be ascertained by accounting in due course, and the total sum of $650,000,000 will be adjusted for any difference between the sum of $118,000,000 mentioned above and the actual sum found to be due. All new transactions between the two governments after Dec. 31, 1945, will be settled by cash payment.

4. The total liability found to be due to the Government of the United States will be discharged on the same terms as those specified in the financial agreement concluded this day for the discharge of the credit provided therein.

5. In addition to the financial payments referred to above, the two governments have agreed upon the following:

(A) Appropriate non-discriminatory treatment will be extended to United States nationals in the use and disposition of installations in which there is a United States interest;

(B) Appropriate settlements for the lend-lease interest in installations other than in the United Kingdom and the colonial dependencies will be made on disposal of the installations;

(C) The United States reserves its right of recapture of any lend-lease articles held by United Kingdom armed forces, but the United States has indicated that it does not intend to exercise generally this right of recapture;

(D) Disposals for military use to forces other than the United Kingdom armed forces of lend-lease articles held by the United Kingdom armed forces at V-J Day, and disposals for civilian use other than in the United Kingdom and the colonial dependencies of such lend-lease articles will be made only with the consent of the United States Government and any net proceeds will be paid to the United States Government. The United Kingdom Government agrees that except to a very limited extent it will not release for civilian use in, or export from, the United Kingdom and the colonial dependencies lend-lease articles held by the United Kingdom armed forces.

(E) The Government of the United Kingdom will use its best endeavors to prevent the export to the United States of any surplus property transferred in accordance with this understanding.

6. The Government of the United Kingdom agrees that, when requested by the Government of the United States from time to time prior to Dec. 31, 1951, it will transfer, in cash, pounds sterling to an aggregate dollar value not in excess of $50,000,000, at the exchange rates prevailing at the times of transfer, to be credited against the dollar payments due to the Government of the United States as principal under this settlement. The Government of the United States will use these pounds sterling exclusively to acquire land or to acquire or construct buildings in the United Kingdom and the colonial dependencies for the use of the Government of the United States, and for carrying out educational programs in accordance with agreements to be concluded between the two governments.

7. The arrangements set out in this statement are without prejudice to any settlements concerning lend-lease and reciprocal aid which may be negotiated between the Government of the United States and the Governments of Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and India.

FINANCIAL AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE UNITED KINGDOM

It is hereby agreed between the government of the United States of America and the government of the United Kingdom, of Great Britain and Northern Ireland as follows:

1. Effective date of the agreement. The effective date of this agreement shall be the date on which the government of the United States notifies the government of the United Kingdom that the Congress of the United States has made available the funds necessary to extend to the government of the United Kingdom the line of credit in accordance with the provisions of this agreement.

2. Line of Credit. The government of the United States will extend to the government of the United Kingdom a line of credit of $3,750,000,000 which may be drawn upon at any time between the effective date of this agreement and Dec. 31, 1951, inclusive.

3. Purpose of the line of credit. The purpose of the line of credit is to facilitate purchases by the United Kingdom of goods and services in the United States, to assist the United Kingdom to meet transitional post-war deficits in its current balance of payments, to help the United Kingdom to maintain adequate reserves of gold and dollars, and to assist the Government of the United Kingdom to assume the obligations of multilateral trade, as defined in this and other agreements.

4. Amortization and interest.

(I) The amount of the line of credit drawn by December 31, 1951, shall be repaid in 50 annual installments beginning on December 31, 1951, with interest at the rate of 2 per cent per annum. Interest for the year 1951 shall be computed on the amount outstanding on December 31, 1951, and for each year thereafter, interest shall be computed on the amount outstanding on January 1 of each such year.

Forty-nine annual installments of principal repayments and interest shall be equal, calculated at the rate of $31,823,000 for each $1,000,000,000 of the line of credit drawn by December 31, 1951, and the fiftieth annual installment shall be at the rate of $31,840,736.65 for each such $1,000,000,000. Each installment shall consist of the full amount of the interest due and the remainder of the installment shall be the principal to be repaid in that year. Payments required by this section are subject to the provisions of Section 5.

(II) The Government of the United Kingdom may accelerate repayment of the amount drawn under this line of credit.

5. Waiver of interest payments. In any year in which the Government of the United Kingdom requests the Government of the United States to waive the amount of the interest due in the installment of that year, the Government of the United States will grant the waiver if:

(A) The Government of the United Kingdom finds that a waiver is necessary in view of the present and prospective conditions of international exchange and the level of its gold and foreign exchange reserves and

(B) The international monetary fund certifies that the income of the United Kingdom from home-produced exports plus its net income from invisible current transactions in its balance of payments was on the average over the five preceding calendar years less than the average annual amount of United Kingdom imports during 1936-8, fixed at £866 million, as such figure may be adjusted for changes in the price level of these imports. Any amount in excess of £43,750,000 released or paid in any year on account of sterling balances accumulated to the credit of overseas governments, monetary authorities and banks before the effective date of this agreement shall be regarded as a capital transaction and therefore shall not be included in the above calculation of the net income from invisible current transactions for that year. If waiver is requested for an interest payment prior to that due in 1955, the average income shall be computed for the calendar years from 1950 through the year preceding that in which the request is made.

6. Relation of this line of credit to other obligations.

(I) It is understood that any amounts required to discharge obligations of the United Kingdom to third countries outstanding on the effective date of this agreement will be found from resources other than this line of credit.

(II) The Government of the United Kingdom will not arrange any long-term loans from governments within the British Commonwealth after Dec. 6, 1945, and before the end of 1951 on terms more favorable to the lender than the terms of this line of credit.

(III) Waiver of interest will not be requested or allowed under Section 5 in any year unless the aggregate of the releases or payments in that year of sterling balances accumulated to the credit of overseas governments, monetary authorities and banks (except in the case of colonial dependencies) before effective date of this agreement is reduced proportionately, and unless interest payments due in that year on loans referred to in (II) above are waived. The proportionate reduction of the releases or payments of sterling balances shall be calculated in relation to the aggregate released and paid in the most recent year in which waiver of interest was not requested.

(IV) The application of the principles set forth in this section shall be the subject of full consultation between the two governments as occasion may arise.

7. Sterling area exchange arrangements.

The Government of the United Kingdom will complete arrangements as early as practicable and in any case not later than one year after the effective date of this agreement, unless in exceptional cases a later date is agreed upon after consultation, under which immediately after the completion of such arrangements the sterling receipts from current transactions of all sterling area countries (apart from any receipts arising out of military expenditure by the Government of the United Kingdom prior to Dec. 31, 1948, to the extent to which they are treated by agreement with the countries concerned on the same basis as the balances accumulated during the war) will be freely available for current transactions in any currency area without discrimination; with the result that any discrimination arising from the so-called sterling area dollar pool will be entirely removed and that each member of the sterling area will have its current sterling and dollar receipts at its free disposition for current transactions anywhere.

8. Other exchange arrangements.

(I) The Government of the United Kingdom agrees that after the effective date of this agreement it will not apply exchange controls in such a manner as to restrict (A) payments or transfers in respect of products of the United States permitted to be imported into the United Kingdom or other current transactions between the two countries, or (B) the use of sterling balances to the credit of residents of the United States arising out of current transactions. Nothing in this paragraph (I) shall affect the provisions of Article VII of the articles of agreement of the international monetary fund when those articles have come into force.

(II) The Governments of the United States and the United Kingdom agree that not later than one year after the effective date of this agreement, unless in exceptional cases a later date is agreed upon after consultation, they will impose no restrictions on payments and transfers for current transactions. The obligations of this paragraph (II) shall not apply:

(A) To balances of third countries and their nationals accumulated before this paragraph (II) becomes effective; or

(B) To restrictions imposed in conformity with the articles of agreement of the international monetary fund, provided that the Governments of the United Kingdom and the United States will not continue to invoke the provisions of Article XIV, Section 2 of those articles after this paragraph (II) becomes effective, unless in exceptional cases after consultation they agree otherwise; or

(C) To restrictions imposed in connection with measures designed to uncover and dispose of assets of Germany and Japan.

(III) This section and Section 9, which are in anticipation of more comprehensive arrangements by multilateral agreement, shall operate until Dec. 31, 1951.

9. Import arrangements. If either the Government of the United States or the Government of the United Kingdom imposes or maintains quantitative import restrictions, such restrictions shall be administered on a basis which does not discriminate against imports from the other country in respect of any product; provided that this undertaking shall not apply in cases in which (A) its application would have the effect of preventing the country imposing such restrictions from utilizing, for the purchase of needed imports, inconvertible currencies accumulated up to Dec. 31, 1946, or (B) there may be special necessity for the country imposing such restrictions to assist, by measures not involving a substantial departure from the general rule of non-discrimination, a country whose economy has been disrupted by war, or (C) either Government imposes quantitative restrictions having equivalent effect to an exchange restriction which that Government is authorized to impose in conformity with Article VII of the articles of agreement of the international monetary fund. The provisions of this section shall become effective as soon as practicable, but not later than Dec. 31, 1946.

10. Accumulated sterling balances.

(I) The Government of the United Kingdom intends to make agreements with the countries concerned, varying according to the circumstances of each case, for an early settlement covering the sterling balances accumulated by sterling area and other countries prior to such settlement (together with any future receipts arising out of military expenditure by the Government of the United Kingdom to the extent to which they are treated on the same basis by agreement with the countries concerned). The settlements with the sterling area countries will be on the basis of dividing these accumulated balances into three categories, (A) balances to be released at once and convertible into any currency for current transactions, (B) balances to be similarly released by installments over a period of years beginning in 1951, and (C) balances to be adjusted as a contribution to the settlement of war and post-war indebtedness and in recognition of the benefits which the countries concerned might be expected to gain from such a settlement. The Government of the United Kingdom will make every endeavor to secure the early completion of these arrangements.

(II) In consideration of the fact that an important purpose of the present line of credit is to promote the development of multilateral trade and facilitate its early resumption on a non-discriminatory basis, the Government of the United Kingdom agrees that any sterling balances released or otherwise available for current payments will, not later than one year after the effective date of this agreement unless in special cases a later date is agreed upon after consultation, be freely available for current transactions in any currency area without discrimination.

11. Definitions.

For the purposes of this agreement:

(I) The term "current transactions" shall have the meaning prescribed in Article XIX (I) of the articles of agreement of the international monetary fund.

(II) The term "sterling area" means the United Kingdom and the other territories declared by the defense (finance) (definition of sterling area) (No. 2) order, 1944, to be included in the sterling area, namely "the following territories excluding Canada and Newfoundland, that is to say—

(A) Any dominion,

(B) Any other part of His Majesty's dominions,

(C) Any territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Majesty and is being exercised by His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom or in any dominion.

(D) Any British protectorate or protected State,

(E) Egypt, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Iraq.

(F) Iceland and the Faroe Islands."

12. Consultation on agreement. Either Government shall be entitled to approach the other for a reconsideration of any of the provisions of this agreement, if in its opinion the prevailing conditions of international exchange justify such reconsideration, with a view to agreeing upon modifications for presentation to their respective Legislatures.

Analysis of American Proposals for World Trade and Employment

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—Following is an analysis of proposals for expansion of world trade and employment as made public today in behalf of the United States by the State Department:

The main prize of the victory of the United Nations is a limited and temporary power to establish the kind of world we want to live in.

That power is limited by what exists and by what can be agreed on. Human institutions are conservative; only within limits can they be moved by conscious choice. But after a great war some power of choice exists; it is important that the United Nations use it wisely.

The fundamental choice is whether countries will struggle against each other for wealth and power, or work together for security and mutual advantage. That choice was made in principle at San Francisco and has since been ratified by the overwhelming majority of the Governments concerned. The business of the immediate future is to give that decision the necessary body of common institutions and so to support those institutions that the experiment may succeed.

Success requires that the United Nations work together in every field of common interest, in particular the economic. The experience of cooperation in the task of earning a living promotes both the habit and the techniques of common effort and helps make permanent the mutual confidence on which the peace depends. The United Nations have therefore created not only an Economic and Social Council but special bodies to help them work together on many practical matters.

Already there exist, or are in process of creation, agencies to deal with emergency relief, with currency, with international investment, with civil aviation, with labor, and with food and agriculture.

The United Nations should also endeavor to harmonize their policies with respect to international trade and employment. An International Trade Organization is still to be created. To this end, it is now proposed that an International Conference on Trade and Employment should be called by the United Nations, to meet not later than the summer of 1946.

The common interests of countries in world trade are obvious. Science and technology have enormously increased the poductive powers of man. Limits upon human welfare are imposed today, not by the ultimate poverty of nature's resources, but by failure to use human powers to the full. Among the factors which obstruct our march toward the goal of freedom from want are excessive restictions on exchange and distribution. Progress requires release from these restrictions.

Every country has its arrangements for the organization of production and distribution within its borders. To make the best use of these arrangements, countries must exchange their products. World trade is not only the device through which useful goods produced in one country are made available to consumers in another; it is also the means through which the needs of people in one country are translated into orders and therefore into jobs in another.

Trade connects employment, production and consumption and facilitates all three. Its increase means more jobs, more wealth produced, more goods to be enjoyed.

Countries should therefore join in an effort to release trade from the various restrictions which have kept it small. If they succeed in this they will have made a major contribution to the welfare of their peoples and to the success of their common efforts in other fields.

International trade is kept small by four things:

(1) Restrictions imposed by governments;

(2) Restrictions imposed by private combines and cartels;

(3) Fear of disorder in the markets for certain primary commodities;

(4) Irregularity, and the fear of irregularity, in production and employment.

The proposals which are herewith published deal with each of these problems.

I. Release From Restrictions Imposed by Governments

Governments have restricted the freedom of traders by many measures and for many reasons. They will continue to do so. No government is ready to embrace "free trade" in any absolute sense. Nevertheless, much can usefully be done by international agreement toward reduction of governmental barriers to trade.

These barriers take many forms. A transaction between a willing buyer in one country and a willing seller in another may be prevented because the tariff of the buyer's country creates an added cost too great to be borne; or because the paper-work required for export or import is so burdensome that the deal is not worth while; or because the seller cannot get an export license; or because the buyer cannot acquire the seller's currency to make a payment; or because importation is restricted by the buyer's country to a quota which has been exhausted; or because it is forbidden altogether.

Or the seller may discover that the tariff of the buyer's country discriminates against him in favor of sellers located elsewhere.

All these restrictions and the red tape connected with them have undoubtedly prevented many business transactions, cut down the total of world trade, and reduced to that extent the benefits which trade might bring to all the parties concerned.

Barriers of this sort are imposed because they serve or seem to serve some purpose other than the expansion of world trade. Within limits they cannot be forbidden. But when they grow too high, and especially when they discriminate between countries or interrupt previous business connections, they create bad feeling and destroy prosperity. The objective of international action should be to reduce them all and to state fair rules within which those that remain should be confined.

This has often been attempted between two countries at a time or among several countries with respect to a single problem. These attempts have not been adequate because the many barriers are interdependent. Every country has its own kind of restriction, adapted to its own situation, and can hardly be expected to throw off its peculiar armor unless the other kinds of armor, employed by other countries, are thrown off at the same time.

What is needed is a broad and yet detailed agreement, among many nations, dealing at one time with many different sorts of governmental restrictions upon trade, reducing all of them at once on a balanced and equitable basis, and stating rules and principles within which the restrictions permitted to remain should be administered. To prepare such an agreement should be one of the main tasks of the International Conference on Trade and Employment.

The Proposals now published afford a basis on which agreement might be reached. Rules are suggested to limit quotas and embargoes to carefully defined cases and to avoid discrimination in their application. Provision is made for the substantial reduction of tariffs and the elimination of tariff preferences. Subsidies, especially subsidies on exports, would be brought under supervision.

Local taxes on imported products would be limited to rates no higher than those levied on like products produced at home. Agencies of governments conducting foreign trade would be asked to give fair treatment to the commerce of friendly states, to make their purchases and sales on economic grounds, and to avoid using a monopoly of imports to afford excessive protection to domestic producers. On these and other points the Proposals try to state fair principles acceptable to all and of benefit to all.

The proof of any principle is in its application. Therefore, effective preparation for the Conference must include detailed negotiations on trade barriers to commence as soon as possible. These negotiations should get down to cases, seeking to reduce tariffs, to eliminate preferences and to lighten or remove other barriers to trade, whatever they may be.

In the United States such negotiations are conducted under the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, which was renewed by Congress in June, 1945, with an increase of the authority conferred upon the President. The use of that authority is one of the most important contributions which the United States can make to the success of the Conference.

Accordingly, this country should undertake negotiations under the Trade Agreements Act with several other governments as soon as a mutually satisfactory basis can be found, the required notices published, the statutory public hearings held, and their results considered.

These negotiations cannot practicably be conducted with all countries at the same time, but the effort should be to get forward with the work, commencing before the general Conference convenes and continuing until every friendly country has participated in the enterprise.

Together, if they will, the countries of the world now have it in their power to free their trade from excessive governmental barriers. When that happens and to the extent that it happens, more ships will sail with fuller cargoes, more men will be employed, more goods will be produced and more people will have better things to eat and wear and otherwise consume.

II. Release From Restrictions Imposed by Private Combines and Cartels

Trade may also be restricted by business interests in order to obtain the unfair advantage of monopoly.

In many lines this has not happened, but in others, as experience discloses, firms have banded together to restrain competition by fixing common selling prices, by dividing the world into exclusive markets, by curtailing production, by suppressing technology and invention, by excluding their rivals from particular fields, and by boycotting outsiders.

These practices destroy fair competition and fair trade, damage new businesses and small businesses and levy an unjust toll upon consumers. Upon occasion they may be even more destructive of world trade than are restrictions imposed by governments.

Goods can surmount a tariff if they pay the duty; they can enter despite a quota if they are within it. But when a private agreement divides the markets of the world among the members of a cartel, none of those goods can move between the zones while the contract is in force. Clearly, if trade is to increase as a result of the lightening of government restrictions, the governments concerned must make sure that it is not restrained by private combinations.

The Proposals therefore contemplate that countries will act, individually and cooperatively, to curb those restrictive business practices in international trade which interfere with the objectives of increased production and trade, access on equal terms to markets and raw materials, and high levels of employment and real income.

To this end, it is suggested that a special agency be established within the International Trade Organization to receive complaints concerning restrictive practices of international combines and cartels, to obtain and examine the facts which are relevant to such cases, and to advise the Organization as to the remedies that may be required.

Enforcement against private violators necessarily rests with member governments. It will be the function of the Organization to recommend to these governments that they take action under their own laws and procedures. In the United States, enforcement would continue to be by judicial proceedings under the anti-trust laws.

III. Release From Fear of Disorder in the Markets for Primary Commodities

After a great war there is danger of violent and rapid movement in the markets for primary commodities. The production of some things has been increased enormously to meet a war demand or to replace sources of production cut off by enemy action. Some time after the end of the fighting the war demand subsides, goods held by the armies are returned to normal channels, and old sources of production come back into the markets and add to supplies.

There is suddenly too much of some commodities and the prices react accordingly. Many countries learned after the last war that such changes can be devastating.

If the Proposals so far discussed can be put into effect a great advance will have been made toward increasing trade and business activity. The resulting expansion of incomes and consumption should go a long way toward enlarging the demand for primary commodities. The best cure for any surplus is more money in the pockets of consumers. And general prosperity will make it easier for people caught by a particular failure of demand to shift to other lines where opportunities are better.

Such shifts are occurring all the time in any progressive society. Public policy should not seek to prevent them, for they are a necessary part of the process by which the economy meets the changing needs of the people. But if the changes come too fast they may bring serious distress to many small producers and to their communities. It is important that the needed changes be made gradually.

When excess supplies threaten, the first effort obviously should be to increase consumption. But if study discloses that that cannot be done rapidly enough to be effective, other measures may be needed. And since action by one country is quite likely to affect producers and consumers in another, there should be consultation between governments.

Consultation may result in a proposal for an intergovernmental commodity agreement. Such agreements are not intended to freeze existing patterns of production, but rather to provide a program of adjustment and a period of time within which the essential changes can be made without undue hardship.

During the transition it may be necessary to restrict production or exports, to fix prices, or to allocate shares of markets among producing countries. Controls of this sort should not be applied in any case unless the need is real and serious, affecting many people, and not curable by the normal process of competition.

And when they are set up they should be strictly temporary, lasting no longer than required to carry out the necessary shifts. Their purpose is not to protect vested interests, but to prevent widespread distress during the course of necessary change.

Intergovernmental restrictions on production or on exports might be used—like international cartels—to take unfair advantage of consumers. Therefore the Proposals recommend adherence to the rule that consuming countries be entitled to participate along with producers in the original consideration of such agreements and be entitled also to an equal voice in their administration.

Furthermore, there should be full publicity about each scheme and all its operations in order that the world may make sure that it is managed in the general interest.

IV. Release From Fear of Irregularity in Production and Employment

Every country will seek so to manage its own affairs that its business life will be free from violent depressions. The object of international action should be to insure that these national efforts reinforce each other and do not cancel out.

The industrial activity of every country is affected by the size and the regularity of its orders from abroad. When industry in any country slows down and its purchases of foreign materials are cut the effects are felt in every corner of the globe.

Full and regular production at home, with increased participation in world trade, is the greatest boon which any people can confer upon producers throughout the world.

It is important, however, that nations should not seek to obtain full employment for themselves by exporting unemployment to their neighbors. To seek employment by prohibiting imports or by subsidizing exports would be harmful and self-defeating.

The business of the Conference, therefore, should be to establish general agreement that each country will seek, on its own account, to maintain full and regular production, that it will not do so by using measures which would damage other countries or prevent the expansion of world trade, and that all countries will cooperate in exchanging information and participate in consultations with respect to anti-depression policies.

V. An International Trade Organization

Arrangements on this scale clearly require, for their successful operation, both an international forum where they may be discussed and improved and an international staff to assist in their administration.

The Proposals therefore suggest that an International Trade Organization be created, to stand beside the existing international agencies dealing with currency, investment, agriculture, labor and civil aviation. It should have a constitution much like those of the other agencies set up by the United Nations, with enough internal specialization to enable it to perform the tasks assigned to it in dealing with trade barriers, restrictive business practices, and international commodity arrangements. Detailed suggestions on this matter are contained in the Proposals.

The organization should be designed as the central international agency to deal with trade. It should be brought into relation with the Economic and Social Council in the manner provided in the charter of the United Nations.

The proposals reflect awareness that we live in a world of many countries with a variety of economic systems. They seek to make it possible for those systems to meet in the market-place without conflict, thus to contribute each to the other's prosperity and welfare. In no case do they impinge upon sovereign independence, but they do recognize that measures adopted by any country may have effects abroad and they suggest for general adoption fair rules of mutual tolerance.

The purpose is to make real the principle of equal access to the markets and the raw materials of the world, so that the varied gifts of many peoples may exert themselves more fully for the common good.

The larger purpose is to contribute to the effective partnership of the United Nations, to the growth of international confidence and solidarity, and thus to the preservation of the peace.

MARSHALL FAILED TO VISUALIZE RAID ON HAWAIIAN BASE

Was Aware of Possibility But Didn't Believe Japs Would Attack.

RISKS WERE GREAT

Chief of Staff's Testimony Shows He Feared Surprise Blow on Pearl Harbor.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 — (AP) General George C. Marshall testified today that the Japanese, in assaulting Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, took so tremendous a gamble that he didn't think they would try it.

The retired chief of staff told the joint committee investigating the disaster that there were forces at the Pacific base sufficient to have disrupted the enemy thrust. Such a result, he said, would have ruined the whole Japanese campaign of aggression.

Surprise Brought Success

"Non-alertness" in Hawaii, he said, was the reason for both the attack and its success. He testified that the prowling enemy fleet could have been recalled before the attack if the Japanese learned the defenders were ready.

Marshall said the risks of the attack were so big that he did not actually visualize it at that time, though his testimony recounted that for 18 months beforehand he had been concerned over the possibility of a surprise raid and had been taking precautions against it.

Questions had just gotten down to the happenings in Washington on Dec. 6-7 when the committee recessed until tomorrow.

Marshall will return to the witness chair Friday.

The general's testimony accompanied introduction of documents from the late President Roosevelt's secret files, including a memorandum from Marshall saying "Britain is reaching limit of usable manpower. We must supplement her forces."

That memorandum bore no date but Gerhard Gesell, committee counsel, said it apparently was written in the summer of 1941, before we were in the war.

Worked Against Germany

The chief of staff proposed to prepare task forces for bases in the British isles and to "secure, when opportunity offers," additional bases encircling Germany.

"Germany cannot be defeated by supply of munitions to friendly powers and air and naval operations alone," Marshall wrote. "Large ground forces will be required."

He also suggested speeding the increase of air power in the Philippines and "small increases" in ground army forces and equipment to "restrain Japan from advance into Malaysia or eastern Siberia."

Marshall argued against reducing the supply of America's own forces to send more arms to the British and Russians. He contended that while such a move would give the Allies temporary encouragement, it would convince the Germans they need not fear "an eventual onslaught of ground forces."

Another document from the Roosevelt files covered the Hawaiian defense situation. It mentioned the island of Oahu as "believed to be the strongest fortress in the world." Written across it, however, in what Gesell said was the handwriting of the late Maj. Gen. E. M. Watson, Mr. Roosevelt's military aide, was this notation:

"Modern planes have completely changed situation as to the defensibility."

That document, its source unshown, was marked as having been filed May 3, 1941.

Plans for Defense

It detailed a program for bringing any enemy under attack from four-engine bombers 750 miles away, with the full fury of air defense to be applied when an attack got within 200 miles.

That apparently was the sort of defense envisioned by Marshall in today's testimony in which he said the Pearl Harbor force was not strong enough actually to have stopped the Japanese completely but could have broken up his onslaught. It could have shaken him up, Marshall said, and diverted him from targets, thus "greatly lessening" the damage.

If that had happened, the general testified, the Japanese would have been forced to abandon their drive into Malaysia, they would not have broken the Burma road, and their whole campaign of conquest would have been thrown out of gear.

Marshall said he had no recollection of a message from Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, Hawaiian Army commander, notifying the war department only that Hawaii had been put on a sabotage alert. He added that he assumed he must have seen it. Short replied to a message sent Pacific commanders Nov. 27, 1941, warning that "hostile action" was possible.

The former chief of staff said he "had no intimation" that Hawaii had not been doing long distance air reconnaissance.

"Alert" Was Real Thing

In his testimony on fears of attack and precautions against it, Marshall related publicly for the first time that a June 17, 1940 "alert" ordered for the Hawaiian Army forces was no test but was issued because a Japanese raid was actually feared.

Told by William Mitchell, committee counsel, that Admiral J. O. Richardson, 1940 fleet commander, had testified he had understood from Marshall later that it was practice, the Army officer said:

"I think there was a misunderstanding by Admiral Richardson. It was the real thing."

From that June on, Marshall's story of the days leading up to the Dec. 7, 1941, attack was studded with repeated instances of efforts to strengthen Pacific outposts despite demands from all sides for the trickle of arms coming from production lines.

Strengthened Bases

In February, 1941, he "robbed" continental air squadrons to send Hawaii pursuit planes.

The same month he "unobstrusively" withdrew 20 three-inch guns from training regiments to send to the Philippines, but the Navy learned of it, asked for 18 for the Marines, and got them.

The five-star general told his story before a standing-room-only audience in the Senate caucus room. In nearby seats were most of those who have figured prominently in the Pearl Harbor story.

General Short was at a nearby table. He turned and grinned at Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, then fleet commander at Pearl Harbor, when one document was read by Mitchell.

This was a letter Marshall wrote to Short on Feb. 7, 1941, when Short took over his command. This admonished Short to cultivate good relations with the naval officers and advised that he was told Kimmel was sometimes "brusque and undiplomatic" but "at heart a very kindly man."

Leading up to the introduction of many documents, which largely told Marshall's story of defense preparations, Mitchell questioned the general about the pre-war staff conversations carried on with the British, Dutch and Canadians.

No War Commitment

Marshall said that in none of these was there any commitment for the United States to go to war.

"Did you ever know," Mitchell asked, "of any commitment by the President or anyone else by which the United States was committed to engage in war without being attacked?"

"No sir, I did not."

In response to other questions, Marshall said he had attended the Atlantic Charter conference and talked of the general world situation with British officers. He did not know until he returned to Washington, he said, of the agreement between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill that each would warn Japan against further aggression.

Such an American warning was given the Japanese Aug. 17, 1941, but was not publicly disclosed until after the war.

Asked about his policy as chief of staff with regard to overseas commanders, Marshall said he had endeavored to select "the ablest people available" and give them a wide degree of responsibility.

Among the many documents entered in the record was a volume of correspondence between Marshall and Short.

In the initial letter—Feb. 7, 1941, when Short took command—Marshall advised that he thought hazards to Hawaii would not be excessive "if no serious harm is done us during the first six hours of known hostilities."

"The risk of sabotage and the risk involved in a surprise raid by air and by submarine constitute the real perils of the situation," he added.

On March 5, Marshall asked Short for an "early review of the situation" with regard to "defense from air attack." He said that should have "first priority."

Wanted Warning Service

That letter apparently crossed in the mails one from Short dated March 6 in which the Hawaiian commander said aircraft warning service was "vital to the defense of these islands."

Referring to radar equipment Short said, "With the present international situation it seems to me that if this equipment is to be used at all the need for it is now here."

The Washington thinking at that period was reflected in other documents as well as Marshall's letter.

Mitchell introduced notes written by Col. Orlando Ward, secretary to the general staff, on a conference in Marshall's office Feb. 6, 1941, attended by Gen. H. H. Arnold, Army air chief, and others.

"General Marshall indicated that the Navy had insufficient nets for defense against either submarine or plane carried torpedoes," Ward's memo read. "He further indicated that there was a possibility of a Japanese attack.

"General (Sherman) Miles stated that nothing in G-2 (Intelligence) indicated any such probability.

"General Marshall stated that the planes in Honolulu were, in general, obsolescent, and that we should have a reasonable number of top-flight planes which would out-perform any the Japanese could bring on their carriers.

"General Arnold recommended that 31 P-36s be sent immediately in a Navy carrier to Honolulu and that 50 P-40Bs be sent as soon as available (in March).

"General Marshall stated that we really had two active defense issues —one, Panama, and the other, Honolulu."

When that was read, Marshall remarked that he had considered Hawaii and Panama the "frontiers" of continental defense and hence the top outposts for defense.

There was also a document labeled notes on a general council meeting, Feb. 25, 1941, in which Marshall was quoted as saying the forces in Hawaii "are in a situation where they must guard against a surprise or trick attack" and that the fleet was "particularly vulnerable" when in anchorage.

Warning To Gen. Short By Marshall Is Told

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—Pearl Harbor investigators learned today that Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short took command in Hawaii with advice from Gen. George C. Marshall that:

1. The danger time for Hawaii would be "the first six hours of known hostilities," and

2. The "real perils" were "sabotage" and "surprise raid by air and by submarine."

This was disclosed when the Senate-House investigating committee received files of correspondence between Marshall, then army chief of staff, and Short from February to October, 1941.

1940 Alert Detailed

Also disclosed were exchanges between Marshall and Lieut. Gen. C. D. Herron, 1940 commander in Hawaii, detailing the history of an "alert" ordered that year because of fear of a Japanese sneak raid. Herron reported that that alert had not upset troops or the civil population.

The fact that Hawaiian forces were kept on the alert for months in 1940, on direct orders from the War Department, was disclosed in the Army Pearl Harbor Inquiry Board's report made public last August.

The first document in the Marshall-Short file was a letter dated February 7, 1941, when Short took over his command.

Marshall's "Impression"

In that letter the chief of staff told him:

"My impression of the Hawaiian problem has been that if no serious harm is done us during the first six hours of known hostilities, thereafter the existing defenses would discourage an enemy against the hazard of an attack.

"The risk of sabotage and the risk involved in a surprise raid by air and by submarine, constitute the real perils of the situation. Frankly, I do not see any landing threat in the Hawaiian Islands so long as we have air superiority."

"Major Consideration"

Marshall added that "the fullest protection for the fleet is the ("the" underscored) rather than a ("a" underscored) major consideration for us."

Marshall also advised that he understood from Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, that Husband E. Kimmel, new fleet commander, was sometimes "brusque and undiplomatic" but "at heart a very kindly man."

Marshall hoped that Short would always make it "clearly apparent" to Kimmel that the Army's mission was to protect the navy base. He said he accentuated that because the day before he had run into "old army and navy feuds" on another matter.

Sought Air Protection

The chief of staff said he would do all he could to strengthen air protection in Hawaii and was looking into the possibility of getting barrage balloons from England.

Short wrote Marshall a lengthy letter February 19 outlining conditions he found and saying he was taking steps, among other things, for:

1. Co-operation with Navy.

2. Dispersion and protection of aircraft and of the repair, maintenance and servicing of aircraft.

3. Improvement of the harbor defense artillery.

Marshall Asked For Report

On March 5 Marshall asked for "early review" of the situation on defense from air attack. He told Short that establishing a satisfactory system of co-ordinating all available means "is a matter of first priority."

Short replied that one of the first projects he had investigated was "the aircraft-warning service, which I believe is vital to defense of these islands."

He said the National Park Service was making certain restrictions on use of its lands and he thought the Secretary of War (Stimson) ought to take it up directly with the Secretary of the Interior (Ickes).

Urged "Quibbling Be Stopped"

"Defense of these islands and adequate warning for the United States fleet is so dependent upon the early completion of this aircraft warning service that I believe all quibbling over details should be stopped at once," Short added.

The Hawaiian commander got back a letter March 15, signed by Gen. William Bryden in the absence of Marshall, which said Park Service officials "are willing to give up the temporary use of their lands when other lands are not suitable for the purpose" but would not waive a requirement that all building plans be submitted to them.

As it developed, no permanent radar stations had been constructed months later when the Japanese attacked.

Pressed For Equipment

Over the months, Short was pressing continually for more equipment and funds. His letters stressed, too, a need for more air fields and protective revetments.

"On all fields," he said on March 15, "the planes have been kept lined up on the field where they would suffer terrific loss."

Short told his commander May 2 that the Navy apparently was getting funds without submitting detailed estimates and hence had been able to "accumulate required materials and almost corner the local labor market."

In May, Short held maneuvers and reported to Marshall that the Navy had co-operated and there had been simulated bombing attacks.

Dispute Over Airfield

In July-August there was a difference of opinion over where a new airfield should be established. Short proposed a location between Kipapa and Waikakalua, but the War Department decided on Kahuku Point.

Marshall wrote October 10 that he had been looking over Short's "standard operating procedure," prepared July 14, and was "concerned with missions assigned to air units."

"For instance," he added, "the Hawaiian air force, among other things, is assigned the mission of defending Schofield barracks and all airfields on Oahu against sabotage and ground attacks. . . .

"This seems inconsistent with the emphasis that we are placing on air strength in Hawaii."

Gives Explanation

Short replied that with planes in the air the airforces would have 3,344 men "with no assigned duties" and that any ground threat probably would not develop until planes were destroyed.

Once the planes were lost, he added, several thousand airmen might be left "and it would not look plausible to have them sit down and do nothing while infantrymen were detailed to protect them and their airfields."

Marshall suggested in reply that the airmen "be permitted to concentrate on the technical training."

Reason For 1940 Alert

It was disclosed that the 1940 alert, while Herron commanded army forces in Hawaii, was ordered because the War Departme it suspected Japan was timing a settlement of differences with Russia so as to undertake a raid against Oahu.

On June 17, the War Department ordered an alert of the "complete defensive organization to deal with possible trans-Pacific raid." It suggested this be done on a "maneuver basis" to avoid "creating public hysteria."

Herron reported next morning that he had "all anti-aircraft observations and security detachments in position with live ammunition and orders to fire on foreign planes over restricted areas and in defense of any essential installations."

"No Excitement"

"Some local interest in ammunition issues but no excitement," he added. "Navy inshore and offshore air patrols in operation."

Herron was told June 19 that he might modify his measures but "adequate guards on a semi-permanent basis will be maintained at all critical points."

On June 24, Herron wrote Marshall saying all had gone "smoothly and efficiently."

"I have been highly gratified," he said, "by the promptness and precision with which the planes get off the ground every morning promptly at 4.30."

Further Relaxation

On July 15, Marshall authorized additional relaxation "except that first, precautions against sabotage will be continued on the basis of instant readiness, and second, aerial patrol measures can be reduced to a training status, but so arranged as to be re-established on an alert basis on short notice."

After two months of such precautions, Herron advised that the "only present measurable loss is the weathering of the hundreds of miles of field wire in place, largely for anti-aircraft purposes, but that is probably worthwhile."

Herron's View On Alert

Asked by Marshall on August 28 whether the alert, as then in force, was imposing "too heavy a tax to continue on the present basis," Herron replied:

"My absolutely frank and honest opinion is that 'the alert' as now carried on here does not dull the keen edge, or exhaust morale. I think that our real power accumulates and that now that the season of individual target practice and instruction is about over, the maneuvers of numerous small units camped along the beaches will build up naturally and easily the effectiveness of the alert."

MARSHALL TOLD ROOSEVELT IN 1941 U. S. ARMY MUST SUPPLEMENT BRITISH

Marshall Note to Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 (AP)—Congressional investigators received from President Roosevelt's secret files today a memorandum by General Marshall saying:

"Britain is reaching limit of usable manpower. We must supplement her forces."

The document bore no date, but Gerhard Gesell, a counsel for the investigating committee, said that it appeared to have been written in the summer of 1941.

The memorandum said General Marshall wanted to prepare task forces for air and naval bases in the British Isles and Ireland "to secure, when opportunity offers, additional bases encircling Germany."

The note, which bore marginal notations by Mr. Roosevelt, said that it would be "disastrous" to reduce the size of the American Army so that additional war material could be sent to Britain and Russia.

General Marshall started off with a statement of "basic consideration, national policy," in which he called "eventual defeat of Germany" one of the objectives.

"Germany cannot be defeated by supply of munitions to friendly powers and air and naval operations alone," the memorandum said, adding:

"Large ground forces will be required."

The general recommended rushing the build-up of air power in the Philippines "together with small increases in modern ground Army equipment and personnel to restrain Japan from advance into Malaysia or eastern Siberia."

He said that task forces should be prepared to hold bases in case Britain collapsed and "for prompt employment against Atlantic islands and Natal region of Brazil" if Western Hemisphere security were threatened. General Marshall set out what he called "immediate requirements." Along the margin on this and the next page were notes in what Mr. Gesell said was the handwriting of Mr. Roosevelt.

As an example, a notation beside a paragraph dealing with Philippine requirements said "12,000 additional." The paragraph reads:

"Philippines. Present garrison or en route 31,000 (12,000 native troops). Critical situation. Japan wavering. Strong air and naval forces on her flank may deter her or wean her from Axis. If Japan moves, forces in position to assist associated powers. No reduction possible, on the contrary reinforcements of about 12,000 troops, including air complements, in prospect. Philippine army in process of organization—80,000 by Jan. 1, 1942."

Opposite a paragraph on Hawaii, a notation said: "O. K. Leave as is."

In this paragraph, General Marshall said:

"Hawaii. Authorized and present 41,000. Naval installations (Kaneohe Bay) being expanded, requiring additional defenses. Presence of fleet reduces threat of major attack. Reinforcements can be deferred as long as fleet remains in Pacific. Reinforcements must be available in United States to give fleet freedom of action."

The Chief of Staff presented a long series of arguments against any reduction in the size of the American forces, asserting at one point:

"Collapse of Russia, England, offensive tactics by Japan and belligerent attitude in Latin America are possibilities. We must prepare to meet these eventualities."

He told the President that to defeat Germany "we must come to grips with and annihilate the German military machine."

He argued that additional materials for the British and Russians could be obtained only by cutting back American requirements, adding that any such reduction "might result in fatal delay."

Oahu Called Strongest Fortress

Another document from Mr. Roosevelt's secret files contained a pre-Pearl Harbor estimate that the Island of Oahu "is believed to be the strongest fortress in the world."

Across the top of it, however, in what Mr. Gesell said was the handwriting of Mr. Roosevelt's aide, the late Maj. Gen. E. M. Watson, was a scrawled notation:

"Modern planes have completely changed situation as to the defensibility."

The document was entitled "Aide Memoire—Defense of Hawaii." Its origin was not shown but it bore a notation, "Came to file 5/3/41 (May 3, 1941)."

The document said that "with adequate air defense, enemy carriers, naval escorts and transports will begin to come under air attack at a distance of approximately 750 miles." It added:

"This attack will increase in intensity until when, within 200 miles of the objective, the enemy forces will be subject to attack by all types of bombardment closely supported by our most modern pursuit."

The document said that "including the movement of aviation now in progress, Hawaii will be defended by thirty-five of our most modern flying fortresses, thirty-five medium range bombers, thirteen light bombers, 150 pursuit of which 105 are of our most modern type."

In this sentence, before the figures thirty-five, Gesell said Marshall had inked in an asterisk, keyed to this handwritten notation below: "Due to make a mass flight from mainland to Hawaii May 20th. A number of this type of plane could be dispatched immediately if the situation gets critical."

The document concluded with this paragraph:

"In point of sequence, sabotage is first to be expected and may, within a very limited time, cause great damage. On this account and in order to assure strong control, it would be highly desirable to set up a military control of the islands prior to the likelihood of our involvement in the Far East."

Says Army and Navy Could Have Smashed Attack on Pearl Harbor.

JAPAN RISKED CATASTROPHE

Failure Would Have Meant Ruin of South Pacific Campaign—Didn't Anticipate Blow.

Washington, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Gen. George C. Marshall declared today that the Army and Navy had enough strength at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, to break up the Japanese attack and "greatly lessen" the damage.

Had the forces been alert and the attack smashed, Marshall told the joint congressional Pearl Harbor investigating committee, the entire Japanese campaign of aggression would have been ruined.

Although the planes and guns at Pearl Harbor were never in profusion, Marshall testified, "they had at least the means to break up that attack so it could only have done limited harm."

Marshall said he meant that the entire garrison on the alert "couldn't have stopped the attack but could have disorganized it and shaken it off its targets, thereby greatly lessening the damage that was done."

Foe Risked Catastrophe.

The wartime chief of staff testified that the enemy was risking the great hazard of catastrophe itself.

"A surprise attack is either a triumph or a catastrophe," the five-star General explained.

He said that if the Japanese had been detected and hit hard at Pearl Harbor that Sunday morning four years ago tomorrow, there would have been these results:

The Japanese advance into Malaya would have been halted. Their drive into Indo-China would have had to stop. The Burma Road, lifeline to China, would not have been cut. Singapore would not have fallen.

Didn't Expect Jap Blow.

Marshall asserted that the risk Japan took at Hawaii was so great that he himself didn't anticipate it.

"That specific operation was not visualized by me," Marshall acknowledged. "I felt that the hazards were too great. As I recall it, that was my thinking at the time."

Marshall agreed with the suggestion by Committee Counsel William D. Mitchell that the State of "non-alertness" in Hawaii influenced the decision to attack. He also agreed with a curt, yes, that the Japanese could have recalled their lurking fleet if it became evident that the Hawaii area was "on the alert."

No Commitments for War.

Marshall also told the committee:

1. There was nothing at Allied conferences before Pearl Harbor that committed the United States to go to war unless attacked, and he knew of no such commitment by President Roosevelt or any one else.

2. Early in 1941, he decided "to rob practically all combat pursuit squadrons in the United States of most of their P-36 planes" to bolster defenses of Hawaii. Thirty-one were sent.

Soon after taking the stand, Marshall said that he participated in Allied staff conferences of American, British, Canadian and Dutch officers.

His testimony was elicited to clear up contentions that the United States was committed to war before December 7, 1941, the day the Japanese struck Pearl Harbor.

Mitchell took questioning of Marshall, one of the most important witnesses of the inquiry, and dwelt at length on the pre-war military talks.

A report of some of the conferences was inserted in the record and Mitchell asked:

"Did you ever know of any commitment by the President or any one else by which the United States was committed to engage in war without being attacked?"

"No, sir, I did not," Marshall replied.

"Did these conferences contain any commitment for the United States to go to war?"

"No, sir," Marshall answered emphatically. "I didn't interpret them as such. They were intended to deal only with possible eventualities."

Not in Political Discussions.

30.24 - 32183

Mitchell asked whether Marshall knew of any commitment made at the historic Roosevelt-Churchill conference in August, 1941, when the Atlantic Charter was proclaimed from the cruiser Augusta at sea.

"I was not involved in the political discussions," was the General's terse reply. Marshall said he was occupied in military talks with the late Sir John Dill, chief of Britain's ground forces during that meeting.

He said he also did not know of parallel British-American protests to Japan until he returned to the United States and general discussions with the State Department were started. Then, he said, he learned of the message President Roosevelt had sent "after he sent it."

Robbed Fields in U. S.

The matter of sending additional pursuit planes to Hawaii was brought up by committee counsel, who, recalled a War-Navy Department agreement in early 1941 that attack from the air was Pearl Harbor's No. 1 danger.

As a result of that, Marshall said, he sought "to see what radical measures might be taken to meet to a degree" the needs of the Pacific outpost.

"I made the decision," he said, "to rob practically all combat pursuit squadrons in the United States of most of their P-36 planes."

The general explained that there were certain engine defects in the then new P-40 (Warhawk) fighter planes. Thirty-one P-36's were rounded up, he recalled, leaving most fighter squadrons in the United States with three P-36's each. Marshall said the thirty-one, with the pursuit planes already in Hawaii, brought the total there to fifty.

Marshall's Three Points.

In all his planning, Marshall asserted, he had in mind "planes and guns for defense against an air attack on Hawaii."

As far back as Feberuary 6, 1941, the committee learned, Marshall stated at a conference with Gen. H. H. Arnold, Air Force chief, Major-Gen. Sherman Miles, intelligence head, and Lieut.-Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, war plans chief, that:

1. The Navy had too few nets at Pearl Harbor for defense against torpedoes carried by either submarine or plane . . . and there was a possibility of a Japanese attack.

2. The planes available in Honolulu were out of date and there should be "a reasonable number" of top-flight planes which would outperform anything the Japanese could bring on their carriers.

3. There were two active defense areas—Panama and Honolulu.

The minutes of Col. Orlando Ward, secretary to the General Staff, outlining how Marshall made these points were introduced into the record.

On February 19, 1941, Marshall was shown to have told a War Department council meeting: "Out in Hawaii the fleet is anchored, but they have to be prepared for any surprise attack. I don't say any probable attack, but they have to be prepared against a surprise attack from a trick ship or torpedo planes."

At a meeting of generals and colonels on February 25, 1941, Marshall was quoted as saying that he did not feel a surprise attack in Hawaii "is a possibility or even a probability, but they must guard against everything."

At the same meeting, the records disclosed, Marshall remarked that as a result of a shortage of spare parts, "although we have on paper about 500 planes, I doubt that we could put 300 in the air."

Reverses Earlier Position.

Marshall told the committee that Lieut.-Gen. Walter Short, Army Commander in Hawaii, pressed very hard for installation of radar at Pearl Harbor and that the Department of Interior at first objected to the site he selected on the National Park Service grounds. A secondary site would have limited the scope of the radar. Marshall said, and "therefore Gen. Short was very much concerned" about authorization to go ahead at the original place.

Short was trying to get the station installed for equipment that was due in June, 1941, Marshall explained.

The same day that the authority was withheld, Marshall said, the National Park Service reversed itself and decided to allow the construction to proceed provided Short sent the general plans here by airmail.

A letter from Short to Marshall on March 15, 1941, told of "a most serious situation" in shortage of equipment principally the lack of long-range detectors.

Had Repeated Warnings.

Through documents put in the inquiry record, the committee learned that Marshall repeatedly had spoken of and warned about the possibility of a surprise enemy attack on Hawaii.

Mitchell asked Marshall for his estimate of the ability of the Army forces in Hawaii late in 1941 to resist an air attack.

Marshall said they were short of four-engine bombers, having only twelve; they were short by a few three-inch anti-aircraft guns, and short "more seriously" in anti-aircraft guns of lesser caliber. Fighter plane strength, he said, had been "brought up considerably." There was what he called a "moderate setup" in radar and "what I thought was an ample number of troops to defend the beaches successfully."

Mentions Increased Vigilence.

"Military forces in number and equipment were more nearly up to the desired standards than to any other installation in the Army," he said.

But he reminded the committee that months before he had said that the principal problem at Hawaii was to be prepared against the eventuality of a surprise attack.

"I thought there ws sufficient men and material at their disposal to resist an enemy effort, be it a raid or a more serious attack," he said.

Marshall acknowledged that bomber strength was weak for any attempt to sink aircraft carriers approaching the island. But other things could have helped, he said, mentioning specifically "increased vigilance" and "the operation of attack planes, intercept planes."

Predicted Air Attack.

Simultaneously with Marshall's appearance, the committee received documents showing that months before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor he had told Short of the danger from a surprise air and submarine raid. In letters to Short from February to October, 1941, he also cautioned that the first six hours of hostilities would be the most critical period for the Pacific bastion.

A burst of applause from the audience greeted the smiling former Chief of Staff as he entered the hearing room.

Asked by committee counsel what his duties were as Chief of Staff in 1939-1945, Marshall read from Army regulations:

"As the agent, and in the name of the Secretary of War, he issues such orders as will insure that the plans of the War Department are harmoniously executed by all agencies of the military establishment and that the military program is carried out speedily and efficiently."

Once the five-star general completes his testimony, he will leave for China as a special envoy for President Truman.

Vet Who Detected Planes Hits Probe

Williamsport, Pa., Dec. 6 (AP)—The soldier—now a civilian—who detected and vainly warned of the approach of Japanese planes to Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, said today that any attempt to fix blame for that disaster "has a strong odor of the election in 1948."

The statement was made by Joseph L. Lockard, who was on duty as an army private at Pearl Harbor on the day of the attack, in a interview in which he termed "asinine" the House Senate congressional Pearl Harbor inquiry.

Lockard, 24, was recently discharged from the Army with the rank of first lieutenant. He is an insurance adjuster employed by a Williamsport firm.

"Let's Serve The Future"

Referring to the current congressional inquiry, Lockard said "fully realizing the grammatical extent of the word 'asinine' it is still applicable. Let's serve the future, not the past.

"To attempt to fix blame on any one individual or any political group has a strong odor of the election in 1948. It would be comparable to blaming England for not anticipating Hitler's elaborate war program in 1939 and crushing him at that early date."

"This present investigation," said Lockard, a tell, slender man with wavy black hair, "is doing the country no good. We need the wholehearted participation of every legislative body, every person in authority and every private citizen in the job of making the United States an international leader with which the rest of the world will always have to reckon."

No Reason To Appear

Asked if he would be willing to appear before the congressional committee, Lockard replied:

"There would be no reason for me to appear because they are delving into prewar activities."

At the time of the Pearl Harbor attack, Lockard, then 20, was a radar specialist attached to Signal Corps Aircraft Warning, Hawaii.

UNION REJECTS GENERAL MOTORS PAY BOOST OFFER

Strike Continues, No Change in Status, Reuther Announces.

UNION STANDS FIRM

Insists Company Can Meet 30% Increase Without Price Boost.

DETROIT, Dec. 6.—(AP) The United Auto Workers (C.I.O.) tonight rejected a General Motors offer to "reinstate" its offer of a 10 per cent wage rate increase which the union turned down prior to the start of the GM strike 16 days ago.

Walter Reuther, U.A.W. vice president, told a press conference after the meeting between GM and U.A.W. officials adjourned, "The strike continues with no change in status."

Will Meet Today

Both GM and U.A.W. spokesmen said, however, that another negotiating session would be held Friday.

Harry W. Anderson, GM vice president, said in a prepared statement, "The offer to the auto workers was made on a 10 per cent basis subject to a final adjustment after detailed analysis."

Reuther, commenting on the company offer, declared, "The corporation still refuses to discuss arithmetic and the fact that ability to pay should be a factor in wage discussions.

"We still maintain that an adequate wage to settle this strike is a 30 per cent increase without increase in prices."

R. J. Thomas, president of the U.A.W., added, "I told the corporation that it was my opinion that the proffered wage increase was inadequate. And the strike will continue until such time as an agreement has been made on satisfactory terms."

Reuther told newsmen that during the conference a GM spokesman declared, "We don't say we can't pay 30 per cent; we won't discuss it."

Company Evades Question

Thomas interjected that he asked directly if GM could afford to pay the 30 per cent, but that GM spokesmen refused to answer.

Reuther reiterated the union stand that it does not want to "take a wage increase if it means increased prices." He said "90 per cent of today's conference was spent in trying to get the company to discuss economics."

The union officials disclosed that there was no discussion at today's session on the company's charges that the U.A.W. had engaged in "illegal picketing."

"We will try tomorrow to get these people to accept some very sound practices in collective bargaining involving arithmetic. We are going to keep trying and trying," Reuther concluded.

Today's meeting marked the first time GM and U.A.W. officials had conferred since the walkout hit 213,000 GM workers in 20 states.

The fact that the two came together was taken as a hopeful sign although neither the union nor the corporation, bitter antagonists heretofore, would commit itself as to whether a settlement could soon be achieved.

Before the session began it was made apparent the U.A.W.-C.I.O. was not offering a modification of its demand for a 30 per cent wage rate increase.

Reuther, chief negotiator for the union, observed as he entered the meeting that "we're resuming negotiations on the same basis where we left off."

Reuther, who was smiling broadly, remarked "that's up to the company" when asked whether the situations were as optimistic as some newspaper headlines indicated.

In a telegram to GM locals Reuther advised the union was "a step ahead" in having secured the meeting.

"Our meeting today," he said, "is the first step by the corporation in the right direction. These concessions by GM show we are winning some ground."

Optimism Spreads

One report today said the strike might end within ten days with a compromise, but this lacked backing from any official of either General Motors or the U.A.W.-C.I.O.

A factor credited with influencing optimism regarding a settlement was the reaction to President Truman's labor peace legislation proposal to Congress and his intention to name a fact-finding body to intervene in the dispute.

The union denounced the President's plans and General Motors, cool toward Mr. Truman's proposals, had expressed hope that the strike could be settled before a fact-finding group could step into the picture.

A citizens committee invited by the U.A.W.-C.I.O. to examine the record of the GM-union negotiations reported that in its opinion it was "not too late" for a voluntary settlement to be reached in place of Federal intervention.

"If President Truman and his advisors had had access to the transcript of negotiations," the committee said, "we believe they would have been in a position to insist more firmly on the full use of the collective bargaining process before suggesting intervention of the government."

G.M. Electrical Union Offered Half Of Demand

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—Neil Brant, international representative of the CIO-Electrical Workers, said today General Motors Corporation had offered the union about 50 per cent of its $2 a day wage-increase demand.

He announced the union's 25,000 members were voting tonight on the new offer and he expected to have the results tomorrow morning.

Brant said the "big three" of the CIO—the United Auto Workers, the Steel Workers and the Electrical Workers—had considered the G.M. offer jointly in Pittsburgh on Tuesday. He declined to comment on the reaction of the UAW or the CIO president, Philip Murray, or to anticipate the outcome of the voting.

Strike Vote Set Thursday

The Electrical Workers now are planning a strike on December 13 in all General Motors plants with which they have contracts as well as in General Electric and Westinghouse plants. Approximately 270,000 workers are involved.

Brant made public a letter to the union from H. W. Anderson, G.M. personnel vice president, offering an increase of 13½ cents an hour as "the best offer we are willing to make."

Labor Bill Hearings Likely Next Week

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—Strike-prevention legislation that has caused a deep rift between the Truman Administration and organized labor began its precarious journey through Congress today.

Introduced formally in the House under the name of Chairman Norton (D., N.J.), it was sped to the Labor Committee, which called a meeting for tomorrow to decide what to do about it.

Acting Chairman Ramspeck (D., Ga.) said he expected the committee to order brief public hearings next week and to approve the bill in substantially its present form. His goal, Ramspeck said, is to have the bill passed before Christmas in compliance with Mr. Truman's request in a special message to Congress on Monday.

The Bill's Provisions

Ramspeck called the 1,000-word measure" the Administration's bill" and said it embodied everything the President asked in an effort to prevent strikes in major industries.

The measure would give the President authority to set up fact-finding commissions ot study the issues involved in labor controversies when the Secretary of Labor certifies that a strike of serious magnitude impends and cannot be settled voluntarily.

Strikes, work stoppages or lockouts would be barred for 30 days.

But the bill specifically provides that nothing in its provisions shall "require an individual employé to render labor or service without his consent, nor . . . make the quitting of his labor or service by an individual employé an illegal act."

As the bill went into the House machinery William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, reiterated his opposition to it. But he disagreed with a contention by CIO President Philip Murray that the proposal is designed to "weaken and ultimately destroy labor union organizations."

Green's Attitude

Green said after a White House conference that he believed the President was sincere in his desire for effective legislation.

But, the AFL head said, he could not agree with the 30-day "cooling-off" period, because he feared it would promote rather than discourage labor unrest.

Green added that the President told him the legislation was intended to head off "vicious" anti-labor legislation that some members of Congress have threatened to sponsor.

33 P.C. RISE SEEN IN LIVING COST

Government Gives Chance to Resume Wage Talks.

Washington, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—The administration provided a possible wedge today for reopening some deadlocked wage disputes by boosting its estimate of how much living costs have increased since 1941.

Stabilization Administrator John C. Collet announced that the cost-of-living rise is closer to 33 per cent than the previously accepted 29.5 or 30 per cent. And he added that employers who raised pay scales accordingly could use that factor as a basis for seeking price increases.

Collet was elaborating on President Truman's announced wage-price policy. In that declaration of October 30 Mr. Truman listed cost-of-living rises among the few classes of pay boosts which could be considered by the OPA in passing on price increases. Neither Mr. Truman then, nor Collet last night, offered any guaranty that the OPA would raise ceilings as a result.

Direction to Agencies.

Collet directed Government agencies dealing with various phases of the wage-price policy to use the new 33 per cent figure in comparing the increase in average straight time hourly earnings of a worker with the advance in living costs since January, 1941. He said he was advised by the Department of Labor that 33 per cent "most accurately reflects the increase in the cost of living between those dates."

A special prdesidential cost-of-living committee headed by William H. Davis reported last spring that 3 or 4 per cent should be added to the then estimated 29.5 per cent advance to take account of poorer quality merchandise and the disappearance of low-cost goods from the market.

The Collet order states that when the OPA is unable to estimate cost increases resulting from wage increases "within a reasonable margin of error" it should wait to obtain experience based on "a representative period subsequent to the wage or salary increase." Some OPA economists thought this might apply to the automobile industry particularly, since the current period is not representative of post-war production, and recent price adjustments were based on 1941 output.

Labor Boos Decision by WLB

National Board Won't Disqualify Itself in Western Union's Wage Ruling Appeal.

Washington, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Before an angry, booing crowd of New York unionists, the National War Labor Board refused today to disqualify itself from hearing the Western Union's Company's appeal from a New York WLB wage decision.

Joseph P. Selly, president of the New York local of the American Communications Association (C. I. O.), leaped to his feet when the board's decision was announced and declared that the union would not be bound by its findings.

The union, which had obtained a 10-cent hourly wage increase from the regional WLB, charged today that the board had improperly prejudged the case and asked that the national WLB disqualify itself. Selly asserted that two of the WLB's public members, Louis Gill and Edwin White, assured Western Union Company officials that they would "throw the union's case into the wastebasket."

Unionists Flock to Capital.

Five busloads of unionists, mostly women, left New York at midnight to be here for the start of today's hearings. Others came by rail, and about 400 in all were scattered through the Labor Department auditorium as Selly voiced his charges before a full WLB panel.

The board retired into executive session to consider Selly's charges, then returned to the auditorium and its chairman, Lloyd K. Garrison, announced that all members were satisfied that no member had prejudged the case or had given such assurances to the company. "The motion that the board disqualify itself is unanimously denied." he said.

Garrison's prepared statement said the WLB would expect both parties to live up their written agreement to be bound by the result of any appeal taken. He added that both the labor and industry members of the WLB had expressed confidence in the integrity and fairness of the public members.

Amid the booing which followed, Selly rose and stated: "I wish to protest that shameful statement and especially the participation of the board's labor members in it. We think the board is proceeding illegally and we do not intend to be bound by its decision." ¼

The union took a strike vote last week. The tally was 5,227 in favor of authorizing strike action 438 against.

U. S. POLICY RUIN LAID TO ACHESON

Hurley Says Undersecretary 'Defeated American Diplomacy in Iran.'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—(AP) Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley asserted today that American foreign policy had been "defeated," and charged it was an "inside job."

The former ambassador to China also told the Senate Foreign Relations committee that Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson had played "a leading part" in what Hurley termed destruction of this country's policy in Iran.

Hurley, who resigned his diplomatic post last week, did not go into any particulars. He said simply that his accusations would be borne out by documents he had asked the State department to produce.

Byrnes to Testify

There was no indication whether the documents will be introduced when Secretary of State Byrnes testifies before the committee tomorrow.

Hurley clashed with Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) and other members of the committee several times in the course of today's hearing on his complaints that State department career officials were sabotaging United States foreign policy.

At one time the white-haired soldier-diplomat demanded to know whether he was on trial.

"If you are," Connally replied, "you put yourself there."

Another time, Hurley objected that Senator Tunnel (D-Del.) was asking questions he had answered in yesterday's testimony.

"I am very tired, I am doing my best," Hurley said, "but I will go over the testimony if the committee requests it."

Hurley's reference to an inside job was in a statement he read to the committee just before it adjourned. He said:

"The fact is, Mr. Chairman, that the defeat of the principles of the Atlantic Charter, the defeat of the principles of the Iran declaration, the use of America's power to uphold predatory ideologies, contrary to the announced policies of the government is an inside job.

"This is true whether the propaganda comes from career men or others."

Asked to Name Men

Hurley said in the statement that he had been asked to name the men "guilty of leaks from the State department, which leaks are designed to defeat the foreign policy of the United States."

He said that while he did not have intimate knowledge of what had been happening in Washington, "I do recall that career men were arrested on information supplied by the FBI."

"They usually base their arrests on fact," Hurley added.

The Texas senator cautioned the hearing that no outbursts would be tolerated and that he would insist on courtesy.

"Who was it?" Connally demanded when Hurley complained of interference by career men.

"All right," Hurley answered, "it was Dean Acheson."

To Connally's question, "What did he do?" Hurley replied:

"I prefer to submit the documents."

Connally observed that Hurley's testimony would be as good as the document.

"I don't want to do this," Hurley said.

"Well don't," Connally snapped. Hurley said:

"I can do it. I'm not bluffing. All right, here she goes. Square yourself!"

Hurley then related that at the request of President Roosevelt he had helped to frame the American-British-Russian declaration at Tehran regarding Iran.

He read the document and emphasized it had said the three powers were "at one with the government of Iran in a desire for the maintenance of independent sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran, in accordance with the terms of the Atlantic Charter."

At no time during the hearing did he explain the connection of this document with his complaint against Acheson, nor was he asked to elaborate on this point.

Bridges (R.-N. H.) had asked him to elaborate upon his earlier testimony naming Atcheson, who was formerly Assistant Secretary of State.

"Let me be frank," Hurley said. "In the defeat of the foreign policy of President Roosevelt and former Secretary of State Stettinius, I believe Dean Acheson took a leading part."

Hurley said that documents he has asked the State Department to produce could substantiate this.

Byrnes to Testify.

Under-Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, and other State Department career men achieved the defeat of American foreign policy in Iran. A little earlier he said that Acheson both destroyed and defeated American policy in that little nation that was the scene of one of the Tehran Conference.

"I don't know how many career men assisted him (Atcheson) in defeat of the policy, but I do know it was defeated," Hurley said. He did not elaborate. He is testifying regarding the reasons for his recent resignation as Ambassador to China.

He clashed frequently with the committee chairman, Senator Connally (D.Tex), and other committee members at a stormy session. He made his charges against Atcheson and the other career diplomats after Senator

Hurley Accuses Dean Acheson

Says Under-Secretary of State Destroyed and Defeated U. S. Policy in Iran.

Washington, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Patrick J. Hurley declared in a turbulent appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today that the present

30.24-32185

Just before the committee recessed until tomorrow—when Secretary of State Byrnes will be heard—Hurley read a written statement declaring: "My one endeavor is to bring to the attention of the American people the fact that the announced American policy is being defeated and has been defeated all over the world, not alone in China. The fact is, Mr. Chairman, that the defeat of the principles of the Atlantic Charter, the defeat of the principles of the Iran Declaration, the use of America's power to uphold predatory ideologies contrary to the announced policies of the Government is an inside job. This is true whether the propaganda comes from career men or others."

At one point of his testimony, Hurley digressed momentarily to register a minor complaint. He said that when he was on one diplomatic mission to New Zealand, it had taken him five months to get his mail changed from his previous post at Canberra, Australia, to Wellington, N. Z. He commented wryly that the State Department seemed to think that Canberra was the capital of New Zealand.

Objects to Questioning.

Fleet Admiral Nimitz was one of the throng of people who crowded the hearing chamber as Hurley testified. Hurley objected to Connally's questioning and demanded to know whether the Senator wanted to do the testifying. Connally admonished him that the hearing was going to be conducted in courtesy and repeated, referring to Hurley's assertions about Iran: "Who was it?"

"All right," Hurley answered grimly. "It was Dean Acheson."

"What did he do?" Connally asked.

"I prefer to submit the documents," Hurley said.

"A document is only a repetition of fact," Connally observed. "If you know, your testimony is as good as a document. Do you know what he did?"

Hurley hesitated. "I don't want to do this," he said.

"Well, don't," Connally snapped.

Hurley said: "I can do it. I'm not bluffing. All right, here she goes. Square yourself!"

Then Hurley launched into a description of circumstances surrounding the writing and issuing of the American-British-Russian declaration at Tehran regarding Iran.

Questioning on other points disclosed that the Iranian documents he referred to were a series of declarations he had prepared during the Tehran conference at the direction of President Roosevelt. Perhaps the most important of these, he said, was the pronouncement that the Three Big Powers were "at one with the Government of Iran in a desire for the maintenance of the independent sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran . . . in accordance with the terms of the Atlantic Charter." Hurley singled this declaration out, but did not immediately attempt to connect it up in any way with Dean Acheson.

Meanwhile today Artemus L. Gates, the Under-Secretary of the Navy, paid his second call on President Truman since his return from a trip which included a tour of China. He wouldn't talk about the conference. Reminded that he had told a news conference abroad that he would make some recommendations respecting policy in China upon his return, Gates merely smiled and said: "That's gotten into higher echelons than I can handle."

Atcheson To Reply To Hurley Charges

Tokyo, Dec. 6 (AP)—George Atcheson, Jr., whom former United States Ambassador Patrick Hurley accused of advocating lend-lease arms aid by the United States to Chinese Communists "to destroy the Nationalist Government of China," said today he would make a statement tomorrow.

Atcheson, who was counselor of the embassy in Chungking when Hurley was Ambassador, now is diplomatic adviser to General MacArthur.

Hurley's Summary

From the Herald Tribune Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Major General Patrick J. Hurley summed up today his two days of testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in a prepared statement which he read just before the session adjourned. At the beginning of the statement he reiterated some details of his charges against career men in the State Department. The text of the new part of his statement follows:

My one endeavor in this hearing is to bring to the attention of the American people the fact that the announced American policy is being defeated and has been defeated all over the world, not alone in China. The fact is that the defeat of the principles of the Atlantic Charter, the defeat of the principles of the Iran Declaration, the use of America's power to uphold predatory ideologies contrary to the announced policies of the government is an inside job. This is true whether the propaganda comes from career men or others.

The moral support and the productive strength of the United States should not be allied with any predatory ideology. By that it is meant that America's strength should not be used to promote conquest by either imperialism or Communism. Our leaders told the men who fought that we were fighting of democracy. Our fighting men were told that we were fighting for the right of all nations to choose the form of government under which they will live and that we demanded that all people have equal rights of access to the raw materials of the world. We fought and won the war for liberty, democracy and free enterprise. We have not established the principles for which we fought. It is not enough for America to be pro or anti-imperialist or pro or anti-Communist. America may not be able to procure for the people of the world liberty or free enterprise, but we do not have to join predatory ideologies that oppose these principles.

Principles Still Stand

The American people do not fully realize the strength of America's principles and idealism. Long before the impact of our productivity and our fighting men had registered in full force upon the battlefronts of the world the promises we made and the principles we promulgated rallied the freedom-loving people everywhere to resist, to fight until our material aid actually arrived. The principles of the Atlantic Charter and the Iran Declaration are no less moving, no less forceful today than they were in the dark days when they were first published to the world. The principles and the idealism of America are still the most effective weapons for the preservation of peace.

It has been said that my remarks about our foreign representatives are hurtful to the foreign service. They were intended to be helpful. Our purpose should be to increase and improve the caliber of the foreign service. We should improve the housing and the prerogatives of the foreign service men in every capital of the world. The people should be given all the information necessary to enable them to evolve a just foreign policy. There is no place in democracy for secret diplomacy. It will not work.

When a policy is properly decided upon and promulgated by constituted authority it should be the duty of the Foreign Service to make it effective. Each Foreign Service man should not be permitted to attempt to carry into effect his own idea of foreign policy that is in conflict with the policy and the commitments of the nation. Foreign Service men should, of course, be permitted to criticize the policy to their own government, but they should not remain in the service if they attempt to use organizations or citizens of other nations to undermine American official policy. Foreign Service men should not be permitted to assist other nations in defeating objectives of American foreign policy. Foreign Service men should be trained for their work as officers are trained for the Army and Navy.

I wish specifically to call attention again to the statement in my original release that the charge against the Foreign Service personnel is not inclusive. Many Foreign Service men have fought for American ideals and American rights.

We have shown in two wars that we do not seek territorial aggrandizement or special trade privileges. We do not seek a monopoly any place. We want a free world with equal opportunity for all people. There is little point in talking isolationism. We can never be isolated again. We must take our place internationally among the nations of the world. If we ever fight another war we should know why we are getting into it instead of having it started by others and then backing into it. Our international economics and diplomacy have not been integrated.

The United States should not give or lend to any nation or block of nations for predatory purposes. Be assured that the United States still has greater prestige than any nation in the world. We weaken our own prestige when we fail to use our strength for the attainment of the principles and the ideals for which we committed ourselves to war all over the world.

We agree with those who claim that there is something rotten in a civilization that must periodically wet itself down in the blood of the best specimens of the race, but I remind my fellow citizens that it is in that kind of a civilization that we live. If we are not prepared to live in that kind of a civilization we must change the civilization or perish.

Cites Alternatives

It should be our purpose to make the United Nations charter a living democratic organism with legal and moral authority and physical strength to insure peace. We hear many say that this internationalism will get us into war. Perhaps it will. But at least if it does we will know why we are getting into war. Heretofore we have entered the wars on the judgment of others for the cause of others, and we have ended the wars without having brought permanent peace, unless we can find it in united action through the United Nations.

The alternative of the United Nations is international power politics: blocs and alignments, and that is no alternative because the inevitable consequence is always war. It may be true that the time has not yet arrived when a world organization can be made to work. But let it not be said again of America that we did not try to make it work.

We should evolve a foreign policy that will henceforth give the United States a voice in determining the time, place and conditions under which we will send our men and materials into combat. If we must fight wars let us determine the cause for which we will fight.

America neither hates nor fears. Our government is the servant of the people and rules only our own people and does that by their consent and direction. We seek no special privileges in other nations. We do not wish to rule other peoples. We do not want nor would we accept any trade monopolies. There is no reason for timidity in determining the course or administration of our foreign policy. We must have the vitality of our convictions and pursue our legitimate objectives with vigor, intelligence and courage. Only thus can we make the victory we have won become the victory for which we have fought.

GERMANS DECLARED FAR BEHIND ON BOMB

Dr. S. A. Goudsmit Says They Were Not Even in the Race, Lacking Vision of Allies

NATIONS HELD IN DANGER

Dr. P. Morrison Tells Senate Group of the Totality of the Destruction in Japan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 (AP)—A leading Army investigator said today that German scientists despaired of developing the atomic bomb in a century and had shelved the idea of using it in the recent war. Yet the Nazis arrogantly assumed their nuclear research to be far ahead of the Allies, declared Dr. S. A. Goudsmit, head of the military intelligence mission sent to Germany to learn the enemy's work on atomic energy.

The University of Michigan Physics Professor also disclosed to the Senate Atomic Committee that we knew as little of Germany's progress as they about ours until it was definitely determined a year ago that the German atomic project had accomplished nothing.

"Despite preliminary press reports, we can say the Germans did not have anyhting at all," Dr. Goudsmit told the committee. "They had no pilot plant. It was all in the laboratory stage.

"Their scientists simply lacked the vision of our scientists. They felt it would take from fifty to a hundred years. And they abandoned any idea of using the bomb in the war."

Not until news broke of the American atomic bomb attacks on Japan did Germany realize how far ahead were their foes, said Dr. Goudsmit. He added that Goebbels' secret-weapon shouting and Hitler's threat of "bringing the whole world down with me" were just talk.

Chairman McMahon, Democrat, of Connecticut, suggested that Gen. George C. Marshall, former Chief of Staff, had been wrong in speaking of a race between Germany and the Allies in developing the weapon. Dr. Goudsmit said apparently we knew as little about Germany's progress as they did about ours.

"So if General Marshall talked about a race it was the turtle and the hare?" asked Senator McMahon.

The witness nodded.

Dr. Philip Morrison, who helped assemble the atomic bombs that fell on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, described how rays emitted after the blasts strangely affected the blood and made the victims a prey to fatal infection.

Most Within Mile Died Quickly

In a statement prepared for the special Senate committee he told of the gruesome findings of a party that inspected the devastated cities after the Japanese surrendered. He said most persons within a mile of the bombs died quickly—either from the great heat of the blast or injuries suffered in demolished buildings.

Many who escaped death by blast or burn, Dr. Morrison said, "died from the effects of radium-like rays emitted in great number from the bomb at the instant of the explosion."

"This radiation affects the blood-forming tissues in the bone marrow, and the whole function of the blood is impaired," the former University of Illinois physics instructor related. "The blood does not coagulate but oozes in many spots through the unbroken skin, and internally seeps into the cavities of the body. The white corpuscles which fight infection disappear."

Lack of these corpuscles permits infection to "prosper," Dr. Morrison said, "and the patient dies, usually two or three weeks after the exposure."

"I am not a medical man, but like all nuclear physicists I have studied this disease a little," Dr. Morrison said. "It is a hazard of our profession. With the atomic bomb, it became epidemic. War now can destroy not cities, but nations."

After describing the destruction wrought to Hiroshima, Mr. Morrison said it is probable that an atomic-bombed American city "would be as badly damaged as a Japanese city, though it would look less wrecked from the air."

"In Japan the wreckage burned clean; in a Western city, the rubble would stand in piles in the streets," he said. "But the city would be just as ruined and the people of the city as dead."

The United States is cutting production of atomic bomb materials in at least one of the key plants where the revolutionary weapon was developed. This was disclosed in a routine official report on job conditions made public today by the United States Employment Service.

The report said:

"Declining volume in the production of atomic bomb materials at Oak Ridge, Tenn., caused a drop in employment [during November] in the Knoxville area and reduced its classification from one of stringent labor demand to one of balanced supply."

No figures were given for either the plant or the area.

Atom-Bomb Part Output Is Cut

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP) — The United States is cutting production of atomic bomb materials in at least one of the key plants where the weapon was developed.

This was disclosed in a routine official report on job conditions made public today by the United States Employment Service. The report said:

"Declining volume in the production of atomic bomb materials at Oak Ridge, Tenn., caused a drop in employment (during November) in the Knoxville area and reduced its classification from one of stringent labor demand to one of balanced supply."

No figures were given for either the plant or the area.

The USES survey did not mention job conditions in the State of Washington area, where another atomic bomb project is located.

Dutch Working On Cyclotron

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—An Aneta dispatch from Eindhoven, Holland, tonight quoted Dr. F. A. Heyn, Dutch scientist, as asserting that Holland could produce an atom bomb within a year, if necessary. The Netherlands news agency said Dutch scientists had been working secretly on a 250-ton cyclotron and that the atom-smasher would be completed shortly.

ATOMIC RIVAL TO COAL SEEN

Scientists Forecast Competition In 3 To 20 Years

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Nine leaders in the atomic bomb project estimated variously today that possibly in three and almost certainly in twenty years America could have atomic power capable of competing with $15-a-ton coal.

In an extraordinary symposium held in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, the scientists outlined in detail before the fiftieth annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers the possibilities of harnessing the atom for peacetime use.

Groves "Too Pessimistic"

Maj. Gen. L. R. Groves, director of the entire bomb development, was top man in guessing "how soon." He placed his estimate in "decades."

Immediately, several of his assistants declared flatly he was "too pessimistic." Dr. Charles Thomas, vice president of the Monsanto Chemical Company, estimated ten years would do it. Dr. J. A. Wheeler, professor of nuclear physics at Princeton University, declared the goal could be realized in from three to ten years under ideal circumstances.

Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, acting as moderator, drew forth these answers in response to the specific question of "How long will it take to develop an atomic 100,000 kilowatt hour power plant that can compete with one run by coal costing $15-a-ton?"

All nine agreed that the time could be shortened if more expensive coal was taken as a base.

Other points by the atomic headliners were that:

The problem of producing atomic heat already has been solved at the big Hanford plant in Washington State.

One of the major difficulties will be to protect the users of atomic power from radio-active harm.

The protective devices must be so heavy that an atomic 100-kilowatt-hour power plant would weigh 50 tons, thereby ruling out use in automobiles and present airplanes.

Some believe atomic power could be used to run railroad locomotives; others feel ocean-going steamships would be the smallest vehicles in which such use would be feasible.

In Medical And Chemical Fields

Atomic byproducts already have been developed that may result in revolutionary advances in the medical and chemical fields, possibly throwing light on the origin of life itself.

The symposium panel, in addition to Groves, Conant, Wheeler and Thomas, was made up of Dr. George T. Felbeck, vice president of the Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corporation; Dr. Crawford H. Greenewalt, of the du Pont Company; P. C. Keith, president of Hydrocarbon Research, Inc.; William L. Laurence, science writer for the New York Times, and James C. White, president of the Tennessee Eastman Corporation.

Wheeler said there appeared to be no possible solution to the necessity of surrounding atomic power plants with thick barriers of iron or some other heavy substance, thereby automatically ruling out light-weight atomic engines.

Automic Power In Locomotives

Keith said he thought the use of atomic power in locomotives was "in the twilight zone," largely because the machine would have to be small enough "to go through tunnels." Thomas disagreed sharply, saying the ordinary hull of a locomotive could provide the necessary shield against radio-activity.

"I believe ocean-going ships will be about the smallest vehicles in which we can use atomic power," Groves said. "And even at that we will need physicists and scientists as part of the crew and this will mean high wages."

Thomas argued that the cost of power was relative and that atomic energy could be used soon in such things as mining operations where the ore was in an isolated area far from any ordinary source of power. Groves again chimed in to say that an awkward situation would be created when an ore deposit ran out, because the atomic plant necessarily would be too heavy to move.

Sabotage Factor Injected

On the question of "how soon," Groves brought out a new point in saying that the economy of atomic power plants would be affected by the ease with which they could be sabotaged. Even in peacetime, he said, an employé "suddenly going insane or having a fit of temper could destroy valuable equipment in a few seconds."

Laurence contended that "if General Groves was given full authority, such as he had on the original development of the bomb, we could be using atomic energy for peaceful purposes in less time than it took us to build the first bomb."

"I don't want any part of that job," Groves said. "But it is vitally important that we do not waste any time in this development. It simply is too important to the United States to neglect it. Whether it will take three or twenty years, the work must be driven at top speed."

NAVY DOCTORS ASK CONTROL OF BOMB

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Two leading Connecticut Navy doctors, reporting on first-hand observations last September 11 of the effects of the atomic bomb on Nagasaki, Japan, today described them as "unbelievable, awful, complete destruction, and disintegration."

For these reasons Lieut.-Commander Marvin A. Stevens and Benedict R. Harris concluded in an article in the Connecticut State Medical Journal, "the horrors of war and especially of the destructive and disabling force of atomic bombing, even in its infancy of application in the science of war, has been so impressed upon us that we add our feeble voice to the demand that those terrific elements of destruction be controlled . . . else we in turn destroy ourselves."

Stevens, former head football coach at Yale and New York University, and Harris said that most of the casualties were immediate from the blast, and the terrific heat engendered by the atomic bomb. As far as they were able to determine, there was "not enough deposit of radio-active material in the area to produce deleterious radiation effects at this time and it has been determined that all the cases received their over-radiation at the time of the actual bombing."

U.S. DEVELOPED OPERATIONS PLAN FOR MARTINIQUE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—(AP) A Senate-House committee learned today the United States had plans in the spring of 1941 for military landings on the French island of Martinique.

That Caribbean outpost was then in the control of officers under the Vichy French government.

The committee investigating the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor received the plans in an account of a War department conference May 19, 1941, six months before the U. S. entered the war.

Those attending were Secretary Stimson, General George C. Marshall, General H. H. Arnold of the Air corps, and others.

The minutes of the meeting showed that General Marshall said that "in the light of statements made in the Sunday papers with reference to Dakar and Martinique, I had the plans checked immediately."

There was no explanation of the statements in the papers. The minutes continued:

"The plan provides for 2,800 Marines, with the necessary landing equipment to make the initial landing, followed by the 1st division. The Marines have the necessary landing equipment for their troops. They will be opposed by 4,000 to 5,000, 50 per cent effective, troops.

"About 50 officers of the Martinique garrison will fight, including the admiral. The G-3 of the force is very pro-American. The French cruiser in Martinique is a first class cruiser ship with a top speed of 40 knots.

"The Secretary of War asked whether she was in good condition, and was informed that she was.

"Geneal Marshall indicated that it would take about 10 days for the Navy to get boats for the 1st division. He further indicated that it was primarily a naval mission, but that Army air should participate. He indicated that the B-18's in Puerto Rico would be staged at St. Croix. Puerto Rico is almost 400 miles from Martinique.

General Marshall indicated that that there were now in the United States 14 B-17's of the most modern type which he thought should not be sent out of the country in view of the current situation. These had been withheld from the Hawaiian department contingent.

"The Secretary of War asked if this would affect the impregnability of Hawaii.

"General Marshall said that it would not. He further said that we need some B-17's (but not of the most modern type) in Panama, and that he is recommending that nine be sent there. This matter is under consideration.

"General Arnold: There are now available 50 B-17's without leak-proof tanks and without armor.

"General: High bombing is possible in the Caribbean area, due to weather conditions, and these ships without leak-proof tanks could be effectively used there."

Pension Plan for Congress Wins Approval in Committee

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—(AP) A system of retirement benefits for congressmen to be financed largely through deductions from their pay was approved, 11 to 4, today by the House Civil Service committee.

Supporters emphasized the contributory feature and some objected to its being called a "pension system."

The program would be on a voluntary participation basis. It would be open to members of Congress, cabinet officers and other executive department heads.

They would pay into the retirement fund five per cent of their salary—or $500 annually in the case of senators and representatives.

Civil Service Chairman Ramspeck (D-Ga) said the legislation, by Rep. Vinson (D-Ga), merely would permit the lawmakers to participate in the present retirement system provided for other Federal employes.

Before being eligible for the minimum payment of $418 a year a member of Congress would have to serve five years and reach the age of 55 before retirement. The payments range upward on the basis of amounts contributed and age at time of retirement. A member who had served 35 years and who had contributed only the minimum $2,500 could retire at 75 years of age with annual income of $3,712. If the 35-year member had paid in $13,619 his retirement income at 75 would be $5,000 a year.

If a member were defeated for reelection before serving five years any money he had paid into the fund would be returned to him and he would get no retirement pay.

Vinson, veteran of 25 years in the House, declared the bill "elevates Congress to the proper degree of career recognition that it deserves."

A retirement system was voted by the House four years ago. However, that legislation caused "Bundles for Congress" shouts from some quarters and did not become law.

M'VAY GAVE ORDER TO LEAVE CRUISER

Sailor Says He 'Passed Word' on Indianapolis When Loud-Speaker System Failed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 (AP)—A survivor of the cruiser Indianapolis today expressed a firm belief that "no one could know the ship was going to sink until she took her last list and started to roll over."

Chief Gunner Cecil Harrison of Long Beach, Calif., was a witness before the Navy general court-martial trying the ship's commanding officer, Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d, on charges of negligence and inefficiency.

Harrison said that he had just come on watch at midnight, July 29-30, and was standing on deck as the ship steamed on a steady course at a speed of about seventeen knots, en route from Guam to Leyte.

There was a sudden flash and explosion, he said, followed quickly by another. After the explosion the ship settled about level and still riding high in the water. After several minutes the vessel took a slight list, he said, and held that position for several more minutes. Then, he related, there was a severe, sudden list, and the ship continued to roll until she sank, about fifteen minutes after the explosions.

One of the specifications in the charge against Captain McVay accused him of failing to issue "timely" orders to abandon ship, resulting in the loss of many lives.

One of the twelve survivors who testified today said that he heard Captain McVay shout orders from the bridge to abandon ship about ten minutes after the explosion.

Coxswain Edward H. Keyes, of Antigo, Wis., on duty on the captain's bridge, testified that his first act after the explosion was to check the ship's loudspeaker system. He found it out of order, and reported to the officer of the deck.

He was then ordered below to pass the word to all hands to go on deck. He said he carried out that order in the aft section of the ship, but was unable to get forward. Few men were remaining below, he said.

He reported back to the bridge in about five minutes, he said, and five minutes after he returned, Captain McVay shouted orders to men lined up on deck to abandon ship.

Raymond S. Jurkiewicz, seaman 1st class, of Hamtramck, Mich., on duty in the ship's combat intelligence center when the explosion came, testified he went out on deck and was informed by men on the signal bridge that the word to abandon ship had been passed.

No other witness testified that they heard any abandon ship order, but all agreed that it could have been passed and did not reach them.

Lieut.Commander John Reid, New London, N. H., the cruiser's supply officer, told the court he was asleep in his quarters when the ship was attacked shortly after midnight. He said he proceeded to the fantail where he stayed until pulled into the water.

Says McVay Ordered Men Off

Coxswain Testifies at Trial Word Was Given to Abandon Ship 10 Minutes After Blast.

Washington, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—The Navy general court-martial heard testimony today that Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d shouted verbal orders to abandon ship approximately ten minutes after the cruiser Indianapolis was shaken by the first of the two explosions which sank her.

Edward H. Keyes, coxswain, who was standing watch when the heavy cruiser was hit, told the court that he attempted to pass orders over the ship's loud speaker system but found it out of order and unworkable. This testimony had a direct bearing on the charge that McVay was inefficient in failing to issue timely orders to abandon ship before the Indianapolis sank last July 30 while en route from Guam to Leyte.

The other charge on which McVay is being tried is that he failed to set a zigzag course in waters where enemy submarine contacts had been plotted.

Passed Word Below.

Keyes, who comes from Antigo, Wis., said that when the loud speaker system failed, the officer of the deck then ordered him to go below and pass the word throughout the ship to all hands to go topside. He passed the word throughout the after section of the ship but was not able to get forward, he said. He returned to the bridge and so reported to the officer of the deck.He said the assignment required about five minutes.

He testified that he saw Capt. McVay on the bridge before and after he went below and five minutes after he returned he heard the captain give the order to abandan ship. He said McVay shouted the order to men lining the ship's rail, and Keyes did not think there were many remaining below then.

Officer Didn't Hear Order.

At no time, he said, did he hear orders to abandon ship or any other orders, but agreed that it was entirely possible that such word was passed and did not reach him. He emphasized that it would have been extremely difficult for any word to reach his position without communication.

He testified that there were about 100 men on the fantail with him, and estimated that some 500 from the entire ship got off and into the water.

Seaman, second class, James R. Sinclair of Detroit, said that he was on watch on the captain's bridge at the time of the explosions, and that he saw no periscope, although he was able to see the horizon clearly. He heard no order to abandon ship, Sinclair said.

Ensign Ross Rogers Jr., was in charge of a gun crew. He testified he believed "a very high percentage" of the men got off the ship to the water.

Raymond S. Jurkiewicz, seaman, first class, who was on duty at the combat intelligence center, said he made three trips to the signal bridge and that on the third occasion he heard word was being passed to abandon ship.

'Ike' Asked To Explain Bringing Of Chinese

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—Representative Landis (R., Ind.) said he had asked Army Chief of Staff Dwight D. Eisenhower to explain "why Chinese soldiers were brought here from India last month aboard an American vessel while our own GI's were left behind because of lack of shipping space."

Landis told a reporter he was informed that several hundred Chinese troops were sent here aboard the U.S.S. General A. W. Greeley to attend school in the United States. The ship, which, he said, also carried American troops, left Calcutta, India, August 28 and reached New York city September 26.

"Many American soldiers eligible to return home were left behind in India," he stated. "They as well as the Americans aboard the ship resented the incident."

KOPPLEMANN CONFERS WITH TRUMAN ON UNO

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—(AP) Rep. Kopplemann (D-Conn.) discussed with President Truman today Senate-passed legislation to implement the United Nations organization.

He left the White House, Kopplemann said, with the impression the administration urgently desires the House to approve the legislation by a decisive vote.

Kopplemann said he also conveyed to the President reports that United States soldiers are being used to build airports in India and other countries and that Negro troops are being used as stevedores to load Liberty ships. The President indicated he would have the reports investigated, Kopplemann said.

U.S. And Italy Sign New Trade Agreement

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—The United States and Italy have reached an agreement designed to promote expanded postwar trade between the two countries.

The State Department made the announcement today, making public an exchange of notes in which the governments agreed to adopt measures to expand production and employment and facilitate the exchange and consumption of goods.

These measures will include elimination of "all forms of discriminatory treatment in international commerce" and the reduction of tariffs and other trade barriers.

FREE PRESS RIDER REVISED AS HOUSE VOTES UNRRA FUND

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(AP) The House today approved another $1,350,000,000 for UNRRA with a provision that President Truman try to get American newsmen admitted freely to countries receiving aid.

The vote was 327 to 39.

Rep. Herter (R-Mass) said he sponsored the amendment because White Russia and the Ukraine soon would be receiving aid from UNRRA and whether American reporters will be permitted there presents a "serious problem."

Supporting the proposal, Rep. Wadsworth (R-NY) said it does "not offend."

"It does not carry an implied threat," Wadsworth said, "but lets the world know how we feel about freedom of the press."

The House earlier turned down an amendment by Rep. Clarence Brown (R-Ohio) which would have restricted U. S. aid to countries which permitted U. S. newsmen to report UNRRA activities there. The House wrote such a stipulation into an earlier UNRRA bill but the Senate rejected it.

Herter, who recently served as an American representative on the UNRRA council in Europe, emphasized that his amendment took the form of a request and was not mandatory.

It was accepted by Chairman Bloom (D-NY) of the Foreign Affairs committee, who had strongly opposed Brown's proposal.

Bloom likewise accepted another amendment by Herter, requesting further concessions from UNRRA-aided countries, and the House adopted it. It directed the U. S. delegate on UNRRA to ask:

That all countries receiving aid make available to UNRRA any secret trade and barter agreements with other nations:

That each country give UNRRA personnel full freedom to travel and inspect conditions; and

That UNRRA be permitted to keep title to all of its motor transport, equipment and supplies.

France Signs Contract For 400 Locomotives

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—The Provisional Government of the French Republic today signed a contract with the Steam Locomotive Export Association, Inc., for the purchase of 400 locomotives.

The engines, to be used in the rehabilitation of the war-damaged French rail transport system, are being constructed by the American Locomotive Company, the Baldwin Locomotive Works and Lima Locomotive Works, Inc.

PAYMENT FOR COPY OF DISCHARGE ASSAILED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—(AP) The War department was asked by Rep. Lane (D-Mass.) today to "investigate immediately" reports veterans are being charged for photographic copies of their discharge papers.

Lane said he had been advised that the charges were being made at the Fort Devens, Mass., separation center. A charge of 95 cents is made for each copy, he said.

"Also," he said, "I understand that these men and women are compelled to wait several weeks for delivery of these copies."

Bill Signed to Force U. S. Corporation Audit

Strengthens Control of Congress; Byrd Had Urged Measure

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 (AP).—With "much satisfaction," President Truman today signed a bill strengthening the control of Congress over government corporations with assets estimated at $20,000,000,000.

"In requiring these corporations to submit their budgetary programs to the Bureau of the Budget and their expenditures to an audit by the general accounting office, the Congress has made a forward step in furthering the business-like management of government," Mr. Truman said in a statement.

Present at the signing were the measure's sponsors, Senators Harry F. Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia, and Hugh Butler, Republican, of Nebraska, and Representatives William M. Whittington, Democrat, of Mississippi, and Francis Case, Republican, of South Dakota. The Congressional Economy Committee which Senator Byrd heads had been campaigning for ten years for tighter financial control of the corporations. It was Senator Byrd who estimated their assets at more than $20,000,000,000.

PARLEY OPPOSES RETURN OF USES

Washington, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—The twelfth National Labor Conference, by an overwhelming vote, adopted today a resolution urging President Truman to veto a bill which would return the United States employment offices to State control within 100 days. The vote was 78 to 8.

The bill is currently with a Senate-House conference committee, for adjustment of differences between the two chambers, both of which have voted for such return.

In the labor conference, State labor commissioners generally opposed the veto resolution and C. I. O. and A. F. of L. delegates favored it. The resolution was submitted by a committee headed by Ruben G. Soderstrom, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor. It declared that return of the agency to the States would "prove disastrous in many communities."

The conference also adopted resolutions proposing that agricultural workers and migratory labor in general be assured the minimum wages and other benefits given to imported foreign labor under international agreements, that importation of foreign labor be stopped as soon as possible, and that the Federal Government not import additional workers without the agreement of the State involved.

PEACE DRAFT FOES HEARD IN HOUSE

Washington, Dec. 6 (A. P.).—Spokesmen for church, veterans' and labor organizations fired a verbal broadside today at proposals for universal military training.

Testifying before the House Military Committee, they urged that before the United States resorts to peacetime conscription it seek to outlaw universal training throughout the world and throw its full weight behind efforts for international peace.

Those registering opposition to the proposed legislation included: Martin H. Miller, Washington, national legislative representative for the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Dr. Allen Bates, East Pittsburgh, Pa., who said he was authorized to speak for the executive committee of the Council of Churches of Christ in the city of Pittsburgh and Allegheny county, the Society of Friends, members of Unitarian churches, aand the Women's International League; Edward T. McCaffrey, national commander of the Catholic War Veterans; Dr. Gould Wilkey of Washington, speaking for the National Commission on Christion Higher Education of the Association of American Colleges, and the Rev. Charles F. Boss Jr., Chicago, representing the Commission on World Peace of the Methodist Church.

Doolittle Back With Oil Firm

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. James H. Doolittle, leader of the first air attack on Tokyo, will leave the Army Air Forces to become a vice president of Shell Oil Corporation on January 1, the company announced today.

Doolittle will have "general corporate responsibilities," the company said, including co-ordination of Shell's aviation interests in the United States and assist in its world-wide aviation activities.

He will be a nominee for the board of directors at the next annual meeting of the corporation. His headquarters will be in New York.

Doolittle had been with Shell as manager of the aviation department for ten years when he was recalled to active duty with the air force in 1940.

HALSEY OPPOSES MERGER PROPOSAL AS TOO DANGEROUS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 — (AP) Bluff Fleet Admiral W. F. "Bull" Halsey fired a salvo of his typical verbal shots at proposed unification of the Army and Navy today.

But he let down a roomful of senators, Army and Navy officers and other spectators by terming the procedure merely "dangerous" instead of "damn dangerous." The expletive was in his prepared text.

Like other witnesses before the Senate Military committee, the admiral had supplied advance copies of his statement which read:

"x x x The Army is the chief exponent of hasty and unstudied adoption of this plan. Even if the Army project has merit—which I fail to see—their method of trying to put it over is un-American, undemocratic, and damn dangerous."

There is no question about need for "unified command" in actual combat, Halsey declared, but that does not require that the War and Navy departments, which he said were complex and widely differing, be mixed together.

"Believe me, that's the first time I ever agreed with a Jap," Halsey said at one point in regard to a statement by Japanese General Yamashita that perfect coordination of American air, naval and ground forces crushed the Japs.

It is "pure bunk," the admiral continued, to claim greater efficiency from the merger. Instead he referred to it variously as a "muddle," "mirage" and "miracle."

Japan and Germany allowed the army to dominate the navy, he said, and "look where they are now."

Previous testimony by Army Air forces witnesses that battleships and aircraft carriers are out of date also came in for comment. The admiral said his fighting ships won bases so the Army Air forces could come along later and operate.

The admiral said he feared the merger advocates wanted to give the Army a "two-to-one" vote over control of the Navy.

He likened the unification plan to asking a "Protestant, a Catholic, and a Jew to save our national souls by recommending a national church and creed."

OFFICE BOY WITH EAGLES APPROVED BY HARGROVE

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP) What does the boss do about the former office boy who returns from the wars a full-fledged colonel?

It's very simple, said Marion Hargrove, author of the GI best seller—"See Here, Private Hargrove!"

He told the 5,000 industrialists at the National Association of Manufacturers convention today: Just put the colonels back to work as office boys.

Loud applause followed Hargrove's explanation that "a lot of unmitigated jerks were holding major's rank while their work was being done by a private first class."

Hargrove graduated from private to sergeant while in the service.

Tug Reaches Beecher; Ship Sent To Return GI's On It, McCrary

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—A Navy rescue tug, Restorer, has reached the drifting troop transport Henry Ward Beecher, the Navy announced today, and has taken the helpless ship in tow for Bermuda, where they are expected to arrive Sunday morning.

The Beecher had been rolling in heavy seas since Tuesday when she lost her single propeller about 510 miles off Bermuda while en route from Marseille to Norfolk, Va.

The announcement by the headquarters of the Eastern Sea Frontier made no mention of the progress of rescue efforts for a second ship in distress, the merchantman George W. McCrary, which radioed it had boiler trouble about 900 miles off Bermuda. A patrol craft was dispatched from Bermuda to take her in tow if necessary.

GI's On Beecher

Aboard the Beecher are 541 homeward-bound GI's, including 302d Military Police Escort Company and the 542d and 544th Ordnance Heavy Maintenance Companies. There are 586 troops aboard the McCrary.

The Eastern Sea Frontier Headquarters said it had been informed by the naval operating base at Bermuda that the Beecher and the Restorer would reach Bermuda 8 A.M. Sunday. There was no indication in the message, the Navy said, as to when the Restorer reached the Beecher.

The Restorer reported that the "food situation aboard the Beecher is in hand." Previously the troopship had said its meat supplies were running low.

Another Taken In Tow

Another troop vessel, the Navarchos-Koundouriotis, which also lost its propeller, was taken in tow by an "all-sea" rescue craft about 250 miles off Bermuda and was heading for New York, the Navy said yesterday. This ship has 26 GI's aboard, all casuals.

Navy men expressed anxiety yesterday over whether a storm off Bermuda might strike the Beecher. It developed later that the ship would escape the full force of the storm.

[Ten Maryland service men are aboard the Beecher.]

Ship Sent For Troops

The Navy also announced today that the United States Army transport Saturnia, formerly the hospital ship Francis U. Slanger, would sail from the Brooklyn army base at 4 P.M. today for Bermuda to pick up the troops from the Beecher and the McCrary so they could be home by Christmas.

Meanwhile, the 7,200-ton American merchant ship, the John Gibbons, still was aground today 250 yards off the beach near Cape Henry, Va. The Coast Guard said the ship probably would be floated today.

The New York Port of Embarkation said 605 men, 32 of them members of the Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 177th Quartermaster Battalion, were aboard the McCrary. Others aboard are miscellaneous troops.

SHIP FROM INDIA BRINGS 4 BRIDES WITH U.S. TROOPS

NEW YORK, Dec. 6—(AP) Among the more than 7,000 passengers debarked by two of four ships scheduled to make port today were three war brides from India, some survivors of America's worst troopship disaster, and 25 German scientists.

The brides were Mrs. Harry J. Borup, 23, of Calcutta, on her way to join her staff sergeant husband in Boise, Idaho; Mrs. Anthony J. Cunningham, 22, of Aberdeen, Scotland and New Delhi, India, en route to her husband's relatives in Allentown, Pa.; and Mrs. Stanley H. French, 23, of Karachi, India, on her way to a farm near Warland, Wyo. They arrived aboard the Navy transport General A. W. Greeley, which brought 3,097 passengers from Calcutta.

Also aboard the Greeley were personnel of the troopship Rhona which was sunk by aerial torpedo in the Mediterranean on Thanksgiving day, 1943, with a loss of 1,145 American soldiers.

Port authorities refused newsmen permission to question 25 German scientists who arrived aboard the Navy transport LeJeune. The LeJeune brought 4,564 servicemen from Le Havre. Aboard was one passenger who did not sail with the ship from France. He was Pvt. George Barela, 21, of Silver City, N. M., transferred at sea from a Liberty ship when he was stricken by appendicitis.

Other ships due here were the Noah Webster with 536 troops and the Edward Logan with 24.

Scheduled at Boston were the Cranston Victory with 1,710 troops and the Henry D. Lindsley with 22. Arriving at Newport News, Va., were the John Lawson, 555; Monterey, 2,021; James Rumsey, 17; and Stockton, no data available.

Twenty-three ships with 12,200 veterans were to dock on the west coast.

At San Francisco: Carried Petrof Bay, 1,226; carrier Ticonderoga, 4,423; Sea Barb, 2,764; Ranson A. Moore, Samuel Moody, PC 600, Bel loit Victory, and ESTS 241 and 693 with a few each.

At Sandiego: Destroyer Beale, 46; destroyer Ammen, 48; destroyer Valkenburgh, 52; escort carrier Breton, 1,201; destroyer escort Wesson, 20; and the LMS 436, 43.

At Seattle: Cumberland Sound, 300; Yakutat, 231; and Algol, 98.

At Los Angeles: Cape Saunders, 19; and Manila Bay, 1,046.

Czech Boy Reaches Norfolk As Stowaway

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 6 (AP)—A 15-year-old Czechoslovakian boy arrived today as a stowaway aboard the Liberty ship Heywood Broun in search of his uncle and only living relative, Victor Bartes, of New York city.

The boy, Frankisch Sopko, said he did not know his uncle's address or his occupation but that he had lived in New York for twenty years. Immigration officials said the boy will be given a hearing later this week to determine whether he is eligible for admission.

Earl K. Way, Signalman 1/c, USNR, of Elizabeth, N.J., said Frankisch, through an interpreter, reported the Germans killed his parents, three sisters and brother.

G.O.P. Committee to Open Meeting Today in Chicago

CHICAGO, Dec. 6—(AP) The supplemental Republican platform for 1946 was accorded a mixed reaction today as members gathered for the special G.O.P. National committee meeting here tomorrow.

The two-day meeting will consider the platform approved in Washington yesterday by congressional Republicans calling for strengthening of the processes of collective bargaining and protection of small nations.

The platform was praised openly by Chairman Herbert Browneil, Jr., of the National committee and others. But one westerner privately called it "weasel-worded" and asked for more specific delineation between Democratic and Republican aims.

Meanwhile, the West and Southwest spoke up for greater voice in party affairs, both as to personnel and participation in formulation of party programs.

Clarence Budington Kelland, Arizona committeeman, told reporters he would offer his "Arizona declaration" as a supplement to the Congress-framed statement of aims and purposes when it is brought up in the National committee tomorrow by Representative Martin of Massachusetts, House minority leader.

The Kelland plan, approved by the Arizona State committee last Nov. 7, declares the major issue today to be between "extreme radicalism and prudent conservatism."

The second of the "great issues" before the country, it says is this: "Shall organized labor rule the United States, or shall the United States govern organized labor?"

Kelland said the party for 15 years "has not given the people a choice between definite issues." He said he wants the Republicans to "compel" such a choice by writing specific aims.

The group urging the party pay more attention to the Midwest and protesting what it termed "domination" of the National committee by the East, is composed of county chairmen in Illinois. A three-man committee headed by George M. Fisher, chairman of the Cook county (Chicago) committee, drafted a statement for submission to the national body.

Cake Opposes Haste

Ralph H. Cake, committeeman from Oregon, advised against haste by the National committee in acting on the supplemental platform. He said it was "too important" to form an opinion at a two-day meeting and that it would be better if a subcommittee were named to study the document and report back to the national group in 30 to 60 days.

The protesting three-man Illinois committee, in its statement for submission to the National committee by Werner W. Schroeder, Illinois national committeeman, said in part that:

1. The "expressions" of the people of the Midwest have "not been given the proper consideration by the Eastern leaders of the party."

2. Too much emphasis has been placed upon opinions and ideas of "an apparent Eastern bloc," and no platform should be formulated without due consultation with the duly elected leaders from the Midwest.

3. The Midwest is the "fountainhead and the birthplace of Republicanism," and the true principles of the party are "more truly exemplified here in the Middle West."

Bradley Will Attend Session in Chicago

J. Kenneth Bradley of Westport Republican national committeeman from Connecticut, left last night for Chicago to attend the meeting of the National committee opening there today.

DESTROYER CAPTAIN RECEIVES NAVY CROSS

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Dec. 6—(AP) In one of the first local ceremonies of its kind, Capt. Edward Watson Young, commander of Destroyer Squadron 24, pinned the Navy Cross on Capt. Clarence M. Bowley, Provincetown, Mass., before the assembled ship's company of the destroyer Van Valkenburgh, one of six destroyers which arrived here today.

Division commander of Squadron 24 which dropped 75 Japanese suicide planes and assisted in shooting down an additional 200 Kamikazes, Capt. Bowley was cited for "extraordinary courage and continual inspiration" to his men aboard the destroyer Pritchard on radar picket lines at Okinawa.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6 (AP)—Col. Russell W. Volckemann abolished courts martial and ruled his famed guerrilla regiments by decree when they were fighting the Japanese occupation in northern Luzon, he said today on his first visit to the United States mainland since July, 1940.

The Colonel, headed for Clinton, Iowa, on furlough, gave his recipe for running a guerrilla force hemmed in by the Japanese from shortly after the fall of Bataan until four days before the reoccupation:

"Dispense with court-martial trials. Hold informal investigations and make the punishment severe, with death for serious offenders."

Colonel Volckemann said Japanese employment of numerous Filipino spies in an effort to track down his forces had brought on the firm disciplinary policy.

Then a major, he escaped through Japanese lines when Bataan was surrendered and alternately crawled and ran for the mountain province of Luzon. He joined guerrillas, headed by American officers, and was ordered by Allied Southwest Pacific Headquarters to assume command when his senior officers were captured on June 1, 1943.

Great Hunt on for 27 Navy Fliers Missing in Six Planes Off Florida

By The Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 6—Five Navy torpedo bombers with fourteen men aboard and a Navy rescue plane with thirteen crew members were the object of a great air-sea hunt tonight over thousands of square miles off the Florida east coast.

Dwindling hopes marked the search, described as one of the greatest in peacetime history, but Navy officials said the planes had a high degree of buoyancy and that in similar emergencies the crews had been able to launch their life rafts "without even getting their feet wet."

Reinforced by a baby flat-top, the United States escort carrier Solomons, hundreds of Army, Navy and Coast Guard planes and scores of surface craft searched the waters on a 400-mile front from Jacksonville in northern Florida to Miami in the south.

The front extended 150 miles out into the Atlantic to the Bahamas, where the Royal Air Force pressed every available plane into the quest.

A last, flickering message of distress, sent by radio from the flight of five Avenger torpedo bombers, puzzled officials as the hunt intensified.

"Have gas for seventy-five minutes more. Can't tell whether over Atlantic or Gulf of Mexico," the message is reported to have said; in effect, indicating they had been caught in a blinding storm.

However, the Navy in Miami said the flight's last message, flashed at 5:25 P. M., Eastern standard time, Wednesday, gave its bearings as seventy-five miles northeast of the Banana River naval station, which lies 200 miles north of Miami.

Comdr. Howard S. Roberts, executive officer at the Fort Lauderdale naval air station, where the ill-starred flight began, said the airmen were apparently blown far off their course by strong winds.

The Weather Bureau in Miami said freak winds, attended by gusts of forty miles an hour or higher, as well as showers and thunderstorms, prevailed over the area off the Banana River station at the time when the last signal was received.

The sixth plane, a huge Martin Mariner bomber with thirteen aboard, set out to the rescue last night and was also believed down at sea.

Ship Tells of Explosion

A possible clue to the disappearance of one plane, probably the big Martin, was flashed to the Navy by a merchant ship, the S. S. Gaines Mills, which reported seeing an explosion in the air and what appeared to be an airplane spin downward into the sea. The time was 7:50 P. M. yesterday and the location at sea off New Smyrna Beach, the passing ship reported. Dozens of planes and surface craft combed the area today but found no wreckage.

A belief that the five Avengers, caught by the sudden tropical dusk, might have all gone down in a mass collision while flying in wing-to-wing "dead man" formation was expressed by a veteran at Miami Naval Air Station, at Opa Locka. Failure of any one of the planes to send out a message after the last signal at 5:25 P. M. lent credence to the theory.

How all five planes could vanish in one swoop, with none able to send out a last-second SOS, even in the event of a five-way crash, was an enigma still to be solved.

While officially the last message came at 5:25 P. M., unofficially, it was reported that one of the torpedo bombers was heard vainly trying to contact another at 7:04 P. M., but the signal was so faint that aside from the call letters "FT....FT...." nothing could be distinguished.

confined Hawaiian moorings.

Not even those shots that the embattled farmers fired at Lexington and Concord were "heard 'round the world" with greater clarity than the Pearl Harbor explosions.

Those explosions foretold the violent ruin of Hitler's German empire, the collapse of woebegone Italy, and finally, three months ago, the abject surrender of famished, fireblackened, "faceless" Japan.

Four years ago tin-pan alley contributed a tinny refrain, "Remember Pearl Harbor," and President Roosevelt proclaimed Dec. 7 as a day that would live in infamy.

Yet today, on this first peacetime anniversary of Pearl Harbor, the public remembrances of Pearl Harbor consisted chiefly of an acidulous and protracted congressional investigation into the original debacle and a statement by the present commander of the fleet on how much worse things might have been.

General Marshall told the investigators only yesterday that forces at Pearl Harbor were sufficient to have disrupted the onslaught and thus to have ruined the whole Japanese campaign of aggression, but acknowledged that he himself had not actually visualized the possibility of the attack because its risk were so great for the eenmy.

Adm. R. A. Spruance, new commander of the Pacific fleet, pointed out in a statement at Pearl Harbor that the dockyards, shops and other facilities were scarcely damaged at all by the sneak attack, so that "the Japs had lost forever the opportunity to score a knockout blow."

Aside from these postmortem items, this was a day of preoccupations with the changeovers from war to peace, much as that first Pearl Harbor day was one of preoccupations with conversion from peace to war.

Nor was there evidence that the Fourth Pearl Harbor Day Finds Yanks Ruling Over Beaten Japan

This is Pearl Harbor day—the date on which, four years ago, on a bright Sunday morning, a surprise Japanese attack smashed the United States Pacific fleet at its Japanese remembered Pearl Harbor, though its results lay all around them in ashes.

Their conquests are vanished, their navy destroyed, their armies dissolved, their chief plotters either dead, languishing in prison or awaiting the knock of the arresting officer, come to charge them with the crime of aggressive war.

The Americans they roused to anger four years ago today now rule the shrunken land of Japan.

GERMAN TROOPS WERE TO FOLLOW SUCH A COUP, AND ROSENBERG NOTED IN THE LETTER TO RAEDER THAT QUISLING'S ESTIMATES OF FORCE NEEDED COINCIDED WITH NAZI CALCULATIONS.

LATER THE NAZIS WERE TO PROCLAIM LOUDLY THAT THEY SEIZED NORWAY TO PREVENT IT FROM FALLING INTO BRITISH HANDS. RAEDER ASKED HIS STAFF PARTICULARLY FOR INFORMATION ON HARBORS USEFUL IN SUPPLYING THE U-BOAT FLEET IN THE ATLANTIC.

GOERING'S STATEMENT ON THE DELAY IN INVADING POLAND SAID THAT HE HAD BEEN IN CONNECTION WITH LORD HALIFAX BY "SPECIAL COURIER OUTSIDE DIPLOMATIC CHANNELS TO DO EVERYTHING TO STOP WAR WITH ENGLAND."

GOERING SAID THAT ON AUG. 25, THE DAY ENGLAND GAVE HER OFFICIAL GUARANTEE TO POLAND, "THE FUEHRER CALLED ME ON THE TELEPHONE AND TOLD ME HE HAD STOPPED THE INVASION OF POLAND. I ASKED HIM WHETHER THIS WAS JUST TEMPORARY, OR FOR GOOD. HE SAID 'NO, I WILL HAVE TO SEE WHETHER WE CAN ELIMINATE BRITISH INTERVENTION.'"

THE NAME OF DEFENDANT WALTHER FUNK, FORMER REICHSBANK PRESIDENT, WAS BROUGHT INTO THE TRIAL FOR THE FIRST TIME WITH THE SUBMISSION OF A LETTER FROM FUNK TO HITLER IN WHICH THE FORMER TOLD OF WAYS IN WHICH THE REICHSBANK HAD PREPARED FOR WAR, AND PUT THE NAZIS "IN A POSITION TO COPE WITH ALL DEMANDS ON FINANCE AND ECONOMY WITHOUT ANY SERIOUS SHOCKS."

THE ORDER ALERTING THE GERMAN ARMY TO BE READY FOR INVASION OF POLAND BY SEPT. 1, 1939, WAS ISSUED BY FIELD MARSHAL WILHELM KEITEL, CHIEF OF THE HIGH COMMAND AND ONE OF THE 20 GERMAN LEADERS ON TRIAL. THE DIRECTIVE DISCLOSED THAT IT WAS MADE ON HITLER'S ORDER.

ATTACHED TO THE ORDER WAS ANOTHER DIRECTIVE SIGNED BY HITLER HIMSELF ON APRIL 11, 1939, REFERRING FLATLY TO "PREPARATIONS FOR THE CONDUCT OF THE WAR" AGAINST POLAND. ADD NUERNBERG TRIAL XXX SHOWER)

IN MAY, FIELD MARSHAL KEITEL WAS DISCLOSED TO HAVE TRANSMITTED ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIONS TO THE GERMAN ARMED FORCES FOR "THE ECONOMIC WAR AND THE PROTECTION OF OUR OWN AUTONOMY" IN THE FORTHCOMING INVASION OF POLAND.

NOTES OF A SPEECH HITLER MADE IN MAY TO TOP-RANKING NAZIS DISCLOSED THAT THE FUEHRER WAS VIRTUALLY AS DETERMINED TO FIGHT ENGLAND AND FRANCE AS HE WAS TO ATTACK POLAND. PLANS WERE MADE TO DISPATCH SUBMARINES TO THE ATLANTIC IN AUGUST AND NAVAL TRAINING SHIPS SUCH AS THE ONE THAT BOMBARDED THE POLISH GARRISON NEAR DANZIG WERE DISPATCHED TO THE BALTIC IN AUGUST, OTHER RECORDS SHOWED.

ALL OF THE GERMAN DEFENDANTS LISTENED INTENTLY AT THE READING OF THE MINUTES OF THE AUGUST MEETING BETWEEN HITLER AND COUNT GALEAZZO CIANO, ITALIAN FOREIGN MINISTER, AND IT WAS APPARENT THAT DETAILS OF THE ITALIAN PLEA TO DEFER THE START OF THE WAR WERE NEW TO MOST OF THEM.

CIANO PRESENTED MUSSOLINI'S VIEW THAT THE WAR SHOULD BE DEFERRED TWO OR THREE YEARS AND PLEADED THAT ITALY WAS ILL PREPARED. IT WAS NOT UNTIL JUNE 10, 1940, THAT ITALY FINALLY DECLARED WAR ON ENGLAND AND FRANCE, SOON AFTER THE BRITISH WITHDRAWAL AT DUNKERQUE.

THE BRITISH PROSECUTOR THEN READ THE LATE PRIME MINISTER NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN'S NOTE WARNING GERMANY AFTER THE SIGNING OF THE RUSSO-GERMAN PACT THAT BRITAIN WOULD STAND BY HER GUARANTEE TO AID POLAND, AND ASKING A "TRUCE" WHILE POLISH-GERMAN DISCUSSIONS WERE HELD.

ON AUG. 23--NINE DAYS BEFORE HE ATTACKED--HITLER ANSWERED CHAMBERLAIN THAT GERMANY COULD "NOT RENOUNCE CERTAIN ESSENTIAL INTERESTS."

THE BRITISH PROSECUTOR THEN READ REPORTS FROM BRITAIN'S AMBASSADOR TO WARSAW TERMING THE BORDER CLASHES WHICH GERMANY USED AS A PRETEXT FOR INVASION AS "COMPLETELY FALSE." PREVIOUS TESTIMONY HAD SHOWN THAT GERMAN CONCENTRATION CAMP INMATES WERE DRESSED IN POLISH UNIFORMS AND THEN SHOT IN FAKE RAIDS ON A GERMAN BORDER RADIO STATION.

AD7

FOR THE FIRST TIME, FORMER REICHSBANK PRESIDENT WALTHER FUNK, ONE OF THE DEFENDANTS, WAS NAMED IN THE EVIDENCE. THE PROSECUTION PRODUCED A LETTER FROM FUNK TO HITLER IN WHICH THE ECONOMIST TOLD OF WAYS IN WHICH THE REICHSBANK HAD PREPARED FOR THE WAR.

"IT IS DIFFICULT TO SAY IN VIEW OF THE LETTER HOW THE DEFENDANT FUNK CAN CLAIM NO KNOWLEDGE OF THE CONSPIRACY TO MAKE WAR," THE PROSECUTION SAID.

FAT HERMANN GOERING, WHO WAS ALSO MENTIONED IN THE LETTER, NODDED HIS HEAD AND GRINNED.

ONE OF THE SPECTATORS AT THE TRIAL WAS GENERAL JOSEPH MC NARNEY, NEWLY-APPOINTED COMMANDER OF AMERICAN FORCES IN THE EUROPEAN THEATER.

NUERNBERG, DEC. 6--(AP)--GEN. JOSEPH T. MCNARNEY, COMMANDER OF U.S. FORCES IN EUROPE, SAID TODAY HE EXPECTED SOME FOOD RIOTS THIS WINTER IN THE AMERICAN OCCUPIED ZONE IN GERMANY, "BUT NOTHING MORE THAN WOULD BE EXPECTED ANYWHERE ELSE UNDER SIMILAR CIRCUMSTANCES."

GEN. MCNARNEY, A VISITOR TODAY AT THE NUERNBERG WAR CRIMES TRIAL, COMMENTING FURTHER ON THE SITUATION IN THE AMERICAN ZONE, SAID HE DID NOT THINK IT WOULD BE PHYSICALLY POSSIBLE FOR THE ARMY TO MEET PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S PROPOSAL TO SET UP ADMINISTRATION OF THE ZONE ON A CIVILIAN BASIS BY JULY 1.

HE SAID THAT AN AGREEMENT HAD TO BE REACHED WITH THE OTHER OCCUPATIONAL POWERS BEFORE HE COULD TURN THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE AMERICAN ZONE TO A CIVILIAN, THAT A NEW CIVILIAN CHIEF HAD TO BE APPOINTED, AND MANY OTHER PROBLEMS SOLVED.

MCNARNEY SAID HE DID NOT BELIEVE THAT THE REDEPLOYMENT HAD WRECKED THE EFFICIENCY OF THE MILITARY GOVERNMENT, AS SOME CRITICS HAD CHARGED.

"I HAVE RECEIVED NO COMPLAINTS FROM THE MILITARY GOVERNMENT MEN ON THIS," HE SAID. "IN FACT, THE MILITARY HAS NOT BEEN AS MUCH AFFECTED AS THE OTHER BRANCHES."

MCNARNEY DECLARED THAT A CENTRAL GOVERNMENT IN GERMANY "IS NECESSARY," BUT SAID HE HAD RECEIVED NO DIRECTIVE FROM WASHINGTON TO FORM A CENTRALIZED GOVERNMENT ON A TRI-PARTITE BASIS WITH THE GERMANS AND RUSSIANS. FRANCE, THE FOURT OCCUPYING POWER, HAS RESISTED SUGGESTIONS THAT ADMINISTRATION OF THE FOUR ZONES BE CENTRALIZED.

BUCHAREST, DEC. 6-(AP)-A COUPLE OF GI'S ARE THE CURRENT SENSATIONS OF BUCHAREST'S BANEASA HIPPODROME COURSE AS OWNERS OF A RACEHORSE ON WHICH THEY COLLECTED THE LARGEST SUM EVER WON AT THE ROMANIAN TRACK.

THEY ARE M/SGT. JACK MAYER OF TUNLOW ROAD NW, WASHINGTON D.C, AND T/SGT. HENRY L. SCHNEIDER OF 2170 WALTON AVE., BRONX, N.Y. MAYER, 26, SAYS HE HAS BEEN FOLLOWING THE PONIES "FOR MANY YEARS." SCHNEIDER, 31, SAYS HE NEVER HEARD OF A HORSE BEFORE HE MET MAYER AND "NOW I EAT, SLEEP AND DRINK 'EM."

THE TWO KHAKI-CLAD WONDER BOYS OF THE LOCAL TURF MET HERE LAST YEAR, BOTH BEING STATIONED AT THE MESSAGE CENTER OF THE U.S. MILITARY REPRESENTATION IN BUCHAREST. BEFORE LONG, MAYER HAD SCHNEIDER ON THE RACE TRACK. THERE THEY RAN INTO ARCHIE MCINTYRE, A FORMER JOCKEY.

MCINTYRE SAID HE KNEW OF A GOOD HORSE IN A CLAIMING RACE, AND SO FOR LESS THAN $200, MAYER AND SCHNEIDER, POOLING FUNDS, HAD THEMSELVES A RACE HORSE, AND A TRAINER. THEIR COLORS WERE EASY TO PICK--RED, WHITE AND BLUE.

AFTER FAILING TO DO MUCH IN HIS FIRST FEW OUTINGS, THE FOUR-YEAR OLD RACER NAMED HAPLEA HIT HIS STRIDE EARLY LAST MONTH BY WINNING HIS FIRST RACE AT A GOOD PRICE.

THE NEXT TIME HE WENT TO THE POST HAPLEA WAS ASKED TO TOTE MORE WEIGHT AGAINST BETTER HORSES. THE BOOKIES STILL DOUBTED THE HORSE'S ABILITY AND THE TWO GI-OWNERS SPLURGED ON THEIR COLOR-BEARER AT JUICY ODDS. HAPLEA CAME ROMPING IN FIRST AND SCHNEIDER AND MAYER COLLECTED TEN MILLION LEI (THAT'S RIGHT, MILLION)--THE BIGGEST PAYOFF IN THE HISTORY OF THE HIPPODROME COURSE. TEN MILLION LEI, DEPENDENT ON WHAT THE JITTERY DOLLAR-LEI RATE HAPPENED TO BE THAT DAY, IS WORTH SOMETHING BETWEEN $500 AND $1,000.

YENAN, DEC.6-(AP)-T E CHINESE COMMUNIST WAR CRIMES COMMISSION TODAY CHARGED THAT GEN.YASAJI OKAMURA, FORMER COMMANDER OF JAPANESE FORCES IN CHINA, PERSONALLY DIRECTED AND WITNESSED THE MASSACRE OF AN ENTIRE NORTH CHINA VILLAGE IN 1942.

NAMING OKAMURA ITS NO.1 WAR CRIMINAL, THE COMMISSION THROUGH CHAIRMAN WU YU-CHANG, DEMANDED THAT HE BE PLACED UNDER IMMEDIATE ARREST. OKAMURA IS IN NANKING AS CHIEF LIAISON OFFICER BETWEEN NATIONALIST TROOPS AND THE REMAINING JAPANESE.

LT.GEN.TAKASHI TADA, OKAMURA'S PREDECESSOR AS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE NORTH CHINA EXPEDITIONARY FORCE WHO, THE REDS SAY, STILL IS FREE IN TOKYO WAS LISTED AS THE NO.2 WAR CRIMINAL. HE IS ACCUSED OF HAVING ORDERED MASS EXECUTIONS OF MORE THAN 1,000 MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN IN AN EASTERN HOPEH VILLAGE IN 1941.

OKAMURA'S SANCTION OF AND PRESENCE AT THE DESTRUCTION OF THE ENTIRE VILLAGE OF PEITAN IN CENTRAL HOPEH ON MAY 1, 1942, WAS ONE OF TWO KNOWN ATROCITIES HE PERSONALLY ORDERED AND WITNESSED, WU DECLARED.

WU CHARGED THAT:

MORE THAN 800 MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN OF PEITAN WERE DRIVEN INTO A TUNNEL NORTH OF THE TOWN, SEALED IN AND SUFFOCATED. ON JULY 1, 1941, OKAMURA ORDERED MORE THAN 200 SOLDIERS OF THE COMMUNIST EIGHTH ROUTE ARMY USED FOR BAYONET PRACTICE. IN THE ENSUING MONTH, 60 SOLDIERS WERE TAKEN OUT EACH 10 DAYS, STRIPPED, TIED TO STAKES AND BAYONETED TO DEATH IN TAIYUAN, CAPITAL OF SHANSI PROVINCE, THEN OKAMURA'S HEADQUARTERS.

A96KX

THE COMMISSION SAID IT DIDN'T KNOW WHETHER TADA HIMSELF TOOK PART IN ATROCITIES AT PANCHIAYU, BUT THAT IT HAD AMPLE PROOF THAT HE ORDERED THE MASSACRE. IT CHARGED THAT:

ON JAN. 1, 1941, 1,372 MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN OF THE VILLAGE WERE DRIVEN TO THE OUTSKIRTS. BRUSH AND TIMBER WERE PILED IN THE COURTYARD OF THE TOWN'S RICHEST MAN. THEN THE HORDE WAS WHIPPED AND BEATEN INTO A FLAMING ENCLOSURE WHILE SOLDIERS MOUNTED ON THE WALLS POURED R FLE AND MACHINE GUN FIRE INTO THE SCREAMING, WEEPING MASS. CHILDREN WHO TRIED TO ESCAPE WERE PICKED UP AND HURLED INTO THE INFERNO.

WU SAID THAT 1,035 WERE KILLED AND 84 WOUNDED.

IN STILL ANOTHER CASE INVOLVING DIRECT ORDERS OF OKAMURA, A MAJOR KADE EMPLOYED 600 WAR DOGS TO DEVOUR 50 PRISONERS OF WAR SOUTH OF KEIPING IN JULY 1941, WU CHARGED.

WU ASSERTED IT WAS DIFFICULT TO FIND ANY INNOCENT OFFICERS ABOVE THE RANK OF COLONEL IN JAPANESE ARMIES.

HE DECLARED THAT THE NATIONALISTS HOLD HUNDREDS OF JAPANESE PUPPETS WITHOUT DISPLAYING ANY INTENTION OF BRINGING THEM TO BOOK FOR CRIMES WHICH THE WHOLE PEOPLE OF NORTH CHINA SUFFERED.

IN THE EYES OF THE PEOPLE OF THAT REGION, YEN HSI-SHAN, GOVERNOR OF SHANSI PROVINCE, IS A WAR CRIMINAL BECAUSE HE DEALT WITH THE JAPANESE, WU STATED. IN FACT, HE CHARGED, 56 KUOMINTANG (NATIONALIST) GENERALS VOLUNTARILY SURRENDERED TO THE JAPANESE UP TO 1943 "FOLLOWING ORDERS FROM ABOVE TO BRING ABOUT THE INDIRCT SALVATION OF CHINA" BY HEADING PUPPET TROOPS AGAINST THE COMMUNISTS.

WITNESSES DESCRIBED THE MASS MURDERS IN MANILA -- THE BUTCHERY OF 1,900 CIVILIANS AT THE GERMAN CLUB ON FEB. 10; THE MASS RAPING OF 25 YOUNG GIRLS AT THE BAYVIEW HOTEL, AFTER THEY HAD BEEN DRAGGED FROM THEIR HOMES IN THE EXCLUSIVE ERMITA RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT; THE NIGHT-LONG ORGY OF RAPE AND MURDER WHEN JAPANESE TROOPS FOUND SOME 5,000 TERRIFIED CIVILIANS SEEKING REFUGE IN A CATHEDRAL DURING THE BATTLE FOR MANILA, AND THE SLAYING OF SOME 800 CIVILIANS AT ST.PAUL'S COLLEGE.

THEY TOLD HOW 150 AMERICAN PRISONERS OF WAR WERE HERDED INTO AIR RAID SHELTERS AT PALAWAN AIRFIELD, AND HOW 141 OF THEM PERISHED WHEN JAPANESE DRENCHED THE SHELTERS WITH GASOLINE AND SET THEM AFIRE.

YAMASHITA, TESTIFYING IN HIS OWN DEFENSE, MADE NO ATTEMPT TO DENY THAT THESE THINGS HAD HAPPENED. DR. PHILIP MORRISON, WHO HELPED ASSEMBLE THOSE BOMBS, SAID THE RAYS STRANGELY AFFECTED THE BLOOD AND MADE THE VICTIMS A PREY TO FATAL INFECTION.

IN A STATEMENT PREPARED FOR THE SPECIAL SENATE ATOMIC ENERGY COMMITTEE HE TOLD OF THE GRUESOME FINDINGS OF A PARTY WHICH INSPECTED THE DEVASTATED CITIES AFTER THE JAPANESE SURRENDERED.

HE SAID MOST PERSONS WITHIN A MILE OF THE BOMBS DIED QUICKLY--EITHER FROM THE GREAT HEAT OF THE BLAST OR INJURIES SUFFERED IN DEMOLISHED BUILDINGS.

MANY WHO ESCAPED DEATH BY BLAST OR BURN, MORRISON SAID, "DIED FROM THE EFFECTS OF RADIUM-LIKE RAYS EMITTED IN GREAT NUMBER FROM THE BOMB AT THE INSTANT OF THE EXPLOSION."

"THIS RADIATION AFFECTS THE BLOOD-FORMING TISSUES IN THE BONE MARROW, AND THE WHOLE FUNCTION OF THE BLOOD IS IMPAIRED," THE FORMER UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS PHYSICS INSTRUCTOR RELATED.

"THE BLOOD DOES NOT COAGULATE, BUT OOZES IN MANY SPOTS THROUGH THE UNBROKEN SKIN, AND INTERNALLY SEEPS INTO THE CAVITIES OF THE BODY. THE WHITE CORPUSCLES WHICH FIGHT INFECTION DISAPPEAR."

LACK OF THESE CORPUSCLES PERMITS INFECTION TO "PROSPER," MORRISON SAID, "AND THE PATIENT DIES, USUALLY TWO OR THREE WEEKS AFTER THE EXPOSURE.

"I AM NOT A MEDICAL MAN, BUT LIKE ALL NUCLEAR PHYSICISTS I HAVE STUDIED THIS DISEASE A LITTLE," MORRISON SAID. "IT IS A HAZARD OF OUR PROFESSION. WITH THE ATOMIC BOMB, IT BECAME EPIDEMIC. "WAR NOW CAN DESTROY NOT CITIES, BUT NATIONS."

AFTER DESCRIBING THE DESTRUCTION WROUGHT TO HIROSHIMA MORRISON SAID IT IS PROBABLE THAT AN ATOM-BOMBED AMERICAN CITY "WOULD BE AS BADLY DAMAGED AS A JAPANESE CITY, THOUGH IT WOULD LOOK LESS WRECKED FROM THE AIR."

"IN JAPAN THE WRECKAGE BURNED CLEAN; IN A WESTERN CITY, THE RUBBLE WOULD STAND IN PILES IN THE STREETS.

BUT THE CITY WOULD BE JUST AS RUINED, AND THE PEOPLE OF THE CITY AS DEAD.

B38WX (STAM TEXT) (Q)

(ADVANCE FOR AMS OF THURSDAY,DEC. 6)

WASHINGTON,DEC 5-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF A STATEMENT BY THE OFFICE OF STABILIZATION ADMINISTRATOR ON NEW WAGE INCREASE REGULATIONS: (ABOUT 1000)

THE OFFICE OF STABILIZATION ADMINISTRATOR TODAY ISSUED COMPREHENSIVE REGULATIONS FOR THE GUIDANCE OF THE STABILIZATION AGENCIES IN ADMINISTERING THE NATIONAL WAGE-PRICE POLICY ESTABLISHED IN THE EXECUTIVE ORDERS OF AUGUST 18 AND OCTOBER 30, 1945.

THE REGULATIONS INCLUDE THE FOLLOWING PROVISIONS:

1. PRE-APPROVAL IS GRANTED BY THE STABILIZATION ADMINISTRATOR TO WAGE OR SALARY ADJUSTMENTS WHICH ARE FOUND BY THE APPROPRIATE STABILIZATION AGENCY TO FALL WITHIN SPECIFIED CLASSES OF CASES.

B39WX

APPLICANTS STILL MUST OBTAIN APPROVAL FROM THE STABILIZATION AGENCY. WHEN THIS APPROVAL IS OBTAINED THE EMPLOYER MAY USE THESE INCREASES AS A BASIS FOR SEEKING AN INCREASE IN PRICE CEILINGS OR FOR INCREASING COSTS TO THE GOVERNMENT.

THE CLASSES OF PREAPPROVED INCREASES INCLUDE: INCREASES UNDER STANDARDS APPLIED BY THE NATIONAL WAR LABOR BOARD WHICH WERE IN EFFECT PRIOR TO AUGUST 18, 1945; INCREASES TO COMPENSATE FOR RISES IN THE COST OF LIVING; AND INCREASES TO CORRECT INEQUITIES IN RATES PAID IN DIFFERENT PLANTS IN THE SAME INDUSTRY OR LOCALITY.

B40WX

PROVISION IS ALSO MADE WITH RESPECT TO WAGE ADJUSTMENTS NECESSARY TO INSURE ESSENTIAL PRODUCTION WHERE MANPOWER "BOTTLENECKS" ARISE. PRE-APPROVAL IN BOTTLENECK CASES, HOWEVER, IS NOT GRANTED UNTIL AN INDUSTRY IS DESIGNATED BY THE STABILIZATION ADMINISTRATOR. THE REGULATIONS PROVIDE THAT THE ADMINISTRATOR WILL NOT DESIGNATE AN INDUSTRY EXCEPT ON THE RECOMMENDATION OF AN INTERESTED GOVERNMENT AGENCY AND UNLESS HE IS SATISFIED THAT SPECIFIC STANDARDS PROVIDED IN THE REGULATIONS HAVE BEEN MET.

PROPOSED WAGE OR SALARY ADJUSTMENTS INVOLVING ONLY INCREASED COSTS TO THE GOVERNMENT, AND NOT INCREASES IN PRICE CEILINGS, MAY BE REFERRED TO THE STABILIZATION ADMINISTRATOR, EVEN THOUGH THEY ARE NOT APPROVABLE UNDER THE GENERAL PROVISIONS OF THE REGULATIONS, IF IN

THE AGENCY'S JUDGMENT THE ADJUSTMENT WOULD BE CONSISTENT WITH THE STABILIZATION PROGRAM.

2. WAGE OR SALARY ADJUSTMENTS FALLING WITHIN SPECIFIED CLASSES LISTED IN THE REGULATIONS ARE AUTOMATICALLY APPROVED AS INCREASES WHICH MAY BE TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT IN DETERMINING PRICE OR RENT CEILINGS OR INCREASED COSTS TO THE GOVERNMENT.

THE SPECIFIED CLASSES INCLUDE ANY WAGE OR SALARY INCREASE WHICH

3024-32203

WAS:

LAWFULLY MADE OR APPROVED BY THE APPROPRIATE WAGE OR SALARY STABILIZATION AGENCY BEFORE AUGUST 18, 1945.

MADE IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF A WAGE OR SALARY SCHEDULE LAWFULLY IN EFFECT BEFORE AUGUST 18, 1945.

B42WX

MADE IN ACCORDANCE WITH REQUIREMENTS OF WAR LABOR BOARD OR SALARY STABILIZATION UNIT REGULATIONS REGARDING THE INSTITUTION OF NEW PIECE RATES OR NEW JOB RATES IN LINE WITH EXISTING PIECE OR JOB RATES.

MADE IN ACCORDANCE WITH EXISTING ORDERS OF THE WAR LABOR BOARD REGARDING INCREASES UP TO 55 CENTS AN HOUR TO CORRECT SUBSTANDARDS OF LIVING.

3. STANDARDS ARE PROVIDED TO GUIDE THE OFFICE OF PRICE ADMINISTRATION IN DEALING WITH APPLICATIONS FOR PRICE RELIEF, UNDER THE PROVISION OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 9651 THAT UNAPPROVED WAGE OR SALARY ADJUSTMENTS SHALL BE TAKEN INTO CONSIDERATION IN DETERMINING PRICE OR RENT CEILINGS AFTER THE EXPIRATION OF A REASONABLE TEST VERIMD-- GANERALLY SIX MONTHS.

B43WX

THE REGULATIONS REQUIRE SUBMISSION OF AN OPERATING OR FINANCIAL STATEMENT TO THE PRICE ADMINISTRATOR, REFLECTING THE EFFECT OF THE WAGE INCREASE ON COSTS OR SHOWING THE EMPLOYER'S PROFIT POSITION, FOR THE TEST PERIOD.

4. AN UNAPPROVED WAGE OR SALARY INCREASE MAY BE CONSIDERED AS A PART OF LABOR COSTS IN DETERMINING WHETHER A REDUCTION IN PRICE OR RENT CEILINGS IS JUSTIFIABLE IF THE OPA HAD NOT ANNOUNCED THAT THE REDUCTION WAS UNDER CONSIDERATION AT THE TIME THE WAGE OR SALARY INCREASE WAS MADE.

5. THE REGULATIONS MAKE CLEAR THAT THE APPROVAL OF WAGE OR SALARY ADJUSTMENTS DOES NOT WARRANT CONSEQUENT INCREASE IN PRICE OR RENT CEILINGS, OR AN INCREASE OF ANY PARTICULAR AMOUNT, UNLESS THE INCREASE IS REQUIRED UNDER APPLICABLE MAXIMUM PRICE OR RENT REGULATIONS OR THE APPROPRIATE STATUTORY OR ADMINISTRATIVE STANDARDS GOVERNING CHANGES IN PRICE OR RENT CEILINGS.

6. THE REGULATIONS PROVIDE THAT WAGE OR SALARY STABILIZATION AGENCIES SHALL NOT CONSIDER OR ACT UPON A PROPOSED WAGE OR SALARY INCREASE WHICH APPEARS TO BE CONDITIONED IN WHOLE OR IN PART BOTH UPON THE APPROVAL FOR PRICE CONSIDERATION AND UPON THE GRANTING OF AN INCREASE IN PRICE OR RENT CEILINGS.

DEC 7 1945

THIS PROVISION, HOWEVER, DOES NOT BAR CONSIDERATION OF AN INCREASE WHICH IS CONTINGENT ONLY ON APPROVAL BY THE WAGE OR SALARY STABILIZATION AGENCY OR OF AN INCREASE WHICH WILL NOT BE PUT INTO EFFECT UNTIL THE OFFICE OF PRICE ADMINISTRATION HAS MADE DEFINITE DETERMINATION AS TO WHETHER PRICE RELIEF IS REQUIRED.

7. IN ACTING UPON WAGE RATE INCREASES TO COMPENSATE FOR THE RISE IN THE COST OF LIVING, THE WAGE OR SALARY STABILIZATION AGENCY WILL USE 33 PER CENT AS THE PERCENTAGE INCREASE IN THE COST OF LIVING BETWEEN JANUARY 1941 AND SEPTEMBER 1945.

THE 33 PER CENT FIGURE WILL BE APPLIED WHERE THE PERCENTAGE INCREASE IN AVERAGE STRAIGHT TIME HOURLY EARNINGS IN THE APPROPRIATE UNIT OF EMPLOYEES SINCE JANUARY 1941 HAS NOT EQUALED THE PERCENTAGE INCREASE IN THE COST OF LIVING BETWEEN THOSE DATES.

THE STABILIZATION ADMINISTRATOR HAS BEEN ADVISED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR THAT THIS FIGURE MOST ACCURATELY REFLECTS THE INCREASE IN THE COST OF LIVING BETWEEN THOSE DATES.

8. THE REGULATIONS REPEAT THE POINT, RECENTLY EMPHASIZED BY THE STABILIZATION ADMINISTRATOR, THAT A WAGE OR SALARY INCREASE IN THE BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY IS NOT LAWFUL UNLESS APPROVED, BEFORE THE INCREASE HAS BEEN MADE.

SIMILARLY, PROPOSED WAGE OR SALARY ADJUSTMENTS SUBJECT TO THE STABILIZATION REGULATIONS OF THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE REQUIRE APPROVAL, BEFORE THE INCREASES HAVE BEEN MADE, UNLESS THE ADJUSTMENTS ARE PERMISSIBLE UNDER THOSE REGULATIONS.

THE NEW REGULATIONS CLARIFY MANY OTHER QUESTIONS OF DETAIL ARISING IN THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE WAGE-PRICE POLICY. ADMINISTRATIVE REGULATIONS ALSO WILL BE ISSUED BY THE STABILIZATION AGENCIES, WHICH INCLUDE THE WAGE STABILIZATION DIVISION OF THE WAR LABOR BOARD, THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE (SALARY STABILIZATION UNIT), THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, AND THE PRICE ADMINISTRATOR.

(END ADVANCE FOR AMS OF THURSDAY, DEC.6).

FOREIGN MINISTERS OF BIG 5 NATIONS MAY MEET AGAIN

Bevin Expected to Make an Announcement Late Today.

London, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—A Foreign Office spokesman said today that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin was expected to make an announcement, possibly late today, [illegible] possible meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the United States, Britain, Russia France and China.

Reports circulated in well-informed quarters that the five Foreign Ministers might meet in Moscow soon. The spokesman said no further indication of the nature of Bevin's announcement could be given now.

Such a meeting would be the first for the five Foreign Ministers since their inconclusive conference in London last October.

Members of Parliament hurried into the Commons chamber twice this afternoon in the expectation that Bevin was about to make the anticipated announcement. But the Foreign Secretary did not appear either time.

The London Evening Star said it was understood a proposal for a five-Power meeting came from Moscow.

At the previous meeting wide differences appeared among the delegates over such questions as European boundaries, peace treaties for the Balkans and trusteeships for colonies. It finally ended without the settlement of the major questions.

Byrnes Declines Comment.

Washington, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Byrnes declined today to say anything about possibilities of a meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the United States, Russia, Britain, China and France.

Questioned about reports from London that such a meeting would soon be held in Moscow, Byrnes said he couldn't say anything at all about it. The question was put to him after he completed testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Byrnes told a news conference Wednesday that a meeting of Foreign Ministers, following up the session which ended in deadlock at London in September, was not to be ruled out by President Truman's recent statement that he wanted more and more problems turned over to the United Nations.

France Is Irked.

Paris, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—A member of the French Cabinet said today that "the Big Three have taken on another decision bad for France." The statement, made without elaboration, was given in connection with reports that an international conference of the United States, Britain and Russia was scheduled to take place in Moscow probably "before Christmas."

The French Cabinet was reported to have discussed the projected conference "with pessimism" because France was reported not invited. It was not known here whether the projected meeting was of the heads of State or Foreign Ministers, but it was recalled here that President Truman recently had declared himself against any more "Big Three" meetings of himself, Britain's Prime Minister and Generalissimo Stalin.

BYRNES, MOLOTOV, BEVIN TO CONFER

Big Three Foreign Secretaries to Meet in Moscow December 15.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 — (AP) The foreign secretaries of the United States, Britain and Russia will meet in Moscow Dec. 15, the State department announced tonight, to discuss a long array of critical international issues including control of atomic energy.

Secretary of State Byrnes is planning to fly to the Russian capital, probably leaving Washington early next week.

It is considered improbable that he will be home by Christmas.

This will be the first meeting of Byrnes, Foreign Minister Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia since the breakdown of the London council of foreign ministers in September.

Seen Hopeful Sign

The mere fact that they have agreed to get together again at this time is considered by authorities here to be a hopeful sign for improvement in relations between the three countries.

The plan for the meeting in Moscow was suggested by Byrnes on Nov. 24.

The official statement issued by the State department said:

"A meeting of the foreign secretaries of Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States has been arranged to take place in Moscow Dec. 15. This meeting has been called in accordance with the decision taken at the Yalta conference providing for quarterly conferences of the three foreign secretaries.

"The meeting will provide an opportunity to the British, American, and Soviet governments for informal and exploratory discussions on a number of matters of current concern to the three countries and also for an exchange of views on the subject of the control of atomic energy."

Proposed U. S. Loan Approved By Labor Government Leaders

LONDON, Dec. 7.—(AP) Labor government leaders whole-heartedly approved the proposed $4,400,000,000 United States loan to Britain today, but a small Conservative opposition in Commons moved that the financial agreement be rejected.

Backed by their overwhelming majority, and motivated by Britain's almost desperate need for dollar credits, Laborite leaders planned for parliamentary approval of the loan next week along with passage of the Bretton Woods bill.

A government spokesman described the loan as "an agreement which will work," and admitted that Britain's only alternative would be an immediate austere future "far worse than during the darkest periods of the war."

Opposition came from two Conservative members within an hour after the Bretton Woods bill was introduced for parliamentary ratification, as proposed by the Washington conferees on the loan agreement.

Moving that both the Bretton Woods measure and the loan agreement be rejected, Conservative Robert Boothby, a wealthy manufacturer, declared that acceptance of the loan would abolish the sterling area; restore an international gold standard, and force Britain to return to the principle of non-discrimination in trade, with a consequent disruptive effect on the trade unity of the empire.

British participation in the Bretton Woods plan would put into action at once a large part of the funds which will be forthcoming from the United States if Congress approves the loan.

"The British government's view," said a Laborite spokesman, "is that Bretton Woods in itself is a good agreement worth adopting, and one which becomes much better" in connection with the loan agreement.

He said it did not involve a return to the gold standard, but seemed to provide "a compromise between the need for international monetary stability and domestic needs for flexibility."

British press reaction was varied.

Two Conservative Members of Parliament Offer a Motion of Disapproval.

BRETTON WOODS PLAN SCORED

But Laborite Government Moves Rapidly for Ratification of American Credits.

London, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Two Conservative Members of Parliament offered a motion today to disapprove the proposal for a $4,400,000,000 American loan and to reject a ratification bill for Britain's participation in the Bretton Woods monetary agreement.

Robert Boothby and Christopher Hollis offered the Conservative motion just an hour after the introduction of the ratification bill in the House of Commons.

The Laborite Government was moving rapidly for ratification of the Bretton Woods plan, following the completion of negotiations for the American loan. The ratification bill had its first reading, and spokesmen for the Government were confident, despite the Hollis-Boothby motion, that it will have gone through all necessary preliminary stages by the end of next week. British participation in the Bretton Woods plan was a condition of the loan.

Fear Harsh Awakening Later.

What support Boothby and Hollis could muster was not immediately apparent. Boothby, a wealthy manufacturer, said that the loan agreement would be harmful to Britain in that it would restore an international gold standard, abolish the sterling area and cause a return to the principle of non-discrimination in trade, which he considered disruptive. He said that acceptance of the conditions of the loan would deprive Britain of effective control over her national economy.

The Press Association reported that several other Conservatives would criticize the plan as a severe one, "arguing that we are buying a period of deceptive ease and tranquility at the expense of a harsh and disillusioning time later on."

The ratification bill provides that Britain subscribe $1,300,000,000 to the Bretton Woods International Monetary Fund, and the same amount to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Another provision authorizes the payment of additional funds in the event of certain contingencies, such as a decline in the value of sterling held by the fund or by the bank.

Hull Supports British Loan As Step To World Peace

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Former Secretary of State Cordell Hull today indorsed the Anglo-American loan and trade deal as a step in building world peace.

In a statement issued through the State Department, Hull declared that the nation may now be confronted with its "final opportunity to make a peace that will last."

He said that through the American Government's policy to grant Britain a $4,400,000,000 loan and Britain's agreement to work for freer international trade, "our country is taking another long step forward to build a better world by profiting from the bitter lessons of the past."

"Prosperity Prerequisites"

"I feel," he continued, "that this may be our final opportunity to make a peace that will last. I believe the Government's over-all plans released yesterday set forth the prerequisites to economic prosperity and improved standards of living in our own and all other countries.

"I have high hopes that the United States will play its full part in bringing about the conditions necessary for prosperity and lasting peace."

Hull's statement was issued as the Administration marshaled its argument behind the big credit offer to Britain, convinced that any major congressional change would imperil hopes for Anglo-American trade co-operation.

Capehart Assails Laski

In the Senate, Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) called on British leaders to repudiate remarks he attributed to Harold Laski, a leader of the British Labor party, concerning this country's economic system.

Unless this is done, Capehart told the Senate, "I for one will not support a loan to Britain."

The Senator said Laski told an American audience the "American private enterprise system must go."

"Not Liquidating U.S."

"Co-operation," Capehart said, "is not a one-way street. If Professor Laski likes Russia so well he should make his domicile there and live in prosperity and contentment."

Referring to Winston Churchill's remark that he was not chosen Prime Minister to liquidate the British Empire, Capehart said:

"I was not elected United States Senator to liquidate the United States Government."

Lend-Lease Settlement

The two governments climaxed three months of diplomatic talks yesterday by announcing a broad economic agreement tied to financial help from this country.

That help would come from a $3,750,000,000 cash loan and a $650,000,000 settlement for post-war lend-lease and war surpluses. Both would be repaid at two per cent interest over a 50-year period beginning in 1951.

Bitter Fight Indicated

Only the outright loan needs congressional approval, but every sign pointed to a bitter struggle. Harsh words were heard from a Democrat as well as a Republican in the House even before the credit agreement was officially announced.

State Department and Treasury officials who participated in the talks here said today they were convinced that any major change in the loan terms would force Britain to reject the loan altogether and pursue her own economic course within a restricted bloc of countries.

Britain's Pledge

As a part of the credit agreement, Britain agreed to co-operate with this country toward world-wide trade expansion by lowering such barriers as tariffs and cartels.

Will Clayton, Assistant Secretary of State, said at a news conference that Britain's trade had been so disrupted by the war that without the loan she would be forced deeper and deeper into special trading arrangements.

Senator Wagner (D., N.Y.), chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said he had not had time to study the specific proposals but added: "Speaking generally, I believe something must be done toward helping Britain to co-operate with our country in bringing about a more orderly economic world."

Laski Assailed in Loan Debate

Capehart Calls On British Chiefs to Disavow Remarks Aimed at U. S. Economy.

Washington, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Senator Capehart (R.-Ind.) called on British leaders today to repudiate remarks which he attributed to Harold Laski, a leader of the British Labor party, concerning this country's economic system.

Unless this is done, Capehart told the Senate, "I, for one, will not support [illegible] to Britain." He said that Laski told an American audience the "American private enterprise system must go."

"Co-operation," he said, "is not a one-way street. If Prof. Laski likes Russia so well, he should make his domicile there and live in prosperity and contentment."

Referring to Winston Churchill's remark that he was not chosen Prime Minister to liquidate the British Empire, Capehart said: "I was not elected United States Senator to liquidate the United States Government."

Cordell Hull, ex-Secretary of State, indorsed the Anglo-American loan and trade deal today as a step in building world peace. In a statement issued through the State Department, Hull declared that the nation now may be confronted with its "final opportunity to make a peace that will last."

U.S. Press For Most Part Approves British Loan

[By the Associated Press]

A sampling of the nation's editorial pages today showed an overwhelming majority of commenting newspapers in favor of the proposed loan to Britain as necessary to a revival of world trade and the financial recovery of an invaluable ally.

Most newspapers said the loan was greatly to the United States's own advantage, since revival of the British economy would provide a giant market for American goods.

"Our Definite Advantage"

The Denver Post, however, expressed opposition to the loan. "Now you know what the bunco experts mean when they say 'Once a sucker, always a sucker,'" the Post commented editorially. "Only Congress can stop the international 'gimme' gang now."

The New York Times, urging Congress to ratify the agreement by an overwhelming vote, said Britain did not need dollars "for the purpose of carrying on social experiments and labor reforms at home—for that purpose the British Government could use British pounds."

"End Of Discrimination"

But dollars are needed, the Times said, "for the purpose of re-establishing Britain's position as a great purchaser of American and other foreign goods and a strong and healthy influence in the economics of the postwar world. Surely, judged by every possible standard, it is to our own definite advantage and self-interest to have her recover that position."

2,264,000 War Claims Paid

Canada And Poland Bolt On UNO Site

London, Dec. 7 (AP)—Poland, Canada and Greece swung support to Europe as headquarters for the United Nations today, as the Philippines delegate pleaded for a site in the United States to offset "the danger" of an American return to isolationism.

The position [illegible] had been expected [illegible] the Polish breakaway from the pro-United States-Russian stand, and the declaration by Canada, caused a flurry of excitement among delegates as the preparatory commission began its showdown debate on the site issue.

The bolting of Canada and Poland left some doubt whether the United States could get the necessary two thirds majority in a vote on the executive committee's recommendation that she become the organization's permanent headquarters. Preliminary debate was expected to continue for several days.

Canadian Explains Swing

Canadian Delegate Leo[illegible] Wilgress said his support was thrown to Europe because "most of the problems the United Nations Organization will have to solve" are there.

In strong support of a United States site, Filipino Delegate Pedro Lopez declared that the "seat of the United Nations must be in the United States to keep the United States in the United Nations.

"The danger of the United States returning to isolationism," he asserted, "is as great today as it ever was in the 20's."

In an earlier meeting of the trusteship committee, Lopez pleaded also for provisions for elections in territories taken over as trusteeships by the United Nations.

UNO PLEDGE OF ELECTIONS SOUGHT

London, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Dr. Pedro Lopez, Philippines delegate, introduced a proposal before the United Nations Preparatory Committee on Trusteeship today which would require the holding of elections at least once every three years in trusteeship territory. Invoking pledges of the United Nations charter of freedom for dependent peoples, Lopez said the proposal would aid these peoples toward self-government.

The elections, he said, would choose spokesmen who would "serve as the organ for expressing to the trusteeship council the feelings, sentiments and needs of the people," and would help carry out United Nations charter promises to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the territories.

The plan drew opposition from Great Britain and South Africa, whose delegates said such elections would not be practicable, but gained the support of Russia, the Ukraine, Syria and Yugoslavia. The United States was understood to favor the proposal in general.

The delegates agreed to submit the plan to a sub-committee composed of delegates of the Philippines, South Africa, the Ukraine, Britain and China for study.

Central U.S. Urged For UNO Headquarters

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Ten mid-continent governors have joined in urging that the permanent capital of the United Nations Organization be located in central United States.

Senator Gurney (R., S.D.) said today he was notified by Gov. M. Q. Sharpe of South Dakota that he and nine other governors had signed a joint statement addressed to President Truman, Secretary of State Byrnes and Congress urging the UNO to choose a site in the interior of the country.

The others are Governors Vivian of Colorado, Davis of Louisiana, Thye of Minnesota, Donnelly of Missouri, Ford of Montana, Grjswold of Nebraska, Aandahl of North Dakota, McCord of Tennessee, and Hunt of Wyoming.

Commons Gets Report On Red Army in Poland

Communications Guards Remain, Briton Says

LONDON, Dec. 7 (AP).—Hector McNeil, Under Secretary for the British Foreign Office, told Commons today that Great Britain had been assured that the only Russian forces remaining in Poland are those guarding communication lines linking Russia with Red Army occupation areas of Germany. "Of coursse," he added, "we will continue to conduct our normal observations in relation to the disposition of those troops."

McNeil spoke after Russian activities in Poland were criticized on the floor.

Vice-Admiral E. A. Taylor, Conservative, accused the Russians of placing Red Army officers in the Polish armed forces and of making mass arrests and maintaining concentration camps. "It is essential that control of Poland by Russia should be brought to an end," he said.

J. Paton, Laborite, said other members of the House deplore happenings in Poland, but he suggested that Russia regards her security as involved. Britain had been criticized for actions in her own security zone in Greece, he pointed out.

Appeal Made To Lift British Work Controls

London, Dec. 7 (AP)—Malcolm McCorquodale, former Parliamentary secretary of the Ministry of Labor, appealed for lifting of wartime employment controls today, asserting it was "monstrous" that women were still being conscripted for labor in Britain.

"This is the only country in the world in which women are not free to choose their own occupation," he said.

"In Britain alone, women are still liable to be prosecuted and imprisoned if they do not go to the work to which the Labor Exchange sends them, whether they wish or no."

BOMB REMOVED AFTER FOUR YEARS

London, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—British soldiers finally unearthed England's oldest, and most elusive, unexploded bomb today after 191 days of digging.

A German plane dropped the bomb four and three-quarters years ago. Water complicated the digging. When the soldiers finally touched the fins they found the missile was not the 2,000-pounder they expected, but twice that size.

New War Crimes List.

London, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—The Sixteenth war crimes list, bearing 1,080 names, was issued last night by the United Nations War Crimes Commission. The names were not made public.

RUSSIAN INVASION SET FOR MONTHS

Hitler Started Massing Armies Nearly Year Before Launching Drive.

Nuernberg, Dec. 7 (AP)—Hitler began massing border troops to hurl against Russia almost ten months before the actual opening of the "drive to the East" and earlier fought a phony war in the West for six months only because of bad weather, German secrets bared at the war-crimes trial showed today.

British and American prosecutors unfolded a fantastic story of Hitler's guesses which enabled the German Army to crush seven small countries in thirteen months, but failed miserably to estimate the might of the Soviet Union.

Third Week Of Trial Ending

The [illegible] character of the [illegible] leadership, combined with a ruthless military science and perfidious diplomacy, was disclosed in scores of captured German secret reports introduced as evidence against the twenty top Nazis now on trial.

The prosecutors, concluding the third week of the trial, introduced documents showing that Hitler began reinforcing troop concentrations on the Soviet-German border as early as September, 1940—almost ten months before his June 22 invasion of Russia.

On December 5, 1940, Hitler told Hermann Goering, Field Marshal Keitel and Grand Admiral Raeder, now on trial, that he was planning to "achieve the annihilation of the Russian Army and to prevent its regeneration."

Encirclement Strategy

Thirteen days later he asserted that his German forces could crush the Soviet Union in a quick campaign before the end of the war against Britain and voiced confidence that the Red Army could be wiped out by encirclement.

He termed Soviet forces numerically equal to those of Germany, but far inferior in quality.

Although he considered Russia a much more dangerous adversary than the United States, Hitler deliberately postponed his attack on the Soviet Union for four weeks until his armies had overrun both Yugoslavia and Greece, the documents showed.

'A Story Of Perfidy'

The German records showed that Hitler's armies were poised to strike through the Low Countries and France on November 7, 1939, but because of bad weather the attack was postponed week by week for six months. When Hitler finally named May 10, 1940, as his "D" day, he complained he did so against his intuition.

The British prosecutor, outlining the part the defendants played in laying plans for the invasion while Hitler deceitfully told Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg he had no plans to attack them, said:

"The story is very plain—a simple one—a story of perfidy, of dishonor and shame."

The twenty defendants stared bleakly at their accuser.

Nowhere in the mountainous stacks of captured documents was there a shred of evidence that such professional warriors as Keitel, Col. Gen. Alfred Gustav Jodl, Raeder and Admiral Doenitz ever expressed the slightest compunction in preparing and executing the series of invasions launched without warning.

Another Illustration

Still another illustration of the charges of perfidy and treachery was in the captured German naval orders disclosing that German warships and camouflaged troop transports carried British flags and signals to screen the attack on Norway and Denmark.

In the attack upon Yugoslavia, the British prosecutor said, not even the pretense of a "warning" was made.

He described the Nazi technique as "the method of the barbarian of a state without honor for its pledged word. One is tempted to speculate whether this technique was evolved by the 'honest broker,' Hitler, or his 'honest clerk,' von Ribbentrop."

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, the "clerk" to whom the prosecutor referred, was pictured by his own records as a facile liar who cloaked successive aggressions with fraudulent diplomacy.

Hitler Miscalculated

Still another Hitler miscalculation brought out today was the Führer's belief, contained in a directive issued on November 12, 1940, that Spain could be pushed into the war on Germany's side and

30.24-32207

Gibraltar occupied.

Some sections of this directive were not used by the prosecution as evidence, since they were not relevant to the argument then under discussion. They disclosed, however, that the purpose of such an operation was "to drive the English out of the western Mediterranean."

The operation, bearing the code name "Felix," provided for German planes based in France to attack the British fleet in the port of Gibraltar "at a favorable moment."

Hannegan Feted In Eire

DUBLIN, Dec. 7 (AP)—Prime Minister Eamon de Valera tonight entertained at dinner United States Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan and twenty other members of his party. He said he hoped to establish airmail services wherever United States commercial planes flew. He expressed hope for early establishment of a service to Eire.

War Trial Told Nazi Ships Used British Flags in Norway Push

DE LUXE

Nuernberg, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—The German Navy's warships and camouflaged troop transports carried British flags and signals to disguise the speedy fifth column conquest of Norway and Denmark, it was revealed today at the war crimes trial of twenty of Hitler's leaders.

Read into the record at the International Military Tribunal was the name of Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, commander in chief of the German Navy, to use British flags on German ships which slipped into Scandinavian ports on the eve of invasion.

The detailed story of treachery and intrigue leading to the downfall of Germany's neighbors in April, 1940, disclosed that the plot to use the fifth column of Vidkun Quisling in obtaining Scandinavian U boat bases was engineered largely by Grand Admiral Erich Raeder and Alfred Rosenberg, two of the Nazis on trial.

Nazis Denied Disguise.

Official German Navy orders introduced as evidence included instructions that "the disguise as British craft must be kept as long as possible." The German Government denied repeatedly in 1940 that their vessels had flown British flags.

Raeder, who maintained under questioning after his capture that he had no hand in Hiter's plotting and was merely a bluff old sea dog doing his duty to his country, was disclosed by his own records to have sold Hitler on the idea of invading Norway in October, 1939—five months before the invasion.

Disregarded Treaties.

The German operational plans also provided for the capture of King Haakon but the king escaped and soon thereafter set up a government in exile in England. Retention of Denmark, Norway and nothern France as "German possessions" after the war was proposed by German naval officers to insure free access to the seas, another naval office document disclosed.

Turning to the invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg a month later, British prosecutors read the treaties by which Germany previously had guaranteed the freedom of the Low Countries.

Hitler's armies were poised for the invasion of the Low Countries and France November 7, 1939, but the attack was postponed week by week for six months because of bad weather, official German records disclosed. While the rest of the world spoke sarcastically of "a phony war," the German military machine was ready and "waiting only for favorable weather."

Hitler signed his directive for attack "as soon as possible" on the Low Countries on October 9, 1939—five weeks after the invasion of Poland, it was disclosed.

Armies Massed November 7.

On November 7, the German armies were massed along the border for the attack on Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, other High Command orders showed. The actual attack did not start until May 10, 1940, because of successive spells of bad weather that might have interfered with operations of the air force and the mechanized units of the German army, according to the score of military top-secrets made public for the first time.

Turning to Germany's invasion of Yugoslavia and Greece on on April 6, 1941, British prosecutors submitted captured documents and secret speeches by Hitler showing the attack on the two countries delayed for four weeks his invasion of Russia—which began June 22, 1941. Some military experts say they believe these four weeks meant the difference between victory and defeat in the Russian campaign.

A letter from Hitler asked Mussolini to postpone the Italian invasion of Greece until after the 1940 elections in the United States, when President Roosevelt was re-elected. Mussolini disregarded the request and attacked October 28, 1940.

Col. H. S. Phillimore, assistant British prosecutor, introduced records showing plans for the attack on Yugoslavia were being discussed August 12, 1939—only two months after the Fuehrer promised Yugoslavia's Prince Regent Paul that "we have become neighbors with common boundaries fixed for all time."

"As we know now," Phillimore declared, "the fate of Yugoslavia had been sealed since the conversation between Hitler, Von Ribbentrop and (Italian Foreign Minister) Galeazzo Ciano at Obersalzburg August 12, 1939."

Troops on Soviet Border.

American prosecutors introdced secret German plans to attack Russia with the disclosure that troop concentrations on the Soviet border were being reinforced for invasion as early as September, 1940 — almost ten months before the drive of June 22, 1941. Submitted as evidence was an intelligence report signed by Col.-Gen. Alfred Jodl, German Army Chief of Staff, giving directions for camouflaging of troops and installations to keep the Russians from becoming aware of invasion plans.

More evidence of German plans against Russia was contained in a report of a meeting of Hitler, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and Raeder on December 5, 1940, which quoted Hitler as laying plans to "achieve the annihilation of the Russian Army and to prevent its regeneration."

Weather Delay In Nazi West Push Told

DE LUXE

Nuernberg, Dec. 7 (AP)—Hitler's armies were poised for the invasion of the Low countries and France November 7, 1939, but the attack was postponed week by week for six months because of bad weather, official German records disclosed at the war crimes trial here today.

While the rest of the world spoke sarcastically of "a phony war," the German military machine was ready and "waiting only for favorable weather," according to records introduced before the International Military Tribunal.

British prosecutors turned most of their evidence against the German military and naval leaders among the twenty top-ranking Hitlerites accused of war crimes, pointing out their part in plans for the crushing invasion while Hitler deceitfully told Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg that he had no plans to attack them.

Plans To Attack Russia

Concluding the third week of the historic trial, American prosecutors introduced secret German plans to attack Russia with the disclosure that troop concentrations on the Soviet border were being reinforced for invasion as early as September, 1940—almost ten months before the drive of June 22, 1941, against the Red Army.

Submitted as evidence was an intelligence report signed by Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, German army chief of staff, giving directions for camouflaging of troops and installations to keep the Russians from becoming aware of invasion plans.

More evidence of German plans against Russia was contained in a report of a meeting of Hitler, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder on December 5, 1940, which quoted Hitler as laying plans to "achieve the annihilation of the Russian Army and to prevent its regeneration."

Fifth Column Moved

The fifth-column conquest of Norway and Denmark was only a prelude to the invasion a month later of the Low Countries, the evidence showed.

Prosecutors introduced German naval orders revealing that German warships and camouflaged troop transports carried British flags and signals to screen the attack on Norway and Denmark.

Hitler signed his directive for attack "as soon as possible" on the Low Countries on October 9, 1939—five weeks after the invasion of Poland, it was disclosed.

On November 7, the German armies were massed along the border for the attack on Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, other high command orders showed.

Started In May

The actual attack did not start until May 10, 1940, because of successive spells of bad weather that might have interfered with operations of the air force and the mechanized units of the German Army, according to the score of military top secrets made public in the courtroom.

Another surprise was the disclosure by the prosecution that a large portion of the German Air Force's plans for parachute-troop operations during the Lowlands invasion fell into Allied hands on January 10, 1940—just four months before the Nazis actually jumped off. The plans were found in a German plane that crashed in Belgium.

The series of delays must have been a strain to Hitler, who wrote in his directive for an early attack that "a long waiting period strengthens the military power of our enemies to an increasing degree, causes confidence of the neutrals in German final victory to wane and does not help to bring Italy to our aid as a brother in arms."

Delay Of Three Days

The first postponement was for only three days, according to one order from Keitel, who declared that Hitler "after hearing reports on the meteorological and railway-transport situation has ordered A day (day of attack) postponed for the time being by three days."

There followed a series of postponements that finally culminated in choosng January 17, 1940, as the jump-off day, with Aachen selected as the invasion point. Again the weather went sour and the attack was called off "on account of the meteorological situation."

It was not until May 9, 1940, that the final order was issued and the great invasion of the Lowlands began the next day.

Hitler's Treachery

More evidence of Hitler's treachery was entered into the record when Assistant British Prosecutor G. D. Roberts recalled German "assurances" on October 6, 1939, that Hitler would respect the neutrality of Belgium and Holland. Four days later he signed the directive for war against them "as soon as possible."

Roberts castigated the military and naval leaders on trial—Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, Field Marshal Keitel, General Jodl, Grand Admirals Karl Doenitz and Raeder, German Navy leaders.

"What kind of honor have these men?" asked Roberts, reciting the list of treaties broken by Germany.

At one point, Roberts waxed so sarcastic that he was directed by Lord Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence to confine his remarks to the documents.

"Story Of Shame"

"The story is very plain—a simple one—a story of perfidy, dishonor and shame," Roberts declared.

The role that Hitler's much-vaunted "intuition" played in directing army operations was shown in excerpts from Jodl's diary in which he described the Führer as wrestling with the problem of whether to invade the Low Countries before the lightning grab for Denmark and Norway. At one time, it was disclosed, Hitler actually ordered the Norwegian-Danish invasion to begin after the invasion of the Low Countries, but the plan was later reversed.

Hitler finally decided, Jodl's diary disclosed, on a "swift entry into Norway" and then argued with Keitel against further delay in the invasion of the Low Countries.

Against Intuition

"The Führer doesn't want to wait any longer but the Field Marshal (Keitel) wants to postpone the attack until May 10, at least," Jodl wrote. "The Führer is very agitated; then he consents to postponement until May 10, which is against his intuition, he says."

Turning to Germany's invasion of Yugoslavia and Greece on April 6, 1941, British prosecutors submitted captured documents and secret speeches by Hitler showing the attack on the two countries delayed for four weeks his invasion of Russia—which began June 22, 1941.

Some military experts say they believe these four weeks meant the difference between victory and defeat in the Russian campaign.

Attack Without Warning

Hitler, according to one of his directives, ordered Yugoslavia attacked "without warning and destroyed with lightning speed."

A letter from Hitler asked Mussolini to postpone the Italian invasion of Greece until after the 1940 elections in the United States, when President Roosevelt was re-elected. Mussolini disregarded the request and attacked October 28, 1940.

Jodl's diary shows that he was concerned about Dutch defense preparations when he wrote of the "alarming news" that the British had asked permission to take up defensive positions in Dutch territory.

Col. H. S. Phillimore, assistant British prosecutor, introduced records showing plans for the attack on Yugoslavia were being discussed August 12, 1939—only two months after the Führer promised Yugoslavia's Prince Regent Paul that "we have become neighbors with common boundaries fixed for all time."

Parley With Ciano

"As we know now," Phillimore declared, "the fate of Yugoslavia had been sealed since the conversation between Hitler, von Ribbentrop and (Italian Foreign Minister) Galeazzo Ciano at Obersalzburg August 12, 1939. Two months after the dinner for the Prince Regent, Hitler and Ribbentrop sought to persuade Italy to make war on Yugoslavia. Ciano, while eager to liquidate Yugoslavia, said Italy was not yet ready."

Ribbentrop, making copious notes throughout the session, paused to shake his head dejectedly.

Taking up the invasion of Greece by Italy, the British prosecutor praised Greek Premier John Metaxas for his courage in rejecting Mussolini's three-hour ultimatum.

Promise To Mussolini

Hitler's condolences to Mussolini for his fiasco in the Greek invasion and tacit promise to fight in the Balkans the following spring were contained in a letter introduced as evidence.

Hitler issued his directive for the invasion of Greece, the evidence disclosed, on November 12, 1940, and the invasion was begun April 6, 1941. The Greeks, who had succeeded in holding Mussolini's army, surrendered to the Germans April 23.

Phillimore quoted from Ribbentrop's letter sent to Yugoslavia March 23, 1941—thirteen days before the invasion—in which Hitler's Foreign Minister promised that Germany would not use Yugoslavia's newly signed adherence to the Axis to demand passage for German troops.

In ordering the Yugoslav invasion "without warning" Hitler said he counted on Croat assistance in return for a promise of autonomy.

Ordered Mussolini About

Letters exchanged by Hitler and Mussolini during Italy's bungled

invasion of Greece showed that the Führer was not backward in ordering il Duce about.

Completing Britain's entire case, further documents disclosed that Germany did not require active assistance from Bulgaria or Romania in the Greek-Yugoslav invasion but used Bulgaria as a springboard to Greece. A directive signed by Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, Germany army commander, said "the main task of Romania remains protection against Russia."

Read into evidence was the order of Admiral Doenitz to use British flags on German ships that slipped into Scandinavian ports on the eve of invasion.

The detailed story of treachery and intrigue leading to the downfall of Germany's little neighbors in April, 1940, disclosed that the plot to use the fifth column of Vidkun Quisling in obtaining Scandinavian U-boat bases was engineered largely by Admiral Raeder and Alfred Rosenberg, two of the accused Nazis on trial.

Berliners Gather Wood In Bite Of First Cold

Berlin, Dec. 7 (AP)—Blue-nosed Berliners bundled up and shivered today in the city's first wintry blast. temperatures dropped to 28 degrees Fahrenheit. There was no coal for civilian heating.

Men, women and children with saws and axes in increased numbers cut wood in Gruenewald Forest and the Tiergarten.

Scores of them were still packing bundles of wood along once fashionable streets long after dark.

In business offices clerks worked in heavy overcoats and pushed pencils with gloved hands.

SIEGFRIED LINE TO BE WIPED OUT

Berlin, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—A coordinating committee, acting for the Allied Control Commission, said today that the Siegfried Line and all other military installations, above and underground, will be destroyed to strip Germany of land defenses.

Nazi Experimenter On PW's Pleads

Dachau, Germany, Dec. 7 (AP)—Dr. Klaus Schilling, 70-year-old defendant in the Dachau concentration camp trial, appealed to a United States military court today that he be permitted to live to complete the work on malaria experiments he performed on prisoners.

With a dramatic gesture, he asked for "one word please" at the end of testimony in which he had admitted artificially infecting more than 1,000 prisoners.

Denied Any Died

"If, as a result of my experiments, a cure can be found it would be an enormous benefit to humanity," he said. "I need only a chair, a desk and a typewriter to finish my report."

Schilling protested the use of the term "human guinea pigs" in connection with his experiments. He explained that pigs could not be used and he could not experiment on himself because he had had malaria three times.

He denied any of the subjects died as a result of his experiments, challenging testimony that 100 died. Showing surprise when confronted with his own records, he said: "I thought these cards had been burned, but find they were put aside to be used as evidence against me."

U.S., Britain Object To Italian-Swiss Pact

Rome, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Foreign Ministry disclosed today that the United States and British embassies had handed identical notes to the Italian Government objecting to the recently concluded Italian-Swiss trade pact.

The objections were to a clause setting aside 15 per cent of the proceeds of Italian exports for payment of a pre-war debt to Switzerland. The notes contended this was a discrimination against other debtors of Italy. The Foreign Ministry said an economic mission was leaving to take up the objections with Switzerland.

U.S. Engines Sold To Belgium

Brussels, Dec. 7 (AP)—The United States Foreign Liquidation Commission has sold a number of American locomotives, shipped over for the Allies during the war, to the Belgian Government.

167 Interned Balts Break Hunger Strike

Stockholm, Dec. 7 (AP)—One hundred and sixty-seven interned Balts today temporarily broke a hunger strike started two weeks ago in protest against their scheduled extradition to Russia as deserters from the German Army.

The prisoners, all Lithuanians, Latvians and Estonians who had served with the Germans, were among 2,700 internees marked for deportation. They were too weak to be moved from Swedish hospitals when the Russian vessel sailed last week end.

Hundreds of German officers and men also succeeded in delaying their deportation to Russian-occupied Germany by severe self-mutilation in a mass-suicide attempt on the morning of their scheduled departure. Several killed themselves.

At one internment camp, sixteen Germans were still missing. They are believed to have been trapped in the collapse of an escape tunnel.

INDONESIAN GUN POSITIONS BOMBED BY BRITISH PLANES

Hoagland

BATAVIA, Dec. 7.—(AP) Twelve British planes dumped three tons of bombs today on Indonesian gun positions on a lake shore south of Ambarawa, and gunned and bombed buildings in a densely wooded hideout area on the opposite side of the lake.

NIGHT

Clashes continued at scattered points in Java, as British and Netherlands leaders returned to Batavia after attending a conference in Singapore yesterday called by Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied Southeast Asia commander.

The Netherlands news agency Aneta said there was no immediate comment from either Lt. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands East Indies, or acting NEI Governor General Hubertus van Mook. The conference was called to consider the situation both in Java and Indo-China.

The air assault on the Ambarawa gun positions was ordered after Indonesian resistance forces had begun firing again at internment camps in that area. British transport planes continued to evacuate ailing and injured women and children from Semarang, mid-Java port city 20 miles north of Ambarawa.

Three Soldiers Killed

The British said three Indian troops were killed and nine wounded yesterday while escorting 500 hungry refugees from the trouble-torn southern half of Bandoeng, 75 miles southeast of Batavia. An Allied spokesman described the action as a "heavy battle."

In the past few days 140 Europeans, Dutch and Eurasians were abducted in the city before they could be moved to safe areas, the British added.

The Indonesians said their minister of internal security, Amir Sjarifuddin, had gone to Bandoeng to confer with the British and the West Java Governor Soetardjo.

A British officer and six West Yorkshiremen are missing from a patrol of 10 sent along the railway west of Soerabaja yesterday, the British announced. The three men who returned said they met constant light machinegun fire.

Ten miles south of Soerabaja, at Wonotjolo, British troops and tanks destroyed an ammunition dump and cleared the entire area of Indonesians.

Except for occasional sniping, the situation remained quiet in Batavia.

A British naval vessel touring the Sumatra coast to destroy Japanese ammunition dumps completed its work at Benkoelen in southern Sumatra without incident. British troops were still seeking a British brigadier and a British woman Red Cross worker reported abducted near Padang.

140 ARE ABDUCTED BY INDONESIANS

Batavia, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—British authorities said today that 140 European DAY and Eurasians living in the Indonesian-held southern section of Bandoeng had been abducted in the last few days, while 500 other refugees were escorted out to safety by Indian troops. Three Gurkhas were killed and nine wounded in the operation.

R. A. F. Thunderbolts planted 6,000 pounds of bombs on Lakeside gun positions of Indonesian troops near Ambarawa which had been interfering with the evacuation of Allied prisoners of war and internees at the city in central Java twenty miles south of Semarang.

A British officer and six men of a ten-man patrol were reported missing from a reconnaissance of a railway west of the naval base of Soerabaja yesterday. Pamphlets calling upon holdout Indonesians to yield were scattered by planes over eastern Java.

Silent on Singapore Talks

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 7 (AP)—British and Netherlands leaders returned to Batavia today after having attended a conference in Singapore yesterday called by Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied southeast Asia commander.

The Netherlands news agency said that there was no immediate comment from either Lieut. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands Indies, or Acting Governor General Dr. Hubertus J. van Mook. The conference was called to consider the situation both in Java and French Indo-China.

British transport planes continued to evacuate ailing and injured women and children from Semarang.

The British said that three Indian troops had been killed and nine wounded yesterday while escorting 500 refugees from the trouble-torn southern half of Bandung.

In the past few days 140 Europeans, Netherlanders and Eurasians were abducted in the city before they could be moved to safe areas, the British added.

Indonesian to See British

The Indonesians said their Minister of Internal Security, Amir Sjarifuddin, had gone to Bandung to confer with the British and the West Java Governor Soetardjo.

A British officer and six West Yorkshiremen are missing from a patrol of ten sent along the railway west of Surabaya yesterday, the British announced. The three men who returned said they met constant light machine gun fire.

Ten miles south of Surabaya, at Wonotjolo, British troops and tanks destroyed an ammunition dump and cleared the entire area of Indonesians.

Chiang's Troops At Mukden Gates

Chungking, Dec. 7 (AP)—Nationalist vanguards have reached the outskirts of Mukden and are expected to enter that vital Manchurian industrial city before Monday, Chinese dispatches reported today.

The Nationalists lost fewer than 100 men to DAY Communist resistance on their 200-mile sweep northward along the Peiping-Mukden railroad, the dispatches stated.

In China proper, Nationalists and Communists were reported fighting south of Kupeikow, one of the main passes leading to Jehol province.

The Chinese press predicted that the civil administration of Manchuria would be taken over from the Russians next week. Gen. Hsiung Shih-hui, director of Nationalist headquarters in Manchuria, will return to Changchun, the Manchurian capital, as soon as airborne Nationalist troops have landed there.

The World Daily News reported today that Gen. Chou En-lai, due here from Yenan soon with other Chinese Communist peace-parley delegates, would submit their case to Gen. George C. Marshall, new United States envoy to China.

CHINESE DRIVE NEAR MUKDEN

Gains Made Against Negligible Communist Opposition

MUKDEN

Chungking, Dec. 7 (AP)—Chinese dispatches reported today that vanguards of Central Government forces had reached the outskirts of Mukden and should enter that important NIGHT city within three days. Otherwise only small-scale clashes marked China's wordy civil strife.

The drive from the Great Wall to near Mukden has been accomplished against negligible Communist opposition with loss of less than 100 Government troops, the Chungking accounts said.

Conference Plans Continued

Papers here predicted that Chiang Kai-shek's civil administration would take over in Manchuria from the Russians next week.

DEC 8 1945

Elsewhere, Communists and Government forces were reported clashing south of Kupeikow in one of the passes leading to Jehol province.

In the word battle, pro-Nationalist organizations in various parts of the country were sending telegrams to Chungking urging suppression of "subversive" activities of the Communists, while pro-Communist bodies were similarly busy urging Chungking to "halt its attacks" and establish a coalition government.

Against this background of mutual recriminations, plans still were being made for the long-delayed "peace conference" tentatively scheduled to open in Chungking December 15. The World Daily News said that Gen. Chou En-lai, Communist leader, was scheduled to come to Chungking with other delegates and planned to submit his case to the new American Ambassador, General Marshall.

Seven Army Men Killed In Transport Plunge

Honolulu, Dec. 7 (AP)—Army Transport Command headquarters said today seven of eight persons abroad a mainland-bound Liberator bomber were killed yesterday when the plane plunged into a reef off Keehi Beach, on the Island of Aahu. All aboard were army personnel.

NIP WAR CRIME TRIALS SCHEDULED FOR NEXT MONTH

SPENCER

TOKYO, Dec. 7. — (AP) War crimes trials of top Japanese are scheduled to start in January, with former Premier Hideko Tojo high on the calendar for the proceedings at which death penalties probably will be asked, the American chief prosecutor disclosed today.

Joseph B. Keenan, special prosecutor NIGHT in Tokyo with his staff, said that Allied nations had been invited to nominate members of the court, which will be appointed by General MacArthur, and to participate in the prosecution, but that none had yet named such personnel.

Keenan said previous delays in starting the trials were to respect the rights of other nations and to show that the United States was not taking a high-handed attitude.

Group Trials Planned

Speaking at a 30-minute press conference after a lengthy session with MacArthur, the gray-haired Keenan said the Japanese would be tried in groups, as in Germany, with "the accused presumed innocent until proved guilty."

In announcing the tentative January starting date, with Tojo and his "Pearl Harbor" cabinet near or at the head of the roster, the prosecutor said accusations would go back to 1937, when Japan started war in China.

30.24-32209

"What about the emperor?" A correspondent asked.

"No comment on that," Keenan replied firmly.

Asked what penalties would be provided, he replied that every civilized country had a penalty to fit the offense of persons whose acts meant loss of life of innocent people and that "my job here concerns the criminals who planned, devised and conspired to bring about a war of aggression contrary to the laws of nations and treaties of nations.

"It was a plan of outright murder without declaration and without an attempt to justify themselves."

Keenan said he did not think the trials would be prolonged, remarking, "this is not to be a Roman holiday for technicalities either by the prosecution or defense."

With trial preparations thus in progress, Marquis Koichi Kido, one of the highest figures yet named on the list of 286 war criminal suspects, put the finger on Tojo as chiefly to blame for the war.

Kido, former lord keeper of the privy seal and one of the Emperor's closest advisors, told Associated Press Correspondent Morrie Landsberg in an interview that Tojo "is clearly a war criminal from the standpoint of constitutional government in Japan. I think he is most to blame for the war."

As for himself, the black-robed Kido said that "by Japanese interpretation of what constitutes a war criminal, I am not guilty," but conceded that he could not judge fairly because he did not know how the Americans defined war criminality.

Kido insisted that the Emperor was not responsible for the outbreak or prosecution of the war and stated emphatically that the Emperor never had indicated any intention to abdicate.

As for former Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, newly named as a war crimes suspect, Kido said he was a "borderline case." Of the others, he said he preferred not to mention names but that many were "doubtful," although none was clearly not a war criminal.

Trials In Japan Are Set For January

SPRUCE DAY

Tokyo, Dec. 7 (AP)—Chief Prosecutor Joseph B. Keenan announced today that the first war-crimes trials in Japan were scheduled tentatively for January—with war lord Hideki Tojo and his Pearl Harbor Cabinet leading the parade of defendants.

"The accused will be presumed innocent until proved guilty," Keenan, General MacArthur's special staff counsel, said. But he added that:

"Japanese war criminals must be punished and humiliated so that they will go down in history as ordinary felons of the lowest type."

Silent On Emperor

He declined comment on the Allied attitude toward Emperor Hirohito.

The death penalty will be asked at the trials, he indicated.

He said he found President Truman and General MacArthur to be in accord on questions affecting trial procedure and on the requirement that trials be concluded as rapidly as possible.

To Be Tried In Groups

Like their German counterparts, Japanese war crimes suspects will be tried in groups. An international court seems likely, since other interested powers have been asked to nominate members. None has complied thus far, Keenan reported.

On top of General MacArthur's order for the arrest of Marquis Koichi Kido, the arrival of Keenan in Japan brought full realization to the Nipponese that the Allies mean business in rooting out aggressors. The order against Kido reached as close to the throne as MacArthur could get without arresting Emperor Hirohito himself.

To Take Assets Abroad

Even before Nippon could recover from the shock of the MacArthur order for the arrest of Kido, who was Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal and Hirohito's closest adviser, Prince Fumimaro Konoye and seven others, there came two more explosive developments:

1. Edwin W. Pauley, United States reparations commissioner, recommended confiscation of all Japanese assets abroad, including those of the Emperor; removal from the country of the industrial potentials of the zaibatsu (family monopoly); and huge slashes in shipbuilding, steel production and generation of electric power.

2. MacArthur ordered the removal from Japan of every mineral resource which might permit development of the atomic bomb.

Asahi Comments

The Tokyo newspaper Asahi, in reporting the order for the arrests of Kido and Konoye, said the directive is expected to "exert considerably serious consequences on the political situation of this country."

"By virtue of the present arrest directive, the leaders, including Prince Konoye and Marquis Kido, who for years served the throne, will disappear from political circles," Asahi declared.

"As a result, the ripples to be caused to political circles cannot be slighted."

Probe Of War Asked

Asahi commented on the eve of the fateful December 8 (December 7, U.S. date) that it was time Japan began its own investigation of the events which led to war.

Looking to the future prosecutions of such men as Konoye, Kido and ex-Premier Hideki Tojo, Keenan said:

"In the past a man lost only his prestige as did the Kaiser in World War I but now we must make the leaders endure personal punishment. We have come to the point where another war threatens the very existence of civilization and we must act firmly."

Wants Leaders Tried

Keenan is concerned with the trials of top flight classifications—Cabinet members, army, navy and air officers and industrial leaders—"who for any purpose whatsoever joined in a plan to rule outside Japan by brute force."

Outlining preliminary plans for the trials—which will involve more than 250 war crimes suspects—Keenan said that the groups of defendants would be built around time periods in which they were active. They will go back to July, 1937, when the China war started.

Expected To Be Open

Keenan said trials probably would be free and open. The accused would be given fair notice of charges against them so that they might prepare for trial either through their own counsel, if desired, or appointed counsel.

Penalties would be "within elastic limits" and be at the option of the court under a court charter which will be issued, he said.

Asked what penalties could be expected, he replied that every civilized country has a penalty that fits the offense of persons whose acts mean loss of life to innocent people—a strong indication that the prosecution will ask for death.

Kido Calls Tojo War Criminal, Says Emperor Is Not Guilty

PAROLE?

Tokyo, Dec. 7 (AP)—Prison-bound Marquis Koichi Kido, Emperor Hirohito's closest wartime adviser, today labeled former Premier Hideki Tojo an "indisputable war criminal."

He termed Prine Fumimaro Konoye a "borderline case" and spoke out strongly against any Allied move to place Hirohito on trial.

Kido emphatically denied reports that the Emperor would abdicate. He said that Hirohito had not indicated to him at any time that he would renounce the throne and from what he had learned as an inner palace major domo, "I can't tell you whether it will ever come about."

The former Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal declared that by Japanese interpretation of what constitutes a war criminal, "I am not guilty." Kido had been named in a new list of nine war-crimes suspects issued by General MacArthur yesterday.

"I have nothing to hide," the Marquis said at his hillside home near the farm village of Tamamura, 22 miles from Tokyo.

Loyal To Hirohito

"Before the court I will speak frankly and I will speak the truth. I feel responsible politically but I do not think I committed any crimes."

Kido showed unshaken loyalty to the Emperor as he pleaded that Hirohito was not responsible for the war which, he said, the Imperial ruler wanted to conclude at several stages of the hostilities.

However, he added, the Emperor made no real move to end the conflict until August.

Kido said he had not heard the Emperor express any opinion about MacArthur but that after Hirohito went to see the supreme commander in September he said MacArthur "understood things very well" and the Emperor was "happy" over the outcome of the meeting.

The Marquis declined to indicate whether he thought Allied headquarters had named all Japanese who should be prosecuted for war crimes. He said none could avoid all Allied suspicion.

Tojo "Most To Blame"

Mention of Tojo brought a swift and direct answer: "He is clearly a war criminal from the standpoint of constitutional government in Japan. I think he is most to blame for the war." Kido said it was not easy to hold Tojo down, because the driving force and impetus of the times toward war became too strong.

Kido not only said he was unperturbed by the prospect of prosecution but issued a plea for American assistance in rebuilding Japan.

"Japan will become a great country without armament—perhaps the first such country in the world," he added. He urged "understanding" by the United States so this will be possible.

JAPS' HAWAII TRIALS HINTED

Homma Expected To Be Taken To Manila Soon

Tokyo, Saturday, Dec. 8 (AP)—On this fourth anniversary of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbo, General MacArthur's chief prosecutor for the impending war criminal trials indicated strongly today that some of the plotters of that attack may be tried in Hawaii for "murder."

[It was December 8, 1941, Tokyo date, when Pearl Harbor was attacked.]

NIGHT

Joseph B. Keenan, special prosecutor who has arrived in Tokyo with his staff, in discussing such a possibility, said:

"It is not the men who dropped the bombs but the men who set in motion the plans, who committed the more heinous offense."

He said, however, definitely that Hideki Tojo, the No. 1 man on the criminal list and who was Premier at the time of the attack, would not be tried in Hawaii.

Asked then if only "small fry" might be tried in the islands, Keenan replied that none of the men he would try were small fry.

"If there is any violation of Federal statutes involved, there is no reason why we should not try them in Hawaii," Keenan explained.

"Certain individuals at Pearl Harbor who were citizens of the United States were murdered December 7, 1941, (Keenan was using the United States date). Their lives were taken with premeditation. That is murder in the United States," Keenan said.

Homma Trial Due Soon

Accelerating the wheels of Allied military justice grinding against Japan's warmongers, informed sources said today that quite soon Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma, accused of responsibility for the brutal "Bataan death march," would be taken to Manila for trial.

It was in Manila yesterday that Homma's successor in the Philippines, Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, was condemned to the fate which may await Homma—a sentence of hanging for condoning atrocities by Japanese troops in the Philippines.

The war-crimes trials of top Japanese, including Tojo and his "Pearl Harbor Cabinet," are scheduled to start in January, Keenan disclosed yesterday.

Rights Of Others Respected

Keenan said that Allied Nations have been invited to nominate members of the court, which will be appointed by MacArthur, and to participate in the prosecution. None yet has named such personnel.

Keenan said previous delays in starting the trials were to respect the rights of other nations and to show that the United States was not taking a highhanded attitude.

Speaking at a 30-minute press conference after a lengthy session with MacArthur, the gray-haired Keenan said the Japanese would be tried in groups, as in Germany, with "the accused presumed innocent until proved guilty."

Kido Puts Finger On Tojo

Keenan said he did not think the trials would be prolonged, remarking, "this is not to be a Roman holiday for technicalities either by the prosecution or defense."

With trial preparations thus in progress, Marquis Koichi Kido, one of the highest figures yet named on the list of 286 war criminal suspects, put the finger on Tojo as chiefly to blame for the war.

Kido, former lord keeper of the privy seal and one of the Emperor's closest advisers, told Morrie Landsberg, Associated Press correspondent, in an interview that Tojo "is clearly a war criminal from the standpoint of constitutional government in Japan. I think he is most to blame for the war."

HOMMA TRIAL NEARS

TOKYO, Saturday, Dec. 8—(AP) Informed sources said today Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma, commander in the Philippines when Japanese soldiers perpetrated the Bataan "death march," will leave Tokyo for Manila shortly to stand trial as a war criminal.

Homma, who submitted to arrest Sept. 15, has been held in Omori prison here.

In September, Homma denied he ordered the "death march" but said he was ready as "commander in chief of the Philippine forces to take full responsibility of any acts of my subordinates."

It was Homma who dictated the surrender terms to Gen. Jonathan Wainwright after the fall of Corregidor.

Lone Jap Chief Foresaw Fate 4 Years Ago

By Russell Brines

Tokyo, Dec. 7 (AP)—On this anniversary of Pearl Harbor it is clear that probably only one top-ranking Japanese war leader four years ago broke through the awful irresponsibility surrounding him to visualize the final outcome of the Pacific war.

I have talked to most of the key men of that era who remain alive and by their own testimony one of the dead—Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto—was the only leader clear-headed enough to foresee the future.

DAY

Yamamoto became the center of a domestic controversy because he stated repeatedly that the Japanese Navy could fight only 1½ years.

"Caught In Web"

The remainder, from the Emperor down, were caught in a web of emotional patriotism, superstition, ignorance and Oriental fatalism.

They failed to plan ahead for each step of a war whereon they gambled and lost an empire. Most certainly they were completely unable to visualize the consequences of defeat. Nor did they foresee the great gashes which bombs could—and did—make on the face of Japan.

Even as the Washington negotiations progressed in 1941, a "tidal wave for war" was sweeping over Japan. Several leaders have remarked "no man could stand against it."

Backed By Propaganda

Behind that tidal wave was a ruthless domestic totalitarianism and a two-year-old propaganda campaign. Also motivating it was the Manchurian grab, which precluded any Japanese withdrawal from China. Stalemate in China meant that a continued oil supply was vital.

The southward push toward oil brought the July 26, 1941, freeze on Japanese assets by the United States, Britain and The Netherlands. On September 26, Prince Fumimaro Konoye said Japan decided in an imperial conference to begin mid-October preparations for war unless Washington negotiations showed marked improvement.

None Spoke Against War

Japan considered former Secretary of State Cordell Hull's November 26 message "concrete evidence that negotiations had gone backward," Marquis Kido said. Shortly after that the Supreme War Council was notified war was probable. The Emperor and some of Japan's more honored militarists attended the conference. None spoke against it. All accepted the explanation that the war "might become difficult" after America caught her military breath.

Even before Hull's message arrived, the Pearl Harbor fleet had sailed. Fleet Admiral Osami Nagano said it could have been recalled if the negotiations showed improvement—that is, if America made concessions.

Declaration Delayed

Nagano said original plans were to declare war a bare half hour before the Pearl Harbor attack, but the message was unexplainably delayed. Saburo Kurusu, special envoy said the message arrived but was too garbled—probably not intentionally—to be decoded in time.

Today Japan sees the finale of fifteen years of Oriental intrigue, brutality and greed unleashed by men equipped with modern power and medieval minds.

Social Reformation Begun

Occupation leaders have launched an intense social reformation to free the people whose leaders enslaved and misled them. They plan to eliminate financial oligarchies, and Twentieth Century feudalism, disperse the loot leaders and their friends and force Japan back to international mediocrity.

And now the Japanese people say: "It was a war that could not be won anyway because we underestimated America—but we were forced into it by our national honor."

TRIED TO KILL JAP EMPEROR

Korean Tells of Vain Plot to Murder Taisho.

Tokyo, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Twenty two years ago a young Korean mailman quietly planned to assassinate the late Emperor Taisho of Japan by delivering a bomb in the palace mail at the time of the wedding of Taisho's son, now Emperor Hirohito. Betrayed by a friend, he was arrested before the plot could be carried out and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Today, at 44 years of age, Ryoull Pack—known also by the Japanese name of Boku Retsu—made his first public appearance since his long imprisonment. He was acclaimed a hero by Koreans living in Japan.

The shy, bewildered Pack weighed only 85 pounds when released by American soldiers in October. Since then he has been recovering his health. He chose Pearl Harbor anniversary day to call on Gen. MacArthur and express double thanks—for his liberation and Korea's. Several hundred of his banner-carrying followers waited outside the Army Headquarters building. MacArthur was absent, so Pack left a card for him.

Tells Story of Plot.

In an interview, the Korean hero told the story of his plotting.

"My plan was to eliminate the Emperor, who made possible the imperialism which took over Korea," he said. He worked on three separate schemes during the fall of 1923, hoping to capitalize on his access to the Imperial Palace as a mailman.

The final plot was to kill Taisho at the time of his son's scheduled wedding late in 1923. He postponed that when the great earthquake brought disorder. Taisho at the time had made Hirohito regent but continued to be emperor in name. Pack said he had been a member of the Korean Revolutionary party and worked with several anti-imperial Japanese.

Japanese Papers to Run U. S. Version of the War

20-Instalment History Also Will Be Broadcast

TOKYO, Dec. 7 (AP).—All Japanese-language newspapers and many magazines will begin tomorrow publication of a series of twenty factual articles on the Pacific war, prepared by information and education officers of General Douglas MacArthur's staff.

Headquarters said there had been numerous inquiries from Japanese for an American history of the war.

The series also will be broadcast.

Konoye Shuns Visitors.

Karuizawa, Japan, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Japan's ranking royal war-crimes suspect, was reported by the newspaper Asahi to have refused today to meet any visitors—including Saburo Kurusu, former Ambassador to the United States.

COURT SENTENCES GEN. YAMASHITA TO DIE BY HANGING

MANILA, Dec. 7—(AP) Death on the gallows was decreed for Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita today by a five-general U. S. military commission which found him guilty of permitting monstrous atrocities by Japanese troops in the Philippines.

No date was set for the execution, which in accordance with American military law must await review of the commission's findings by the commander of army forces in the Western Pacific and confirmation by General MacArthur.

Yamashita's shoulders sagged as he heard the death sentence, but he straightened quickly and made a curt bow to the commission. He listened stony-faced but his fingers drummed the table as Maj. Gen. Russell B. Reynolds slowly read the findings of the commission, with the defendant's interpreter translating word by word into Japanese.

General Visibly Nervous

Before hearing the verdict, the conqueror of Malaya and one-time Japanese commander in the Philippines stood, visibly nervous, while the interpreter read this statement to the court:

"I wish to stand here today with a clear conscience and swear to God I am innocent of these charges. I wish to take this opportunity to express gratitude to the United States officers of the defense, brilliant and upright officers. I want to thank the commission for a fair trial."

Later he emphasized his gratitude toward his American attorneys by distributing among them treasured personal possessions.

Chief Defense Counsel Col. Harry E. Clarke stood beside the defendant as General Reynolds, presiding officer of the commission read the findings of the military tribunal.

Back in his cell, Yamashita stoically smoked a cigaret.

But his chief-of-staff, Lt. Gen. Akiro Muto, could not suppress his dismay.

"Why must they hang us?" he exclaimed to Yamashita. "Why can't they shoot us like true soldiers?"

Yamashita made no reply. He only smiled.

President Sergio Osmena promptly voiced the satisfaction of his countrymen over the death sentence.

In Washington, meanwhile, the Department of Justice asked the U. S. Supreme court to deny Yamashita's petition for a writ of habeas corpus and a writ of prohibition, filed in Washington Dec. 3.

Yamashita Found Guilty; Sentenced To Be Hanged

Manila, Dec. 7 (AP)—A five-general United States military commission on this Pearl Harbor anniversary decreed death by hanging for Lieut. General Tomoyuki Yamashita.

Later—still protesting that "my conscience is clear"—the conqueror of Singapore and former Japanese commander in the Philippines was returned to his Bilibid prison. There he will await review of the court's findings.

Appeal Possibilities

There was no indication when the sentence might be carried out. Yamashita has an appeal on jurisdictional grounds pending with the United States Supreme Court. He also can appeal the military commission's decision to Lieut. Gen. W. D. Styer, commander of army forces in the Western Pacific; to General MacArthur, Allied commander in the Pacific, and to the United States Supreme Court.

The beribboned general listened stony-faced as the court held him responsible for permitting "a series of atrocities and high crimes by Japanese armed forces" under his command in the Philippines.

"Methodically Supervised"

Those brutalities "were not sporadic incidents, but were often methodically supervised by Japanese officers and noncommissioned officers," Maj. Gen. Russell B. Reynolds, president of the commission, stated as he read the verdict.

Yamashita thus became the first top war criminal of the Pacific to be convicted and sentenced.

Before hearing the verdict, he stood, visibly nervous, while an interpreter read this statement to the court:

Statement By Accused

"I wish to stand here today with a clear conscience and swear to God I am innocent of these charges. I wish to take this opportunity to express gratitude to the United States officers of the defense, brilliant and upright officers. I want to thank the commission for a fair trial."

As the interpreter spoke, Yamashita nervously removed his wrist watch, wound it fumblingly.

When the commission was ready to pronounce sentence, the three-star general was led before the bench with his chief counsel, Col. Harry E. Clarke.

Reynolds intoned:

"This commission finds that a series of atrocities and high crimes were committed by Japanese armed forces under your command against nationals of the United States and its allies and dependencies, that these were not sporadic incidents, but were often methodically supervised by Japanese officers and noncommissioned officers.

"During the period in question you failed to provide effective control of your troops as required by the circumstances. Accordingly, on a secret ballot, two-thirds or more of this commission concurring, this commission finds you guilty as charged and sentences you to death by hanging."

Yamashita's shoulders sagged as he heard the sentence, but he straightened quickly and made a curt bow to the commission. He quickly was led by military police from the courtroom back to his cell in old Bilibid Prison.

Proceedings Brief

The entire court procedure required less than fifteen minutes.

Justice Department Asks High Court To Ignore Yamashita

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Justice Department asked the Supreme Court today not to intervene in behalf of Japanese Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, who has just been sentenced to death by a military commission in Manila for condoning atrocities by his troops.

In a britef, Solicitor General J. Howard MtcGrath asked the tribunal to deny Yamashita's petition for a writ of habeas corpus and a writ of prohibition. [A writ of prohibition is issued by a higher court directing the judge and parties to a suit in an inferior court to cease prosecution of a suit.]

Yamashita in his petition contended that the military commission was not following the proper trial procedure; that it had no authority to act since the Philippine civil courts are functioning, and that he was not charged with any violation of the law of war.

Held Not Under Court

Replying to these allegations, McGrath said:

1. Since Yamashita was tried by a military commission created by the Army in a combat field, "it follows that the commission has jurisdiction and that this court may not inquire into the evidence or into any alleged procedural irregularities or defects." A military tribunal, he said, is not a court but is a branch of the executive arm of the Government.

2. Constitutional guarantees of a trial by jury "cannot be taken to have extended the right to demand a jury to trials by military commission, or to have required that offenses against the law of war be tried only in the civil courts.

"Offenses Stated"

"By the long recognized procedure of the law of war, a military commission has the right to try enemy belligerents for violations of the law of war committed prior to their capture even after cessation of hostilities and when the civil courts are open."

3. The charge against Yamashita does state offenses against the law in war, saying in part that Yamashita permitted members of his command "to commit brutal atrocities and other high crimes against the people of the United States."

Japs Cleaning Manila Streets

Manila, Dec. 7 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Ewart G. Plank, Philippines base commander, said that 60,000 Japanese prisoners of war are being used to clear the wreckage of Manila, resulting from the street fighting of last February.

Peace Training Opposed

Melbourne, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Australian Labor Party's federal executive committee, which guides the policy of the Labor Government, has voted, 18 to 16, against compulsory universal military training in peacetime.

DUTRA'S LEAD GROWS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 7—(AP) Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra increased his lead over Gen. Eduardo Gomes to almost 390,000 votes today on the basis of the latest unofficial returns in the Brazilian presidential election.

The latest count gave Dutra 1,112,234 and Gomes 612,684 votes. In the official tabulation by the supreme electoral tribunal, which is far behind in the counting, Dutra, supported by former President Getulio Vargas, had 376,277 and Gomes 275,542 votes.

Brazil Orders Auctioning Of State-Owned Press

Linhares Also Opens Door to Foreign Journalists

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 7 (AP).—Provisional President Jose Linhares ordered today that all newspapers and other publications operated by the federal and state governments be sold at public auction within thirty days.

In another decree he authorized foreign journalists to register for work on newspapers in Brazil. The deposed Getulio Vargas administration had limited the field to Brazilians.

A number of publications were acquired by the government by confiscation or purchase during the fifteen-year Vargas regime.

The Linhares administration has already returned the morning newspaper "Correio Paulistano," of Sao Paulo, to the political party from which the Vargas government took it, and dispatches from that city said the "Estado de Sao Paulo" had been resold to the owners from whom it was bought after it was seized by government forces in 1942.

The morning newspaper "Diario da Manha," of Vitoria, operated by the state government of Espirito Santo, closed twenty-four hours after an earlier decree by Linhares prohibited government-owned publications and radios from partisan political activity.

Among the federally operated publications to be sold are the evening newspaper "A Noite," of Sao Paulo; the morning newspaper "Diario da Bahia," of Salvador, and the newspapers "A Noite" and "A Nanha," of Rio de Janeiro.

250,000 Now Idle In New South Wales

Sydney, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—An estimated quarter of a million workers were idle in New South Wales today because of power rationing and strikes affecting coal miners, steel workers and seamen.

Employers' representatives said the number of idle workers probably would remain static at nearly 300,000 until next Wednesday, when train service to and from Sydney will be reduced by seventy-six trains a week.

power which drove the Japanese into defeat, and today the people of Hawaii gave thanks and honored those whose deaths have been avenged.

Virtually the only reminders today of the disaster that struck December 7, 1941, were the rusting, barnacled sections of unsalvaged ships in the harbor, and the rows of crosses gleaming white against the green hillside rising above the placid waters of the harbor.

Navy men and islanders went about their business as usual today, with only simple ceremonies to mark the historic date. In Honolulu, shirt-sleeved Christmas shoppers continued to crowd streets gay with colored lights, tinsel and pictures of fat St. Nick.

Mass Is Scheduled

But none here could forget the day and its significance.

Nor were those who died when war first exploded in the Pacific forgotten. Requiem mass was scheduled at 9.30 A.M. at Pearl Harbor's Bloch Arena. Scores of service men and civilians also were expected to gather in Halawa Naval Cemetery for Jewish, Catholic and Protestant services, and to hear a commemoration speech by Rear Admiral E. W. Hanson, naval base commandant.

The only strident voices raised on this fourth anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack were the voices of

Dec. 7 Again At New, Mightier Pearl Harbor

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7 (A.P.)—Four years ago the watery, chaotic graveyard of America's battle fleet; today the home base of the mightiest sea power in the world.

That is the story of Pearl Harbor on this fourth anniversary of the Japanese bid to sweep the United States from the Pacific. And soldiers, sailors, Marines and civilians joined today in solemn tribute to those who died beneath the Japanese war lords' first blow.

One Sunday Morning

Four years ago Japan's sneak raiders knifed in from the sea and across Oahu Island's towering Koolau Mountains to smash the United States warships lying at anchor in the peace of a balmy Sunday morning, and to spread death and destruction.

Out of that wreckage grew the peacet—he voices of weary, lonely GI's and sailors, shouting:

"Get us home! Get us home!"

And the world's greatest Navy, risen from disaster, is getting them home—home from Oahu, from Tarawa, from Kwajalein, from the Marianas, from all the stepping-stones to victory that once seemed so hopelessly distant.

HURLEY CHARGES AGAINST ACHESON DENIED BY TRUMAN

U. S. Foreign Policy in Iran Not Destroyed, Declares President.

CAREER MEN UPHELD

Byrnes Virtually Challenges General to Prove His Accusations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 — (AP) Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley's charge that American foreign policy in Iran had been destroyed by Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson brought a denial today from President Truman.

The President made his first comment after Secretary of State Byrnes told the Senate Foreign Relations committee that Hurley had failed to prove his charges against the conduct of American diplomats in China. Byrnes in effect challenged Hurley to do so.

At a news conference Mr. Truman was reminded that Hurley told the committee yesterday that Under-Secretary Acheson destroyed American foreign policy in Iran. The President was asked whether he thought actually that American policy had been destroyed

He said no.

The first he had heard of that view, he added, was when Hurley expressed it to the Senate committee.

Acheson May Testify

Later it was indicated Acheson may be called to testify before the group.

Byrnes said he had never heard of the charge against Acheson until he read in the papers what Hurley had to say. But President Truman's number one cabinet officer went into great detail on the China points of Hurley's testimony.

President Truman also told his news conference that General George C. Marshall as his new special envoy to China, will be directed to bend his energies toward getting all factions together there.

The President said he hoped to be able to make public very soon the instructions under which Marshall will operate.

Byrnes directly challenged Hurley's allegations that American career diplomats sabotaged U. S. policy calling for a unified democratic China.

Byrnes told the Senate Foreign Relations committee he could find no basis for the charge that the career men went behind former Ambassador Hurley's back to tell Chinese Communist leaders that Hurley did not represent American policy.

Byrnes said that if he could find anybody guilty of such conduct, he would fire him forthwith, but he added that Hurley had failed to furnish any evidence.

Hurley on Sidelines

While Hurley sat quietly on the sidelines after two stormy days before the committee, Byrnes declared in his soft South Carolina drawl:

That he had never heard of any intercepted messages which either George Atcheson or John Service sought to exchange secretly with Chinese Communist leaders while those two diplomats were on duty in Chungking.

That there is no evidence that the subsequent appointment of Atcheson and Service as advisers to Gen. Douglas MacArthur had hurt Hurley's efforts to unify the Communists with the Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek. In fact, Byrnes said, two weeks after their appointment was announced on Sept. 4 Hurley wired Washington that there were "favorable developments" in his efforts at Chinese unity.

That Hurley, in spite of his recent public insistence on a need for a declaration of United States policy on China, had never asked either Byrnes or President Truman to make a public statement. Byrnes contended that in fact no such statement was needed — that American support for Chiang Kai-Shek had been proved beyond question by American actions.

That Byrnes does not want the diplomatic service made up of yes-men, but wants every officer in that service to feel free to criticize policy and recommend changes.

Favors Fearless Speaking

Unless the State department and foreign service officials are able to speak out fearlessly, Byrnes said, "I will have lost the very essence of the assistance and guidance I require for the successful discharge of the heavy responsibilities of my office."

Atcheson and Service had borne the brunt of Hurley's slashing criticisms of the foreign service since he resigned his post as ambassador to China early last week.

After Byrnes finished reading a prepared statement, Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) and Senator Bridges (R-N.H.) asked several questions about "intercepted messages" between Atcheson or Service and the Chinese Communists. They did not say whether they had any information that such messages actually were sent. Byrnes said that while there might have been reports of interceptions without his knowledge, actually he had never heard of any such thing.

Byrnes dealt in detail with a telegram from Atcheson on Feb. 28, 1945 and a memorandum from Service on Oct. 10, 1944, which Hurley had assailed as indicating that those two were not supporting American policy for backing up Chiang Kai-Shek.

Byrnes said Atcheson's wire made proposals for changes in handling the Chinese situation but not for changes in policy. It was sent after Hurley had come back to this country last February, Byrnes said, and it suggested that the policy be discussed with Hurley.

He said that Service's memorandum proposed drastic changes in American policy. He added, however, that these proposals were not out of line with American objectives for the unification of China.

Opinions of One Man

Byrnes said that the embassy staff in Chungking had noted that Service's suggestions were simply the opinions of one man and that the Chinese division of the State department had described his proposals as in many respects incorrect.

"In my opinion," Byrnes declared, "based upon the information which has thus far been presented to me, there is nothing in the two documents to support the charge that either Mr. Atcheson or Mr. Service was guilty of the slightest disloyalty to his superior officers."

Service at that time was not attached to the embassy staff but to the staff of Gen. Joseph Stilwell,

Byrnes Sharply Assails Hurley; Defends Two Career Diplomats

Secretary Denies Latter Were Disloyal to Envoy—Denies He Was Ever Asked for Statement on China Policy.

Washington, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Byrnes today struck back sharply at Major-Gen. Patrick J. Hurley for his attacks on foreign service diplomats, and declared that Hurley had failed to sustain his charges.

Byrnes appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which has been looking into the background of Hurley's abrupt and dramatic resignation last week as Ambassador to China. He [illegible] the audience and [illegible] from a front-row seat.

Byrnes specifically upheld the two career men whom Hurley accused of seeking to sabotage his efforts to bring about a unified China. Hurley had denounced their conduct as disloyalty. The Secretary of State told the committee: "Ambassador Hurley has not furnished me, nor do I understand that he has furnished the committee, any specific evidence to prove that any employee was guilty of such conduct."

Byrnes also challenged Hurley's assertion that, during his service as Ambassador at Chungking, he had been unable to get a public statement of America's China policy from President Truman or Secretary Byrnes or other ranking officials. Appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is hearing evidence on Hurley's resignation as ambassador last week, Byrnes said that Hurley had never asked him for such a statement, and, so far as Byrnes had been able to find out, had never made a written request for it to the State Department.

The Secretary said that he had also asked President Truman whether Hurley ever requested a statement of a China policy from him and that the President "does not recall such a request."

Before Byrnes began his testimony, the committee chairman, Senator Connally (D.-Tex.), said that Hurley would be recalled before a subsequent session of the committee to amplify his contention that Under-Secretary of State Dean Acheson defeated American foreign policy in Iran.

Atcheson and Service.

Byrnes appeared before the committee after Hurley had spent two days attacking State Department career diplomats and specifically accusing George Atcheson Jr. and John Service, formerly on duty in China, of having worked against Hurley's efforts to unify the Chinese Central Government and the Chinese Communists.

Byrnes said that "in my opinion, based upon the information which has thus far been presented to me, there is nothing" in documents written by Atcheson and Service while in China "to support the charge that either Mr. Atcheson or Mr. Service was guilty of the slightest disloyalty to his superior officers." While every American Foreign Service officer must administer the declared policy of his government, he should "not hestitate to express his views" when he believes changed conditions require it, Byrnes declared.

Decries Suspicion.

Hurley had assailed the recent assignment of Atcheson and Service as political advisers to Gen. MacArthur at Tokyo, but Byrnes said: "Men who have rendered loyal service to the Government cannot be dismissed and their reputations ought not to be destroyed on the basis of suspicions by any individual."

The documents which Byrnes refered to in the cases of these two men were a telegram to the State Department from Atcheson on February 28, 1945, and a memorandum from Service on October 10, 1944. Byrnes said that Hurley relied most strongly on these two messages for support of his charges against Atcheson and Service. Byrnes entirely defended the propriety of both communications.

He said that Atcheson sent his telegram recommending "a readjustment of our immediate strategy" in China nine days after Hurley had left the Chungking embassy to return to Washington and three days before Hurley arrived in Washington. He said that Atcheson actually proposed that the subject of his message be taken up with Hurley and with Gen. Wedemeyer, then the United States commander in China, while they were in Washington.

Not Then Ambassador.

"There is nothing to indicate that he (Atcheson) sought to circumvent his superior in making this report and recommendation," Byrnes declared.

The Secretary said that the October (1944) memorandum from Service was written in forceful language and recommended a basic change in American policy toward the Central Government of China. Byrnes did not particularize what this was, but declared that the policy then and now was to support the Central Government.

The Service memorandum was addressed to Gen. Joseph Stilwell, Widemeyer's predecessor as United States commander in China, and it was also given to the United States embassy in Chungking.

Byrnes said pointedly that at this particular time Hurley was not the United States Ambassador to China, but the personal representative of President Roosevelt there, and hence he was not in charge of the embassy staff. Also, Service was responsible only to Gen. Stilwell.

Byrnes said that when the embassy forwarded the Service memorandum to Washington it attached its own observation that Service was only one political observer and when the memorandum passed through the Division of Chinese Affairs in the State Department, the officers there stated decisively that many of Service's conclusions were incorrect.

Supports Chiang.

Byrnes began his testimony by reiterating American support for the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, but he added: "We also believe that it must be broadened to include the and well-organized groups who are now without any voice in the government of China." He said that in trying to bring together the Central Government and the Communists, American influence should be used to encourage concessions by both sides.

Byrnes also reiterated his recent assertions that American purpose of helping with the surrender of the Japanese troops there. He said that because of the way in which the United States had supported the Central Government of China to date "it is difficult to understand Ambassador Hurley's intimating that his failure to achieve a satisfactory settlement of China's internal division resulted from the absence of a public expression of our policy."

It is then that he said he had been unable to find any record of a request by Hurley to the President, to himself, or to the State Department for a public statement of policy on China about which Hurley has talked a great deal before the committee.

Tells of Hurley's Wavering.

After completing his formal statement, Byrnes recounted in detail Hurley's attitude on whether or no he would resign his post. Byrnes said he conferred with the Ambassador early in October, and that Hurley told him he was unwell with sinus trouble and felt he shouldn't go back to China. Byrnes told him to take a good rest and think it over.

About October 12, Byrnes said, Hurley saw him again, said he was feeling better and was willing to go back. The two went to see President Truman. In that conversation, Byrnes said, Hurley first mentioned his belief that he was not getting full support from his embassy officials. "I told him that if he'd give me the names of the employees or officials they'd be removed," Byrnes testified. "The President said he joined heartily in that statement, and Hurley said that no man could ask for more."

Later, he said, he received a phone call from Hurley, who was in Santa Fe, N. M., telling him he didn't feel able to return to China. Byrnes talked him out of quitting once more. And then, about ten days ago, he said, Hurley came to his office and handed him an envelope containing, he said, his resignation. Byrnes told him he wouldn't give it to the President; that the situation in China was disturbing, and that they needed Hurley's experience there. Hurley complained again about the activities of Service and Atcheson, but Byrnes asked him to forget that and assured him the two men would not be permitted to go back to China.

Agreed to Return.

"He said if I insisted he would return," Byrnes told the committee.

"At 2:30 that afternoon (Monday a week ago) he came back to my office and discussed some reports I had asked him to look over. He told me he would return (to China) that afternoon except that he had an engagement to speak on Wednesday at the Press Club. I told him it would be satisfactory if he would go back on Wednesday."

During that conversation Hurley asked him, he said, to prepare a memorandum for him on our Chinese policy—Byrnes here emphasized that it was a memorandum Hurley asked, not a public statement. The next day he was discussing a draft of such a memorandum with the Secretaries of War and the Navy, and when he walked out in the hall, he said, he heard that Hurley had resigned. Byrnes said he thought there had been some mistake, that Hurley's prepared resignation had been released inadvertently. He even called the White House and told the President that that was what he thought had happened.

Then Hurley telephoned him and confirmed that he had quit. He said he was still ill, and also cited speeches made in the House of Representatives. He claimed the Congressmen who made them must have got some of their information from the State Department. Byrnes quoted Hurley as then saying, however: "If you say so, I'll go back." Instead Byrnes sent Hurley's letter of resignation to the White House.

Byrnes's Statement on China

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP).—The text of Secretary of State Byrnes's prepared statement before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today follows:

During the war the immediate goal of the United States in China was to promote a military union of the several political factions in order to bring their combined power to bear upon our common enemy, Japan. Our long-range goal, then as now, and a goal of at least equal importance, is the development of a strong, united and democratic China.

To achieve this longer-range goal it is essential that the central government of China as well as the various dissident elements approach the settlement of their differences with a genuine willingness to compromise. We believe, as we have long believed and consistently demonstrated, that the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek affords the most satisfactory base for a developing democracy. But we also believe that it must be broadened to include the representatives of those large and well organized groups who are now without any voice in the government of China.

This problem is not an easy one. It requires tact and discretion, patience and restraint. It will not be solved by slogans. Its solution depends primarily upon the good will of the Chinese leaders themselves. To the extent that our influence is a factor, success will depend upon our capacity to exercise that influence in the light of shifting conditions in such a way as to encourage concessions by the central government, by the so-called Communists and by the other factions.

If I understand correctly what Ambassador Hurley has stated to me, and subsequently to the press and to this committee, he entertains no disagreement with this conception of our policy. Moreover, he has indicated to me and to this committee that he has been unfailingly supported by two Presidents and three Secretaries of State in his efforts to execute this policy.

Policy Not Hidden

He does object, however, to what he asserts has been a failure or refusal to make this policy public.

I wish to make it clear now, because of its bearing upon this point and upon other matters which I shall come to in a moment, that I am not familiar with every speech and press release and letter of my immediate predecessors as Secretary of State, nor with every incident that has occurred in recent years among officers of the State Department in China or elsewhere. I have not had the opportunity to examine these records, nor am I likely to have it in the near future.

Nevertheless, I submit that the broad outlines of our policy in China have never been hidden or difficult to recognize. The phase of that policy upon which Ambassador Hurley has placed the greatest emphasis is our support of the National government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Of all the phases of our policy in the Far East, this seems to have been the clearest and most obvious. We formally recognize only the National government. Our ambassador is an ambassador to the National government. Our war supplies and financial assistance have been delivered only to the National government. At the Cairo conference it was Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek who represented China. At San Francisco it was the Foreign Minister of the National government who signed the charter of the United Nations. It was the National government which ratified the charter. It is the Foreign Minister of the National government who sits in the Council of Foreign Ministers.

In recent weeks, the necessary presence of our troops in China has been a source of understandable concern to the American people. As a result, the subject has been raised frequently at my meetings with the press. I have made it very clear that our troops are in China for the sole purpose of facilitating the surrender of large numbers of Japanese troops to the armies of the National government in compliance with the order of the supreme Allied commander.

Public Evidence of Recognition

These are a few among many public evidences of our recognition of the government of Chiang Kai-shek as the legitimate government of China. In the face of them, and in the light of the admittedly consistent support of this policy by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman and Secretaries Hull, Stettinius and myself it is difficult to understand Ambassador Hurley's intimation that his failure to achieve a satisfactory settlement of China's internal division resulted from the absence of a public expression of our policy.

General Hurley's statements before this committee require me to add a few words concerning what he had indicated to be a refusal by me and by the President to grant his request for such a public statement. The pressure of time has been so great that I am unable to make a categorical statement at the moment, but I can tell you that I have not been informed of any written document in the possession of the Department of State in which the Ambassador has made such a request.

I can state categorically that he has never made such a request in conversations with me. Moreover, I was present at one of the two conversations he has had with the President since his return in September. I did not hear him make such a request at that time. Since the Ambassador's testimony here, I have asked the President whether, in his recollection, Ambassador Hurley has ever requested him, orally or in writing, to issue a public statement of our policy in China. He does not recall such a request.

My recent letter to Representative Anderson, of California, to which Ambassador Hurley has referred with approval, was in response to a letter of inquiry from the Congressman. When a member of Congress requests an explanation of some aspect of our foreign policy, I take it as a matter of course that the request should be answered. But in the absence of such specific inquiries, I have thought it necessary to give public expression to our foreign policy only as occasion may demand.

Answer to Hurley

As I have indicated, it is not my intention to attempt to interpret and explain every event of large or small importance in the administration of our foreign policy in China and other parts of the world in recent years.

I feel, however, that in fairness to the loyal, intelligent and hard-working men of our foreign service, and in fairness to the employees of the Department of State generally, I am compelled to discuss briefly certain charges which Ambassador Hurley has made.

The foreign service officers are non-political government employees, selected through competitive examinations. They have long labored earnestly and with too little public recognition to uphold abroad our national interests. My own experience with them has given me a high regard for their ability, integrity and loyalty.

I do not know George Atcheson or John Service. But because of the special criticism to which they have been subjected by the Ambassador, I have obtained and read Mr. Atcheson's telegram of Feb. 28, 1945, and Mr. Service's memorandum of Oct. 10, 1944. These are the documents upon which the Ambassador appears to rely most strongly for support of his charge that these two officers sought to prevent the accomplishment of the objectives of United States policy in China.

The propriety of Mr. Atcheson's telegram can be determined only against the background of the events in China which preceded it. Like Ambassador Gauss, before him, Ambassador Hurley had been making strenuous efforts to achieve unity not only between the central government and the so-called Communists, but between the central government and the other dissident elements in China as well. At the time Ambassador Hurley left Chungking for a visit to Washington on Feb. 19, 1945, I am advised that the negotiations between the central government and the Communists appeared to have broken down.

Atcheson Took Charge

When Ambassador Hurley departed from the Embassy at Chungking, Mr. Atcheson, as counselor, automatically assumed charge of the Embassy's affairs. On Feb. 28, nine days after the Ambassador's departure from Chungking and three days before his arrival in Washington, according to the records of the department, Mr. Atcheson sent his telegram. It contained a broad and thoughtful analysis of the situation in China as it appeared to him in the light of the shifting circumstances of the moment. It concluded with the recommendation that these shifting circumstances required a readjustment of our immediate strategy.

In his telegram, Mr. Atcheson distinctly stated that "a favorable opportunity for discussion of this subject should be given by the presence of General Wedemeyer as well as General Hurley in Washington."

The officer in charge of an American mission in a foreign country bears the responsibility for full and accurate reporting of the factors and events which are necessary to the intelligent formulation and execution of United States foreign policy. He is further responsible for the submission from time to time of recommendations with respect to the policy. If his reports and recommendations are to be useful, it is clear that they must reflect his free and honest judgment.

In the case of an ambassador, these considerations have always been taken for granted. They have been taken equally for granted in the case of the officer who assumes charge during the absence of the ambassador from the embassy. Since September, for example, we have relied upon the reports of the ranking official of the embassy in China.

Calls Rules Observed

It is difficult to understand how Mr. Atcheson failed in any way to observe the letter or the spirit of these rules and traditions. His telegram of Feb. 28 was a full and free report of the current situation in China as he saw it. His recommendation was an honest effort to assist the Department of State in the formulation of its future policy in China. There is nothing to indicate that he sought to circumvent his superior in making this report and recommendation. On the contrary, the telegram expressly suggested that this was a matter upon which the views of Ambassador Hurley should be sought by the department in Washington.

The specific action of John Service to which Ambassador Hurley referred in his conversation with me was the preparation of a memorandum on Oct. 10, 1944. I have also read this memorandum with care.

Before I return to its contents, I wish to call attention to a few facts, as they have been presented to me. At the time this memorandum was prepared by Mr. Service, he was not attached to the staff of General Stilwell as a political observer in Yenan. He was at the time administratively responsible to General Stilwell and not to the embassy.

Ambassador Hurley, as of that date, was in China as the personal representative of the President with the rank of ambassador. But he was not the United States Ambassador to China. He was not in charge of the United States Embassy in Chungking.

Under these circumstances, it cannot be said that anything Mr. Service wrote constituted insubordination to Ambassador Hurley.

The memorandum itself embodied recommendations for a basic change in United States policy toward the central government of China. It was written in forceful language and the conclusions which it drew were rather drastic.

It was addressed to General Stilwell. It was also routed to the embassy in Chungking. The embassy forwarded it to the department without indorsing its conclusions, but with a noncommittal covering memorandum indicating that it represented the views of a single political observer.

Incorrect Conclusions

When the memorandum reached the Department of State it was sent to the Division of Chinese Affairs. Before it was circulated further, the Division of Chinese Affairs attached another covering memorandum stating decisively that although its contents were informative, many of its conclusions, which were specifically enumerated, were regarded as incorrect.

It is not my purpose to dwell at greater length upon the two documents. In my opinion, based upon the information which has thus far been presented to me, there is nothing in them to support the charge that either Mr. Atcheson or Mr. Service was guilty of the slightest disloyalty to his superior officers.

What it amounts to is that within proper channels they expressed to those under whom they served certain views which differed to a greater or less degree from the policies of the government as then defined. Of course, it is the duty of every officer of the United States to abide by and to administer the declared policy of his government. But conditions change, and often change quickly in the affairs of government. Whenever an official honestly believes that changed conditions require it, he should not hesitate to express his views to his superior officers.

The other complaint of Ambassador Hurley is that some official or employee did not merely express a different view to his superior officer, but advised some one associated with the Communist forces that the ambassador did not accurately represent United States policy. For such action there would be no excuse. I would be the first to condemn it and to dismiss the person guilty of it. But Ambassador Hurley has not furnished me, nor do I understand that he has furnished this committee, any specific evidence to prove that any employee was guilty of such conduct.

Men who have rendered loyal service to the government cannot be dismissed and their reputations ought not to be destroyed on the basis of suspicions entertained by any individual. I should be profoundly unhappy to learn that any officer of the Department of State, within or without the foreign service, might feel bound to refrain from submitting through proper channels an honest report or recommendation for fear of offending me or any one else in the department. If that day should arrive, I will have lost the very essence of the assistance and guidance I require for the successful discharge of the heavy responsibilities of my office.

General Testifies Roosevelt Never Knew About Two Messages Sent Governor in 1944

Plea for Silence on Jap Code Breaking Noted That Britain's Most Secret Sources of Information Were Involved.

Washington, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Over the protests of Gen. George C. Marshall, the Pearl Harbor investigating committee today made public correspondence in which he asked Thomas E. Dewey to withhold from the 1944 political campaign information that the United States had cracked secret Japanese codes.

Chairman Barkley said the committee had decided to accept the responsibility, notwithstanding the feelings of Gen. Marshall, which Barkley said were based on the ground of military security.

Marshall testified that he never told President Roosevelt of the letters to Dewey.

"I think the President died without knowing of it," he added.

One of two letters released mentioned "embarrassment" involving secret British sources of information.

The building of a deciphering machine was mentioned in the Marshall letters to the New York Governor—Republican presidential candidate in 1944. Committee counsel William D. Mitchell, who also opposed publication of the undeleted correspondence, said that Marshall wished to withhold certain technical matters in it.

One paragraph of the letter said:

"Now the point as to the present dilemma is that we have gone ahead with this business of deciphering their (Japan's) codes until we possess other codes, German as well as Japanese, but our main basis of information regarding Hitler's intentions in Europe is obtained from Baron Oshima's messages from Berlin reporting his interviews with Hitler and other officials to the Japanese Government. These are still in the codes involved in the Pearl Harbor events."

'For Mr. Dewey's Eyes Only.'

This letter, dated September 25, and another dated September 27 were both captioned "For Mr. Dewey's Eyes Only."

The second letter told of a secret search of Japanese embassy offices in neutral Portugal by the Office of Strategic Services under William J. Donovan.

Then came the mention of a[illegible] Ally, Great Britain. A paragraph read:

"A further most serious embarrassment is the fact that the British Government is involved concerning its most secret sources of information, regarding which only the Prime Minister, the chiefs of staff and a very limited number of other officials have knowledge."

The utmost secrecy surrounded the handling of the letters, it was made clear. Marshall said nobody else knew anything about the letters except Admiral Ernest J. King, then Commander in Chief of the Navy.

Marshall assured Dewey further in the second letter that "neither the Secretary of War nor the President has any intimation whatsoever that such a letter has been addressed to you."

Harness Mentioned.

Marshall said this after noting that Dewey was unwilling "to commit yourself to any agreement regarding 'not communicating its contents to any other person.'"

Further it was in reply to what Marshall said was Dewey's feeling that such a letter to a presidential candidate could not "have been addressed to you by an officer in my position without the knowledge of the President."

The wording of the two letters indicated that Dewey refused to read the first one, carried to him by courier, Col. Carter Clarke. Much of the matter in the first was duplicated in the second.

Debate In Congress Died Down.

Marshall's letters summed up the effect on the war that breaking the news of the code-cracking might have and said:

"I am presenting this matter to you in the hope that you will see your way clear to avoid the tragic results with which we are now threatened in the present political campaign."

Marshall testified, after the release of the letters, that Dewey offered to help quiet Congressional debate on the Pearl Harbor question once he knew that the ability to crack the Japanese code was involved. Though Marshall was unwilling to "embarrass" Dewey by accepting that offer, the debate did die down, the General told the Senate-House committee.

Marshall unfolded in a dramatic afternoon session that he had found that Dewey had learned something about the code-cracking ability that helped the United States Fleet beat the Japanese at Coral Sea and Midway. So, Marshall testified, he asked Dewey in the letter sent by the courier to keep such information out of the campaign, if possible.

Marshall's Story of Letters.

Marshall told his story of the chain of events:

Dewey sent the letter back with the courier, refusing to read beyond the part that asked him to keep the contents secret from any one.

Marshall and military intelligence officers talked it over and Marshall sent a redraft to Dewey at Albany, N. Y., by the same courier—Col. Clarke.

Clarke telephoned Marshall from his offices and said Dewey was unwilling to read the letter unless he had at least one adviser present and he also insisted on keeping one copy.

Dewey then came on the telephone, himself.

Marshall said he would agree to those terms. Dewey called a banking expert in his administration, named Bell [Elliott J. Bell, New York State Superintendent of Banking]. They assured Marshall the letter would be kept in a locked, secret file.

On that basis, the letter was given to him. Col. Clarke returned to the War Department.

"I do not recall that Mr. Dewey ever gave us any assurances," Marshall testified, "but there did not seem to be any recurrences of the (Pearl Harbor) debate."

No Comment by Dewey.

Through all this exchange there was no indication how Dewey obtained his information that led to the correspondence. In Albany, an aid said Gov. Dewey would have no comment on release of the correspondence.

After Dewey was defeated for the presidency by Roosevelt, Marshall said he felt it was "due him" to know more about the situation. So he sent Major-Gen. Clayton Bissell, head of military intelligence, to Albany to show the Governor the charts of Japanese shipping, the messages and how they were intercepted from Tokyo radio by United States decoding machines.

Gen. Bissell reported back that Mr. Dewey wanted to know whether he could do anything to "intervene" in the congressional debate about Pearl Harbor, then being led by Republicans.

"I told Bissell to tell him that I had already embarrassed him enough and I would make no further request of him," Marshall said.

"I anticipated that he would say 'that doesn't matter, it is the security of the country that counts' and that is exacly what Mr. Dewey said. But I repeated that I would make no further request of him."

Later Dewey came to Washington and Marshall guided him through the War Department's intricate channels for handling the intercepted codes and showed him how it was done.

"He was very friendly and gracious," the General said.

Marshall Relates Dec. 7 Events.

Earlier, Gen. Marshall told the committee that Admiral Harold R. Stark thought warnings to Pacific commanders on December 7, 1941, would "only confuse them."

So Stark, then Chief of Naval Operations, at first opposed sending such warnings after it became clear that trouble was brewing for the United States that day, Marshall told the Senate-House committee investigating the attack.

Marshall, wartime Army Chief of Staff, testified that he called Stark back on the White House telephone, however, and insisted on sending the messages. Then the Admiral acceded, Marshall said, and asked that the Army warnings be amended so that naval officers at Pacific outposts would be advised.

Stark Hears Marshall Testify.

Stark, later naval chief in the European Theater of Operations, was a spectator in the hearing room as Marshall testified.

Marshall reconstructed for the committee how he spent that fateful morning of December 7 four years ago today. He told the committee that it was not until he reached his office that day that he learned of Japan's final diplomatic note to Secretary of State Hull, indicating a break in relations with the United States. The note, intercepted and decoded, was sent to Japanese "peace envoys" with instructions to deliver it to Hull at 1 P. M. (Washington time), the hour of the assault on Pearl Harbor.

"On that morning," Marshall related, "I had breakfast, I presume about 8 o'clock, according to the routine of previous Sundays. I went riding. I must have ridden later than 8:30. I suppose I read the Sunday papers and then went riding. My rides usually were about fifty minutes.

"While I was taking my shower, word came to me that Col. (R. S.) Bratton had something very important and wished to come out to Fort Myer. I told him I was coming to the War Department directly.

"My shower probably took ten minutes. On my arrival there, Bratton handed me these intercepts. When I reached the end, and it was a long message, some of which I read twice, on the next sheet was the 1 o'clock message.

Says Timing Indicated Action.

"That, of course, was an indication to me of some very definite action—1 o'clock on a Sunday in Washington, involving the Secretary of State was very unusual.

"I called Stark and he said he had seen it.

"I proposed messages to the Pacific commanders. Stark felt we might confuse them. I hung up the White House telephone and wrote out a message in long hand. I had thought that Stark called me back but on checking I find now that I called him back. The effect of our conversation was then that he wished me to add to my messages, 'show this to your naval officers.'

"There was some talk of typing the message but the decision was that there was no time to type it. Bratton took the messages and I asked him about the time involved in getting them off. I sent him back for estimates and I sent him and Col. Bundy back a second time to make sure."

Denies Phoning MacArthur.

Marshall disputed previous testimony before the committee and the Army board of inquiry, published last August, that he telephoned the warning message to Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the Philippines.

"I did not telephone anywhere," he said.

The Army board report quoted Lieut.-Gen. Walter C. Short, Army commander in Hawaii, as having said: "Gen. Marshall stated that the reason he did not telephone was that it took some time, that he had called the Philippines before he called Hawaii, and there was the possibility of a leak which would embarrass the State Department."

Marshall also said he gave no instructions on the method of sending them out "by the most expeditious" means. He said he did not know until long afterward that the message to Short went to San Francisco by Western Union and thence by RCA radio to Hawaii.

Marshall related that Stark recalled asking him whether the Army had need of Navy facilities. Stark told him he replied it did not, Marshall said, "and he must be right."

Asked with whom he talked at or from the War Department on the morning the war started, Marshall explained that "my time was engrossed in reading this lengthy message, and nobody could talk to me while I was reading it." He remarked that he was "much taken aback" at the time lost in reading the long diplomatic message before reaching the one referring to "the critical time" of 1 P. M.

In response to questioning, Marshall said he didn't recall any discussion about the corresponding time of day in the Philippines or Hawaii. The question, he said, was the importance of the message and what to tell the overseas commanders.

Questioned by Mitchell.

Committee Counsel William Mitchell asked whether the Army staff was set up so that if Marshall could not be reached, some other officer who knew the contents of the decoded Japanese messages could have sent a warning. Marshall listed Secretary of War Stimson and Lieut.-Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, head of the War Plans Division. Gerow has told the committee that he assumed responsibility for any War Department failure to send additional warnings after Short had advised that he had established only a sabotage alert in Hawaii.

Marshall said Major-Gen. Sherman Miles, then head of Army intelligence, could not have sent a "command message" with instructions. But he did have authority to pass on the information, Marshall added.

Marshall referred to Mrs. Marshall's engagement book to help him remember the evening of December 6. He said they did not go out for dinner, out calling or to the movies.

He reiterated that he thought the Hawaiian forces were on the alert and were equipped to handle an attack before the Japanese struck. The best and most careful plans, however, can go wrong, he commented, adding: "We spent two and a half years planning the invasion of Normandy and when that came off we didn't have enough LST's (landing ship tanks). I presume had that failed there would have been an investigation."

Gen. Marshall's Letters to Gov. Dewey

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—Following are the texts of two letters General Marshall sent to Governor Dewey on Sept. 25, 1944, and Sept. 27, 1944, concerning the breaking of secret Japanese codes:

FIRST LETTER

TOP SECRET
(FOR MR. DEWEY'S EYES ONLY)

25 September, 1944.

My Dear Governor:

I am writing you without the knowledge of any other person except Admiral King (who concurs) because we are approaching a grave dilemma in the political reactions of Congress regarding Pearl Harbor.

What I have to tell you below is of such a highly secret nature that I feel compelled to ask you either to accept it on the basis of your not communicating its contents to any other person and returning this letter or not reading any further and returning the letter to the bearer.

I should have preferred to talk to you in person but I could not devise a method that would not be subject to press and radio reactions as to why the Chief of Staff of the Army would be seeking an interview with you at this particular moment. Therefore, I have turned to the method of this letter, to be delivered by hand to you by Col. Carter Clark who has charge of the most secret documents of the War and Navy Departments.

In brief, the military dilemma resulting from Congressional political battles of the political campaign is this:

The most vital evidence in the Pearl Harbor matter consists of our intercepts of the Japanese diplomatic communications. Over a period of years our cryptograph people analyzed the character of the machine the Japanese are using for encoding their diplomatic messages. Based on this, a corresponding machine was built by us which deciphers their messages.

Therefore, we possessed a wealth of information regarding their moves in the Pacific which in turn was furnished the State Department—rather than, as is popularly supposed, the State Department providing us with the information—but which unfortunately made no reference whatever to intentions toward Hawaii until the last message before Dec. 7, which did not reach our hands until the following day, Dec. 8.

Now the point to the present dilemma is that we have gone ahead with this business of deciphering their codes until we possess other codes, German as well as Japanese, but our main basis of information regarding Hitler's intentions in Europe is obtained from Baron Oshima's messages from Berlin reporting his interviews with Hitler and other officials to the Japanese Government. These are still in the codes involved in the Pearl Harbor events.

To explain further the critical nature of this set-up which would be wiped out almost in an instant if the least suspicion were aroused regarding it, the Battle of the Coral Sea was based on deciphered messages and therefore our few ships were in the right place at the right time. Further, we were able to concentrate on our limited forces to meet their advances on Midway when otherwise we almost certainly would have been some 3,000 miles out of place.

We had full information of the strength of their forces in that advance and also of the smaller force directed against the Aleutians which finally landed troops on Attu and Kiska.

Operations in the Pacific are largely guided by the information we obtain of Japanese deployments. We know their strength in various garrisons, the rations and other stores continuing available to them, and what is of vast importance, we check their fleet movements and the movements of their convoys.

The heavy losses reported from time to time which they sustain by reason of our submarine action largely results from the fact that we know the sailing dates and the routes of their convoys and can notify our submarines to lie in wait at the proper point.

The current raids by Admiral Halsey's carrier forces on Japanese shipping in Manila Bay and elsewhere were largely based in timing on the known movements of Japanese convoys, two of which were caught, as anticipated, in his destructive attacks.

You will understand from the foregoing the utter tragic consequences if the present political debates regarding Pearl Harbor disclose to the enemy, German or Jap, any suspicion of the vital sources of information we now possess.

The Roberts' report on Pearl Harbor had to have withdrawn from it all reference to this highly secret matter, therefore in portions it necessarily appeared incomplete. The same reason which dictated that course is even more important today because our sources have been greatly elaborated.

As a further example of the delicacy of the situation, some of Donovan's people (the OSS), without telling us, instituted a secret search of the Japanese Embassy offices in Portugal. As a result the entire military attaché Japanese code all over the world was changed, and though this occurred over a year ago, we have not yet been able to break the new code and have thus lost this invaluable source of information, particularly regarding the European situation.

A recent speech in Congress by Representative Harness would clearly suggest to the Japanese that we have been reading their codes, though Mr. Harness and the American public would probably not draw any such conclusion.

The conduct of General Eisenhower's campaign and of all operations in the Pacific are closely related in conception and timing to the information we secretly obtain through these intercepted codes. They contribute greatly to the victory and tremendously to the savings of American lives, both in the conduct of current operations and in looking toward the early termination of the war.

I am presenting this matter to you, for your secret information, in the hope that you will see your way clear to avoid the tragic results with which we are now threatened in the present political campaign. I might add that the recent action of Congress in requiring Army and Navy investigations for action before certain dates has compelled me to bring back the corps commander, General Gerow, whose troops are fighting at Trier, to testify here while the Germans are counter-attacking his forces there. This, however, is a very minor matter compared to the loss of our code information.

Please return this letter by bearer. I will hold it in my secret file subject to your reference should you so desire.

Faithfully yours,
G. C. MARSHALL.

Second Letter

TOP SECRET
(FOR MR. DEWEY'S EYES ONLY)
27 September, 1944.

My Dear Governor:

Colonel Clark, my messenger to you of yesterday, Sept. 26, has reported the result of his delivery of my letter dated Sept. 25. As I understand him you (A) were unwilling to commit yourself to any agreement regarding "not communicating its contents to any other person" in view of the fact that you felt you already knew certain of the things probably referred to in the letter, as suggested to you by seeing the word "cryptograph," and (B) you could not feel that such a letter as this to a Presidential candidate could have been addressed to you by an officer in my position without the knowledge of the President.

As to (A) above I am quite willing to have you read what comes hereafter with the understanding that you are bound not to communicate to any other person any portions on which you do not now have or later receive factual knowledge from some other source than myself. As to (B) above you have my word that neither the Secretary of War nor the President has any intimation whatsoever that such a letter has been addressed to you or that the preparation or sending of such a communication was being considered.

I assure you that the only persons who saw or know of the existence of either this letter or my letter to you dated Sept. 25 are Admiral King, seven key officers responsible for security of military communications, and my secretary who typed these letters.

I am trying my best to make plain to you that this letter is being addressed to you solely on my initiative, Admiral King having been consulted only after the letter was drafted, and I am persisting in the matter because the military hazards involved are so serious that I feel some action is necessary to protect the interests of our armed forces.

(The second letter then repeated the text of the first letter except for the first two paragraphs.)

Col. Carter Clarke took a plane to Oklahoma City to board the Dewey campaign train in 1944 with the first letter.

Mr. Dewey, the general asserted, rejected the provision that he must accept the communication in utter confidence, and handed it back to Colonel Clarke without reading it.

"I came to the conclusion," General Marshall said, "that the matter was so important I must make another effort. So I sent Clarke to Albany in civilian clothes."

30.24 - 32215

This time the colonel carried General Marshall's Sept. 27 letter, which repeated the first, with the added disclosure of the possibility of compromising British secret sources of information.

The first letter told how this country had German as well as Japanese codes; disclosed that the battle of the Coral Sea was won because of intercepted Japanese messages, and said that American operations in the Pacific in general "are largely guided by the information we obtain of Japanese deployments," and that the heavy Japanese ship losses to American submarines were made possible through breaking of the code.

"You will understand," General Marshall told the Governor, "the utterly tragic consequences if the present political debates regarding Pearl Harbor disclose to the enemy, German or Jap, any suspicion of the vital sources of information we now possess."

OSS Lisbon Raid Disclosed

General Marshall also told Mr. Dewey that the whole situation had been made delicate by the fact that "some of Donovan's people" (in the Office of Strategic Services commanded by Maj. Gen. William Donovan) had searched the Japanese Embassy in Lisbon with the result that the Japanese changed their code for military attachés over the world and that after a year the Army had not been able to break this new code.

Too, General Marshall wrote, "a recent speech in Congress by Representative Harness (Republican of Indiana) would clearly suggest to the Japanese that we have been reading their codes, though Mr. Harness and the American public would probably not draw any such conclusion."

The general asked Mr. Dewey to "see your way clear to avoid the tragic results with which we are now threatened in the present political campaign."

When Colonel Clarke took the second letter to Albany, General Marshall testified, he telephoned that Mr. Dewey was "unwilling to read it unless he had at least one adviser who was aware of it."

The general added: "He also said he felt he must keep the letter in his file. Mr. Dewey then came on the telephone.

"The Governor spoke to me of a Mr. Bell (Elliot V. Bell) as his adviser in the matter and said he, the Governor, would lock the letter in his most secret file case. He said he must keep the letter. I then agreed to that. There was no discussion as to what his (further) decision might be.

"I do not recall that he gave at that time any assurance. All I know is that there seemed to be no further references to it (the matter of the code) in the campaign."

"After the election in which Mr. Dewey was defeated for President," General Marshall continued, "I thought it was due him to know more about the background of this matter and I sent Maj. Gen. Clayton Bissell to Albany with copies of 'Magic' (the Army code name for interceptions) so the Governor could see how important they were.

"It was more or less in the form of an appreciation for the action he apparently had taken.

"At President Roosevelt's funeral I saw Mr. Dewey. I asked him to come with me to the War Department and I showed him current Magic showing Japanese movements. His attitude was friendly and gracious.

Dewey Would Block Debate

"When General Bissell was in Albany the Governor told him he understood there was going to be further discussion in Congress about Pearl Harbor and asked whether I wanted him to endeavor to intervene to the extent that he might be able to do so to suppress such debates."

When General Bissell returned here, General Marshall said that he told him to call Governor Dewey, adding:

"I told him to tell Governor Dewey that I had already embarrassed him with a request that had affected his personal action and didn't want to embarrass him again.

"I told Bissell that Governor Dewey would probably say that embarrassment didn't matter; that what he was interested in was the progress of the war. He did say that; that the only question was the progress of the war.

"General Bissell told him that I had anticipated what his attitude would be, but that I still had no further request to make."

Asked what had moved him first to write to Governor Dewey, General Marshall replied that references of which he was afraid were "growing more pointed as the campaign became more violent" and that General Bissell had suggested he go to President Roosevelt "for help."

"I didn't think that would do," General Marshall said, adding:

"I felt it absolutely necessary that Mr. Dewey feel sure that the President had no knowledge whatever of my action and that he feel sure that it was entirely non-political. That is the way, I understand, Governor Dewey accepted it."

The intercepted Japanese messages, General Marshall asserted, greatly helped us even after the Japanese surrender "because we had their communications and knew where it would be advisable to go in strength (in the initial occupation)."

"By this means," he added, "we were able to go into Korea with a regiment when we had originally planned to use a whole army."

Had the Japanese become aware that we were intercepting their messages, he added, they could have led American troops and ships into frightful ambushes.

Always, he said, the possession of the secret was a terrible concern, one of his greatest worries having been caused by the fact that it became whispered about that the American aviators who killed the Japanese Admiral Yamamoto had been guided by "intercepts."

As to why the Russians remained so secretive with the Allies, General Marshall said that Washington "whispering" made the Soviet representatives "afraid of telling us anything because they thought a leak inevitable."

American officers in Russia, he said, were instructed not to "ask where and when a campaign was going to begin."

The committee's decision to put in the record the text of both of General Marshall's letters to Mr. Dewey was stated by Chairman Barkley after Mr. Mitchell had put forward his own recommendation that "a few lines" be deleted "in the interest of national security," and that the letters in their entirety be available to the committeemen.

Mr. Barkley replied that the committee would take "full responsibility for full publication." He added that this was done because there had been "a division in the committee" in its executive session, which Senator Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, had refused to attend because, he said, he was unwilling to hear "any testimony not in public session."

Senator Lucas, Democrat, of Illinois, likewise declined to attend, saying he did so "because I was not willing for one member to absent himself without going out with him."

Representative Murphy, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, asserted that "the security of this nation "was being compromised by the disclosure and that "two people" had forced the issue of publication of the Marshall correspondence to Governor Dewey.

One of these two, Mr. Murphy later aserted to correspondents, was Governor Dewey himself, and the other was John Chamberlain, a writer, who published some time ago in Life Magazine an article making known that General Marshall had written to Mr. Dewey an appeal not to make any reference suggesting that this country was decoding enemy messages. Representative Murphy, saying that Mr. Dewey had been listed as a witness before the committee, added:

"He is certainly going to be asked how it was that the fact that General Marshall had written him, under the utmost confidence, turned up in a magazine."

Earlier, General Marshall asserted that to the best of his knowledge, President Roosevelt had no information concerning Japan's intentions, which was not also known to him, the Chief of Naval Operations and the Secretaries of War and Navy.

He added that Mr. Roosevelt on the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, "had every right to assume" that the Hawaii and other outposts were "properly alerted."

Refuses to Answer Critics

The general declined to answer criticisms made of him in the August report of the Army's Pearl Harbor Investigating Board, saying:

"I prefer to rest on the evidence."

He has not read that report and said:

"I have enough documents to read."

Amplifying his testimony yesterday that he had not expected the Japanese raid on Pearl Harbor, General Marshall asserted that he had thought the first blow in a war with Japan would fall on the Philippines, and that from August, 1941, believing that all that was necessary had been done in Hawaii, he was concentrating his efforts on strengthening the position of General MacArthur.

He said that "long before" this Mr. Roosevelt had been "expressing the hope that I could give something to the Philippines."

In this period, the general continued, he felt compelled to reject the President's suggestion, because the continental defense of the United States was "the seed corn," and came first.

Not only the lessons of Pearl Harbor but the whole post-war outlook, General Marshall said, made unity of command "imperative" and consolidation of the Army and Navy "very necessary."

As to the fact that his final warning to Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short did not reach the Hawaiian commander until hours after the Japanese attack, General Marshall testified that he did not see until the morning of Dec. 7 an intercepted Japanese message of Dec. 6-7 strongly indicating that Tokyo had decided on war.

Thirteen parts of the communication were received in Washington the night before and were available, in text or in summary form, to Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, then chief of Army Intelligence, earlier testimony showed.

The fourteenth and most important part of the message was intercepted in the early morning, as was the revealing message, instructing Japanese envoys to present to this Government precisely at 1 P. M., Dec. 7, the Tokyo Government's final reply.

Testifying from what he called the "circumstantial evidence" of his wife's engagement book, General Marshall said that he had no dinner engagement the night of Dec. 6, no evening engagements between Dec. 1 and Dec. 7, and no recollection of having gone to "the movies."

Moreover, he added, a telephone orderly was on duty at his home in Fort Myer, Va., and always knew where the general could be found if he was away from home.

Called Stark at Once

General Marshall asserted that when he got the full fourteen passages of the Japanese note, along with the 1 P. M. instruction, he at once called Admiral Harold R. Stark, then Chief of Naval Operations, and learned that the Admiral already had the information. How long this had been in the latter's possession was not disclosed.

The former Chief of Staff, who remarked in an aside to the committee that he had a plane "standing by and ready" to take him to Chungking as special Ambassador to China the moment he completed his testimony, made these other statements:

That "all the War Department" had thought that the Nov. 27 warning message sent to General Short in Hawaii would cause a full alert.

That he had no recollection of having seen the Short reply of Nov. 28, which stated that the Hawaiian Command was on alert against sabotage and was in liaison with the Navy.

That he believed the department, in view of many communications from General Short indicating that he was always keenly concerned at the possibility of Japanese air attack, had simply "not registered" at the word "sabotage," and had read his reference on liaison with the Navy to mean that joint air reconnaissance was in operation.

That while he had never discussed with General Short the failure of the defenses at Pearl Harbor, "in my own mind I have never grasped what happened between the period when so much was being said and recognized about the need for air defense and subsequently."

"I could never understand," General Marshall added, "why suddenly that became a side issue."

In reply to questions by Mr. Mitchell on whether, even under the best conditions of preparedness, a 360-degree air reconnaissance would have been impossible from Oahu because of the limited number of available aircraft, the general said that a "perfect defense" was rare under any circumstances. He remarked that the Allies were "short in LST's (landing craft for tanks)" in Europe, adding:

"If we had failed I presume there would have been a full investigation as to why we went into Normandy."

U. S. Reaffirms Pledge Of Iran's Sovereignty

Byrnes Reassures Tehran on Independence

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP). — Secretary of State James F. Byrnes reaffirmed today the pledge made by the United States at Tehran to maintain the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran.

In a telegram to Foreign Minister Abolghassem Nadjm, who had recalled the promise made by the Big Three when they conferred in the Iranian capital in December of 1943, Mr. Byrnes said:

"I welcome this opportunity of expressing again the recognition by the government of the United States of the assistance rendered by Iran in the recent victory over our common enemy and assuring you that the interest of the government of the United States in the maintenance of the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran as set forth in that declaration has not changed in any respect."

In his telegram to Mr. Byrnes, which commemorated the second anniversary of the Tehran meeting, the Iranian Foreign Minister recalled the pledges of the United States, Great Britain and Russia, and expressed the confidence of the Iranian people that "their great allies will not fail on the basis of this historic document ..."

A State Department official told reporters no reply has been received to its suggestion that Russia permit publication of its message declining a United States proposal that the three powers evacuate Iran by Jan. 1.

Huge Transfer Of Germans Begun by Allies

6,650,000 To Be Sent Back From Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP).— The Allies have begun the gigantic task of transferring 6,650,000 Germans from Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland into the four occupation zones of Germany.

The State Department disclosed today that the Allied Control Council in Berlin approved a plan for the transfers at a meeting on Nov. 20. The plan outlines tentative allocation of the transferred Germans among the zones of occupation and sets up a schedule for their movement.

Transfers begin this month and are scheduled to be completed by Aug. 1, 1946, the announcement said.

Here are the allocations:

Of the total German population of 3,500,000 to be moved from Poland, 2,000,000 go to the Russian zone and 1,500,000 to the British zone.

Of 2,500,000 to be transferred from Czechoslovakia, 1,750,000 go to the American zone and 750,000 to the Russian zone.

From Hungary, 500,000 go to the American zone.

From Austria, 150,000 go to the French zone.

The Council plan should "greatly alleviate" certain difficulties which have arisen from the premature migration of Germans into Germany from Poland and territory now under Polish control, the announcement said.

The State Department said the United States has observed "with satisfaction" that the Czechoslovak and Hungarian governments are planning direct conversations in an attempt to solve differences over the transfer of Hungarian-speaking persons from Czechoslovakia to Hungary.

1,500 Arrested During War as Enemy Agents

F.B.I. Says 141 Convictions Resulted; All Sabotage Directed by Foe Foiled

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation disclosed today that more than 1,500 enemy agents were arrested in the Western Hemisphere during the war. The list included spies, saboteurs and propagandists. Some of the arrests were made by local law enforcement authorities in South and North America, others by the F. B. I.

Searches of alien enemy premises in the United States uncovered 3,127 short-wave radio receivers, 2,240 sticks of dynamite, 4,626 firearms, 306,247 rounds of ammuntion and other contraband articles in large quantities, the F. B. I. said in a report rounding up its activities in the four years following Dec. 7, 1941.

During the war-time period 16,062 alien enemies were arrested, the F. B. I. said, adding:

"While most of the alien enemies did nothing to hurt the United States, the dangerous ones would have constitute an army of fifth columnists if they had been left free to follow their inclinations."

F. B. I. investigations resulted in the conviction of 141 enemy agents for espionage and foreign agent registration act violations, the report said. Others were sentenced for censorship and neutrality act offenses.

But, the report stated proudly: "During the entire war-time emergency period there was no single successful act of foreign-directed sabotage. Technical sabotage has been found in 2,232 of the 19,466 complaints investigated. Most of the violations have been traced to spite or gross carelessness. As a result of F. B. I. investigations, 603 persons have been convicted in state and Federal courts."

Simple World Aid Policy To Avoid Ill Will Urged

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—John Foster Dulles, who was advisor to Secretary of State Byrnes at the London conference, said today the United States should adopt a "simple, publicly-defined policy" towards extension of material aid to other nations, in order to avoid ill will.

"The inevitable disappointment of many hopes could make us the object of well-nigh universal jealousy and dislike," he said. "That sort of spiritual isolation involves danger from which no world organization, no armament, could protect us."

DEC 8 - 1945

Danger Is Cited

In an address before the National Association of Manufacturers, Dulles said:

"When pleas are pouring in from every quarter of the world, we should not seem to be capricious, nor should we expose ourselves to a charge of unfriendliness if we do not do for all what we do for one. We shall increase ill will unless we have some simple, publicly-defined policy.

"It will not satisfy all, but it should make sufficient sense so that even disappointed peoples will appreciate why we do what we do. Then at least we may retain their respect."

Urges "Severe Limit"

Dulles said he believed there was a "severe limit to the material aid which our Government ought to extend."

"A member of the British Government told me he had calculated that about one half of our productive capacity would adequately serve our domestic needs," he said, "and that the other half ought to be dedicated to the use of the rest of the world.

"That was a reasoned approach from a friendly quarter. If distress and hopelessness grow, the demands on us will not all be friendly and not all be reasoned. Their aggregate will be far beyond our capacity."

Dulles, foreign affairs advisor to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in the 1944 presidential campaign, said Communistic doctrines need not be feared in this country.

"The Soviet government's almost fanatical insistence on postwar secrecy is hard to explain," he said, "except on the theory that it fears that if the outer world knew how Communism worked in Russia, there would be widespread disillusionment abroad, and if the Soviet peoples were aware of the spiritual, intellectual, and material opportunities of other people, they, in turn, would be disillusioned.

"We need not fear a faith which itself fears the test of works. What we do need to fear is our own loss of faith in principles that have worked."

Winthrop W. Aldrich, board chairman of the Chase National Bank, said that "any British government, right or left, must have financial assistance" and that a loan from this country was not to "underwrite socialistic experiments."

The banker said extension of financial aid to Britain, "playing as she does a central role in world trade," was essential to checking the tendency toward bi-lateralism, and in giving a firm basis to multilateral trade."

Robert E. Wason, president of Manning, Maxwell & Moore, New York, heavy industry equipment manufacturers, was elected president of the association for the coming year. He succeeds Ira Mosher, president of Russell, Harrington Cutlery Company, Southbridge, Massachusetts.

Mosher will become chairman of the board.

The 1944 N.A.M. head, Robert Gaylord, of Rockford, Ill., will become chairman of the executive committee; and the 1943 president, F. C. Crawford, of Cleveland, will be chairman of the finance committee.

TRUMAN PLANS ARE DEFENDED

Supported By Rosenman, Who Served Roosevelt

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 7 (AP)—Samuel I. Rosenman declared tonight that President Truman is "fighting the fight of liberalism," as a logical successor to Franklin D Roosevelt.

Rosenman, chief counsel to Mr. Truman and long a close associate of the late President, told a Roosevelt memorial banquet of the Victory Bond Committee:

1. That he was "morally certain" that Mr. Roosevelt had his mind "fully and firmly made up" at the end of the 1939 to refuse a third-term nomination.

2. That he wavered when the Nazis broke into Norway in April, 1940, and decided to run again when they overran the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Belgium and France.

3. That Mr. Truman has inherited "the same kind of reactionary opposition to his program of progressive legislation as President Roosevelt met."

4. That while in Nuernberg, Manila and Tokyo, the late enemies of the United States are being tried as war aggressors, "here in the United States some of the old isolationist, Roosevelt-hating press" and "some Republican politicians" are trying "to prove that a dead American President was a war aggressor too."

"They are seeking to prove that poor, peace-loving little Japan, seeking only a world of peace and international good will, was pounced upon in a desire for world power by this aggressor Roosevelt," Rosenman continued.

"People Will Never Be Fooled"

"The American people as a whole will never be fooled by these smear tactics. Nor will the rank and file of the Republican party who time and again during the past twelve years supported not only Roosevelt himself but the Roosevelt policies as well.

"Of course it is quite obvious what these politicians and newspapers are seeking to do. These men who are now trying to tear down the name of Roosevelt did not like the Roosevelt policies any more than they liked the man himself.

"They did not like his policies on labor unions or small business, on reciprocal foreign trade, on monopolies and cartels, on minimum wages, unemployment insurance or age asistance."

Sense Of Righteousness

President Truman, Rosenman asserted, is, with "determination and vigor, and with a sense of righteousness in his cause," fighting the "fight of liberalism and progressive government every day—and fighting it hard."

There is no one whom he has ever met, in public or private life, Rosenman said, "who is more anxious and more determined to carry on the general policies and program of the late President than is President Harry S. Truman."

"President Truman is now meeting the same kind of reactionary opposition to his program of progressive legislation as President Roosevelt met," he continued.

Isolationist Resistance

"He is meeting the same kind of isolationist resistance to his program of international co-operation and world trade, the same kind of selfish obstacles to extending relief to the cold and hungry people of Europe. He is meeting the same type of group selfishness and the same search for partisan advantage.

Rosenman plans to return to the private practice of law in New York shortly after the first of the year. He left a $25,000-a-year judgeship there in response to a Roosevelt appeal for his services in Washington. He was one of the Roosevelt "brain trusters."

GOP Governor Hits Truman

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP)—Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois charged before the Republican National Committee today that the Truman Administration had "suffered the most humiliating defeat in history" by losing "every skirmish" on the international diplomatic front.

In a vigorous prepared address possibly presaging his candidacy for the GOP presidential nomination in 1948, the Illinois Governor asserted that "we have been told that we should not raise our voice against the rape of Java by the British and Dutch for fear of offending some voters."

"We have ben told," he said, "we must not even protest against the shameful betrayal of Poland for fear of offending Russia's following over here."

DEC 8 - 1945

"Fish Or Cut Bait"

The Republicans must make up their minds in the first peacetime meeting of the National Committee in four years, he declared, whether they were going to fish or cut bait.

"We must never condone the suppression of liberty in Poland, in the Baltic States, in the Balkans or in any nation in Europe, Asia or elsewhere," he declared, adding:

"It must be our vigorous policy to use the leverage afforded by the discussion of forgiveness of lend-lease or of requests for new loans and every other peaceful means to speed the liberation of the people of these nations."

Policy Statement

The Illinois Governor's speech came as Republican committeemen gathered to approve what most of them regarded as a generalized policy statement issued by House and Senate Republicans.

Herbert Brownell, national chairman, listed congressional districts from Maine to California in which he said GOP candidates had a chance to be elected next year. He told his colleagues that they must rally behind picked Republican candidates.

Green, credited by his colleagues with being at least a candidate for the vice-presidential nomination in 1948, came forth with far more than the "welcoming" speech for which he had been marked down on the program.

He told the National Committee that it ought to "propose a complete about-face from the weak and vacillating Truman New Deal diplomacy."

Atlantic Charter "Violated"

"With the greatest military force in the world," he declared, "it has lost every skirmish on the diplomatic front. The Four Freedoms and the Atlantic Charter not only have been disregarded but specifically violated."

Declaring that American diplomacy under President Truman "has become the abject servant of British, French and Communist imperialism," Green said that "power politics again rules the world and the Truman Administration has stood helplessly by."

Without offering any specific solution for the international problem, the Illinois Governor turned to a discussion of domestic issues with the assertion that the "time has come to bring national expenditures down to the tax receipts of our National Government."

He urged that Congress enact legislation "requiring full publicity to all deals for disposal of surplus war goods or alien property."

Views On Labor Problem

Of the labor-management controversy, he said:

"We believe that most of our labor conflicts could be settled promptly if management and labor were free to negotiate in their own interests."

He noted that war veterans are "coming home to the greatest housing shortage in the history of America," and said this was "produced by New Deal policies both before and during the war."

Marine General Hits War Dept. Merger Pleas

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Roy S. Geiger, one of the top Marine Corps leaders in the Pacific, protested today that the War Department proposal for a merger of the armed services was based on the lessons learned in World War I.

"Surely some lessons must have been learned from the present war; surely some additional principles and ideas should be given recognition in any blueprint that would elevate a single department to a national and all-embracing level," he told the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Veteran Of Pacific

Geiger, a veteran of Guadalcanal, Bougainville and Okinawa and now commander of the fleet Marine force, appeared in opposition to the army plan to establish a single defense agency—with ground, air and sea forces coequal.

In a prepared statement, he also opposed the establishment of a separate air force which he termed the "real meat" of the War Department's merger plan.

Development of atomic energy and electronics, he asserted, will make piloted bombardment planes unnecessary and may eventually make them obsolete.

"As a result, the strategic air force, the only possible pretext for a divorced air arm, would rapidly pass out of the picture," he said.

Expected Something Progressive

Geiger said that when he first heard of the War Department unification plan he had expected "to find something progressive and streamlined."

Instead, he said, he found that it was "nothing more than a pantographic enlargement of the present War Department organization—a simple elevation of that backward-looking framework to national level by the expedient" of making a place for the naval establishment alongside the present War Department branches.

HUSH-HUSH BOMB SECRECY SIFTED

Senators Ponder What Secret Stuff To Bring Into Open

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Senate atomic bomb committee held a secret session today and they couldn't have had more privacy if they'd held it in the double eagle suite of the gold vault at Fort Knox.

Before the session in the Finance Committee room of the Senate Office Building, three FBI men cased the joint, pulled out every drawer, looked behind the window drapes and even peeked under the tables.

Then they inspected rooms above and below the hearing chamber. They didn't say what they were looking for.

30.24-32217

Policemen's Pedigrees Traced

They took the pedigrees of five Capitol policemen (one of whom, named Fisher, looks remarkably like Henry Wallace) and posted them at the several entrances to the finance room and connecting chambers.

Then and only then did they admit the committee, together with Secretary of War Patterson, Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, the Army's atom boss; Dr. Edward U. Condon, scientific advisor to the committee, and James R. Newman, special aide.

Three hours later the committeemen began drifting out. One of them had tried drifting a little ahead of time and found the doors locked. Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) solemnly asked one of the cops if he wanted to see him to his office.

Why The Dick Tracy Stuff?

Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) granted an interview to three newspaper men who stopped him as he passed the police lines.

"Certain security aspects of the problem were talked over with Secretary Patterson and General Groves," he said.

"What problem?" a reporter asked.

"The atomic problem," McMahon responded.

Why all the Dick Tracy stuff?

"We were talking over matters of top secrecy and simply took the necessary precautions," McMahon explained.

Blood Oath And Pooh Pooh

Reporters sought out other members in their offices.

"My lips are sealed," said one, a pledge which if respected will leave the Senate a strangely silent place.

"We all took an oath of blood," grinned another.

"Pooh," said a third senator, "nothing was said that couldn't have been said in open session. We just talked about what top secret stuff should be brought out in open hearings."

STASSEN ASKS LABOR TRUCE

Calls On Truman For 60-Day Economic Conference

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Former Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, a prominent Republican, tonight urged President Truman to call quickly a bipartisan economic conference to work out a new national policy on wages, prices and production—with labor halting all strikes and aiming at maximum production during the 60-day course of this meeting.

"The real cause of the wave of strikes in the country is the lack of an accepted national policy on these intricate and inter-related economic problems," he asserted.

Return To Political Scene

Stassen's strongly worded proposal was delivered before the closing session of the golden-anniversary congress of the National Association of Manufacturers. Coming as his first public statement since he took off the uniform of a United States Navy captain, it apparently signaled also his return to the active political scene.

Looking beyond an immediate economic conference, he urged in addition a "thorough ten-year test" of the American system of individual enterprise, private capital and free workmen, with decisions on any basic changes postponed until then. He made this proposal in hitting at what he called a "mixed economy."

Politicians And Economists Too

The former Governor urged President Truman to include in his proposed conference not only leaders of management, labor and agriculture but also the top men of both political parties and "some of our ablest economists." Its makeup should be such, he said, that "all walks of life have overwhelming confidence in its recommendations."

"It should fit together into a coordinated recommended program a number of items, including the average amount of wage increases that ought to be made now, with an indication of the variation between different industries and the amount of the increase of unemployment compensation and of other security programs," Stassen declared.

He suggested the meeting be held in the public limelight.

Stassen argued that the Government itself should not decree the new national policy but should take leadership in its formulation particularly at a time "when the scarcity of supply makes it necessary that there be temporary Government price control in place of competitive price control."

"It is possible that the Administration has had a policy that it has not directly revealed of squeezing out the profits of business," he said. "If that is the attempt, it can only result in injury to the entire economic system and in extreme industrial strife. Profits in the American system must be squeezed by competition and the quicker production gets going, competition can reassert itself."

Bids For Labor's Support

Seeking the support of labor for his proposal that all present strikes be called off and a no-strike pledge instituted for 60 days while production was speeded up, Stassen said:

"The understanding should be that the solutions arrived at after this conference is held will be retroactive to the beginning of any strikes now being conducted or to the end of the contracts that expired, as the case may be."

Stassen said he knew that "some politicians" of his own party would criticize his proposal as a political mistake.

Argument To Republicans

"They would say that it would place the Republican party in a position of sharing in the responsibility for working out a very difficult problem and that it is smarter to leave the Administration struggle with the problem, watch the strikes flare up, permit dissensions to arise between Government and labor and then use all these things in future elections," Stassen said.

"That is not my idea of the way the American political and economic system should operate. Both parties must share in the responsibility of major decisions of Government of a kind that require the overwhelming support of the people of all walks of life to make them effective. The responsibility to be constructive rests with equal weight upon the minority party and the majority party under the American political system."

Political Aspect Of Speech

Stassen was mentioned frequently in 1944 as a possible Republican presidential nominee. He told a reporter before he spoke tonight that he was returning to "the active public scene."

This statement appeared to underscore the opening remarks of his address in which he said he intended to make "a direct and open statement of my tentative views."

Mentioning President Truman's proposal of fact-finding commissions to head off strikes, he said this was "good machinery" which the State of Minnesota had been using successfully for the last seven years. Then he added:

"But it is not the answer to the present problem. And legislation of this kind should not be passed in the heat of a controversy which has not been caused by any failure to use machinery provided by Government."

Stassen said he did not fear inflation provided "we get large-scale production under way."

Text of Stassen Address

The text of the address by Harold E. Stassen before the National Association of Manufacturers at the Waldorf-Astoria last night follows:

We meet on Dec. 7. We meet on the fourth anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day, a day which marks the tragic conclusion of over twenty years of a weak and unsuccessful foreign policy. It way a day that should ever cause a certain humbleness on our part that a nation so strong should find itself so weak and exposed and unprepared. It was a day, followed quickly by Hitler's declaration of war, that brought a very direct and bitter challenge to America.

We met that challenge. America went into action united as never before. Millions of Americans went forth in uniform in the Army and the Navy and marines and the Coast Guard to join our stalwart allies as one invincible fighting team. Unprecedented production of the weapons and materials for victory poured out from the American production machine through the joint efforts of capital, labor, agriculture, management and government.

The home front was strong and demonstrated this in countless ways, from the high morale and steadiness of lonely homes to the war bond and Red Cross and war fund and scrap drives. Science joined industry in the development of many intricate weapons of war and culminated its efforts by unlocking the tiny atom and releasing unbelievable destructive power.

Unity Evaporated

After many bitter months of fighting with a heavy and tragic cost to America and a much heavier cost to the rest of the world, victory came. And then the unity began to evaporate. The United States of America abruptly and callously and completely canceled lend-lease. The London conference ended in failure and disunity.

The Army and Navy shifted to verbal artillery and turned it on each other. Strikes—strikes by big unions against big companies and by small unions against small companies—broke out from coast to coast. The labor-management conference met and failed to agree. Civil war broke out in China, in Iran, in Java and in Indo China. Rioting flared in Palestine. The Republicans and Democrats quarreled about Pearl Harbor. As we meet tonight hundreds of thousands of employees in the nation are idle through industrial strife, while the people of America and of the world urgently need the products they could produce.

With this background tonight, four years after Pearl Harbor, we turn our eyes to the future. We ask, "What shall our post-war domestic policies be?" In discussing domestic policies with you tonight, I, of course, fully recognize and have frequently emphasized the overshadowing effect of our world policy and of world conditions upon the welfare of the people of America. But that fact does not dim the importance of a direct analysis of domestic policy, for it is equally true that the health of the American economy will reflect throughout the world.

Differences in Views

I also realize as we open this discussion that my views have been for many years quite different from many of the officially pronounced views of your organization. But I do not believe that there is any point in glossing over these differences. I firmly believe in a frank discussion and exposure of differences of views in a democracy to clarify issues and find the basis for agreement and unity. I suppose my views might be characterized by some as being more liberal or progressive or pro-labor than the official pronouncements of the National Association of Manufacturers. I do not believe that labels are important. They have such diverse meanings and are so vague in their concept. I would prefer to deal in the specific discussion of definite programs rather than in labels.

It is my view that there is a very great need for increased unity in America. Our common welfare demands increased unity of purpose and of action. Real dangers to our future high standards of living, to our future liberties, to our future elfare would arise from any deepening feeling of class versus class, or any increasing schisms on either an economic or social basis.

To accomplish increased unity it is necessary that we reach a fundamental basis for the unity.

We need an agreement on objectives and on the basic steps to reach the objectives. Just as the war-time unity had the clear objectives of winning the war, and the major necessary steps were agreed upon, so we need agreement on the major objectives of peace and of the principal steps to reach that objective. This is not easy to find. To stimulate the search for answers, I present to you tonight a direct and open statement of my tentative views.

Over-All Objective

The over-all objective of the American system in the years ahead should be to furnish to all the men and women and children of America all of the necessities, and to an increasing degree the comforts of modern life; to do so on a basis that will contribute to their individual freedoms of thought and action, their strength of character, their happiness, and their human dignity; and to contribute, at the same time, to the steady march of progress of all mankind in a world at peace.

As the first principle toward the attainment of that objective, I propose that we in America, all of us, government, labor, agriculture, management, vigorously champion, implement and stimulate an expanding competitive American economic system of private capital, individual enterprise and free workmen. To specifically carry out this principle, as I see it, requires some readjustment in the thinking of all of us. It means definitely placing opportunity above security on our list of priorities. It means we must encourage and applaud the pioneer—the originator—the inventor—the adventurer—the risk taker. We must not become a nation of security seekers, nor of selfish nationalists. We must be a nation of originality, of boldness and of imagination.

The question of whether there will be worth while continuing jobs for the ten or eleven million men returning from service, really depends upon whether two or three hundred thousands of them have the courage and the spirit and the opportunity to start up new businesses, new stores, new ventures, which will in turn furnish jobs.

The most desirable way to furnish food, shelter and clothing to an individual is in response to purchases of his own choice as he uses the proceeds of his own productive work or useful service.

Making of Profits

To implement this over-all objective, we must all of us, business and labor and government, look upon the making of profits with approval. Labor must take pride in the success of its company, in the making of profits. Profits are the ignition system that makes our economic machine operate producing supplies for the people and making jobs for workers. Profits must not be condemned either by government or labor.

This does not mean that abuses in profits are to be condoned. There must be a vigorous opposition to excess profits from monopolies, from unfair practices, from suppression of wages. But I believe the workmen of America should and will to an increasing degree take pride in working for a company that furnishes large quantities of products for their fellow workmen throughout the country at a price that all can pay, while itself maintaining good wages and good profits.

Likewise, we must all of us, capital and management, government and labor, alike, support strong unions. They are an essential part of the checks and balances of a strong economic system of private capitalism and of democratic government. This does not mean that we should condone abuses in unions. There should be an increasing safeguarding of the rights of the individual workmen. There should be increasing democracy and financial accounting in some unions now autocratically run, with periodic choice of their officers by secret ballot. There should be increased discipline within the ranks of some unions. There must be an effective insistence upon respect for contracts. Government must provide judicial tribunals with the power of substantive decisions for the settlement of jurisdictional disputes.

Right to Strike

The right to strike must be maintained. It is an essential part of the continuance of the entire American system. The loss by labor of the right to strike would also lead in time to the loss of the right of private capital. It would mean that government would take over and soon neither labor nor capital would be free. But the right to strike should be very rarely used. It should be like the right to shoot in self-defense. It should be recognized by both labor and management that all disputes must be settled some time, and that all are so much better off if settlement is made first while production continues.

DEC 8 - 1945

To those who would vigorously oppose my position that strong unions are a vital part of the modern American system, I would say with deep conviction, that if you pull down the house of labor you will pull down the house of America. And on the other hand, to those who attack profits as an evil, I say with equal emphasis, if you will wipe out good profits, you will wipe out good jobs and real freedom.

We all must also recognize the reasonable requirements of security. Security should definitely occupy a secondary place, but it must nevertheless be fulfilled to a reasonable degree. There is nothing inconsistent between unemployment compensation and a free enterprise system. Unemployment compensation should be promptly extended in its coverage and in its adequacy both as to amount and as to duration. The same is true of old age and survivor's insurance. But government must carefully analyze the amount of unemployment compensation and justly administer the system so that it does not in practice actually encourage idleness when jobs are available.

Right of Business

The right of business to manage its affairs must be vigorously defended. Foremen and other supervisory personnel should be under the unquestioned, exclusive direction of management and not of labor.

There must also be an increasing amount of information to labor and to the general public of the financial facts of business. Times have changed. The splendid facilities for the dissemination of information very properly and happily make people want more information. The companies must adjust the conduct of their businesses to a greater amount of information to labor and to the public.

It does not add up to say in one breath that high productivity should be a major concern of labor, and in the next breath say that it's none of labor's business what are the profits of its company.

Just as labor is entitled to be informed to an increasing degree about the activities of business, so the management is entitled to the right to inform its employees on any subject, and the restrictive provision of the Wagner act in this respect should be repealed.

The emphasis of the need of unity of all in economic groups must also have as its corollary the recognition of the basic human rights of all and fair treatment in all other respects.

I have said nothing about the old theory of the maturity of an economic system and the consequent necessity of changing the system. I am assuming that the awe-inspiring splitting of the atom by science and the opening up of this vast unknown area has ended the talk about the lack of frontiers.

Moving Capital, Labor

We need better ways to quickly move capital and labor from place to place in the shifting economic scene. There is a continuing obligation on the worker to search for jobs, to move to jobs, to train for jobs, and then to produce on the jobs. The great strength of our system must be that it is dynamic, ever-changing, ever-adjusting, ever-adventuring, and not looking back, and not just yearning statically for the good old days.

Government must be prepared to currently utilize to the maximum feasible degree the productive man power of the country that is not absorbed by other economic activity. This use of the productive man power should be on a basis consistent with our free economic system. In other words, extensive plans of wide scope and imagination of projects that will be useful to the people should be constantly available. Then these plans should be carried out by contracts, with the use of private capital and individual enterprise, and not by governmental pay rolls. The entire program should be looked upon as the use of the productive power of the country for the benefit of the people as a whole, and not as any made work, or artificial scattering around of purchasing power. Government projects must be of a nature that do not primarily compete with private enterprise but stimulate it and open up availabilities for further private investment.

Modernizing Cities

Modernizing our cities with major increases in traffic arteries, clearing out blighted city areas and making them available for rebuilding and redeveloping by private capital, constructing a nation-wide and hemispheric network of highways, increased air facilities, new hospital facilities and expanded educational plants, are but a few of the potentialities of governmental activity of a useful nature for the people, which will not interfere with private enterprise, many of which could be self-supporting and self-liquidating.

Semi-stagnant pools of capital must be vigorously avoided or countered. A conservative portion of the vast resources of the insurance companies of the nation, with more than three billion pouring in annually, must be used in an increasingly vigorous and stimulating manner. Commercial banks must be encouraged to temper the super-caution that followed the banking disasters of 1932.

The private capital aspect of our system should likewise be vigorously defended. Every one recognizes that it requires a vast amount of capital to make our system reach its great effectiveness, with its large number of good jobs and its tremendous production. This capital being necessary, it must then be controlled by some one. Much better that there be a wide diversity of private owners than that the power of capital be added to the other powers of government and be placed in the hands of those administering the government. The concentration of power in any hands under any circumstances is a danger.

Source of Strength

The diffusion of power in this country, while it does create problems, is also a great source of strength and of assurance of future liberty.

The multitude of decisions that can be freely made by private owners and private capital fills in the economic system with a solid support. Government domination of all economic forces is like a hollow square filled with sand, compared in strength, resilience and usefulness to the solid cube of tempered steel formed by the diffusion of power of free enterprise.

The confidence of the people as a whole in the management of the huge war-time debt must be maintained at a high level. This can best be done, by frankly telling the people as a whole that the soundest way to maintain the private enterprise system and have it be vigorous and furnish jobs, when it has a heavy indebtedness, is to broadly spread the tax burden. All must carry a share of the cost of the debt burden and of government spending to insure a healthy economy, just as the help of all was necessary to win the war.

Problems Must Be Met

Government must meet new problems with a very minimum of use of its power, but it must meet them. There are more or less two distinct viewpoints—one that government should step into each problem or abuse and take over; the other that government should keep hands off. It is my view that neither of these policies is right for a government of free men, and neither is the traditional policy of America. Government should step in promptly and quickly in abuses and problems, but its action should be to correct the abuse with the very minimum of exercise of its own powers, to provide necessary limits for the action of its citizens and to avoid detailed regulation of every business or of every citizen.

Government should not keep hands off, but should take those affirmative actions which will form a favorable framework and a friendly climate within which the free enterprise system can flourish. Capitalism need not be, and, in fact, must not be, narrow, or selfish, or cold-blooded. There is no basic reason why the alert, modern manager cannot see to it that the great company with thousands of employees, has policies and practices that are as human, as warm, and as alert for the welfare of its men and women and for the human relationships, as does the owner-manager of the little shop with five workmen. The organization of a union should not mean that the responsibility for the welfare of the employees is taken over entirely by the union. The management of business and the leadership of unions should jointly share a heavy responsibility with government for the good housing and the health and the happiness of the workmen. Management should never forget for a day that labor is not simply a union. Labor is not simply a commodity. Labor is people—men and women—fellow citizens.

Ten-Year Study

A study should be made of the 100 companies in America that have had the most successful labor relations and production records in the last ten years. The results of this study should be published throughout the country. The tax program, the housing situation, the future of agriculture all need specific application of these principles.

To those who are inclined to say that the system of private capital and individual enterprise and free workmen has already failed, has already shown such gross inadequacies that it must be changed, my response is that on the contrary, it has shown such great strength that it should be vigorously supported. It is not a historical accident that six per cent of the world's population in our borders produced one-fourth of the world's goods. Furthermore, our system has not even yet had a full opportunity to demonstrate itself under modern conditions of peace. To those who would press ever for a further extension of actual government operation of enterprise in a mixed economy and point to the trends in other parts of the world, I would say directly that I do not believe in the nationalization of any industry or commerce or institution. I might add that there appear to be ample experiments of this type going on now in the world. The great need for the future of mankind and the best prospect as I see it for the future of the people of America is a vigorous demonstration of what freedom can do with individual enterprise, private capital, and free workmen. To those who feel that one or more of these should be maintained without the other, I express my conviction that they all go together.

Encouraging U. S. System

But perhaps the best response, to those who would turn progressively away from our basic system as we think of it, and who seek a "mixed economy" is to say, let us all agree upon a thorough ten-year test. Let us begin promptly to join together—government, labor, business and agriculture—and to do everything possible to champion and encourage and develop the basic American system. At the end of ten years of united vigorous support let us observe the result, while we then make our decisions as to future policies. I am confident that if we do this it will result in a clearcut demonstration of the superiority and high value of our system to the people of America and of the world.

It is not possible to generalize the viewpoint of the eleven million returning service men. Neither can any one be their spokesman. Their experiences in war have been as diverse as their background in peace. Their outlooks now are as eleven million individuals and not as a bloc of eleven million veterans. But I do believe that these men after spending three and four and five years in this bitter and tragic conflict, after observing the productive results of our American system in the cruel test of war, will almost unanimously support the position of giving vigorous, alert, complete, unwavering support for such a ten-year test of the basic American system of private capital and individual enterprise and free workmen.

As I see it, there is a pressing need now, not of more labor-management conferences, but of a real post-war economic conference, including the leadership of business and of labor and of agriculture, but not them alone. It should include some of our ablest economists, and representation from the leadership of both of our political parties. Such a conference should directly come to grips with our current basic and difficult economic problems and work out specifis bi-partisan, united recommendations. It should fit together into a co-ordinated recommended program a number of items including the average amount of wage increases that ought now be made, with an indication of the variation between different industries, and the amount of the increase of unemployment compensation, and of other security programs. These conferences should be carried on with a maximum of public information, so that the rank and file of these economic groups can make their views felt upon their leadership, and will understand and support the results.

A Prompt Conference

Such a conference should be promptly called. Its membership should be such that the people of the country as a whole, of all parties and of all walks of life, would have overwhelming confidence in its recommendations. During a sixty-day period while this conference meets, labor should be requested to discontinue all present strikes, to renew the no-strike pledge, and to set about producing the great multitude of products which we so urgently need. The understanding should be that the solutions arrived at after this conference is held will be retroactive to the beginning of any strikes now being conducted or to the end of the contracts that expired, as the case may be.

The real cause of the wave of strikes in the country is the lack of an accepted national policy on these intricate and interrelated economic problems, wages, prices and production. Government, in a democracy should not decree such a policy. But it should take a leadership in the formulation of the policy. This is particularly true when the scarcity of supply makes it necessary that there be temporary government price control in place of competitive price control. To fail to exercise that leadership and foresight means that the policy is formed in a violent clash between economic forces resulting in great damage to the entire economic system to the ultimate decision of the policy by one industry and one union.

It is possible that the Administration has had a policy that it has not directly revealed of squeezing out the profits of business. If that is the attempt it can only result in injury to the entire economic system and in extreme industrial strife. Profits in the American system must be squeezed by competition and the quicker production gets going so that competition can reassert itself, the more healthy will be our economic status and the higher will be the living standards of our people, but also results in the dissipation of our accumulated savings on frivolous purposes. They also build up class tensions and hatreds that are fundamentally dangerous to our way of life.

To Avoid Disorder

I know that some say that there were also many strikes after the last war. That is correct. And there was also a boom and a bust and a depression and millions of unemployed in the decades after the last war. We want to avoid that entire series of events of economic disorder.

As to the bi-partisan nature of the conference which I urge the President to call, I know that some politicians in my party would say that that is a political mistake. They would say that it would place the Republican party in a position of sharing in the responsibility for working out a very difficult problem and that it is smarter to leave the Administration struggle with the problem, watch the strikes flare up, permit dissension to arise between government and labor, and then use all these things in future elections.

That is not my idea of the way the American political and economical system should opeerate. Both parties must share in the responsibility of major decisions of government of a kind that require the overwhelming support of the people of all walks of life to make them effective. The responsibility to be constructive rests with equal weight upon the minority party and the majority party under the American political system.

Danger of Inflation

In any discussion of these questions the danger of inflation is always advanced and must be kept in mind. The economists are in some disagreement on the subject. It is my view that if we get large-scale production under way there is scant danger of harmful inflation in this country. Inflation comes from the scarcity of things to buy and not from high wages or good profits. So far as I recall, all of the harmful inflations in the world have occurred when there was a scarcity of products and never when a highly productive economic machine was busily and harmoniously engaged in producing goods.

The present situation needs a direct frontal approach to the real issues and causes of the present strikes. Fact-finding commissions in individual disputes with time in which to operate is good machinery. We have had this machinery complete with waiting periods, subpoena powers, and the duty to make specific recommendations, for seven years in Minnesota and it has worked exceptionally well. But it is not the answer to the present problem. And legislation of this kind should not be passed in the heat of a controversy which has not been caused by any failure to use machinery provided by government.

As we look to the future, the basic factors are very favorable. Our country has been untouched by enemy action. Thank God! There is a tremendous pent-up demand for goods of all kinds. There is a splendid trained labor supply in good health. There is ample capital. There are over a hundred and fifteen billion of individual savings, and at least an equal amount of savings of business. We have the raw materials. This decade should be marked by the rising of new jobs, new products, new fortunes, new unions, new managers, new enterprises. It should be marked by productivity of men which exceeds all previous peace-time accomplishments anywhere in the world.

Only our own short-sighted-ness and disunity, or the inadequacy and error of government can possibly stand in the way of successful and happy years for our people and of a major contribution to the economic health and peace of the world.

Let us increase our unity and demonstrate, for the welfare of the people as a whole, in answer to the challenge of the years of peace, the constructive counterpart of the tremendous production with which we answered the challenge of these last four years of war.

PROBE ADMITTED BY JUSTICE DEPT., ASKED BY UNION

Representatives of Strikes, Company to Renew Wage Parley Monday.

NO PROGRESS REPORTED

CIO Leader Says 13 1-2 Per Cent an Hour Offer Only the Beginning.

DETROIT, Dec. 7.—(AP) A government investigation of General Motors Corp. under anti-trust laws was disclosed today while the corporation and the C.I.O. United Auto Workers wrangled in their wage dispute.

The Department of Justice in Washington confirmed a union announcement that it was inquiring into operations of the corporation, which has been crippled for 17 days by a strike. The union had asked such a probe.

Representatives of the corporation and union meanwhile recessed a bargaining session until Monday, reporting little progress in the attempt to settle the U.A.W.-C.I.O.'s demand for a 30 per cent wage rate increase within General Motors' present price structure.

G-M Is Silent

GM officials said there would be no company statement on today's negotiating session, but Walter Reuther, UAW vice president, told a press conference:

"The 13½ cent an hour offer is only the beginning. The corporation will give more and more and more and finally will wrap it up and we'll all go back to work."

He referred to GM's Thursday offer to reinstate the 13½ cent increase, which the UAW rejected shortly before the strike was called at GM plants in 20 states.

As today's bargaining session was going on, the office of President R. J. Thomas of the union announced that Attorney General Tom B. Clark was investigating General Motors with a view to determining whether GM was in violation of anti-trust laws.

Clark declined comment, but the Justice department said the attorney general had sent this telegram to Thomas: "The department has been investigating several anti-trust cases of the type you mention, among which is General Motors. Glad to receive any additional information."

The auto union had asked the investigation to determine if General Motors held a "monopoly" in view of its manufacture of auto parts for competing car manufacturers. GM had proposed reopening of its parts plants during the strike for the benefit of other manufacturers.

A General Motors spokesman said there would be no comment from the corporation regarding the investigation.

In requesting an inquiry last week, Thomas said that General Motors, through its request for continued parts operations, had shown "strong corroboratory evidence" for a union contention that GM held a "monopoly position" in the auto industry.

Reuther said that in the bargaining session today the corporation refused to discuss wages on "ability to pay" even should the union abandon its demand that GM open its books in the discussion or if car prices were kept out of the parleys.

Maintains Original Position

Declaring that was the "farthest the union has gone" in the negotiations, Reuther said, however, that the U.A.W.-C.I.O. was not abandoning its original position.

"We wanted to see if progress could be made by discussing the wage question only," Reuther said.

President Thomas, who participated in the discussions, was asked if any progress had been made. He replied "you can't make much progress as long as the corporation refuses to discuss ability to pay."

General Motors has maintained throughout the negotiations that its books are its private property and need not be opened to the union.

There was no statement from General Motors today regarding the conference. Representing GM were Harry W. Anderson, vice president, and Harry B. Coen, director of Labor Relations.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O.'s request for an investigation of General Motors by the Department of Justice had followed upon GM's proposal that the union permit men to return to work in parts plants.

A reply from the union—which Thomas later said was not written by himself although signed in his name—declared the union would inquire to determine if such operations were needed to keep other car makers in production.

Objections arose from several locals of the U.A.W.-C.I.O. against a reopening of any parts plants, and there since has been no action to set any of them back into production.

A union public relations man wrote the letter, Thomas said. There has been no further discussion of the letter incident by union officials.

Denies Illegal Picketing

The question of "illegal picketing" at struck GM plants was reported discussed without any agreement at today's session. The union has denied that any of its picketing has been illegal.

Hopes for a settlement returning 213,000 GM workers to the job received no encouragement prior to today's negotiations beyond a report from the union leadership that "another step forward" had been made.

U. S. IS REPORTED INVESTIGATING G. M.

Detroit, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—R. J. Thomas, president of the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers Union, said today that the Department of Justice was investigating the General Motors Corporation with a view to determining if G. M. was in violation of anti-trust laws. Thomas said that he had been so advised by Attorney-General Tom B. Clark.

The union had asked the Department of Justice for such an investigation in connection, Thomas said, with the statement of General Motors that other automobile manufacturers were dependent on G. M. for parts.

General Motors had pointed to its parts manufacturing for other companies in the course of discussions over the U. A. W.-C. I. O.'s strike.

Thomas said that he had received this wire from Clark:

"The Department (of Justice) has been investigating several anti-trust cases of the type you mention, among which is General Motors. Glad to receive any further information."

Optimism On G.M. Strike Continues

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP)—An air of optimism for early settlement of auto industry wage disputes continued to pervade Detroit today despite union rejection of another General Motors offer.

The CIO United Automobile Workers again sent its top officials into conference with the corporation, whose offer of a 13½-cent-an-hour increase was turned down yesterday at the first regular negotiating session since the G.M. strike was called November 21.

Two Views Of G.M. Offer

H. W. Anderson, General Motors vice president, termed the proposal a "reinstatement" of the prestrike offer of approximately ten per cent, which he said would boost wages of G.M. workers to 30 per cent above the January (1941) level.

However, Walter P. Reuther, UAW vice president, estimated that it would raise the average rate of $1.15 an hour by 11.7 per cent and described it as "a better offer than the one made prior to the strike."

Ability-To-Pay Issue

Union officials, still demanding 30 per cent above present levels and within the present price structure, said the company's refusal to discuss "ability to pay" was the chief stumbling block as the wage parleys resumed.

A citizens' committee of fourteen meanwhile came to the union's support to the extent of saying the use of wage-price-profits relations in settling the dispute would not deprive management of its rights.

The setting of actual prices "remains a managerial function," the committee said, but "at a time when there is a threat of inflation the level of prices becomes a matter of legitimate public concern."

House Tackles Truman Labor Proposal Monday

Washington, Dec. 7. (AP) — The House Labor Committee today voted to start public hearings next Monday on legislation setting up fact-finding boards to handle labor disputes.

Representative Ramspeck (D., Ga.), acting chairman during the illness of Representative Norton (D., N.J.), said the hearings would be brief in the hope the committee could complete consideration of the legislation and send it to the House before Christmas.

Witnesses called to testify next week included officials of the National Association of Manufacturers, the United States Chamber of Commerce, the heads of major unions, and teh Secretary of Labor.

Senate hearings on the proposal will start next Wednesday.

MRS. LUCE FAVORS TRUMAN PROPOSAL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7. — Rep. Clare Boothe Luce hopes that some legislation will result from President Truman's recommendation that Congress enact a law granting authority to the President to set up fact-finding boards to delve into labor disputes of national importance.

"The President's proposal was eminently moderate," Mrs. Luce said. "It is far less punitive than most other proposals and represents the minimum labor legislation that could be expected at this time. I hope some legislation will come of it."

FULL JOB PLAN CONDEMNED BY HOUSE GROUP

Committee Calls Original

DEC 8 - 1941

Administration Bill Blow at Free Enterprise.

Washington, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—The House Expenditures Committee assailed today as "a gigantic and unworkable proposal" the administration's full employment bill passed by the Senate.

In a formal report paving the way for a House vote next week on a substitute measure, the committee said it "unqualifiedly rejects" any theory "under which employment through private enterprise would be perfunctory and the guaranty would really rest on Federal investment and expenditure." Adoption of such a theory, the committee said, would entail continued deficit spending and destroy the United States system of free competitive enterprise.

The Senate bill, the committee contended, would commit the Government to a policy of expenditure and investment "that will lead to unbalanced budgets in guaranteeing employment," and "citizens will be misled." The issue, the report declared, is "either private enterprise or stateism," and Congress must decide which is will be "if private enterprise is to function."

The substitute provides that in periods of existing or threatened widespread unemployment, Government can stimulate private enterprise by expanding normal public works, encouraging the States to do likewise, and making loans to promote employment through private enterprise. It calls for an annual report by the President on economic conditions affecting employment, with a joint congressional committee to recommend action based on the report.

Act Forbade Hiring Negroes: Truman

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—President Truman today wrote Charles H. Houston, resigned member of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, that it would have contravened an act of Congress to issue an order forcing the Capital Transit Company here to hire Negro operators for its streetcars and busses.

Houston, a Negro, quit the FEPC in protest when such an order was withheld in connection with the recent Government seizure of the Washington transportation system.

Text Of Letter

The President's letter:

"Dear Mr. Houston:

"Your letter of December 3 has been received.

"When it was found necessary under the wartime powers conferred upon the President by the Congress, to seize the Capital Transit property, the conditions under which the property was to be operated were the same as those of any other property so seized. The law requires that when the Government seizes a property under such circumstances, it 'shall be operated under the terms and conditions of employment which were in effect at the time possession of such plant, mine or facility was so taken.'

Praises FEPC Aims

"In view of this apparent contradiction between the law and the order which the Fair Employment Practice Committee proposed to issue, it was thought best to suggest that the order be temporarily postponed. The property was not seized for the purpose of enforcing the aims of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, laudable as these aims are, but to guarantee transportation for the citizens of Washington and vicinity.

"As anxious as I am for Congress to pass legislation for a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee, I cannot contravene an act of Congress in order to carry out the present committee's aims. Under the circumstance, it was felt the issuance of the proposed order would prove injurious to the accomplishments desired by all of us who are honestly interested in promoting the welfare of minority groups.

"I regret that you were unwilling to approach the problem from this viewpoint. As suggested in your letter, your resignation is accepted, to be effective immediately.

Very sincerely yours,
"HARRY S. TRUMAN."

MRS. WOODHOUSE FOR HIGHER PAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—(AP) Higher wages to maintain the level of wartime "take home" pay are not a gift to the worker, but real insurance for continued industrial prosperity, Representative Chase Going Woodhouse (D-Conn.) declared today.

Speaking at a national emergency meeting on jobs and security, the Congresswoman said:

"Without higher wages industry will continue to do well for a few years, until the accumulated deferred demand for goods at home and abroad is satisfied. Then we will have a larger edition of 1929 and all of us will suffer."

Mrs. Woodhouse told her audience there is little use in talking about full employment or high level of employment, of full production, or of mass production "unless we lay a firm basis for mass markets in higher wages, that is, adequate purchasing power."

"But in talking about wages we must never forget the other side of the equation—prices," she added.

"During the transition period of the coming year we must retain price controls on goods in short supply. We must curb inflationary factors. Especially we must control, price controls on short building materials and place limits on selling prices of dwelling houses in areas where housing is critically short."

WAR MATERIAL WASTE CHARGED

Dumping of Vast Quantities of Surplus Goods Reported.

Washington, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Representative Latham (R.-N. Y.) said today that he had learned from a "thoroughly reliable source that vast quantities of surplus war property are being wantonly destroyed" in the southwestern Pacific. Calling in the House for a vigorous investigation so that those at fault may be punished, Latham, a former naval lieutenant, said that information had reached him that the supplies had been "dumped in the sea or burned at Noumea, New Caledonia."

Quoting a letter from his informant, he read: "'Every day dozens of vehicles and boats of all sorts, and millions of dollars of material, are thrown into the sea or burned.'"

He introduced a resolution calling for the appointment of a seven-member committee, with power of subpœna, to investigate the reports of the destruction. Latham's charges paralleled allegations which have appeared in one Australian newspaper to the effect that Americans abandoning bases in the Pacific area are "dumping into the sea, or are burning, millions of pounds worth of gear."

Following the publication if this Australian item, Senator Mead (D.-N. Y.), chairman of the Senate special defense investigating committee, told reporters that his committee had asked the War and Navy Department for full reports on such assertions that surplus war material had been destroyed in any fashion in the Pacific theater.

Latham's request for an investigation of the Army's handling of surplus property came at the same time that Representative McGregor (R.-Ohio) offered a bill to investigate the stockpiles of all Federal agencies to determine if they would yield building materials to help ease the acute housing situation.

"In this period of housing shortage," he said in a statement, "it is necessary that we make available to the public all possible building material. I can not help feel that some Federal agencies have the necessary critical materials on hand far in excess of their emmediate needs."

AUSSIES DENY FOOD DUMPING

Reports On U.S. Goods In New Guinea Contradicted

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—The War Department issued tonight a statement from the Australian Purchasing Committee in New Guinea denying reports that large stocks of American army supplies, including food were being destroyed in the Fanshaven area of New Guinea.

Representative Latham (R., N.Y.) told the House today that he had been advised "by a thoroughly reliable source" that much surplus war property was being "wantonly destroyed" in the Southwest Pacific. He called for an investigation.

Information In Letter

A former navy lieutenant, Latham said his information came via a letter.

In answer to inquiries about a Melbourne radio report concerning alleged destruction of supplies, Army headquarters for the Western Pacific cabled here the Australian committee statement. It said:

"The Australian Purchasing Committee in New Guinea regrets that through an irresponsible and unjustifiable piece of journalistic reporting statements of destruction of United States stores and equipment at Finshaven had been published in New Guinea and Australia.

Declared Unfounded

"All members of the Australian Government party are unanimous in stating that the allegations were unfounded and were made without justification and without attempting to obtain verification from United States Government authorities, or Australian Army and Navy authorities at Finshaven.

"All members of the Australian Government party agree that interest of the United States in regard to supplies and equipment at Finshaven are being effectively safeguarded in the face of considerable difficulties, the least of which is reduced personnel."

S.P.A. Proposes Smaller Output Of Magnesium

Favors Closing 7 of the 13 Federally Owned Plants; Cites Private Production

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Surplus Property Administration recommended today that seven of thirteen government-owned magnesium plants be taken out of production. It said the other six should be held in partial production or on a stand-by basis. Urging this in a report to Congress, S. P. A. said the nation's privately owned plants can produce sufficient magnesium to meet estimated consumption in the next few years.

The government's investment in the thirteen Federally owned plants is $370,000,000, S. P. A. said, adding that they represent 90 per cent of the country's total magnesium producing capacity of 293,000 tons a year. S. P. A. said the total war-expanded capacity to produce the lightweight metal is ten times as much as most estimates of annual peace-time consumption.

"To aggravate this situation," S. P. A. observed, "the government owns magnesium metal and scrap equal to about two years' normal consumption."

S. P. A. recommended that seven plants which cost the government about $264,000,000 "be sold or leased for purposes other than magnesium production." If no buyers are found, they should be dismantled or converted into warehouse space, the agency said.

R. F. C. to Sell Two Plants

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP).—Representative John W. Murphy, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, said late today he was informed the Reconstruction Finance Corp. had decided on purchasers for two surplus war plants in Scranton, Pa. Mr. Murphy told a reporter his information is that a B-29 bomber wing plant has been sold to a Scranton civic group for $1,200,000 and that the R. F. C. has agreed to sell a Signal Corps equipment plant to General Electric Corp. for $400,000.

President May Restore Priorities On Building

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—President Truman was reported today to be planning to restore building materials to a priorities system in an effort to break a bottleneck in home building.

Officials of Government agencies familiar with the program under consideration said it had been agreed that there must be a move quickly to get home construction rolling.

News Expected Soon

Government agencies preparing the program hoped to have it ready for announcement by Mr. Truman at his news conference scheduled this afternoon. But a spokesman for the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion said at noon there was "considerable doubt" whether it could be whipped into shape in time.

The purpose of the plan would be to make sure materials get into the hands of contractors who want to build homes.

"As things stand now," said one official, "virtually all materials and construction labor are going to commercial and industrial building projects. We just are not getting homes built."

May Be For Cheaper Houses

There is a possibility that any priorities set up may earmark materials for low and moderately priced houses only. One top figure which has been mentioned is the $8,000 sale ceiling which was in effect for homes built during the war.

Also in the picture, it was reported, is a preference rating for veterans wishing to build homes.

The plan is not to prohibit commercial and industrial construction, but to allow it only in cases where materials are available after home needs have been met, officials said.

Want Controls Back

They added that the home construction industry has been one of the chief advocates of restoring priorities.

"When the war ended," one official said, "the home builders were as eager to ditch controls as the rest of the construction industry.

"Now they can't get materials and many of them are besieging the Government to do something about it."

All Priorties Scrapped

Wartime materials priorities, which had channeled lumber and other supplies to essential construction, were scrapped shortly after Japan surrendered.

As was the case during the war, any new priorities would be invoked under the second War Powers Act.

Operation of such a program might be delegated to either the National Housing Agency or the Civilian Production Administration, or to both.

Declares Slums Are Costly

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP)—A theory that slums cost more in the long run than good housing was advanced today by William J. Guste, chairman of the National Public Housing Conference and counsel for the Housing Authority of New Orleans.

He told the Senate Banking and Currency Committee that the Ellender-Taft-Wagner Housing bill "is one of the most vital measures ever to come before Congress."

The bill, designed to encourage construction of low-cost homes, would put the country's housing program under a single agency.

30.24-32221

Mrs. Samuel I. Rosenman, chairman of the National Committee on Housing, endorsed the principle of the legislation and said it would be "sheer folly" to try to meet the housing problem without the help of a single national agency.

Mr. Guste said his organization believed that "a national housing policy worthy of the name is sound business, good government and wise social policy."

Veterans' Medical Aid Approved By House

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—The House today passed unanimously legislation to set up a department of medicine and surgery in the Veterans Administration.

Passage was by 206 to 0. Senate action also is required.

This bill would abolish the present medical setup in the VA. The new department would be headed by a chief medical director, with a salary of $12,000.

The legislation removes from Civil Service requirements the appointments of doctors, dentists and nurses for the department.

Pass Training Plan, Meyer Asks Congress

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Eugene Meyer, publisher of the Washington Post, told a Congressional committee today peacetime military training is necessary "not for the purpose of winning wars but for making people respect our known strength."

"There is no respect for unknown and invisible strength," Meyer told the House Military Committee in support of President Truman's request for one year of such training for American youth.

"The misfortune of the world was that the Axis powers did not know they were going to be beaten before they started. Had they known it, they would not have started," said Meyer.

Church Representative Speaks

On the other hand, the committee heard the Rev. Charles F. Boss, Jr., Chicago, representing the Commission on World Peace of the Methodist Church, assert the belief that "security, strength, successful international negotiations and manpower are not best attained by the means proposed."

The commission opposed the training proposal, he said, before the United States "has undertaken through international agreement and action to make such training unnecessary."

More Handicapped Get Jobs

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP).—Placement of handicapped workers rose sharply during October, Robert C. Goodwin, United States Employment Service Director, said today. Placements totaled 18,639, a gain of 24 per cent over September. Of this total, 11,409 were disabled veterans, an increase of 30 per cent.

U.S. Military Governor Named For Korean Zone

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Archer L. Lerch has been appointed military governor of the American occupation zone in Korea by Col. Loren F. Parmley, nounced today.

Lerch, a native of Sumner, Neb., has been the provost marshal general of the Army. Brig. Gen. B. M. Bryan will become acting provost marshal general.

SPRUANCE TO HEAD NAVAL WAR COLLEGE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7. — (AP) The Navy revealed today that Admiral Raymond A. Spruance, now commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, would be transferred soon to command of the naval war college at Newport, R. I.

Secretary Forrestal recently disclosed plans to name Admiral John H. Towers, now commander of the Fifth fleet, to succeed Admiral Spruance "eventually" as Pacific fleet commander.

Navy officials said no specific date had been set for the change.

Four Named for Vice-Admirals.

Washington, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—President Truman today nominated four rear admirals for promotion to rank of vice-admiral. They include William H. P. Blandy of Washington, who recently reported as deputy chief of naval operations for special weapons.

Blandy is a native of New York city.

McVay Court Martial Recessed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP).—A Navy general court martial trying Captain Charles B. McVay 3d took a four-day recess today when the judge advocate Captain Thomas J. Ryan jr., announced no addition prosecution witnesses were available to testify. The hearing, dealing with the sinking of the cruiser Indianapolis, which Captain McVay commanded off the Philippines last July, will resume next Tuesday.

Inquiry Is Promised

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Army was at a loss tonight to understand why travel priorities to the Pacific have not been issued to fifteen big league baseball players.

Col. Frederick H. Warburg, chief of athletics and recreation in special services, said that he will "try to find out what the trouble is."

Milk, Soap, Coal, Cloth Were To Be Rationed

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—So you thought rationing was tough, eh? It could have been worse.

OPA had made plans to ration clothing, soap, milk, automobile batteries and coal. It even had peeked at the possibility of rationing gas and electricity.

A former OPA official, Pat French reminisced today about what might have been. Now an employé of the Budget Bureau, French helped to draft ration programs.

Wasn't A Simple Task

The first thing you must understand about rationing, French says, is this:

Some official didn't just sit down and say, "Well, let's ration shoes today." It wasn't that simple.

Statistics had to be run down, trapped and analyzed. Production figures were interpreted. Possible effects of the plan were debated.

That is why OPA did so much advance work, French says. It always was afraid that the War Production Board or the War Food Administration or some other agency would decide some product should be rationed. And OPA didn't want to be caught with its plans down.

A, B, C Milk Cards

French gave a couple of illustrations of what OPA had up its sleeve.

May be you didn't like the A card on the old bus. Well, you might have had another one, for milk.

French said one plan called for A, B and C milk cards. One for adults. One for growing children. One for babies.

ART MASTERPIECES GO TO STORAGE

Washington, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—A shipment of paintings from damaged or destroyed German museums, which arrived in New York yesterday, will be stored in the National Gallery of Art here Sunday.

The War Department said today that the paintings were brought to this country in accordance with a White House statement last September that the Army would transport certain perishable art treasures to this country for safekeeping for the German people. The pictures will be returned to the museums when conditions in Europe warrant.

The masterpieces, which included works by Botticelli, Van Eyck, Memling, Durer, Raphael, Titian, Giogione, Rembrandt and Rubens, arrived aboard the S. S. James Parker.

The National Gallery of Art, through the chairman of its board, Harlan Fiske Stone, has arranged for the storage and protection of the paintings while they are in this country. The Army said that "it is not contemplated that any of these works of art will be exhibited to the public at present."

Greatest Search On for Flyers

248 Planes and 18 Ships Hunt Missing Navy Men—Freak Squall Clew to Fate.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Great sea and air fleets were ordered out today to scan 100,000 square miles of the Atlantic in a last-chance effort to rescue twenty-seven men who disappeared with a formation of five torpedo bombers and a missing search plane.

The Navy alone ordered 248 planes into the air, while eighteen surface craft—including the baby flattop U. S. S. Solomons—numerous merchant ships and other searchers made it probably the biggest rescue effort of peacetime.

Two clews seemed sufficiently definite to remove some of the mystery that cloaked the disappearance of the entire formation of bombers, carrying fourteen men, and the big Martin rescue craft that joined them in the Atlantic's limbo Wednesday with thirteen men on board.

Saw Explosion at Sea.

One was word from a passing ship, the S. S. Gaines Mills, that it saw an explosion at sea off New Smyrna Beach at 7:50 P. M. Wednesday, and what appeared to be an airplane falling. That may have been the fate of the PBM search craft. The other clew was a report by the airport weather station at Miami that a large area of turbulent air rolled out of a storm centered over Georgia, swept over Jacksonville about noon and reached Miami by nightfall.

A meteorological freak—squalls on the surface, 40-mile winds at 1,000 feet, and full hurricane of 75 miles an hour at 8,000 feet—was recorded at 4 P. M. Such a development could easily have carried the torpedo planes miles out of their practice area.

Crash in Argentina Kills 14.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 7 (A. P.)—The Argentine police in Corrientes province confirmed reports today that the burned wreckage of an American C-47 transport plane, missing since Monday, had been found twenty miles south of Colonia Pellegrini, with all fourteen occupants dead.

The plane was carrying members of a United States geographic mission from Asuncion, Paraguay, to Montevideo, Uruguay.

[The War Department in Washington declined to release the names of those aboard the plane pending notification of next of kin.]

NAVY IDENTIFIES 27 MISSING FLYERS

Miami, Fla., Dec. 7 (A. P.).—Fourteen officers and men aboard five Navy torpedo bombers missing over the Atlantic since Wednesday night, and thirteen members of the crew of a plane lost while searching for the bombers, were identified today by Seventh Naval District Public Relations officers.

The Navy listed personnel aboard the bombers, which vanished over the sea after leaving Fort Lauderdale Naval Air Station on a routine training flight, as:

TAYLOR, Charles C., lieut., U. S. N. R., Corpus Christi, Tex.
PARPART, Walter Reed Jr., arm 3/c, 224 96th st., Brooklyn.
DEVLIN, George F., aom 3/c, 988 Jefferson st., Brooklyn.
BOSSI, Joseph Tipton, ens., U. S. N. R., Arkansas City, Kan.
THELANDER, Herman Arthur, s/1, Kimbree, Minn.
VALUK, Bert Edward Jr., s/1, Bloomfield, N. J.
GARBER, Forrest J., 2d lt., U. S. M. C., New Ulm, Minn.
LIGHTFOOT, William L., pfc., U. S. M. C., Lexington, Ill.
STIVERS, George W., capt., U. S. M. C., Piedmont, Mo.
GRUEBBL, Robert Peter, pfc., U. S. M. C., 6659 Grand ave., Maspeth, N. Y.
GALLIVAN, Robert Francis, sgt., U. S. M. C., Northampton, Mass.
POWERS, Edward Joseph Jr., capt., U. S. M. C., 300 Haywood ave., Mount Vernon, N. Y.
THOMPSON, Howell Orrin, s/s, U. S. M. C., Chicago.
PAONESSA, George Richard, s/s, U. S. M. C., 160 Waverly ave., Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Authorities identified officers and men missing aboard a big Martin plane which set out Wednesday night from the Banana River Naval Air Station to search for the overdue bombers as follows:

JEFFREY, W. M., lt., (j. g.), U. S. N., pilot, Los Angeles, Cal.
CONE, N. G. lt., (j. g.), U. S. N. R., co-pilot, Gainesville, Fla.
ALLEN, R. N., ens., U. S. N. R., Sumter, S. C.

Capt. Charles Kendall Wins Bronze Star

San Diego, Dec. 7 (AP)—For achievement as commander of a destroyer in action in the Pacific, Capt. Charles H. Kendall, of Baltimore, Md., was awarded today the Bronze Star Medal.

The 11th Naval District announced that Kendall was cited by Vice Admiral Frederick C. Sherman for "alertness and professional skill" in action from last March 14, to May 14, during which time his ship participated in strikes on various enemy island outposts and elements of the Japanese fleet.

Kendall now resides at Coronado, Cal.

Edgar Snow Barred By Chinese Government

Philadelphia, Dec. 7 (AP)—Editor Ben Hibbs of the Saturday Evening Post said today that Associate Editor Edgar Snow has been barred from China by civil authorities and that protests are being lodged with Washington.

Hibbs made public a message from Manila by Snow stating he was "rejected by the Chinese Government on the laconic grounds that I am 'unacceptable to China,' and adding:

"Kuomintang authorities have informed our high command that they have a black list of still other reporters of repute whom they intend to keep out of China."

Hibbs sent the message to President Truman, the War and State departments and also asked the Chinese Embassy to intervene.

10,000 Jeeps for Veterans

CINCINNNATI, Dec. 7 (AP).—Approximately 10,000 new or reconditioned jeeps are available to returned service men "for business purposes only," at prices ranging to a top of $782, the Office of Surplus Property announced today. If veterans satisfy the Smaller War Plants Corporation regional office here that they are eligible, they will receive a "certificate of eligibility," which must be turned over to the consumer goods division of the Office of Surplus Property, also in Cincinnati. The prospective purchaser then awaits allocation of a machine by Washington.

If You Know Nellie, Sailors Offer Reward

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP)—Thirty-two sentimental sailors are putting up $2 apiece as a reward for anyone who can answer their $64 question —who is "Nellie," and where is she?

Here's their story, as relayed from the South Pacific to the fleet home town news office here:

They're the 32 members of the after-engine crew of the light cruiser St. Louis. They attribute much of their good fortune in Leyte Gulf, off Okinawa and elsewhere to their unidentified pinup girl, "Nellie."

Her photograph was brought aboard in October, 1944, by Hubert W. Atkins, machinist's mate 3/c, of Rock Island, Ill., who obtained it in a baggage mixup at Yuma, Ariz.

So now, after admiring her photograph for more than a year, the crew members are looking for "Nellie." They want to "wine and dine" her.

Few Veterans Draw Idle Pay

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 7 (AP).—William H. Chestnut, Pennsylvania Secretary of Labor and Industry, said today only 15 per cent of discharged veterans in the state had drawn unemployment benefits under the G.I. Bill of Rights.

V. F. W. Elects Kennedy's Son

BOSTON, Dec. 7 (AP).—John P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, today was elected general chairman of the 1946 national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, to be held here next August. The younger Kennedy was twice decorated for heroism while a Navy P T boat commander during World War II.

QUICK GI RETURN PLEDGED

Eichelberger Says All 60-Pointers Will Be on Way Dec. 15

FORT SHAFTER, Hawaii, Dec. 7 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, flying home for his first Christmas with his wife since 1941, promised today "we are going to have all of our sixty-pointers afloat by Dec. 15."

The commander of the Eighth Army of Occupation in Japan, who is taking two high-point men home with him, added at a press conference:

"By early January we will have fifty-five-pointers on the way. Our higher-point men already have gone and we are ahead of our planned schedule."

VETERANS NAME KENNEDY

BOSTON, Dec. 7—(AP) John F. Kennedy, son of Joseph P. Kennedy, former ambassador to the Court of St. James, today was elected general chairman of the 1946 national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, to be held here next August. The younger Kennedy was twice decorated for heroism while a Navy P.T. boat commander during the Second World War.

WAR VETERANS ELIGIBLE

Big Six Votes for Immediate Welcome to Athletic Teams

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Big Six Conference Faculty Athletic Committee, in executive session today, voted to make all returning war veterans—with three exceptions—immediately eligible for competition in intercollegiate sports and stood by its rule permitting use of freshmen on varsity teams.

The action on eligibility, announced by Chairman Sam B. Shirky of Missouri, would bar from competition all students who have completed requirements for degrees, professional athletes, and those with a full three years of competition prior to Sept. 1, 1943.

Shirky said that all eligible veterans could have a total of "not to exceed four years of competition." Competition on teams while a member of the armed services, such as the Navy V-12 program, will not be charged against a veteran's playing time in the conference. (A year of competition is defined by the Six Six as "any competition in any recognized intercollegiate sport, however brief, within a college year.")

The athletic directors, working in separate executive session, expect to complete 1946 baseball and track schedules tomorrow.

Proposes New Credit Source for Veterans

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A. P.).—National Commander John Stelle of the American Legion today recommended creation of a secondary source of credit through which banks could discount loans made to veterans under the service men's readjustment act of 1944.

Stelle spoke at a conference with an American Banking Association committee discussing with Veterans Administration officials ways of speeding veterans' loan procedures.

SOLDIERS FROM MAINE ARE PRAISED BY WING

AUGUSTA, Me., Dec. 7—(AP) Maj. Gen. Leonard F. Wing of Rutland, Vt., said today he "always will cherish in my memory" his association with the Maine soldiers who served under him as commander of the 43rd division which he led through World War Two.

At the close of a three-day visit in Maine, General Wing presented to the state the World War Two battlefield colors of the 103rd Infantry regiment which, with the 152nd Field Artillery, comprised Maine's National Guard units in the 43rd. Colors of the 152nd previously had been presented in Bangor.

In accepting the colors for the state, Governor A. Hildreth cited "the selfless sacrifices made by a younger generation to uphold those same ideals for which their forebears fought and died."

Following his visit at the State capitol, General Wing was tendered receptions in Auburn and Portland.

Pilot and Bride Fly to Alaska

DENVER, Dec. 5 (AP)—A newly married former Army pilot and his bride took to the air today in a silver and blue airplane, bound for Anchorage, Alaska. Theron A. Smith and his wife, Maran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Davis Ackerly of Glen Cove, L. I., took off from Hayden Field in a twin-engine Army Cessna. Smith was at the controls of the plane, which he bought to do charter flying out of Anchorage, where the couple will live.

1,975 NAZI PRISONERS START JOURNEY HOME

CAMP SHANKS, N. Y., Dec. 7—(AP) A total of 1,975 German prisoners of war left here today by boat and bus for New York where they will board ships to be returned to their homeland. It was the largest contingent of prisoners to leave this military installation.

The camp public relations officer said all German prisoners of war in this country will have been returned to Germany by next April.

The prisoners will leave on the ships, Sigman, Huddleson and Norway Victory. Departure time was not disclosed.

The group included 42 mental cases, 321 litter cases, 738 ambulatory patients, 74 convalescents and 800 other prisoners, the camp public relations officer said.

Pikesville Vet First To Buy Farm In Md. With FSA Loan

Manchester, Md., Dec. 7 (AP)—John H. Dunn, of Pikesville, Md., took title to the Stefan farm here, purchasing it with the first veterans' farm ownership loan made in Maryland by the Farm Security Administration, the agency said today.

John D. Leatherman, State FSA director, declared the loan also was the first made in the Northeastern United States. Made under the provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, the loan must be repaid within 40 years at three per cent interest.

The 30-year-old veteran, discharged after a training accident at Camp Seibert, Ala., said he planned to put the 88-acre farm into production next spring. Dunn added that he intended to establish a 15-20-cow dairy in the remodeled stable and grow all possible live stock and poultry feed.

Grew Up On Farm

Dunn, who grew up on a dairy farm and worked as a tenant on a Bel Air farm before entering the service, said he turned to FSA for help after finding that other lending agencies required such a large down payment that he would have been short of funds for starting actual farming operations.

"As it is, I'll be able to equip and operate my farm on my own money next spring and even have a little left over in case I meet a few setbacks," the veteran said.

3 CRIPPLED SHIPS OUT OF DANGER

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(AP) The Navarchos Koundouriotis, a Greek freighter with 28 American servicemen aboard, was nudged into port here today by a rescue tug, and the Navy said it believed a second ship which had been reported in distress was safe in Bermuda.

Still another vessel, the Henry Ward Beecher, with 541 soldiers aboard, was expected to reach Bermuda tomorrow, the Navy said. It was being towed by a rescue tug. Meanwhile, there was no indication whether rescuers had succeeded in floating the 7,200-ton John Gibbons, aground off Cape Henry, Va.

The Koundouriotis and the Beecher dropped their propellors during rough seas, the Greek ship 320 miles out of New York, the American 510 miles off Bermuda. The other ship, the McCrary, reported boiler trouble, but was able to proceed to Bermuda under its own power, the Navy said.

The Army transport Saturnia left New York yesterday to pick up the soldiers from the McCrary and Beecher and bring them home in time for Christmas.

Troopship Returnees Report Students Favored Over Yanks

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Returnees aboard the troopship Torrens which arrived tonight, with 1,730 service men from Karachi, India, said that soldiers had been left behind to make room for 50 Indian students.

However, Capt. Robert E. Gibney, of Pittsburgh, transport commander, said the students had not been favored over the troops. He added that he was not authorized to make any further statement.

Tech. 5/g Robert Gerhart, of Akron, Ohio, a veteran of 26 months' service in the China-Burma-India theater, said he was one of thirteen given a choice of staying behind or sleeping on the deck on the trip home.

"It was a lousy deal all around," he said.

On Par With Troops

Sergt. Anthony Kaith, Chicago, said that Pfc. Raymond Ulmer of his outfit had been left behind.

The soldiers said there was no personal friction with the Indian students, and that statement was confirmed by G. K. Chugani, 23, of Sind, India, who plans to study agriculture at Michigan State College.

"We were treated on a par with the troops," Chugani said.

The State Department already has announced that further transport of Indian students to this country will be suspended until a substantial number of American soldiers have been returned from the India-Burma theater.

Battleships Come Home

Philadelphia, Dec. 7 (AP)—Two veteran battleships which fought their way from Pearl Harbor graveyard to World War II laurels came home today—the fourth anniversary of the Japanese sneak attack.

The ships, the California and the Tennessee, dropped anchor at the Philadelphia naval base for an indefinite visit on an inactive basis after a 15,000-mile cruise from Japan.

Jamming the rails of the vessels as they berthed were 4,000 officers and men, 46 per cent with packed gear ready for debarkation tomorrow and Navy discharges.

Redeployment Timetable

PARIS, Dec. 7 (AP).—Veterans of the 89th Infantry Division sailed today from Le Havre for the United States, the first elements of 10,000 members of the division to leave France. The remaining 5,000 troops of the division are being sent to Southampton for redeployment from England.

Headquarters of the theater service forces gave this status of other units scheduled for redeployment:

75th Infantry Division—First elements at home.

79th Infantry and 12th Armored Divisions—At sea.

26th Infantry Division—Arriving at Calas staging area near Marseille.

90th Infantry Division—Now in the Calas staging area.

82d Air-Borne Division—Scheduled to arrive at Le Havre between Dec. 11 and 19. Advance elements to sail directly from Le Havre and others to go to the United Kingdom.

16th Corps—Now in Le Havre staging area.

36th Infantry Division—First elements at sea. Remainder in Calas staging area.

Alerted for shipment home but not yet moved to redeployment centers—29th, 100th, 84th, 80th and 94th Infantry Divisions, 2d Armored Division and 22d Corps Headquarters.

The Army Port of Embarkation at Seattle estimated 100,000 soldiers would debark in Puget Sound ports and the Navy estimated an additional 75,000 of its men would arrive at Tacoma and Bremerton this month. They will arrive in 150 vessels.

Officials of the New York Port of Embarkation appealed again yesterday to friends and relatives of returning service men and women not to try to meet them at the piers. In past weeks the port has been flooded with requests for visitor passes and harried personnel have been kept from their jobs of speeding the troops to separation centers, Army officials said.

Because of the uncertainty of ship arrivals, "Stay at home and wait for your relatives to call you," advised Maj. Gen. Clarence H. Kells, New York port commander. He added: "We have set up a streamlined system which rushed the men straight from overseas to separation centers near their homes. At the request of the men themselves this system allows no time for stop-overs in New York."

NIGHT LEAD FOREIGN MINISTERS

LONDON, DEC 7-(AP)-A FOREIGN OFFICE SPOKESMAN SAID TONIGHT THAT FOREIGN MINISTERS OF RUSSIA, GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES WOULD MEET IN MOSCOW DEC. 15 PRIMARILY TO DISCUSS RUSSIAN VIEWS ON AN ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION.

THE SPOKESMAN SAID THAT LONDON WAS ONLY WAITING TO SETTLE A RELEASE TIME WITH WASHINGTON BEFORE THE TWO CAPITALS ISSUED FORMAL STATEMENTS ON THE MEETING.

A29

THE MAIN PURPOSE OF THE MEETING, THE SPOKESMAN SAID, WIL BE TO GET THE RUSSIAN VIEW ON HOW TO WORK OUT SOME FORMULA FOR DEALING WITH ATOMIC ENERGY WITHIN THE FRAMEWORK OF THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION.

VARIOUS OTHER SUBJECTS WILL BE DISCUSSED, BUT THEY HAVE NOT YET BEEN DECIDED UPON SPECIFICALLY. THE FOREIGN OFFICE OFFICIAL EMPHASIZED THAT THE THREE FOREIGN MINISTERS WOULD CONDUCT "PURELY PREPARATORY" TALKS.

A30

FRANCE AND CHINA HAVE BEEN INFORMED, HE SAID, BUT RUSSIAN FOREIGN COMMISSAR MOLOTOV, U.S.SECRETARY OF STATE BYRNES AND BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY BEVIN ARE NOT WILLING TO DISCUSS ANYTHING WHICH AFFECTS FRANCE DIRECTLY. HE MADE NO MENTION OF CHINA IN THIS CONNECTION.

THE SPOKESMAN SAID, "WE WILL NOT DISCUSS ANYTHING ABOUT GERMANY," AND ADDED THAT THE MEETING WAS IN LINE WITH THE YALTA DECLARATION PROVIDING FOR QUARTERLY REUNIONS OF FOREIGN MINISTERS OF THE BIG THREE POWERS.

THESE ARE DISTINCT FROM MEETINGS OF THE FIVE POWERS---RUSSIA, CHINA, GREAT BRITAIN, FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES---HE CONTINUED, AND DECLARED THE FORTHCOMING MOSCOW PARLEY WOULD NOT AFFECT THE FIVE-POWER COUNCIL OF FOREIGN MINISTERS.

THE FIVE-POWER COUNCIL MET IN LONDON THIS FALL IN A SESSION MARRED BY SHARP DIFFERENCES ON THE DRAFTING OF BALKAN PEACE TREATIES AND BY RUSSIAN OBJECTIONS TO THE PARTICIPATION OF FRANCE AND CHINA IN SUCH TREATY MAKING.

LONDON, DEC. 7-(AP)-THE HOUSE OF COMMONS REJECTED A CONSERVATIVE PARTY MOTION OF CENSURE AGAINST THE LABOR GOVERNMENT BY A VOTE OF 381-TO-197 LAST NIGHT.

THE DEBATE WAS HIGHLIGHTED BY A VERBAL CLASH BETWEEN PRIME MINISTER CLEMENT ATTLEE AND HIS PREDECESSOR, WINSTON CHURCHILL, NOW LEADER OF "HIS MAJESTY'S LOYAL OPPOSITION." CHURCHILL, WHO HAD INTRODUCED THE CENSURE MOTION, DECLARED THAT BRITAIN WAS BEING LED "DAY BY DAY NEARER DISASTER." HE ACCUSED THE LABOR GOVERNMENT OF HAVING "FETTERED AND HOBBLED" INDUSTRY AND ENTERPRISE, AND OF FAILING IN ITS RECONVERSION AND DEMOBILIZATION PROGRAM.

ATTLEE REPLIED THAT THE GOVERNMENT WAS CARRYING OUT ITS SOCIALIZATION PROGRAM IN LINE WITH THE PLATFORM ON WHICH IT HAD BEEN ELECTED AND THAT THE LABOR PARTY WAS PURSUING THE DEMOBILIZATION PLANS ADVOCATED BY CHURCHILL HIMSELF. HE ADDED THAT NO LESS THAN 80 NEW FACTORIES WERE BEING BUILT FOR PEACETIME PRODUCTION.

PARIS, DEC 7-(AP)-A FRENCH FOREIGN OFFICE SPOKESMAN SAID YESTERDAY HE COULD NOT BELIEVE THAT THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT MEANT, IN CONSIDERING THREE-POWER CONTROL OF GERMANY, THAT IT WOULD VIOLATE AN AGREEMENT TO WHICH IT HAD AFFIXED ITS SIGNATURE.

THE STATEMENT WAS MADE IN COMMENT ON A WASHINGTON PRESS CONFERENCE WEDNESDAY AT WHICH SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES F.BYRNES SAID THAT IF FRANCE CONTINUED TO OPPOSE MEASURES FOR THE CENTRALIZATION OF GERMANY THE UNITED STATES WOULD BE WILLING TO GO AHEAD WITH RUSSIA AND GREAT BRITAIN, WITHOUT FRANCE.

THE AGREEMENT REFERRED TO WAS AN ACCORD SIGNED IN BERLIN LAST JUNE THAT DECISIONS OF THE ALLIED CONTROL COMMISSION IN BERLIN MUST BE UNANIMOUS.

FRANCE HAS TOLD THE ALLIES THAT SHE DOES NOT WANT THE RUHR AND RHINELAND INCLUDED IN THE CENTRALIZATION PROJECT. CONSEQUENTLY SHE HAS REFUSED TO GIVE HER CONSENT TO THE CONTROL COUNCIL'S PLAN FOR CENTRALIZATION.

ASKED WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF THE ALLIES DECIDE TO SCRAP THE UNANIMITY AGREEMENT AND SET UP A CENTRALIZED GERMANY WITHOUT FRENCH CONSENT, THE FRENCH FOREIGN OFFICE SPOKESMAN SAID:

"WELL, THAT WILL FINISH OUR FAITH IN ANY ALLIED AGREEMENT. IF THEY ASK US TO SIGN ANY FUTURE AGREEMENTS WE WILL SAY, 'ALL RIGHT, BUT NATURALLY THESE AGREEMENTS DON'T MEAN ANYTHING ANYMORE.'"

"AMERICA WOULD HARDLY DARE TO SEND ITS FLEET BEYOND HAWAII, AS IT WOULD THEN BE THREATENED WITH DESTRUCTION BY THE JAPANESE FLEET," AND "SURPRISE INTERVENTION BY JAPAN IS BOUND TO KEEP AMERICA OUT OF THE WAR."

IF "THE AMERICANS SHOULD BE CARELESS ENOUGH" TO SEND THEIR FLEET BEYOND HAWAII, IT WOULD GIVE THE AXIS ITS BIGGEST CHANCE TO END THE WAR QUICKLY.

A LANDING BY AMERICANS IN EUROPE "IS POSSIBLE, BUT AFRICA IS TOO FAR REMOVED."

U.S. ENTRY INTO THE WAR WOULD "ADD UP FOR PRACTICAL PURPOSES TO CREATION OF AMERICAN AIR BASES IN ENGLAND," BUT GERMAN AIR STRENGTH WOULD BE SUPERIOR.

"THE WAR HAS BEEN WON TODAY MILITARILY, ECONOMICALLY AND POLITICALLY."

LANDSBERG, GERMANY, DEC 7-(AP)-BLAME FOR UNSANITARY CONDITIONS FOUND AT THE DISPLACED PERSONS CAMP HERE HAS BEEN LAID ALMOST EQUALLY TO THE INMATES THEMSELVES AND UNRRA AUTHORITIES BY AN INSPECTION GROUP OF FOUR HIGH AMERICAN OFFICIALS.

THE GROUP, HEADED BY LT. GEN. WALTER BEDELL SMITH, U.S. ARMY CHIEF OF STAFF IN THE EUROPEAN THEATER, FOUND 6,200 HOMELESS JEWS LIVING IN QUARTERS DESIGNED FOR 4,200, WITH SANITARY CONDITIONS SO BAD THAT SMITH TOLD A.A. GLASSGOLD, THE UNRRA CAMP DIRECTOR, (OF 22 WEST 23RD ST., NEW YORK;) "I WOULD BE ASHAMED."

DEC 8-1945

SMITH HAD JUST INSPECTED BARRACKS WHERE HUMAN EXCREMENT LITTERED SOME OF THE ROOMS. THE GENERAL LATER TOLD A COMMITTEE OF THE CAMP'S INMATES THAT "YOU FOLKS ARE NOT DOING YOUR PART TO KEEP THE PLACE SANITARY."

THE INVESTIGATION GREW OUT OF CHARGES BY LEE SROLE, THE CAMP'S WELFARE OFFICER, THAT THE INMATES WERE UNDERFED, ILL-CLOTHED, OVERCROWDED IN UNFIT QUARTERS AND MENACED BY THE THREAT OF A "DISASTROUS EPIDEMIC." SROLE, WHO ANNOUNCED HIS RESIGNATION WHEN MAKING THE CHARGES, SAID LAST NIGHT HE HAD RECONSIDERED AND WOULD STAY ON THE JOB.

ACCOMPANYING SMITH ON A SPECIAL TRAIN FROM FRANKFURT FOR THE INVESTIGATION WERE LT. GEN. LUCIAN K. TRUSCOTT, COMMANDER OF THE U.S. THIRD ARMY; MAJ. GEN. ALBERT W. KENNER, SURGEON GENERAL FOR THE EUROPEAN THEATER; SIMON H. RIFKIND, U.S. ARMY ADVISOR ON JEWISH AFFAIRS, AND A SCORE OF CORRESPONDENTS.

DR. KENNER TOLD SMITH THAT, WITH REASONABLE PRECAUTIONS, THERE WAS NO DANGER OF AN EPIDEMIC. KENNER SAID THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE OF MALNUTRITION AT THE CAMP, AND THAT THE FOOD WAS ADEQUATE, ALTHOUGH MONOTONOUS AND STARCHY. HE SAID THE JEWS WERE WARMLY CLAD, ALTHOUGH SHORT OF UNDERGARMENTS, AND ADDED THE QUARTERS WERE SUFFICIENTLY HEATED BY STOVES.

GEN. SMITH BLAMED MUCH OF THE OVERCROWDING ON JEWS WHO ARE SLIPPING INTO THE AMERICAN ZONE FROM THE RUSSIAN AND BRITISH SECTORS AT THE RATE OF NEARLY 3,000 WEEKLY. HE ESTIMATED THAT 90 PER CENT OF THE REPATRIATED JEWS ARE COMING BACK, MANY OF THEM WITH THEIR FAMILIES.

SMITH TOLD THE INMATES THAT THE ARMY WOULD SEEK ADDITIONAL HOUSING TO EASE THE OVER-CROWDING.

THE ASSEMBLY ALREADY HAS VOTED TO PUT FIVE MAJOR FRENCH BANKS UNDER GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

PAUL, A COMMUNIST, ESTIMATED THAT GOVERNMENT OPERATION WOULD INCREASE COAL-PRODUCED ELECTRICITY FROM 10,000,000,000 KILOWATTS YEARLY TO 11,500,000,000 AND WATER-GENERATED POWER FROM 13,000,000,000 KILOWATTS TO 23,000,000,000 KILOWATTS.

STEPS TO INCREASE PRODUCTION ARE BEING TAKEN AT A TIME WHEN DROUGHT AND A COAL SHORTAGE HAVE RETURNED PARIS STREETS TO WARTIME DARKNESS AND CLOSED MOST NIGHT CLUBS.

IMPENDING SLASHES IN INCOME TAXES WERE OUTLINED BY FINANCE MINISTER RENE PLEVEN. HE ESTIMATED THAT FAMILIES WITH FOUR CHILDREN AND A YEARLY INCOME OF 200,000 FRANCS ($4,000) WOULD PAY A TAX OF 9,600 FRANCS ($312) UNDER THE NEW PROPOSAL, COMPARED WITH 18,799 FRANCS ($376) UNDER THE PRESENT LAW.

HE EVEN DENIED KNOWLEDGE OF THE RAPE OF MANILA, HE CLAIMED THAT HE WAS 100 MILES AWAY IN THE HILLS, WHERE HE HAD FLED BEFORE MACARTHUR'S APPROACH, AND THAT NAVY TROOPS NOT UNDER HIS COMMAND WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR WHATEVER OCCURRED THERE. THE PACKED, TENSE COURTROOM WAS NAKEDLY BARE IN THE BRILLIANT GLARE OF LIGHTS AS CAMERAS RECORDED THE LAST MINUTES OF THE TRIAL. THROUGHOUT THE SLOW, CLEAR, PRECISE READING OF THE DECISION, YAMASHITA'S INTERPRETER TRANSLATED. WORD FOR WORD.

YAMASHITA'S FINGERS DRUMMED THE TABLE AS IT WAS READ.

EXTRACTS FROM REYNOLDS' READING OF THE COMMISSION VERDICT:

"THIS COMMISSION HAS HEARD 286 PERSONS DURING THE COURSE OF THIS TRIAL, MOST OF WHOM HAVE GIVEN EYEWITNESS ACCOUNTS OF WHAT THEY ENDURED OR SAW. THEY INCLUDE DOCTORS, NURSES, LAWYERS, TEACHERS, BUSINESS MEN, MEN AND WOMEN OF RELIGIOUS ORDERS, PRISONERS OF WAR, CIVILIAN INTERNEES, OFFICERS OF THE UNITED STATES ARMY AND NAVY, JAPANESE CIVILIANS, A LARGE NUMBER OF MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN OF THE PHILIPPINES, AND THE ACCUSED.

"TESTIMONY WAS GIVEN IN 11 LANGUAGES OR DIALECTS. MANY WITNESSES DISPLAYED INCREDIBLE SCARS OR WOUNDS THEY TESTIFIED WERE INFLICTED BY THE JAPANESE, FROM WHOM THEY MADE MIRACULOUS ESCAPES. FOR THE MOST PART, WE WERE IMPRESSED BY THE CANDOR, HONESTY AND SINCERITY OF THE WITNESSES WHOSE TESTIMONY IS CONTAINED IN 4,055 PAGES.

"THE ACCUSED IS AN OFFICER OF LONG YEARS EXPERIENCE, BROAD IN ITS SCOPE, WHO HAD HAD EXTENSIVE COMMAND AND STAFF DUTY IN THE IMPERIAL JAPANESE ARMY IN PEACE AS WELL AS WAR IN ASIA, MALAYA, EUROPE AND THE JAPANESE HOME ISLANDS. CLEARLY ASSIGNMENT TO COMMAND MILITARY TROOPS IS ACCOMPANIED BY BROAD AUTHORITY AND HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY. THIS HAS BEEN TRUE IN ALL ARMIES THROUGHOUT RECORD HISTORY. X X X TAKEN AT FULL FACE VALUE, THE TESTIMONY INDICATES THAT JAPANESE SENIOR COMMANDERS OPERATE ALMOST IN ANOTHER WORLD WITH RESPECT TO THEIR TROOPS COMPARED WITH THE STANDARDS WHICH AMERICAN GENERALS TAKE FOR GRANTED.

"IT IS ABSURD TO CONSIDER A COMMANDER A MURDERER OR RAPIST BECAUSE ONE OF HIS SOLDIERS COMMITS MURDER OR RAPE. NONETHELESS, WHERE MURDER AND RAPE AND VICIOUS, REVENGEFUL ACTIONS ARE WIDESPREAD OFFENSES AND THERE IS NO EFFECTIVE ATTEMPT BY A COMMANDER TO DISCOVER AND CONTROL CRIMINAL ACTS, SUCH COMMANDERS MAY BE HELD RESPONSIBLE, EVEN CRIMINALLY LIABLE, FOR THE LAWLESSNESS OF HIS TROOPS, DEPENDING UPON THE NATURE AND CIRCUMSTANCES SURROUNDING THEM.

THE DECISION ENDED WITH A STATEMENT OF RULES OF LEGAL REVIEW.

TOKYO, SATURDAY, DEC.8-(AP)-ON THIS FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF JAPAN'S ATTACK ON PEARL HARBOR, GENERAL MACARTHUR'S CHIEF PROSECUTOR FOR THE IMPENDING WAR CRIMINAL TRIALS INDICATED STRONGLY TODAY THAT SOME OF THE PLOTTERS OF THAT ATTACK MAY BE TRIED IN HAWAII FOR "MURDER."

(IT WAS DEC.8, 1941, TOKYO DATE, WHEN PEARL HARBOR WAS ATTACKED.)

JOSEPH B.KEENAN, SPECIAL PROSECUTOR WHO HAS ARRIVED IN TOKYO WITH HIS STAFF, IN DISCUSSING SUCH A POSSIBILITY, SAID:

"IT IS NOT THE MEN WHO DROPPED THE BOMBS BUT THE MEN WHO SET IN MOTION THE PLANS, WHO COMMITTED THE MORE HEINOUS OFFENSE."

HE SAID, HOWEVER, DEFINITELY THAT HIDEKI TOJO, THE NO.1 MAN ON THE CRIMINAL LIST AND WHO WAS PREMIER AT THE TIME OF THE ATTACK, WOULD NOT BE TRIED IN HAWAII.

ASKED THEN IF ONLY "SMALL FRY" MIGHT BE TRIED IN THE ISLANDS, KEENAN REPLIED THAT NONE OF THE MEN HE WOULD TRY WERE SMALL FRY.

"IF THERE IS ANY VIOLATION OF FEDERAL STATUTES INVOLVED, THERE IS NO REASON WHY WE SHOULD NOT TRY THEM IN HAWAII," KENNAN EXPLAINED.

"CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS AT PEARL HARBOR WHO WERE CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES WERE MURDERED DEC.7, 1941 (KEENAN WAS USING THE U.S. DATE). THEIR LIVES WERE TAKEN WITH PREMEDIATION. THAT IS MURDER IN THE UNITED STATES," KEENAN SAID.

ACCELERATING THE WHEELS OF ALLIED MILITARY JUSTICE GRINDING AGAINST JAPAN'S WARMONGERS, INFORMED SOURCES SAID TODAY THAT QUITE SOON LT.GEN.MASAHARU HOMMA, ACCUSED OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE BRUTAL "BATAAN DEATH MARCH," WOULD BE TAKEN TO MANILA FOR TRIAL.

IT WAS IN MANILA YESTERDAY THAT HOMMA'S SUCCESSOR IN THE PHILIPPINES, LT.GEN.TOMOYUKI YAMASHITA, WAS CONDEMNED TO THE FATE WHICH MAY AWAIT HOMMA--A SENTENCE OF HANGING FOR CONDONING ATROCITIES BY JAPANESE TROOPS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

THE WAR CRIMES TRIALS OF TOP JAPANESE, INCLUDING TOJO AND HIS "PEARL HARBOR CABINET," ARE SCHEDULED TO START IN JANUARY, KEENAN DISCLOSED YESTERDAY.

KEENAN SAID THAT ALLIED NATIONS HAVE BEEN INVITED TO NOMINATE MEMBERS OF THE COURT, WHICH WILL BE APPOINTED BY MACARTHUR, AND TO PARTICIPATE IN THE PROSECUTION. NONE YET HAS NAMED SUCH PERSONNEL.

DILLARD, NEGRO QUARTERMASTER SOLDIER FROM PONTOTOC, MISS., WANTS RICO, AND THE 10-YEAR-OLD ORPHAN WANTS TO GO. DILLARD IS AT THE 11TH REPLACEMENT DEPOT AWAITING SHIPMENT HOME.

DILLARD MET RICO, "WRAPPED IN A PASTEBOARD BOX AND WEARING NOTHING BUT A PAIR OF SHORTS," LAST MARCH 10 AFTER THE BOY'S PARENTS WERE KILLED IN THE SIEGE OF MANILA.

THE SOLDIER BOUGHT RICO CLOTHING AND SENT HIM TO SCHOOL, Q LETTING HIM LIVE WITH HIS ARMY COMPANY.

WHEN THE COMPANY MOVED TO "WHITE BEACH," DILLAR TURNED RICO OVER TO FRIENDLY FILIPINO MILITARY POLICE AND WAVED A TEARFUL GOODBYE AS THE ARMY CARAVAN PULLED OUT. RICO STOOD BESIDE THE ROAD, CRYING BITTERLY.

BUT WHEN DILLARD REACHED "WHITE BEACH," THERE WAS RICO!

A FEW DAYS LATER, THE BOY DISAPPEARED--AND ON SEPT.23, DILLARD AND HIS OUTFIT BOARDED A SHIP BOUND FOR JAPAN.

NEXT MORNING, ON DECK, THERE WAS RICO---SEASICK, BUT PRESENT!

RICO NOW WEARS A SET OF O.D.'S MADE BY A JAPANESE TAILOR, AND A SET OF CAMPAIGN RIBBONS IDENTICAL WITH DILLARD'S. AND HE TAKES HIS INOCULATIONS--IN HALF-SIZED SHOTS--ALONG WITH THE REST OF THE GI'S.

HE SAID HE EXPECTED TO BE IN TOKYO BY DEC. 16.

ASAHI ALSO REPORTED THAT SHIGEO ODATE ALSO NAMED IN THE LTEST LIST OF WAR-CRIMES SUSPECTS, DECLARED AT HIS HOME THAT HE TOO HAD EXPECTED TO BE NAMED AND "I BELIEVE THAT PART OF THE REASON FOR MY ARREST...IS THAT I SERVED ALWAYS IN THE FRONT LINES OF THE TIMES, FROM THE MANCHURIAN INCIDENT TO THE WAR OF GREATER EAST ASIA."

British in Java Ready to Back Dutch to Hilt

Reported About to Bring In as Many Troops as Needed to Quell Rebels

Use of Dutch Forces May Be Next Step

Decision at Singapore Is Said to Kill Hopes for Indonesia Independence

HAUGHLAND
By The Associated Press

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 8.—The British were reported by high sources today to have decided to bring in whatever reinforcements are necessary to restore order and guarantee Dutch sovereignty in the Netherlands East Indies.

The plan, disclosed as new clashes flared in three Javanese cities, was said to include bringing in Dutch troops as well as more British forces.

This decision, which apparently rules out any consideration of Indonesian demands for complete independence, was said to have been reached at the Singapore conference Thursday among Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten and British, French and Dutch commanders.

A high British spokesman said Lieutenant General Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Indies, was empowered to "restore and maintain order" to permit "constitutional reform and a measure of self-government for the Indonesians within the framework of the Netherlands kingdom."

The Indonesians already have rejected a Dutch offer of local self-government and are insisting upon complete independence.

The Dutch news agency, Aneta, quoted Dr. Hubertus J. van Mook, Acting Governor General, however, as saying the door still was open for discussions with Indonesian leaders. Van Mook, who headed the Dutch delegation at the Singapore conference, said: "I see a much greater possibility than last week, or weeks ago, that new and direct meetings between the Dutch and Indonesians will materialize at an early date."

Fighting Flares Anew

These developments came as new outbreaks of fighting were reported at Batavia, Bandoeng and Ambarawa.

Six British Thunderbolts bombed Indonesian concentrations south of Ambarawa, destroying several small buildings. In Batavia, intense fighting took place around Tandjong Priok harbor and in suburban Kramat. In Bandoeng, British forces clashed with both Indonesians and Dutch.

Kidnapping Reported

A British statement reported additional kidnappings of Europeans at Buitenzorg. Indonesian sources at Buitenzorg said Indonesians planned an all-out attack on the British from next Sunday to Thursday.

Meanwhile, the danger of famine was reported increasing in the islands. An allied spokesman said the situation in Soerabaja, big Dutch naval base, was "very critical" with only enough rice on hand for four weeks.

U. S. Supplies Reach Java.

Batavia, Java, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—Red Cross authorities announced today that a large shipment of East Indies relief supplies was received from New York. Included were 23,000 family kits, plus several hundred individually expressed parcels from relatives and friends in the United States.

Batavia, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—The highest authorities said today that the British had decided to bring whatever additional forces might be needed into Java to restore order and re-establish Dutch sovereignty in the Netherlands East Indies.

The decision, which would end the British policy of dealing with Indonesian independence leaders in an effort to work out a compromise, was said to have been reached at the Singapore conferences this week between Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten and British, French and Dutch commanders.

A fully informed source who cannot be quoted by name said the new plan called for use of a large number of Dutch troops as well as British reinforcements. The Dutch, this source said, would hold various objectives after they were taken by the British.

[In London, a British Foreign Office spokesman declined to comment on the report, saying the situation was in the hands of the British commander in Java.]

Van Mook Recall Reported.

British attacks against Indonesian Nationalists in the Ambarawa area continued today, while in Batavia a new Indonesian newspaper asserted that Hubertus J. Van Mook, acting Governor-General of the Netherlands East Indies, had received a "peremptory order" to report to The Hague. Dutch officials declined to comment.

[The Dutch news agency, Aneta, in a dispatch from Amsterdam, quoted the Amsterdamsch Dagsblad as saying Dr. Alexander Loudon, Netherlands Ambassador to the United States, and Dr. J. H. Van Royen, Minister without portfolio, were likely candidates for Governor-General of the N. E. I. The newspaper said Van Mook could be expected shortly in Holland "to account for the policy pursued in the Indies, and the question of a successor to A. W. L. Tjarda Van Starkenborgh Stachouwer, Governor-General of the Indies, who resigned, will be discussed.]

A new slogan, meanwhile, appearing in the Batavia suburb of Kramjat, said, "We, the Indonesian people, want peace. The blood of the south organization is too hot." Apparently the slogan referred to those Nationalists who are continuing to fight British forces.

Unrest In Java Held Blow To Sugar Hope

HOOYENDOORN

Batavia, Java, Dec. 8 (AP)—East Indies sugar experts disclosed today that Java's sugar stocks were dwindling because of the current Indonesian unrest, and Netherlands East Indies authorities said other nations would be lucky to get any Java sugar at all.

Britain, the United States and even the normally sweets-exporting Philippines are bidding for a share of the Java stocks, which the Japanese reported had totaled 1,500,000 tons at the end of the war.

The East Indies themselves, relying on Java production, consume 500,000 tons of sugar annually, authorities pointed out, and the situation is further complicated by the economic upheaval attendant upon the Indonesian independence movement.

Small Stores Found

"I am afraid not much sugar will be available for export when the situation clears up," said Dr. P. J. Honis, chief of agricultural affairs of the Netherlands East Indies Economic Department. "We have found less than 4,000 tons in the Batavia warehouses, 1,500 at Semarang and only 30,000 tons at Soerabaja.

"The island's sugar production is all in central and east Java—areas presently beyond Allied control. Indirect reports from those areas tell of organized large-scale looting, with many sugar storehouses burned in the terrorist scorched-earth program. More than 700 tons disappeared at Semarang during the recent five-weeks reign of terror there."

Jap Reports Denied

The Japanese "Java Sugar Corporation" reported 1,500,000 tons stored throughout Java at the end of the war, but the Dutch say the Japanese reports were incomplete and incorrect.

Honig said the 1942 crop, harvested and processed under the Japanese, was 1,300,000 tons, after which production dropped sharply. Dutch stocks at the time of the Japanese invasion, he said, were 500,000 tons, and he added that probably only 7,000 acres were planted at the present time, as compared with prewar plantings of 250,000 acres.

A non-Dutch source said most of the stock was in central and east Java mills, and was disappearing from some mills at the rate of 150 tons per day. This source said, "Apparently the looters hope to resell it after Indonesian independence, though in some cases it is being deliberately thrown away. Other stores may spoil through improper storage."

One source estimated that Java's present stockpile was more than 1,500,000 tons, because in addition to stocks at the time of the invasion, there was the 1942 crop and another already planted "which should have yielded 1,200,000 tons." He added that Japanese exports were restricted by Allied blows on their shipping.

Moscow Meeting Held Pledge Of Big Powers to Secure Peace

Conference of Foreign Ministers on Dec. 15 Will Take Up Other Topics Besides Atomic Energy.

London, Dec. 8 (A. P.)—Diplomats said today the decision of the Big Three Foreign Ministers to meet in Moscow on December 15 for discussion of atomic energy controls could be looked upon as a pledge by the major Powers to work together for world peace and a reassurance of their determination to accept the responsibility for world leadership.

Some diplomats, here to attend sessions of the United Nations preparatory commission, interpreted the forthcoming meeting as a prelude to a joint British-American-Russian pledge to place the control of the atomic bomb in the hands of the United Nations, when that organization is prepared to accept such a high responsibility.

It was also pointed out that unless the three foreign ministers were confident of reaching basic agreements on the atomic bomb, and other issues to be discussed, they would not have called the conference at this time.

Most of the delegates to the preparatory commission meetings, a survey revealed, believe there is a growing tendency among all nations to favor placing the control of the atomic bomb in the hands of the United Nations Organization. Representatives of the smaller nations, particularly Belgium, the Netherlands, Yugoslavia and several Latin American countries, feel that this step is necessary if the new peace agency is to succeed.

Called Natural Step

Some diplomats said a three-power discussion of the atomic bomb was a natural step, following the Washington conference between Britain, Canada and the United States, and preceding what will probably be a general discussion of atomic energy by all the United Nations at the United Nations General Assembly next month.

Although the subject of atomic energy is expected to dominate the conference, the Foreign Ministers will also discuss a number of matters of current concern to the three big powers.

To Discuss Other Topics.

Washington, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—The Big Three among world powers will make their first joint approach to the ominous subject of atomic energy control at a meeting of United States, British and Russian foreign secretaries in Moscow December 15.

An official announcement by the State Department said that an exchange of views on the subject of the control of atomic energy definitely would be held.

Secretary of State Byrnes will have to leave by early next week in order to meet Foreign Minister Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia on the agreed date.

News Hailed in Moscow.

Moscow, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—Members of the foreign colony in Moscow today hailed the announcement that the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and Russia would meet in the Soviet capital December 15 as the "best piece of diplomatic news in months."

British and American quarters confidently predicted that agreements on a number of questions would be reached. It was learned that preparations for the conference have been under way for some time and that an agenda has been set forth in definite detail.

A number of persons here have attributed the breakdown last October 2 of the five-Power foreign ministers' conference in London to a lack of preparation.

The fact the coming session will be a three-Power and not a five-Power meeting was interpreted in Moscow as a return to the Big Three principle laid down at Yalta and Potsdam—a position which has been insisted upon by the Russians.

United States Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov probably will meet in the Spiridonowka Palace, the scene of other important international gatherings.

If precedent is followed the conference will be held under a huge painting of the London scene showing Molotov and former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden signing the British-Soviet treaty early in the war. Two of the most prominent figures in the painting are Eden and former British Prime Minister Churchill.

United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr have spent many hours on preparations and discussions with the Russians concerning the conference.

For both ambassadors the meeting may mark their last major duties in Moscow. Both have served long periods in Russia and have said to friends that they hope to leave after the conference.

Preliminary arrangements call for Byrnes to stay at Spassio House, residence of the American Ambassador, and for Bevin to reside at the British embassy, across the Moscow River from the Kremlin.

The Americans and British will have special telegraphic facilities manned by American and British personnel.

Morning newspapers here announced the forthcoming meeting in these words:

"The meeting will give the British, American and Russian governments the opportunity of discussing, in an informal and exploratory manner, a series of questions having actual meaning for the three countries, and also for an exchange of opinion concerning the control of atomic energy."

AUSTRALIA FAVORS UNO CENTER IN U.S.

Commission Delegate Replies To European Argument

London, Dec. 8 (AP)—Australia urged today that the United Nations headquarters be established in the United States and advocated San Francisco as the specific city, but the UNO [illegible] commission adjourned for the week end without taking definite action.

The declaration by Col. W. R. Hodgson, of Australia, brought to four in the formal debate thus far those favoring the United States. The others are Chile, Cuba and the Philippines. Belgium, Canada, Greece, the Netherlands and Poland want the headquarters in Europe.

Fills All Requirements

"Our vote," said Hodgson, "goes to San Francisco, not because it is in the United States but because we feel that it fills all the requirements for the world site. But since this debate is confined to countries and not cities, I also argue that it should be established in the United States."

Answering arguments by Belgium and the Netherlands that the world headquarters should be close at hand to Europe because Europe is a potential source of trouble, Hodgson said:

"I say that we must have a site sufficiently detached to survey world problems as a whole—a site from which we can get an objective and impartial view—the United States fills that bill."

While the debate was restricted to countries, many delegates began to concentrate their attention on cities. If the United States is unable to get a two-thirds vote, the delegates may adopt a Canadian proposal to vote directly for the cities by secret ballot.

AUSTRALIA BACKS U. S. FOR UNO SEAT

London, Dec. 8 (AP)—Australia took the lead today in advocating establishment of the United Nations headquarters in the United States, with a declaration that the new world organization could "best secure its objectives there in conditions of freedom and security."

The move by the Australian delegate before a general committee of the Preparatory Commission came after delegates of Belgium and the Netherlands had spoken in favor of Europe as the site of the international capital. China pledged her vote to the United States.

"U.S. Belongs To World"

Meanwhile, Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) told a sub-committee that the headquarters should be established in the United States "because it is a country that belongs more to the world than to its own people."

While the sub-committee wound up its hearings on offers from specific American cities, the general committee argued the main issue of whether the new world capital should be in Europe or the United States.

"Our vote," W. H. Hodgson, Australian Minister to Paris, told the general committee, "goes to San Francisco, not because it is in the United States but because we feel that it fills all the requirements for the world site. But since this debate is confined to countries and not cities, I also argue that it should be established in the United States."

Pacific Problems

Hodgson said the problems of Asia were as great as those of Europe and that San Francisco was particularly acceptable because it was situated "between the masses of the world."

"I say that we must have a site sufficiently detached to survey world problems as a whole—a site from which we can get an objective and impartial view. The United States fills that bill."

Paul Henri Spaak, of Belgium, said the world capital should be in a small country.

The United States delegation is taking no official part in the debate on the site. Pepper represented Miami, and other delegations appeared for Hyde Park, N.Y., the State of Indiana, and Navy Island.

Plea From Indiana

Lieut. Gov. Richard T. James of Indiana also pleaded that the world capital be established in the United States.

"If you bring the United Nations home to the United States," he told the subcommittee, "our people could become familiar with international affairs. We are ready to accept the responsibility of seeing that there is no failure this time. And we feel there is no better way of insuring success than to establish the permanent home in the United States."

Pepper devoted most of his argument to the advantages of the United States as the site for the capital.

Chance For New World

"I urge those who are making the momentous decision on selecting a site for the United Nations home to try the New World this time," the senator said. "The Old World had its chance. If this organization fails, I see nothing but [illegible] cataclysm of destruction facing mankind."

Pepper said that during a recent tour of Europe "I have not found a greater attachment to the United Nations Organization than I found in my own country.

"Let no one have any doubt that the United States will put up its share of money and fighting forces to maintain peace of the world.

"U.S. A Sanctuary"

"I want to emphasize that the most successful United Nations Organization in the world today is the United States," Pepper continued. "It is the sanctuary of people of every country. It seems appropriate to me that the permanent home should be established in the United States."

Benson Frost, of New York, appearing for Hyde Park, said he felt sure that if President Roosevelt "were alive today he would feel it a tribute that you bring the United Nations home to the place where he conceived the idea of a union of nations of the world.

"In death no greater tribute could be paid to his memory and the humanitarian work that he did."

120 In Parliament Ask Quick Split With Spain

London, Dec. 8 (AP)—A group of 120 members of Parliament adopted a resolution today calling for immediate severance by Great Britain of diplomatic, commercial and economic relations with the Franco Government of Spain.

The action, taken at a rally sponsored by "The Emergency Committee in Aid of Democratic Spain," urged all possible encouragement for a democratic regime in that country.

In Paris today, a source at the Constituent Assembly said France had sent a note to the United States, Britain and Russia inviting them to declare their position on the question of breaking relations with Franco's Government.

A State Department information officer in Washington said the United States had not received any such note, which the French source said had been mentioned by Georges Bidault, Foreign Minister, in a report given the Assembly's foreign affairs commission.

FRANCE ASKS U. S. TO STATE POSITION ON FRANCO BREAK

Britain and Russia Also Invited to Set Out Their Attitudes.

Paris, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—A source at the French Constituent Assembly said today that France has sent a note to the United States, Britain and Russia inviting them to state their position on the question of breaking relations with the Franco government of Spain.

The source, whose name could not be used said Foreign Minister Georges Bidault had advised the Assembly's Foreign Affairs Commission of the note when he gave a foreign policy review this week.

Couched in diplomatic language, the note does not directly ask an open break with Generalissimo Franco, the informant said, but requests a statement of the present status of each country's relations with Spain and their attitude toward a rupture.

All three of France's major parties—Communists, Socialists and Popular Republicans—have advocated a break, but there has been no agreement among the parties or within the Cabinet of Gen. de Gaulle on recognizing the Spanish Republican Government in Exile in Mexico, headed by Jose Giral Pereira.

No Word in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—A State Department information officer said today that this Government has not received any note from France regarding the status of relations with Spanish Generalissimo Franco.

Atomic Power Plant Seen as Probable

London, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—A prediction that the first peacetime use of atomic energy would be either for a big power station or for boilers of a large ship was made today by Sir George Paget Thomson, chairman of the British scientists appointed in 1940 to develop atomic fission.

"Gradually the new power will spread to other purposes," Sir George told the Junior Institution of Engineers, "but the internal combustion engine will long remain the most suitable prime

VETERAN TROOPS SAIL FROM FRANCE

PARIS, Dec. 8—(AP) Additional elements of the veteran 89th infantry division boarded transports and sailed for home today from Le Havre, U. S. redeployment authorities said.

First elements of the division sailed yesterday from France. Five thousand other members were being shuttled to England for shipment home.

Theater service forces headquarters said there were no plans for redeployment of the 78th infantry division. Two regimental combat teams of the 78th relieved the 82nd airborne division in the occupation of Berlin in mid-November. A third regimental combat team is at Bremen.

The redeployment status of other European theater units:

75th infantry division—first elements at home.

79th infantry and 12th armored divisions—on the seas.

26th infantry division—arriving at the Calas staging area near Marseille.

90th infantry division—now in the Calas staging area.

82nd airborne division—scheduled to arrive at the Le Havre staging area between Dec. 11 and 19. Some advance elements on the seas.

The 29th, 100th, 84th, 80th and 94th infantry divisions, second armored division and 22nd corps headquarters—alerted for shipment home but not yet moved to redeployment centers.

Cyclist Lights Up Paris Club

Hess Hoped to Arrange Peace, Still Vows Loyalty to Hitler

(Editor's Note: Rudolph Hess, through his attorney, Gunther Von Rohrscheidt, answered a written list of questions submitted by the Associated Press, giving his answers directly in writing. This is the first direct communication from Hess to the press since his sensational flight to England in 1941.)

Lechner + Gallagher

NUERNBERG, Dec. 8.—(AP) Rudolf Hess declared today that he flew to England to try to halt the fight between two "noble races"—England and Germany—and not to enlist British aid in the attack on Russia, as widely believed.

Hess asserted he had planned the flight for nearly a year before the invasion of Russia, and even had taken off for England several times from Junkers field, but each time was forced back by bad weather. The successful attempt came on May 10, 1941.

The former No. 3 Nazi, and self-confessed amnesia faker, made the statements in written answers to questions submitted to him in his Nuernberg jail cell.

He said he had expected to be called crazy by Hitler, and professed undying loyalty to the man he helped to write "Mein Kampf."

The gaunt Nazi sub-chieftain considered the questions for three days before answering them. He indicated that he had no definite plans of operation, once he landed in England, and carried only a letter of introduction to the Duke of Hamilton from Prof. Karl Haushofer, his spiritual mentor.

One novel feature of Hess' statement was his insistence that even Haushofer and Willy Messerschmitt, the German plane builder, knew nothing of his proposed flight. It had been presumed that both of them knew his intentions.

The questions, and answers by Hess, follow:

Q. What was the purpose of your flight to England?

A. During the campaign in France I expressed my view to the Fuehrer, in June, 1940, that on conclusion of the peace with England (which we then considered imminent), a demand should be made for the return of what had been taken from Germany by the Versailles treaty. For instance: The equivalent of the German merchant fleet.

The Fuehrer disagreed, saying: "You know that already in our talks during our imprisonment at Landsberg, in 1925, and ever since then. I have declared again and again that the basis of my policy upon seizing power must be an understanding with England. Even today I have not given up hope that this understanding can be achieved when a certain period of time has elapsed after this war.

"If, however, one desires an understanding with a people, one must not make demands beforehand which are bound to engender bitterness. I don't want a Versailles treaty which sooner or later will lead to a new war. I am striving for a peace which will last, bring reconciliation between peoples, and which will be enduring.

"I have to insist on two conditions. First, an exact delineation of the spheres of influence of both powers, and second, a return of some former German colonies. This demand for the return of German property is a very modest one compared with the size of other colonial empires.

"I consider this war, in which for the second time within one generation, peoples of a noble race are decimating each other, and are destroying their very substance, as a terrible tragedy. The sooner this war is ended, the better it will be for humanity. In order to attain this end, however, everything must be avoided that might wound British prestige."

I said to myself at the time that most likely, reasons of prestige prevented England from entertaining the various proposals for understanding made by the Fuehrer.

Considering the military position then prevailing, England could negotiate without loss of prestige only if a reason visible to the whole world for entering into parleys with Germany could be provided. I therefore decided to supply this reason by going personally to England.

Left Note For Hitler

I left a letter for the Fuehrer at the moment of my departure, giving my reason for the flight. In it I argued: After contact with me, the British government will be in a position to declare:

"We have become convinced in talks with Herr Hess that proposals of the Fuehrer looking toward an understanding had been made in earnest. Under these circumstances, England does not feel justified in assuming responsibility for prolonging the slaughter without having endeavored to bring the war to a conclusion acceptable to all parties. She therefore declares her willingness to enter upon negotiations looking to this goal."

What I wrote to the Fuehrer, I repeated to such personages in England as I met there. The attitude which motivated me is perhaps best expressed in what I said during a conversation in England.

"The decision concerning my flight was, without doubt, the hardest I ever made. It was rendered easier, however, when I visualized the endless rows of children's coffins in both Germany and England with mothers in dire distress following behind and similar rows of mothers killed by bombs, with crying children following."

I assume many people will interpret this as misplaced sentimentalism. At the same time, I am convinced that mothers on both sides of the channel will understand me.

Q. Did Hitler or any other top-flight Nazi know of the flight beforehand?

One Side Knew of Plans

A. Neither Adolf Hitler nor anybody else knew of my intention, except for an adjutant whom I took into my confidence.

Q. In which way were Willy Messerschmitt and Prof. Haushofer implicated?

A. Messerschmitt was not informed about my intention. I obtained a plane from him under the pretext I needed the machine for long-range training flights within Germany. As to Haushofer, I merely asked him for a few lines of recommendation to the Duke of Hamilton under the pretext that I, with Hitler's knowledge, was to meet the Duke on neutral soil.

Q. When did you decide to make the flight?

A. I decided to fly shortly after the above-mentioned conversation with the Fuehrer in June, 1940. A delay of nearly one year was caused by difficulties in obtaining the machine and long-range equipment, as well as by unfavorable weather conditions. You see, rules in Germany necessitated keeping to altitudes of not more than 500 meters, and this meant that one could not rise above ice-forming clouds and medium-sized mountains.

On the other hand, it was necessary that over the North sea and over Great Britain there be clouds, without danger of icing, which would afford protection against enemy counterattack, yet not of such nature as to make an occasional sight of land impossible.

As a matter of fact, it took until May 10, 1941, before all necessary preconditions coincided. Moreover, I deliberately postponed my flight for a certain time because our military setback in North Africa caused a danger lest my sudden arrival in England would give rise to a false interpretation of my motives.

Q. Where did you take off?

A. I took off from an airfield of the Messerschmitt plant at Augsburg, from where I had made several short training flights previously, as well as several takeoffs for England, which I had to break off because of bad weather.

Q. Was your loyalty toward the Fuehrer diminished when you learned that Rudolf Hess hospitals, streets and squares were renamed, and that the radio and press were forbidden to mention your name? Do you still retain a feeling of loyalty toward the Fuehrer?

A. The questions are answered automatically by the replies to the foregoing. My loyalty toward the Fuehrer is as great as it ever was.

Raeder Says He Ordered Scuttling Of Graf Spee

Lechner + Gallagher

Nuernberg, Dec. 8 (AP)—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, one of the twenty Nazi defendants facing the International Military Tribunal, said today that it was by his order that the 10,000-ton pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was scuttled off Montevideo, Uruguay, December 17, 1939.

The former commander of the German Navy, a little-publicized figure on the war-crimes trial, volunteered this statement in answering a series of questions submitted by the Associated Press through his attorney. His answers constituted his first press statement since the end of the war, when he was captured and held by the Russians.

[It was officially announced in Berlin in 1939 that Hitler himself, as supreme commander of the German armed forces, ordered the crippled Graf Spee destroyed rather than moved out to meet waiting British cruisers again after Uruguay refused to extend harbor privileges beyond 72 hours.]

Reason For Order

Asked why the order was given to blow up the Graf Spee instead of ordering her to risk battle, Raeder commented:

"The Graf Spee would have had to glide down the Rio de la Plata to reach the open sea. Before reaching deep waters it would have been seized by superior fighting units and knocked out without the possibility of developing its fighting powers or, after being put out of commission, of proceeding to scuttle."

He said he was unable to answer from memory inquiries as to the performance of the battleship Bismarck, which was hunted down and destroyed after sinking the British battle cruiser Hood in 1941, or why the Admiral Tirpitz was withheld from action.

"Wrangled" With Hitler

He asserted in answer to questions that he constantly wrangled with the "nervous and temperamental" Hitler, particularly in opposing the decision to invade Russia; that he pleaded in favor of peace with France; that he regarded Germany's naval pact with Britain and the nonagression pact with Russia as meant seriously; that he repeatedly asked to be relieved because of differences with Hitler and finally obtained discharge in January, 1943; that the Navy had nothing to do with concentration-camp atrocities.

Raeder declined to answer questions about violations of international law which the German Navy is accused of committing during the invasion of Norway.

Some questions and answers on other topics:

Question—If you were to re-live the past fifteen years, would you proceed on the same course?

Answer—I would be happy once more to solve the task of building up a German Navy and to train it for an exceptional personnel such as, in fact, it possessed during these years. But I would like to profit by the experience of our first attempt. For I do not regard a naval chief who builds up a navy of a certain size—for instance a British navy with a two-power or similar standard—as a war criminal, as it is now, apparently, being sought to prove. It is evident that, in view of what I had to experience in recent years, I would not have any traffic again with National Socialism.

Anti-Christian Tenets

Q.—Did you approve of Nazidom's anti-Christian tenets?

A.—By no means. Quite the contrary. Just as during the years 1925 to 1928, as chief of the Baltic naval stations, I taught the Kiel garrison again to go to church by giving an example with my officers by going ourselves, so I tried from 1939 to 1943 to keep the Christian spirit alive in the Navy. I permitted nobody (Raeder underscored this word) to interfere herewith. The Navy, incidentally, was known within the armed forces as that element within which the practice of religion received the most encouragement.

Q.—Did you approve of German soldiers entering Danish ports in civilian garb, which they then changed to military at the moment of aggression?

A.—Neither on my orders nor with my knowledge did any members of the Navy enter Danish ports in civilian garb. The Navy sent only regular elements.

Terror Measures

Q.—What about the orders for the extermination of whole peoples? Concentration camp atrocities? Terroristic measures in occupied areas? Did you know and approve of them?

A.—Hitler never at any time spoke to me about plans for the extermination of sections of people. The Navy had nothing to do with territorial affairs, much less with terroristic measures in occupied areas. I never heard of any concontration camps, except Dachau and Oranienburg, from which I tried twice to rescue Pastor (Martin) Niemoeller with the aid of the venerable Admiral von Lans, and with the exception of Ravensbrueck, from which I succeeded in liberating former Defense Minister Dr. Otto Gessler in 1944.

Montgomery Denies Appeal Of Kramer And Belsen Aides

Herford, Germany, Dec. 8 (AP)—Josef Kramer, "the beast of Belsen," blond Irma Grese and nine other Nazi horror-camp specialists today were ordered by Field Marshal Montgomery to die on the gallows. The British commander rejected all appeals of the Belsen gang.

In a small town in the British zone, the name of which was kept secret, a gallows already was being built for the eight men and three women sentenced to death by a British military court November 17.

Professional Executioner

While no date for the hangings was announced, it was assumed they would take place before Christmas. A professional British executioner, Pierrepont will be brought from England for the task. It was understood he would get $40 for the first hanging—probably Kramer—and a lesseer amount for each of the ten others.

In all, the court had convicted 30 officials of the concentration camps at Belsen and Oswiecim of responsibility in killing and torturing thousands of helpless victims of Nazi persecution. Prison sentences varying from life to one year were meted out to 19.

Others To Be Hanged

In addition to Kramer, 39, commandant at Oswiecim and Belsen, and the 22-year-old Grese, others who will hang are:

DR. FRITZ KLEIN, 58, who selected victims for the gas chamber.
PETER WEINGARTNER, 32.
FRANZ HOESZLER, 34.
JUANA BORMAN, 42.
ELIZABETH VOLKENRATH, 26.
KARL FRANCIOH, 33.
ANSCAR PICHEN, 32.
FRANZ STARFLE, 30.
WILHELM DORR, 24.

No appeals for clemency had been made by two women—Borman, a shriveled religious fanatic, and Volkenrath, a former hairdresser who became head SS (Elite Guard) woman of Belsen. Nor was there an appeal from Hoeszler, who also selected victims for the gas chamber.

Hoped For Commutation

The eight others had hoped until the last that Montgomery would commute their sentences, especially Irma Grese.

Major G. I. Draper, of the war crimes section, who visited the defendants in their jail cells at Lueneburg, said, "Grese looked awful. Her usual neat appearance in dress and the way she swept back her blond hair had gone.

"She cried continuously in her cell. Her eyes were red and sunken and she was extremely nervous.

"Kramer and Klein seemed to be in good spirits, joking with each other. Kramer was teasing Klein for losing his memory. Klein said it was hard for him to remember any more."

A senior officer said reports that Kramer would testify at the Nuernberg war-crimes trial of top-ranking Nazis before his execution were unfounded.

Belsen Killers' Appeals Denied By Montgomery

Gallows Being Built to Hang Kramer, Irma Grese, 9 Others in British Zone

Herford, Germany, Dec. 8 (AP)—Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery today rejected all appeals of Belsen concentration camp defendants and ordered Commander Josef Kramer, blond Irma Grese and nine other officials of the Belsen and Oswiecim camps to be hanged.

In addition to Kramer, the 39-year-old "Beast of Belsen," and the 22-year-old pistol-packing Miss Grese, the defendants to die are:

Dr. Fritz Klein, Peter Weingartner, Ansgar Pichen, Karl Francioh, Wilhelm Dorr, Franz Starfle, Elizabeth Volkenrath, Juana Borman and Franz Hoeszler.

They were among 30 former officials and guards at the torture camps convicted of atrocities.

No Date Given

No date for the hanging was given, but presumably the executions will be carried out before Christmas by Pierrepont, professional British executioner who would be brought from England for the job.

The gallows are being built in a small town in the British occupation zone, the name of which is secret.

Major G. I. Draper of the war crimes section said he saw Miss Grese recently in the Luenburg jail and that she "looked awful. Her usual neat appearance in dress and the way she swept back her blond hair had gone," he said. "She cried continuously in her cell. Her eyes were red and sunken, and she was extremely nervous."

He said that Kramer and Klein "seemed to be in good spirits, joking with each other. Kramer was teasing Klein for losing his memory. Klein said it was hard for him to remember any more."

A senior officer said reports that Kramer would testify at the Nuernberg war-crimes trial of top-ranking Nazis before his execution were unfounded.

Defense Rests In Dachau Trial

DACHAU, Germany, Dec. 8 (AP)—The defense concluded its case in the Dachau atrocity trial today after all forty defendants had taken the stand and given testimony ranging from complete denial to admission of many acts of cruelty. The verdicts may be returned next week.

Nazis Used Human Bodies in Soap

WARSAW, Dec. 8 (AP).—Colonel Edward J. York, of San Antonio, Tex., described here today a German concentration camp he saw in the center of Gdansk (Danzig) where the Nazis made soap out of human bodies.

York said that in a group of buildings behind five-foot-high brick walls were long rows of aluminum vats which held 400 gallons of liquid under steam pressure.

He said that alongside each cooker were recipes in German on the walls describing how long parts of human flesh should be cooked and how to extract fats for soap making. He asserted some vats still contained torsos and arms and legs.

York said Polish investigators determined that the scheme to make soap and other products from human bodies was conceived by two German doctors.

Russia, Britain Said to Reject Germany Plan

Balk at U. S. Proposal for a 3-Power Central Rule With France Excluded

BERLIN, Dec. 8 (AP).—A high American official said today that the Russian and British representatives on the Allied Control Council had refused to join the United States in establishing a tri-power central administration for Germany from which France would be excluded.

France has opposed the establishment of a central administration for the Reich. Authorization to proceed without France was received from Washington several weeks ago.

The American official, who cannot be identified by name, said the decision of the British and Russian representatives "should not be interpreted as opposition to a central administration." He explained that they contended that the Control Council was not empowered to take such a step and that the decision would have to be made by the four governments.

Establishment of a tri-power administration would have the effect of divorcing the French occupation zone from the zones of the other three powers. The American official said it "could also be deduced" that the Russians were not willing to support a new administrative system which would leave them without any voice in the affairs of the French zone.

Bitter to Conduct Berlin Concert

BERLIN, Dec. 8 (AP).—For the first time in history the Berlin symphony orchestra will be conducted by an American soldier when Captain John Bitter raises his baton for a concert at Titania Palast on Monday. Bitter formerly was conductor of the Miami, Fla., Symphony and associate conductor of Leopold Stokowski's all-American youth orchestra.

Military Toys Barred in Saxony

BERLIN, Dec. 8 (AP)—The Provincial Administration of Russian-occupied Saxony issued a decree today prohibiting the manufacture and sale of all toys of a military character and ordering Germans to surrender all such toys to the police.

'Souvenir' Shell Kills U.S. Seaman In Genoa

Genoa, Italy, Dec. 8 (AP)—The explosion of a shell he wanted to take home as a souvenir killed Morris Seright, of Harrisburg, Ill., a United States merchant seaman, here late in October.

A member of the crew of the freighter Dwight L. Moody, Seright picked up one of the many unexploded shells lying around this port and attempted to remove the fuse. It exploded, killing him and a companion (not identified in his dispatch).

Passing workmen found the bodies. They were buried in the Staglieno Cemetery here.

Church Peace Appeal

New Vatican Organization Urges Collaboration of Christians

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 8 (AP).—An appeal to the Christian churches of the world to collaborate for the maintenance of peace has been issued by "Unitas," an international association of Christian faiths headed by the Very Rev. Charles Boyer, S. J., dean of theology at the Vatican's Gregorian University.

The appeal, launched at a meeting of the organization Wednesday, was described by well informed Vatican sources as "praiseworthy" but not inspired by the Vatican itself.

Unitas, founded this year, aims at grouping Christian clergy and laymen of all denominations in an international peace organization. It plans to establish national councils, composed two-thirds of Catholics and one-third of other denominations, throughout the world.

Chinese Report Russian Grant To Take 3 Cities

Tell of Permission to Enter Dairen, Changchun and Harbin in Manchuria

Chungking, Dec. 8 (AP)—Russia was reported today to have granted Chinese Government troops permission to occupy three cities forming the backbone of Manchuria, including the free port of Dairen.

The Government army newspaper Ho Ping Pao said the other cities were the capital, Changchun, 390 miles northeast of Dairen, and Harbin, 150 miles north of Changchun. It added that all would be occupied soon.

No Mention Of Mukden

Mukden, Manchuria's largest city, was not mentioned. It also lies along the main north-south railway running up the spine of the vast territory and Chungking troops were last reported on its outskirts waiting for a Russian signal before entering.

Ho Ping Pao quoted as its authority Chiang Chung-kuo, son of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Chungking's principal negotiator at Changchun.

The newspaper said young Chiang, who is Commissioner of Foreign Affairs for Manchuria, would return to Chungking in a few days to report.

The asserted agreement covering the great port of Dairen was out of line with previous accounts, which said the Russians had banned entry of Chinese troops on the ground it was a free port.

Feared Communist Coup

As for Harbin and Changchun, both lie so far north that Chungking feared Chinese Communists would beat them to both cities if the Russians withdrew December 3 as planned.

At Chungking's request, Moscow recently agreed to delay recalling its occupation forces from Manchuria until January 3. The Generalissimo's son then renewed negotiations for arranging to fly Chinese troops into Manchuria.

The army newspaper did not say whether the troops would be flown in to the cities or would move over the Dairen-to-Harbin railway, which last was reported still in operation.

Estimates 80,000 Communists

Gen. Tu Li-ming, commander of Central Government troops in Manchuria, who is now visiting here, estimated 80,000 Chinese Communist troops were scattered over the vast territory.

A Chinese Communist dispatch meanwhile charged that Chungking troops, bolstered by Japanese soldiers, had massed 100,000 strong along the Yellow River and had begun preliminary crossings in commandeered junks in a drive aimed at Communist-held areas of northern Honan and southern Shanshi provinces.

The Communists asserted the troops were strung out along the Lunghai railroad—main east-west artery of northern China proper—from Chenghsien 200 miles westward to Tungkwan. Tungkwan is only 155 miles south of Yenan, Communist headquarters.

The Communists also alleged the Central Government had thrown Japanese troops into fighting north of Miyun, which is 40 miles northeast of Peiping.

6 Yank Airmen Are Freed By Chinese Reds

Chungking, Dec. 8 (AP)—Chinese Communists today announced that six American flyers who made a forced landing in Communist territory on November 1 have been returned to Tientsin and reported simultaneously the beginning of a 100,000-man Central Government offensive in Shansi and Honan provinces.

The American airmen were accorded "good treatment" while in Communist territory, although, the Reds added, they had "previously strafed Communists and dropped intimidating handbills over Communist-held towns in central Hopeh province." Names of the flyers have not been announced.

"Sign Of Friendship"

They were returned to American-guarded Tientsin, said the Communists, as a sign of "Sino-American friendship."

Their plane, forced down 70 miles southwest of Tientsin, will be returned as soon as United States officers claim it.

The reported National Government offensive, Communists said, began with the massing of 100,000 men along the Lunghai Railroad between Chenghsien and Tungkwan—bolstered by well-armed Japanese.

Vanguards of these Government and Japanese forces already have begun to cross the Yellow River in their alleged offensive against "liberated" areas of southern Shansi and northern Honan provinces, the Communists reported. Two Nationalist columns reportedly succeeded in joining at Yungchang on the Tatung-Puchow railroad in southwest Shansi.

30.24—32235

A large number of junks were requisitioned for the river crossing, the report added.

Fighting Reported

Communists also reported fighting had flared up on the Peiping-Jehol railroad, northeast of Peiping. They said 5,000 National Government troops supported by 1,000 Japanese had attacked two Communist villages and captured one of them.

Communists said they were laying mine fields to protect such Red-held ports as Chefoo and other coastal points in Shantung province.

To Take Over 3 Cities

The Chinese Government forces soon will take over Harbin and Dairen, as well as the Manchurian capital, Changchun, the army newspaper Ho Ping Pao said today—citing Chiang Chung-kuo, elder son of Generalissimo Chiang, as authority for the prediction.

[This conflicted with other Chinese reports that Russia had banned entry of Chiang's troops into Dairen on the ground that it is a free port.]

Ho Ping Pao added that Chiang Chung-kuo is returning to Chungking in a few days to submit a report on his parleys with Russians at Changchun.

The Communist newspaper New Szechwan Daily said only the approval of Gen. Hsiung Shih-hui, director of Chang's headquarters in Manchuria, is needed to put the agreement into effect. He is expected to leave Chungking for Changchun tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Central Government troops reached the outskirts of Mukden.

100,000 Reds In Manchuria

Gen. Tu Li-ming, commander of National Government forces in Manchuria, was credited with the statement that 100,000 Chinese Communist troops are scattered over Manchuria. He also is said to have reported 30,000 conscripted soldiers deserted the Chinese Communist forces in Manchuria and that Government troops captured 5,000 others, about half of whom subsequently were released.

The New China Daily News, repeating previous charges that American forces "fought shoulder to shoulder with Koumintang (National), Japanese and puppet troops against Chinese Communists" added that, "although (Ambassador Patrick J.) Hurley has resigned, there still are obstacles to Sino-American co-operation which must be removed."

Cooperation Urged

The Daily News also said:

"China's relation to two leading world powers, United States and Russia, should be as a co-operative bridge instead of an armed fortress. China has to depend upon America for her industrialization and democratization and therefore has to cooperate with her."

CHINESE SHELLED BY U. S. MARINES

Village Attacked After Killing of Private, Wounding of Corporal 'in Cold Blood'

TIENTSIN, China, Dec. 8 (AP)—American Marines fired twenty-four mortar shells into a village northeast of here Dec. 4 after two Chinese gunmen killed one marine and wounded another "in cold blood," the Marines announced officially today.

Seasoned American combat men estimated that the village could have been wiped out if all the 60-mm. mortar shells scored direct hits.

Maj. Gen. Keller E. Rockey, commanding the Marine Third Amphibious Corps, said the marines opened fire after the gunmen fled into the village and the villagers failed to give them up to the marines. His formal statement said a marine officer had warned the village that it had half an hour to surrender the two Chinese and issued the order to fire when the half hour expired.

The village is about a mile southwest of Anshan, which is forty miles southwest of the marine-held port of Chinwangtao. It is an area where shooting incidents have been reported previously.

There have been no previous reports of marines' using mortars against Chinese although small arms fire has been exchanged with irregulars.

General Rockey identified the dead marine as a private first class and his seriously wounded companion as a corporal. Their names were withheld.

General Rockey said the two marines were hunting rabbits when two Chinese approached. One produced a pistol and shot the marines "in cold blood." The corporal escaped by feigning death, but was shot again in the leg as he lay on the ground. The Chinese also fired another bullet into the body of the slain marine.

Although the shooting occurred in an area where Chinese irregulars previously have fired on marines guarding coal trains, General Rockey declared, in first announcing the incident, that he believed it had no military significance.

In mid-November, a train bearing Maj. Gen. DeWitt Peck was fired upon north of Tangshan, which is about midway between Tientsin and Chinwangtao and in the same general area as Anshan. General Peck's men returned the fire with small arms, and General Peck requested United States planes to strafe a village from which the firing had come.

Orders Ignored, Marines Shoot

Tientsin, Dec. 8 (AP)—American Marines fired 24 60-millimeter mortar shells into a Chinese village near Anshan on December 4 after one Marine had been killed and another seriously wounded by Chinese gunmen, Marine Major General Keller Rockey 3d, Amphibious Corps commander, said today.

Firing into the village was ordered, he said, after the two gunmen who shot the Marines "in cold blood" had not been surrendered to the Americans.

"In Cold Blood"

A marine corporal and a private first-class had been hunting rabbits, Rockey's formal statement said, and Chinese gunmen shot them down "in cold blood." The private was killed. The corporal, wounded, feigned death and survived, although the Chinese fired another shot which struck his leg.

Their names were not announced. Both were from the 4th Platoon, B Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Marine Regiment.

[There have been no previous reports of Marine bombardments against Chinese, although machine gun and small arms fire has occasionally been exchanged. When a train bearing Maj. Gen. Dewitt Peck was fired upon recently, for instance, Marines said they replied with automatic weapon and sidearms fire.]

250 PUPPET OFFICIALS SEIZED IN NORTH CHINA

PEIPING, Dec. 7 (Delayed) (AP)—Chinese secret police today rounded up 250 puppet officials of the Japanese-sponsored Government of north China as suspected collaborators.

Included was a princess, Chin Pei Hui of the Ching dynasty, and three men who had held the highest puppet Government post, chairman of the North China Political Affairs Commission. They are Wang Keh-min, Wang Ying-tai and Wang Yi-tang.

Also under arrest is Wang Shih-ching, formerly head of the puppet Federal Reserve Bank and reputed to be the richest man in north China. Before the Sino-Japanese war he was director of the Bank of China at Mukden, Manchuria.

Other puppet leaders arrested in Peiping include Wen Yuan-mou, director general of the Education Commission; Chang Chung-chih, former vice director of the Interior Department, and two puppet mayors of Peiping, Liu Yu-shu and Hsu Hsiu-chih.

In Tientsin secret police arrested Gen. Chih Hsieh-yuan, director of the Public Safety Commission; Hsu Shu-chiang, director of the puppet secret police, and two former mayors, Wen Shih-chen and Fang Jih.

Two women are reported held for trial as collaborators. One is Princess Chin, daughter of Prince Su and a cousin of Henry Pu Yi, emperor of Manchukuo under the Japanese. She was educated in Japan and became a Japanese citizen.

The other woman reported arrested is Ying Mei Ho, a former actress.

Japs Still In China

Peiping, Dec. 8 (AP)—The Eleventh War Zone said today that approximately 116,000 Japanese troops and civilians are yet to be evacuated from Shanshi and southwestern Hopek provinces. North China repatriations thus far include 34,479 Japanese soldiers and 6,000 male civilians.

Missing Flyers Dead

Peiping, Dec. 7 [AP—Delayed]. Chinese eleventh war zone headquarters today reported that ten American flyers reported missing in action during the war had crashed to their deaths. Their names were not announced.

LEAVE 'WONDERFUL DUTY'

386 Women Marines Sailing From Hawaii Get Leis and Kisses

HONOLULU, Dec. 8 (AP)—All 386 of the women Marines stationed at Hawaii have said goodby to "wonderful duty" in the islands.

The girls embarked Friday on the hospital ship Rescue for San Francisco after some told the Army newspaper, Stars and Stripes, "it has been wonderful duty." None appeared anxious to leave.

Servicemen lined the dock to hang rainbow colored leis about the girls' necks. One Marine had ten leis—one from each boy friend, all of whom lined up for a farewell kiss.

The Fleet Marine Force Band provided music as the girls marched up the gangplank. Also aboard the ship were 154 Waves and fourteen Spars, all bound for discharges.

OFFICIAL FROM TOKYO LINKS BOSE TO JAPAN

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 8 (AP)—A functionary of the Japanese Foreign Office, summoned as first defense witness in the Indian National Army trial, sought today to prove the independence of the late Subhas Chandra Bose's provisional government of "Free India." The prosecution has pictured Bose's government as a puppet of Japan.

The prosecution elicited from Shunichi Matsuomoto, twice Japanese Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, admissions that promotion of "Free India" was part of the Japanese war strategy.

Matsuomoto said that Bose was brought from Germany to Japan about April, 1943. He cast no light on how Bose traveled to Japan. He had vanished from his Calcutta home just before Japan went to war. He was being prosecuted on a sedition charge at the time of his disappearance.

Bose was reported killed in a plane crash while en route to Tokyo at the end of the war.

Australians Limit Blame For Loss of U. S. Stores

Say Small Group of Officers Had Equipment Destroyed

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 9 (Sunday) (AP).—"The Sydney Sunday Sun" quoted Australian officers today as saying that some American commanders had ordered destruction of surplus American military equipment which would be useful to Australian forces in the Pacific because of "prejudices inherited from their diverse racial antecedents."

The newspaper said, however, that those commanders were in the minority and that the amount of equipment so destroyed was "small relative to the total American holdings in the Pacific."

"The overwhelming majority of American commanders, being pro-Allied and pro-British, are giving the Australians what they require from surplus stores even when their orders do not specifically empower them to do so," the newspaper said.

Australians Continue Negotiations In Strikes

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 8 (AP)—Representatives of labor and management conferred again today in an attempt to settle strikes which are keeping an estimated 300,000 iron workers, coalminers and seamen idle in New South Wales.

Household users of gas and electricity were warned to expect even stricter rationing next week because of the tieup of coal production.

HOMMA INDICTED FOR WAR CRIMES

Jap General to Be Tried in Manila for Death March, Other Atrocities.

TOKYO, Sunday, Dec. 9—(AP) The United States today formally charged Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma, conqueror of the Philippines, with permitting the Death March of Bataan and other atrocities against Filipinos and Americans.

The indictment, made public by General MacArthur, also named four other officers accused of sanctioning murder, brutalities and other crimes during the early months of the war in the Philippines.

Trial in Manila

Homma, 58, who is held at Omori prison camp outside Tokyo will be taken to Manila for trial shortly, presumably before the same type of military commission which two days ago sentenced Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita to death.

Some of the other officers named already are in the Phillippines. The trial dates will be announced later by Lt. Gen. Wilhelm D. Styer, commander of U. S. forces in the southwest Pacific.

The indictment, consisting of two broad charges and 42 specifications, does not accuse Homma himself of committing atrocities or specifically ordering them, but of permitting troops under his command to murder, rape, rob, pillage and otherwise violate the laws of war.

The other officers listed were Lt. Col. Saichi Ohta, commander of the dreaded Kempei Tai (military police) in the Philippines during 1942; Major Zanzo Saito, commander of the so-called "Tiger unit" of the Japanese army; Major Takashi Tohei, commander of a Kempei Tai unit near Manila; and Col. Akira Nagahama, chief of the Philippines Kempei Tai from late 1942 to 1945.

Atrocities mentioned in the 42 specifications included the bombing of Manila by the Japanese after it had been declared an open city, the bombing of a general hospital on Bataan, the bayonetting to death of American and Filipino hospital patients, the beheading of an entire Filipino family, and the use of Filipino prisoners as live targets in bayonet practice.

Japs Being Told Of Costs Of Defeat

Tokyo, Dec. 8 (AP)—Beaten Japan learned today—on this fourth anniversary of her declaration of war on the United States—the staggering costs of defeat.

Some of the newly reported "price tags":

1. Japan is paying over $2,200,000 daily to support American occupation forces.

2. Some Japanese war leaders may be tried in Hawaii for "murder" because of the Pearl Harbor attack.

3. A Diet member has demanded that Japan regain China's friendship by restoring the loot obtained from that nation.

Homma Trial Soon

4. Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma, who led the Japanese to triumph in the Philippines, is to be taken soon to Manila for trial as the man responsible for the "Bataan Death March."

5. The Japanese reading public for the first time is being presented an American army prepared outline of Japanese plotting which led the nation to downfall.

6. The first war-criminal trials in Japan will begin at Yokohama December 17, the Army announced officially today. On that date an American military tribunal will begin hearing the first of approximately 300 Japanese accused of atrocities against American prisoners of war.

No Major Suspects

These first trials include none of the so-called major suspects, whose war-guilt hearings are scheduled to begin in January.

Wartime Premier Hideki Tojo and his Cabinet, who head the major list, have been moved from the Omori prison camp to Sugamo prison, Col. Robert Hardy announced today. Omori now is empty and henceforth only Sugamo will be used. It resembles an American penitentiary, Hardy said.

Authoritative sources said the occupation is costing Japan over $2,200,000 daily, approximately one fourth the extraordinary war expenditures during the closing days of the war. These war budgets resulted in heavy note inflation and a staggering national debt.

Load Is Very Heavy

Japanese officials say, "We must do our best but the load is very heavy."

General MacArthur's chief prosecutor of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor, Joseph B. Keenan, indicated some of the plotters might be tried in Hawaii for "murder." War Premier Hideki Tojo will not be one of those, however, Keenan said.

"Certain individuals at Pearl Harbor who were citizens of the United States were murdered December 7, 1941. [Keenan used the United States date.] Their lives were taken with premeditation. That is murder in the United States," he asserted, adding: "If there is any violation of Federal statutes involved, there is no reason why we should not try them in Hawaii."

Homma To Leave In Few Days

Homma, who has been in Omori prison here and who denied he ordered the "Death March," probably will go to Manila within a few days for trial as a war criminal.

Demand for the return of property stolen from the Chinese came in the Diet's House of Representatives from Liberalist Takeo Kimura. He also accused Premier Baron Kijuro Shidehara of "doing nothing to solve the important problems of the nation."

Top-ranking American army and navy commanders in China and the Western Pacific, meeting with General MacArthur, today drafted recommendations for demobilization and repatriation of Japanese troops in China, and allocation of resources. These recommendations will be submitted to the Allied chiefs of staff.

Quick Victory Pledged.

Tokyo, Dec. 8 (A.P.)—The Japanese Army informed Emperor Hirohito in September, 1941, that it expected to conquer the southern Pacific regions within three months if war began, the Kyodo news agency said today, and Hirohito openly expressed doubt.

Kyodo gave this version of the hitherto unpublicized discussion: Prince Fumimaro Konoye on September 5 informed the Emperor that Japan must decide whether to stand firm in negotiations with America, and that a decision must be reached next day.

Hirohito thereupon summoned his chiefs of staff, and asked the army chief, the late Field Marshal Gen Sugiyama, how long it would take the army to accomplish its aims if war were declared. Sugiyama replied that the southern regions would be conquered in about three months.

Raised China Prediction.

Said Hirohito: "When the Sino-Japanese incident broke out, you (Sugiyama) were Minister of War. At that time I asked how long it would take to end the incident. You answered, 'Only a month,' but that incident, after four years, still is continuing."

Sugiyama said that China's size was one reason for military failure on the continent.

"If you say China is a large country, what about the Pacific?" the Emperor asked.

Sugiyama, taken aback, nevertheless managed to evade the issue.

The imperial conference of Japanese war leaders next day, September 6, set a deadline by which peace negotiations must show evidence of succeeding—or else war preparations would be rushed. They showed no evidence of success, from Japan's point of view, and war preparations consequently were rushed.

Japan Urged to Return China Loot to Aid Accord

Liberal Attacks Shidehara as Allied Rubber Stamp

TOKYO, Dec. 8 (AP).—A demand that Japan return all loot obtained from China as a beginning of friendly relations with that nation was voiced in the House of Representatives yesterday by Takeo Kimura, a Liberal, at the plenary budget session.

Kimura lashed out at the Shidehara Cabinet, accusing it of "doing nothing to solve the important problems of the nation," and adding, "it is merely carrying out orders issued by Allied headquarters."

Shidehara asserted he was "gravely concerned" over the present state of Chinese-Japanese relations and wanted a "return to normalcy."

List Jap Emperor As War Criminal

Tokyo, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—The Japan Communist party and five other leftist organizations today named more than 1,300 persons—including the Emperor and Empress—as war criminal suspects, the Jiji news agency said today. The list included all adult male members of the Imperial family except Prince Takehiko Yamashina, Jiji said, as well as twenty-three court officials and 130 Army and Navy leaders.

U. S. HERO WED IN KOREA

Col. Finn Marries Army Nurse in Governor's Throne Room

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 8 (AP)—Col. John Milton Finn of Astoria, Ore., hero of Attu, Kwajalein, Leyte and Okinawa, was married today to Capt. Kathleen Coberly of Elkins, W. Va., an Army nurse, in the first military wedding ever held in the throne room of the Governor's capitol.

Maj. Gen. A. V. Arnold, commander of the Seventh Division, escorted the bride. Colonel Finn, who was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point, is commander of the Thirty-second Infantry Regiment and has been with the Seventh Division longer than any other man.

The bride helped administer aid to victims of the Hickam Field and Pearl Harbor attack four years ago and later served on Okinawa.

U. S. Destroys Foe's Munitions

KYOTO, Japan, Dec. 8 (AP)—Japanese laborers under supervision of Sixth Army ordnance men have destroyed more than 475,000 tons of Japanese arms and ammunition, including 100,000,000 rounds of small arms cartridges, 10,000,000 rounds of artillery ammunition, 1,000,000 rifle and hand grenades and 15,000 tons of bulk explosives.

Poison Liquor Kills Seven G. I.'s in Japan

Nagoya, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—Death of seven soldiers and severe illness of six others as result of drinking poisonous liquor was reported today by Twenty-fifth Division Headquarters. Lieut.-Col. Gerald G. Miller, Provost Marshall, said recovery of those in the hospital is doubtful. Names were not disclosed.

Miller said a drive underway to close establishments selling the poisonous liquor has resulted in arrest of fifteen Japanese in the last three days.

Jap Protest Cut Short

Matsuyama, Dec. 8 (AP)—American military police today dispersed a crowd of about 1,000 Japanese of this Shikoku Island city staging a protest in front of the city hall against "unequal" distribution of food, clothing and building materials.

The demonstration was directed at Japanese civilian officials but was halted by the Yanks because the noise interfered with work of 24th Division Headquarters, located in the same building.

Seven Japanese Draw Crowd to

Their Harakiri

Show Up in Mindoro City, Offer to Surrender, Then Start Killing One Another

Manila, Dec. 8 (AP)—Seven ragged Japanese soldiers trekked painfully out of the jungle-covered mountains of Mindoro Island, held up a Chinese truck and rode for miles to reach the provincial capital of Calapan—"just so they could commit hara-kiri in my front yard," says Lieut. Edwin J. Frick, of Jersey City, N.J.

"And, after coming all that way to surrender—yeah, they said surrender—they wanted to shoot me for trying to prevent their suicide," Frick lamented.

Yank Is Spared

They missed him. The final score was four Japanese dead, three alive with headaches.

Frick tells the story this way:

The Japanese, their food exhausted, left their mountain hideout to hike up the highway toward Calapan. Raising guns instead of thumbs, they halted a truck and persuaded the trembling Chinese driver to deposit them in the Calapan plaza.

A gawking crowd quickly gathered. Eventually a Filipino told the military police commander that a few guests were waiting to see him.

Shoot Each Other

The commander sent Frick and Lieut. Robert Mitchell, Seattle, Wash., to "accept the surrender" of the armed Japanese.

Mitchell motioned to them to lay down their arms—five rifles and one pistol.

The Nipponese leader shouted an order; his men paired off, raised their weapons and began shooting each other.

Americans waded in and subdued three with skull taps from rifle butts. The other four Japanese were beyond tapping—and beyond saving.

Tokyo Didn't Tell Hitler

Oshima Says He Had No Advance Knowledge of Pearl Harbor

TOKYO, Dec. 8 (AP).—Adolf Hitler was "delighted" when he learned of the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, but he did not have advance knowledge of Japanese plans, war-time Ambassador to Berlin Lieutenant General Hiroshi Oshima said today.

Germany and Japan had no compact for sharing domination of the world if their respective campaigns succeeded, added Oshima in an interview three days after he arrived in Japan to find himself listed as a suspected war criminal.

Co-ordinate Aid to Philippines

MANILA, Dec. 8 (AP).—The United States High Commissioner's office today announced formation of a council to co-ordinate work of eight American government agencies involved in rehabilitation of the Philippines. Commissioner Paul V. McNutt will act as chairman.

Included are the State, Treasury and Justice Departments, the War Shipping Administration, Foreign Liquidation Commission, United States Information Service, the Federal Security Agency, and United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

4 Killed, 33 Hurt In Fight On Peron

Buenos Aires, Dec. 8 (AP)—Four persons were killed and 33 injured today as 200,000 persons braved three hours of gunfire and oratory in the first major demonstration against the candidacy of Col. Juan Perón for the presidency.

Speakers of the Radical, Liberal, Socialist and Communist parties denounced what they termed "Nazism" in the military government, which Perón served as vice president, while columns of Perón supporters attacked with guns, clubs and fists down the streets leading to Congress plaza and the Congress building.

The gun battles intensified near the end of the meeting and police finally sent four armored cars and 150 mounted police to clear the square. The meeting ended as they arrived and there was no further violence as the square was emptied of the vast throng within a half hour.

STUDENTS RIOT IN PERU

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 8.—(AP) Two persons were killed and at least 76 were injured last night in a clash between students protesting a proposed press law and members of the Leftist Aprista party in University park, hospital authorities announced today.

Those killed were a policeman and a taxi driver. Both were shot. The injured included a cameraman for El Comercia who was clubbed while taking pictures of the clash.

Mounted police were used to disperse the stick-swinging, stone-throwing crowd which set afire and almost destroyed the building where the Union Revolutionary party had its headquarters. At one time 12,000 persons, including members from both sides and onlookers, partially occupied the park. The students belonged to the "University Reform front."

Paraguayans Seized In 'Revolutionary' Plot

Asuncion, Paraguay, Dec. 8 (AP)—An undisclosed number of Paraguayan political leaders have been arrested on charges of plotting "a revolutionary movement against the Government."

A Government communique last night said the plot was confined to the capital city, but few details were disclosed.

McCrary Troops Sure Of Christmas at Home

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Dec. 8—(AP) "We wanna be home by Christmas! We wanna be home by Christmas!" chanted 586 American soldiers lining the rails of the transport George W. McCrary as she docked at St. George today after a harrowing 21-day voyage from Antwerp.

The chances that the McCrary's troops and 541 from the transport Henry Ward Beecher, disabled at sea, would be in the United States considerably before Christmas appeared certain as the emergency transport Saturnia arrived in Hamilton to pick up the contingents from both ships.

The Beecher was reported as still 150 miles at sea and proceeding to Bermuda in tow, but the Saturnia is tentatively scheduled to sail for New York Tuesday with the men from both ships.

The McCrary was in trouble from the time she left Antwerp and yesterday she took a 45-degree roll from which her skipper, Capt. Allan Covy of Daphne, Ala., said he thought she would never recover. The food ran short and the last of it was served at noon today just before the ship made port.

Russia Blames Iran Row On 'Reactionaries'

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—Russia blames the trouble in northern Iran on "reactionary elements that have opposed the extension of national rights" to people of that area, the State Department disclosed today.

This information came with the release of the text of Russia's reply to a United States note of November 24 urging that all Soviet, British and American troops evacuate Iran by January 1.

Russia pointed out that it had already agreed with Britain to withdraw the troops by next March 2 and said it saw no grounds for acting earlier.

Tehran Declaration

Foreign Commissar Molotov also reiterated in the reply that the Soviet Union "adheres unwaveringly" to the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin declaration in Tehran in 1943, which pledged the three countries to maintain the "independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran."

Molotov said the Tehran Declaration did not specify the number of Russian troops in Iran or the period of their occupation.

He said the question of the time for removal of Russian and British troops had been decided at the Council of Foreign Ministers in London two months ago and that no objection had then been raised "in any quarters."

Question Not Raised

He added that the British Government in a note to Russia on the Iranian situation November 25 did not raise the question of the removal of Soviet troops.

The Russian note said the Iranian Government's account of a so-called armed uprising in northern Iran did not, in the Soviet view, correspond to the facts. It declared the events did not constitute an armed uprising and were not even directed against the national government at Tehran.

The so-called Popular Assembly of Northern Iran is seeking only assurance of democratic rights for the people of Azerbaijan province, Molotov asserted.

Soviet Note to U. S. on Iran Situation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 (AP)—The State Department's text of Russia's reply to the United States note:

The statement made in that communication concerning the armed uprising in northern Iran does not, according to information at the disposal of the Soviet Government, correspond to reality. The events which have taken place in recent days in Iran not only do not constitute an armed uprising but also are not directed against the Shahkin Shakh Government of Iran.

Now that the declaration of the Popular Assembly of Northern Iran has been published, it is evident that this is a matter of aspirations with respect to the assurance of the democratic rights of [the] Azerbaijan population of Northern Iran, which is seeking national autonomy within the limits of the Iranian State and which has its own particular language, different from the Persian language.

Actions Based on Constitution

It is also apparent from the contents of the above-mentioned declaration of the Popular Assembly, which took place in Tabriz Nov. 20 to 21, that the Popular Assembly addressed the expression of its wishes to the Shah, the Majlis [National Assembly] and the Government of Iran, basing itself in this on the Iranian Constitution.

The undesirable incidents which have taken place in conjunction with these recent events at various points of northern Iran have been caused by reactionary elements which have opposed the extension of national rights to the populations of northern Iran, although there is nothing in these desires of the local population which is unusual for a democratic state.

As far as the Soviet military command is concerned, it has not hindered, and is not hindering, the movements of the Iranian military forces and the gendarme police units which are in the districts of northern Iran. According to information at the disposal of the Soviet Government, there are in these districts of Iran one infantry regiment, two infantry brigades, two regiments [of] gendarme police units, the presence of which can assure order and calm in these parts.

The Soviet Government opposed the dispatch of new Iranian troops to northern districts of Iran and informed the Iranian Government that the dispatch of further Iranian forces to northern Iran could cause not the cessation, but the increase, of the disorders, and likewise bloodshed, which would compel the Soviet Government to introduce into Iran further forces of its own for the purpose of preserving order and of insuring the security of [the] Soviet garrison.

Adding to Garrison "Undesirable"

Inasmuch as the Soviet Government considers the further introduction of Soviet forces into Iran undesirable, it took the position that the introduction of new Iranian forces into the northern province of Iran at the present time would serve no useful purpose.

As to the reference in the communication of the Government of the United States to the Three-Power Declaration concerning Iran [of] Dec. 1, 1943, the Soviet Government, as far as it is concerned, must state that it adheres unwaveringly to the principles of that declaration.

"The declaration in question, however, does not affect questions of the number of Soviet armed forces on Iranian territory, just as it does not affect the question of the period of the stationing of Soviet troops in Iran. This latter is determined by another document, namely the Anglo-Soviet-Iranian tripartite treaty of 1942, and in connection with the stationing of its troops in Iran, notwithstanding the fact that the right of introduction of Soviet troops into the territory of Iran was envisaged by the Soviet-Iranian Treaty of Feb. 26, 1941.

Furthermore, as the Government of the United States is aware, the question of the time for the removal of Soviet and British troops from Iran was [the] subject of consideration at the Council of Foreign Ministers in London as little as two months ago and was decided by exchange of letters between the Soviet and British representatives, which was brought to the attention of the above-mentioned Council of Ministers, and which did not find objection in any quarters.

In connection with the above, it should also be noted that the British Government, in its note on the Iranian question, received by the Soviet Government on Nov. 25, does not raise the question of the removal of Soviet troops from Iran.

On the strength of the consideration set forth above with relation to Soviet troops, the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics does not see grounds for renewed consideration of the question of the time limit for the removal of these forces from Iran.

Iranian Envoy Hints Oil Aims MotivateRussia

Sees Tehran '5th Column'; Moscow Puts Blame on 'Reactionary Elements'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 (AP).—Iranian Ambassador Hussein Ala said today there "might be some" connection between disorders in northern Iran and his country's refusal to grant oil concessions there to Russia.

The ambassador also said at a news conference that he had "reason to believe" that, while Russian forces "ostensibly had evacuated Tehran," Soviet agents were organizing a "sort of Fifth Column in the city."

He did not know, however, he said, whether it was the aim of those "secret agents" to overthrow the Iranian government.

Ala reiterated his previous charges that the Russians were "continuing to support the rebels" in Azerbaijan Province and said that Russia's refusal to allow Iranian reinforcements into the territory to "restore order" was illegal.

He said the disturbances "were causing great apprehension" in his country that the government might be confronted with "a fait accompli which did not represent the feeling of the Iranian people."

Russia Blames "Reactionaries"

He said he had heard reports that the uprisings in northern Iran once were supposed to have taken place simultaneously with disturbances in Tehran. "This might have resulted in the overthrow of the (Iranian) regime," he commented.

Russia blames the trouble in northern Iran on "reactionary elements which have opposed the extension of national rights" to people of that area, the State Department disclosed today.

This information came with publication of the text of Russia's reply to an American note of Nov. 24 urging that all Soviet, British and American troops evacuate Iran by Jan. 1.

Russia said in its note that it already had agreed with Great Britain to withdraw the troops by March 2 and saw no grounds for acting earlier.

Foreign Commissar Viacheslav M. Molotov also reiterated in the reply that the Soviet Union "adheres unwaveringly" to the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin declaration in Tehran in 1943, which pledged the three countries to maintain the "independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran."

The Russian note added that the Iranian government's account of a so-called armed uprising in northern Iran did not, in the Soviet view, correspond to the facts.

It declared the events did not constitute an armed uprising and were not even directed against the national government at Tehran.

The Iranian government has repeatedly charged that the autonomy movement in northern Iran was inspired by a Communist minority.

U. S. AND RUSSIA MUST COOPERATE HART TELLS G.O.P.

Senator Says World Security 'in Immediate Future' Depends on It.

URGES WORLD PEACE

Committee Approves Congressional Program and Will Add to It.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—(AP) Senator Thomas C. Hart (R-Conn) asserted tonight that world security in the immediate future depends on "successful cooperation" between the United States and Russia.

In the long run, he added, peace also hinges on strengthening relations with China.

"In brief," Hart told the Republican National committee at a dinner closing a two-day special meeting to plan for the 1945 elections, "there is thin ice for us to the East, and lots of it to the West. We must travel circumspectly and keep our heads clear."

Senator Hart, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet at the start of the war, spoke on a program with Chairman Herbert Brownell, Jr., of the National committee, and Gov. Robert D. Blue of Iowa.

"The highlight of our own future problem to the eastward—and actually it pertains to the Orient as well—is to achieve successful cooperation between America and Russia in meeting those problems which must be solved if world security is to be attained," Hart asserted.

Hart described the Russians as a "new people," and as "strong enduring and energetic," as well as "suspicious, enigmatic, and extremely nationalistic."

"When the Communist ideology is added to those characteristics," he continued, "a situation results with which it is very difficult to deal."

Sees Difficulties Ahead

As for the long-range view, Hart said, it is "westward that we are likely to find our greatest future difficulty in living on peaceful terms with the rest of the world, though it does not press us now."

He said, for example, that China is "friendly toward us now; and the relationship should be preserved. Yet it might take only a slight mistake or a relatively minor change in circumstances to damage seriously our relations with China in a rather short time."

Hart said it is to be hoped that the menace of the atomic bomb will "spur the development of a world organization which can and will enforce the peace."

"Luckily," he added, "there is time for a healthy rather than a forced growth, because no atomic bombs will menace people of good will for some years."

Speak on Broadcast

In a radio broadcast in which Representative Charles A. Halleck (R-Ind) and Hugh Wilson, former ambassador to Germany also participated, Hart declared that a "new quantitative and qualitative analysis of our needs in armaments must be made soon."

Wilson, who heads the Foreign Affairs section of the Republican National committee, insisted that the G. O. P. intends to keep foreign affairs on a non-partisan level, but reserves the right to criticize policies which the Democrats alone are in a position to put into effect.

"Obviously whenever national interest is involved there can be no partisan attitude towards the basic policies," he said. "There can be, however, legitimate differences of opinion as to the methods used to put those basic policies into effect."

Halleck said the American people, for instance, have the right to know "to what extent our government has undertaken commitments to the government of China and how far American involvements in the Chinese civil war may take us."

'Platform' Adopted

The National committee today unanimously endorsed the mid-term "platform" of party members in Congress, but decided to develop and augment it with ideas of those outside of Congress.

It adopted a resolution providing for a National committee sub-committee of seven to gather suggestions from all Republicans on the theory that a declaration of party principles should be a "growing, virile document responsive to the wishes of the party membership and keeping ever abreast of the movement of events."

The program was advanced by Ralph H. Cake, Oregon committeeman, and others, who took the position the congressional document should stand on its own feet, but not necessarily as a complete national platform.

Chairman Brownell told reporters the idea to have a National committee continuing study was "not a concession" to any dissident group, but was a very "constructive" one worked out jointly. He added Warner W. Schroeder, Illinois committee member, first broached the proposal.

Committee to Be Named

Brownell said he would name the seven-man committee soon, but not until after he leaves Chicago.

The supplemental statement of "aims and purposes" approved by minority members of the Senate and House in Washington last Tuesday demanded "open diplomacy at home and abroad, "support of the United Nations Organization, fullfillment of "pledges to small nations," and rejection of "great power domination of the world."

It also called for improved governmental machinery to promote peaceful settlement of labor disputes and a strengthening of the process of collective bargaining, with both labor and management living up to such contracts.

The National committee resolution endorsed the "statesmanlike declaration of aims and purposes" issued by the congressional Republicans "as the basis of the policy of our party."

Suggestions to be Sought

It directed the proposed seven-man committee to receive and collate platform suggestions from state chairmen and vice chairmen, county chairmen, precinct committeemen, governors, and other elected Republican officials.

They will be asked for "constructive criticisms and suggestions for the development of the congressional statement to the end that the ultimate declaration shall represent the aggregate of the conscience, intelligence and hopes of Republicans in all states."

Action of the National committee came in executive session prior to the dinner at which Brownell cited the New York speech early this week of Prof. Harold J. Laski, chairman of the British Labor party and quoted him as saying "free enterprise and market economy mean war; socialism and planned economy mean peace. All attempts to find a compromise are a satanic illusion."

Brownell said if American voters agree with Laski "they should vote for the so-called Democratic candidates."

"It is true," he added, "that not all Democrats agree with Dr. Laski, but all agree that to remain in power, the Truman administration has to obtain the votes of the compromise with the left-wing groups in this country." He then added:

"If the American people do not believe in socialism, then they should vote for Republican candidates."

Bradley Resolution Commends Brownell

CHICAGO, Dec. 8—Unanimously adopting a resolution offered by J. Kenneth Bradley, national committeeman from Connecticut, the Republican National committee expressed its confidence and support of National Chairman Herbert Brownell, Jr., in its closing session this afternoon.

The resolution said that Brownell's report on party activities in the nation "clearly demonstrates the great progress that has been made in building a strong and united Republican organization," and asserted "vital plans are being carried out to bring Republican victory in congressional and senatorial elections next year."

It expressed "commendation and congratulation" to Mr. Brownell "for the skillful, thorough and expeditious manner" he has handled party affairs and "reaffirmed enthusiastic support" of the chairman.

AXIS INTERCEPTED TELEPHONE TALKS, PROBERS ARE TOLD

Marshall Reveals Enemy Listened In on Roosevelt, Churchill Conversations.

COULD NOT WARN HAWAII

Feared Japs Might Seize Upon Phone Message as 'Overt Act.'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8—(AP) Axis agents, listening in on even the trans-Atlantic conversations of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, made it unsafe to telephone a warning to Hawaii on Dec. 7, 1941, Gen. George C. Marshall said today.

That was the reason, he told the Pearl Harbor investigating committee, that the telephone was not used to advise Hawaii commanders that Japan apparently was going to make some move at 1 p. m., Eastern Standard Time (dawn in Hawaii).

Feared Raid On Coast

He had testified earlier that the U. S. high command, for that matter, considered a raid on Hawaii less probable than attacks on airplane plants at Seattle, Wash., and San Diego, Calif., or on the Panama canal.

Marshall filed warnings to all overseas posts and the coastal commands by Army Signal corps radio. Due to transmission difficulties, the message to Hawaii went by commercial telegraph and radio. It reached Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, Hawaiian Army commander, seven hours after the first bombs fell on Pearl Harbor.

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) wanted to know why the telephone was not used.

"President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were in the habit of conferring by telephone," Marshall said. "And the President also spoke with Ambassador (William C.) Bullitt by telephone.

"We had evidence that they were intercepted by the Germans. I had tests made and found that telephone conversations could be picked up."

Bullitt was ambassador to France before the German invasion and later was stationed in London.

Two Hazards Explained

Marshall explained that there were two hazards in an Axis interception of a telephoned warning. The Japanese might have deduced from it that their code had been broken.

They might have seized upon a war warning as an "overt act" by the United States.

"The Japs would have grasped at almost any straw," Marshall explained "to prove to such portions of our people who doubted our integrity of action that they were being forced into war."

Ferguson was still questioning Marshall when the committee recessed until Monday. The General will return to the witness chair then.

Message From Hart

Just before the recess, Ferguson brought up a message he said Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the U. S. Asiatic fleet, sent to Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, about 12 hours before the Pearl Harbor attack. It said:

"Learn from Singapore we have assured Britain armed support under three or four eventualities. Have received no corresponding instructions from you."

Ferguson said he would have extensive questions about it on Monday.

Earlier in the hearing Senator Ferguson demanded that Britain's 1941 ideas on probable Japanese military moves be given to the committee.

He asked specifically for British "evaluations" of intercepted Japanese messages which Britain read through decoding secrets supplied by the United States in January 1941.

The Michigan senator voiced his demand after Gen. Marshall former chief of staff, had testified he knew the British Admiralty was passing information directly to the U. S. Navy in pre-Pearl Harbor days.

Marshall said he did not know of any "records" as such which were available but that the War department had been instructed "not to withhold" anything from the Senate-House committee.

Earlier in the hearings, the committee had developed evidence that Prime Minister Churchill proposed Nov. 30, 1941, that President Roosevelt warn the Japanese against further aggression.

It also received War department documents indicating that the Army's intelligence service consistently discounted, before the Dec. 7, 1941, attack, the possibility that Japan would care to take on a full-fledged war with the United States.

Shortly before making his demand, Ferguson had read a series of military estimates prepared by Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, 1941 assistant chief of staff for intelligence.

One, on Dec. 5, said, "Japanese government leaders are aware of the perils of further military adventures; they want to avoid a general war in the Pacific."

Marshall, in his third day in the witness chair, told the committee:

He had considered Japanese raids on the Panama canal or airplane plants at Seattle, Wash., and San Diego, Calif., more likely than the attack on Hawaii. He said he figured the strike which actually was made at the fleet base as the "most improbable" Japanese course.

With the limited supplies available, he was striving in the latter part of 1941 to build up strength in the Philippines and held a belief that if 100 four-engined bombers could be based there the Japanese would be deterred from further advances in the South China sea or from attacking the Philippines.

Navy Needed Time

The Navy, he said, felt that if war became inevitable it needed until Feb. 1, 1942, to be ready. For the Army, he added "I thought we might or should be ready by Dec. 5," which was two days before Pearl Harbor.

Secretary of State Hull had told him and Admiral Stark on Nov. 25 that diplomatic negotiations appeared about ended and that the situation was in the hands of the Army and Navy. He recalled that Hull also said, "These fellows mean to fight."

Marshall was an affable witness for the most part but flushed and indicated irritation when Rep. Gearhart (R-Calif) kept insisting that more information should have been sent to Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, Army commander at Hawaii.

"We had given General Short a directive," Marshall snapped. "He was a responsible commander. He had a definite task."

Command for Alert Sent

Marshall said the Nov. 27 message he sent to Short, saying negotiations with Japan appeared ended, and that he should take reconnaissance and other measures he deemed necessary was "a command direction for an alert."

To have given Short also a mass of information from intercepted Japanese messages, Marshall declared, would only have burdened him.

But under Gearhart's pressing he conceded that the "sense" of intercepts "might well have been communicated to Gen. Short."

Gearhart brought up the testimony of Lt. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, 1941 head of the War Plans division, that he assumed responsibility for the War department's not taking further action when Short, in reply to the Nov. 27 warning, said his command was alert against sabotage.

"I admire very much his attitude," Marshall remarked.

"I too thought it was very generous," shot back Gearhart.

Marshall, in response to questions from Ferguson, said the War Plans division was responsible for details of such messages "but the responsibility was mine as well as Gen. Gerow's."

When Marshall repeatedly asserted that the Nov. 27 message was an "alert" for Hawaii, Ferguson wanted to know if the War department here also had been alerted.

Aware of Critical Situation

"They were all aware of the critical situation and that the Pacific and coastal commands were alerted," Marshall said.

Ferguson turned to the question of who was in authority when Marshall was absent. Marshall said the deputy chief of staff, then Maj. Gen. William Bryden, "could act."

"Were you available Sunday morning (Dec. 7) when you were horseback riding?" the senator asked.

Marshall smiled.

"In one sense yes and in one sense no," he said. "They could not speak to me until they located me. In fairness to my deputy, if he knew I was on only an hour's absence he would have quite a decision to make."

There has been testimony that the War department knew early that Sunday that Japan's ambassadors would present a note to the State department at 1 o'clock and that the hour struck military men as possibly having significance.

There was no action on the question of sending another warning to overseas posts, however, until Marshall arrived at his office in the late forenoon. The message then sent did not reach Short until after the attack.

Marshall told of the fear of raids on Seattle and San Diego when Gearhart asked what he had thought the Japanese might do.

"My thought was that Japan would engage in a campaign south in the China sea," he replied, adding that he thought Guam would fall and probably Wake Island.

"We had in mind," he continued, "the probability of blows at Panama, the airplane plants in Seattle and San Diego, and Hawaii. We thought that the latter was the most improbable."

KING LEAVES POST, HITS MERGER PLAN

Fleet Admiral Makes Final Report as He Retires as Commander-in-Chief.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8 — (AP) Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King delivered a parting broadside tonight against proposals to merge the Navy and Army.

In his final report as Commander-In-Chief of the Fleet and Chief of Naval Operations, he also fired away at suggestions for separating naval aviation from the rest of the service and for scrapping battleships for carriers.

"Because of its mobility and the striking power and long range of its weapons," King said, "the aircraft carrier has proved itself a major and vital element of naval strength, whose only weakness—its vulnerability—demands the support of all other types, and thereby places an additional premium on the flexibility and balance of our fleet. The balanced fleet is the effective fleet.

"In a balanced fleet the several components must be welded together rather than simply coordinated."

As submarine officers must alternate periods of service on submarines with duty aboard other kinds of ships, he continued, so aviators should rotate in other duties—"aviation is part of the ordinary daily life of the officer at sea."

"The strength of the Navy," King reported to Secretary Forrestal, "lies in the complete integration of its submarine, surface and air elements."

Opposes Unified Command

The 61-page report, covering the last phases of the Pacific fighting and the first of occupation and demobilization, was shot through with arguments against a unified War and Navy department. At one point King wrote:

"We now have before us the essential lessons of the war. It is my earnest conviction that whatever else may have been learned as to the most effective relationship of the ground, naval and air forces, the most definite and most important lesson is that to attempt unity of command in Washington is ill-advised in concept and would be impracticable of realization."

"Unity of command at the highest military level, in Washington was never attempted," King said at another point, "nor, in fact, seriously considered. It is a matter of record that the strategic direction of the war, as conducted collectively by the joint Chiefs of Staff, was fully as successful as were the operations they directed. The joint Chiefs of Staff system proved its worth.

"There is no over-all 'paramount capability' among the joint Chiefs of Staff to warrant elevating one of their members to a position of military commander of all the armed forces—nor, in my opinion, is there any known system or experience which can be counted upon to produce the man qualified for such a position. This war has produced no such man—for the records of the joint Chiefs of Staff will show that the proposals, or the convictions of no one member were as sound, or as promising of success, as the united judgment and agreed decisions of all of the members."

King described the capture of Iwo Jima and Okinawa, the mop-up in the Philippines and Admiral William F. Halsey's Third Fleet assault against Japan itself, culminating in the formal surrender aboard the battleship Missouri.

Navy's Effectiveness Revealed

"Our access to the Japanese homeland," King said, "gave opportunity at last for securing reliable information as to conditions there, both by our own observation and by conversation with Japanese officials who no longer had the incentive or the ability to deceive either their enemies or their own people.

"It was at once apparent that while the damage to their cities and production centers by strategic bombing was fully as great as photographic reconnaissance had indicated, the strangulation from our less obvious but relentlessly effective surface and submarine blockade and from our carrier-based air attacks had been a decisive factor in the enemy's collapse.

"Their merchant marine had been reduced to a fraction of its former size; of the few remaining ships, mostly small ones, only half were still operable. Their food situation was critical, and their remaining resources in fuel and all strategic materials were not less so. It had been known that their few remaining carriers and heavy naval vessels had been damaged, but it appeared that the fury of our carrier strikes had forced them to withdraw all but a handful of men from these ships, practically abandoning them.

"Never before in the history of war had there been a more convincing example of the effectiveness of sea power than when a well-armed, highly efficient and undefeated army of over a million men surrendered their homeland unconditionally to the invader without even token resistance."

Submarines, King announced, "are credited with almost two-thirds of the total tonnage of Japanese merchant marine losses, or a greater part than all other forces, surface and air, Army and Navy combined. Of the total number of Japanese naval vessels sunk, our submarines are credited with almost one-third." Fifty-two U.S. submarines were lost from all causes during the war, 46 by enemy action.

King concluded by expressing the "sincere hope — and expectation — that the United States will hereafter remain ever ready to support and maintain the peace of the world by being ever ready to back up its words with deeds."

Code-Cracking Was Gossip In Bars In D.C.

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—The hottest secret of the war—that the United States had cracked the Japanese code—was cocktail-bar gossip in Washington. And Tokyo never got wise.

Army officers spoke "carelessly" of it. One man employed as a code cracker tried to sell it. Flyers in the Pacific theater deduced it.

Sitting on top of the powder keg was Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, getting grayer by the minute.

Got The Military Creeps

Marshall told Pearl Harbor investigators in Congress yesterday how one thing after another turned up to give him the military creeps.

It came out while he was explaining how he heard that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey knew the secret and feared it might become public during the presidential campaign. Dewey kept silent at Marshall's urgent plea.

The General said he didn't know how the information got to Dewey. But——

Reports came to Marshall that Army officers were "talking carelessly" in hotels and clubs about it.

16,000 On Staff

The original code-cracking staff of several hundred had grown to 16,000—a lot of chances for leaks.

Talk drifted back from the Pacific after army flyers shot down Admiral Yamamoto (who once said he would dictate the peace in the White House). They had been told where to go and when, and could deduce that the Japanese communications were tapped.

This "whispering" about how Yamamoto was caught was the most "dangerous" of all, Marshall indicated. He got so concerned he asked FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to trail some army officers "so we could make an example of them."

"Gestapo" Label Feared

Hoover was "hesitant," Marshall said, contending it would make a "Gestapo" out of his force. So it wasn't done.

Marshall related how one of a group of 26 code-crackers working at an army station at Fort Washington, Va., was caught trying to "sell" the secret in Boston. The General didn't say what happened to that individual.

Marshall disclosed in a letter to Dewey how the code was solved. The type of machine used by the Japanese was figured out, duplicated and used as an "unscrambler."

Feared "Baiting"

Always, Marshall was afraid the Japanese would discover what enabled United States forces to smash them in the Coral Sea and at Midway.

He thought one time they had discovered it and were fixing some bait. That was when the Navy was moving in for the kill at Midway, often described as the great turning point of the war.

One unit of the Japanese fleet was brazen enough to send out over the air in code that its next postoffice address would be Midway Island.

Either Cocky Or Facetious

"That seemed a little too thick," Marshall said.

But it turned out that the Japanese were being either cocky or facetious.

Marshall said it was quite a "relief" for the Navy to see the Nipponese fleet steaming over the horizon where it was supposed to be and where it turned out to be a sitting duck for American aviators.

Truman Drafts Message On 4 Billion British Loan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8—(AP) Arguments for and against the proposed loan to Britain took form today as Congress studied the complicated terms worked out by Anglo-American experts.

Meantime preparations went forward for President Truman to send a message to Congress soon, asking for approval of a $3,750,000,000 loan.

The tentative agreements signed by the two governments call for total credit of $4,400,000,000.

Following are the questions being asked most often about the proposal. The answers are based on official statements by American and British officials—or on information supplied by them:

Q—Why do the British need a loan?

A—The British exist by exporting and importing. Their money reserves were seriously depleted during the war and their trade was cut by 70 per cent. They said they needed financial help to restore it to a profitable point.

Q—How much do they need?

A—American officials say Britain has her back to the wall economically, and only with a big loan can she cooperate with the U. S. in organizing a greater and more free world trade. They say the loan is necessary to avoid dividing the world into economic blocs which Secretary of State Byrnes said might lead to war.

Q—What are some chief arguments against the loan?

Still Owes War Debt

A—Opponents are saying that Britain still owes us a big debt from the First World War so why should we lend her any more. It is contended that Britain will never repay this loan, that America should get more concessions than mere promises to cooperate economically. Critics of British imperialism are using the loan issue to assail British colonial policy. And critics of the Labor government are arguing that a loan would support socialism over there.

Q—What happens if Britain does not get the money?

A—Lord Keynes, Britain's foremost economist, argued that Britain then would not have enough dollars to buy heavily in the United States and would be forced to channel her trade to the British empire in order to survive.

Q—How would Britain confine trade to the British empire?

A—Chiefly by setting up tariffs and monetary controls which would make it cheaper for the empire countries to trade with each other than, for example, with the United State. Economists like Keynes contend the United States in turn would be compelled to set up an economic bloc of its own.

Q—What did the British promise specifically to do if they get the loan?

A—To make dollars available to all nations in the so-called sterling area from their dollar pool so that all these countries can trade with the United States and anyone else. They also promised to back the United States proposals to curb cartels, reduce tariffs, "trade preferences," and other restrictive practices.

Q—What is the dollar pool?

A—It holds the dollars of most of the members of the British empire who agreed to turn them over to Britain in exchange for sterling. Britain spent these scarce dollars for materials, unavailable in the United Kingdom, needed to prosecute the war, and promised to repay members of the empire later.

Q—What is to happen to the dollar pool?

A—Britain promises to eliminate it within one year after the agreement goes into effect. This will make it possible for countries in the sterling area after that to keep the dollars they earn instead of turning them over to the pool in exchange for sterling which can be spent only in the United Kingdom.

Q—Would this be good for American business and employment?

A—Experts like Assistant Secretary of State Clayton contend it would. They argue that it would then be possible for these countries to trade with the United States and other countries more freely. They also argue that the greater the volume of world trade the better business will be in the United States.

Q—How are the other countries to be brought into this trade scheme?

A—The United States proposes to hold a world trade and employment conference in mid-1946 where the creation of an international trade organization dedicated to freeing and expanding the world's trade will be set up. The purposes of the organization would be formulate a uniform code of commercial conduct for all nations.

Sought Fund as Gift

A—Originally they asked for up to $6,000,000,000 as a gift. The final agreement is for a loan of $3,750,000,000 at two per cent interest and it must be repaid in 55 years.

Q—Is that all they are getting?

A—No. They are also receiving on the same terms a credit of about $650,000,000. This enables Britain to pay in 55 years for recently-shipped Lend-Lease goods and goods delivered after Lend-Lease ended; and for quantities of American surplus goods they want to buy. It also pays for U. S. for our share of installations to Britain, and balances certain war-time claims the two governments held against each other. This $650,000,000 credit does not require approval of Congress.

Q—Would this agreement settle Britain's Lend-Lease account with the United States?

A—Yes. Both the late President Roosevelt and President Truman have stated that the United States would not seek dollar-for-dollar repayment for the war goods we supplied them to help smash the Axis. About $29,000,000,000 worth of Lend-Lease was supplied Britain while she returned $4,320,000,000 in reverse Lend-Lease.

Q—Why should the U. S. lend Britain $3,750,000,000?

PRESIDENT'S BILL SCORED AS 'VICIOUS'

CIO Council Urges Drive Against Fact-Finding Legislative Plan

Detroit, Dec. 8 (AP)—The CIO-United Auto Workers' high council in the General Motors strike turned thumbs down today on President Truman's proposal to end the strike and urged a drive against his recommended labor legislation.

Terming the President's request that the strikers return to work "ill-advised and undeserved," the union's General Motors council also "vigorously condemned" his proposed legislation as "vicious" and "anti-labor."

213,000 Idle For 18 Days

Thus was emphasized a CIO break with President Truman as the auto union's rank-and-file membership was advised to continue the nation-wide walkout in General Motors which has kept 213,000 workers idle for eighteen days. Striking G.M. locals will vote on the council's recommendations.

The G.M. council recommended that "we mobilize our full political power" in an effort to block Mr. Truman's proposed legislation.

In a resolution, the council asked help from "local unions, individual members and everyone we can mobilize to impress upon the President and the Congress our opposition to this vicious, anti-labor legislation."

Fact-Finding Groups Planned

The President's legislation would set up fact-finding groups in major strikes to make public reports. While these groups were operating, strikes and lockouts would be outlawed. "Public opinion" would influence settlements, the President suggested.

CIO heads assailed Mr. Truman's ideas as contrary to labor's right to strike and asserted that there would be nothing to prevent the "packing" of fact-finding bodies.

The White House in Washington said there would be no comment now on the refusal of the General Motors council to approve Mr. Truman's back-to-work request.

Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Secretary of Labor, indicated he believed negotiations would progress hopefully between the striking auto workers and General Motors Corporation.

Mass Demonstration Staged

The council's verdict in this new chapter in the union's bitter fight with General Motors for a 30 per cent wage-rate increase came shortly after a mass demonstration in the city by fellow unionists in a gigantic motorcade "picket line."

"We regret," said the G.M. council in a resolution, "that the facts and cirmcumstances compel us to the conclusion that it is not possible for us to recommend to General Motors workers that they accept the President's request.

"We unanimously recommend that you vote no on this request that you return to work."

The ultimate answer to Mr. Truman lay with the rank and file membership of locals in more than twenty states. Recommendations of the UAW-CIO's General Motors council, a group of some 200, will be sent on to the locals, union officials said.

Holiday Atmosphere

Coming out in vocal support of the G.M. strikers' demand were hundreds of carloads of unionists from the big Ford Local 600, who drove around and around G.M.'s office building for the better part of an hour.

Estimates of the number of cars, which circled the building in a virtual bumper-to-bumper phalanx, varied from the police figure of 600 to a union assertion of 1,500. Police rerouted traffic. The demonstration was orderly.

A holiday atmosphere prevailed. Auto horns set up a clamor. Unionists standing on running boards shouted and waved at placards on the cars. Police exchanged banter with the demonstrators.

One of the sympathizer's signs said "Wilson gets $8,828 a week. We get $45. Who's unreasonable?"

"Make G.M. Negotiate"

That taunt was directed at C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors, who in negotiations with the union over the wage issue had declared the UAW-CIO "unreasonable" in demanding a 30 per cent pay boost within G.M.'s present price structure.

DEC 9 - 1945

Other signs said "Make G.M. Negotiate"; "Hitler Burned His Books, G.M. Hides Theirs," and "Workers' Families Need 30 Per Cent to Live Decently."

Prior to concentrating at the General Motors Building, about 3½ miles from downtown and situated at what is known as one of the world's "busiest street intersections," the motorcade had visited G.M. factories of the city.

The G.M. building is at Broad Grand boulevard and Second avenue, near the UAW-CIO headquarters. A mile distant, in an unprepossessing local union hall, the union's G.M. council met for its vital decision on the President's request.

Earlier in the day the council rejected General Motors' latest offer to end the strike—a ten per cent increase, roughly figured to average 13½ cents an hour. G.M. said this would have meant an increase of 30 per cent over the wage level as of January, 1941.

A similar offer had been rejected before the start of the strike November 21. Negotiations will resume Monday.

road strike at the time. The proposal of President Truman is completely and utterly different in principle and it would be entirely different in application.

In the first place the railroads are monopoly or near-monopoly public utilities. A general railroad strike would be in effect like a national general strike. Yet despite the possible catastrophic effect of such a strike, the Railway Labor Act is so worded that no penalties whatever for noncompliance can be applied.

Proposal for Penalties

On the other hand, President Truman proposes that his bill with its accompanying penalties for non-compliance shall be applicable to any strike that is considered of major proportions, no matter what kind of industry it may affect, and regardless of how little the public interest may be directly affected. He is saying, in effect, that if labor makes demands on big business, no matter what kind of industry it may be, then labor can't use its only effective weapon, its economic power, during a prescribed period.

And of course the enemies of

Act. In 1926 the pay for American railroad workers averaged 4 cents an hour higher than the pay received by workers in manufacturing establishments.

But in 1944, after eighteen years of the relatively gentle control of the Railway Labor Act, the scale was tipped far in the other direction. Railroad workers then were receiving 9 cents an hour less than their brothers in manufacturing plants. And in 1944 some 355,000 railroad workers were earning less than 66 cents an hour. The Railway Labor Act has deprived railroad workers of bitterly needed wage increases.

The principle of the act applied to all industry would work in exactly the same way. Compulsory fact-finding would become compulsory arbitration. And the right to win better wages, hours and working conditions would speedily be lost along with the right to withhold our labor.

The Administration is striking at the very heart of the program on which it won the votes of the American people in 1944. Whatever is said to the contrary is in my opinion false and deliberately misleading.

By 1.30 P.M. traffic at Second avenue and Grand boulevard—one of the busiest intersections in the city—was materially slowed down as the cars, carrying streamers and banners, slowly circled the General Motors office building.

The auto caravans, formed by members of the union's Ford Local 600, were organized as a demonstration of support to the General Motors strikers.

400 Pickets At Cadillac

About 400 pickets marched afoot at G.M.'s Cadillac plant, a much larger number than has appeared there previously during the eighteen-day-old strike.

As delegates reached the union council's meeting hall, several told reporters they believed President Truman's appeal would be turned down. The union's leaders already had denounced Mr. Truman's proposal.

Monopoly Probe On

The latest G.M. development was the Justice Department's assurance that it was looking into the union's charges that General Motors holds a "monopoly position" in the auto industry because of other firms' dependence upon it for fuel pumps and other parts.

Attorney General Clark confirmed that he had sent a telegram to UAW President R. J. Thomas, saying the department has been investigating "several anti-trust cases of the type you mention, among which is General Motors."

General Motors Silent

General Motors has not commented on the investigation, which was requested after the corporation asked the union to relax its strike to permit production of parts for rival, but dependent, auto companies.

The UAW's conditional acceptance of this plan was expected to rank high on the National G.M. Council's agenda. A letter appearing over Thomas's signature emphasized that it would have to be approved by the strikers themselves before any production could be resumed.

President Truman's appeal for an immediate resumption of work was hitched to a proposal to appoint a fact-finding board to study the merits of the union's wage-increase demand. Thomas replied to the President that the G.M. local delegates would be summoned to consider the plea and carry their recommendations back to the membership for deciding votes early next week.

G.M. Offer Rejected

New York, Dec. 8 (AP)—An offer by General Motors Corporation of a 13½-cent-an-nour pay increase for 30,000 workers in three Ohio cities and Rochester, N.Y., has been rejected by the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

The union, which will conduct a strike vote among 270,000 workers in General Motors, General Electric Company and Westinghouse Company next Thursday, is seeking a wage boost of approximately 25 cents an hour.

Thomas on Truman Plan

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DETROIT, Dec. 8—Following is the text of a statement issued today by R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, in opposition to the Norton bill which would implement with legislation the proposal of President Truman for the prevention of major strikes through the use of fact-finding commissions:

In my mind, there is no question that enactment of the Norton bill will result in the breakdown of proper collective bargaining, just as the War Labor Board procedure during the war hamstrung collective bargaining. The corporations will refuse to bargain honestly, relying on the restrictive effects of President Truman's plan to injure our bargaining position.

Efforts to make out that this is something comparable to the Railway Labor Act, whether voiced by the Administration, by editorial writers or commentators are false and deliberately misleading.

Moreover, the situation in industries which are not public utilities is entirely different from the railway labor picture. President Coolidge broke no strike when he signed the Railway Labor Act in 1926. There was no major railorganized labor, the door to general restrictions now having been opened to them by President Truman, would soon find it convenient to make the proposed act applicable to any and all strikes involving more than a handful of people.

The Railway Labor Act uses persuasion; President Truman's bill uses the policeman's club.

To chain all labor to the principles of the Railway Labor Act is a far different thing than what President Coolidge did. It would tear from the hands of labor unions the major weapon essential to effective collective bargaining with the anti-labor managerial groups of billion-dollar corporations. It has been my direct and personal experience that without the right to strike at a time chosen by the union you just do not bargain collectively with the kind of management that runs the automobile industry. You sit there meekly while management says no. Neither statistics nor moral persuasion are effective when the union's hands are tied.

Effect of Act on Rail Wages

Now let us consider for a moment just what has happened to railway labor even under the mild restrictions of the Railway Labor

Union's Council Rejects G.M. 10% Offer

Detroit, Dec. 8 (AP)—The General Motors Council of the CIO United Auto Workers union today rejected the offer of General Motors Corporation of a ten per cent wage increase to end the nation-wide strike at G.M. plants.

The council's action was taken at a special meeting of the G.M. strikers' representatives, who were convened for the primary purpose of replying to President Truman's appeal for an end to the strike.

Vice President Walter P. Reuther of the union, in announcing rejection of the G.M. offer, said agreement had already been reached on Mr. Truman's request but that formal action would await an afternoon session. Reuther would not disclose the nature of the agreement.

Auto Pickets Out

Meanwhile a motorized picket line of several hundred cars started from Dearborn for the G.M. plants and offices in Detroit,

CAPITOL HILL JAM IMPENDS

Labor-Job Bills May Upset Congress's Holiday Plans

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—Labor and employment bills today threatened to create a legislative log jam and upset congressional plans for a long Christmas holiday.

Capitol Hill leaders would like to give President Truman a labor law for a Christmas present—that's what he asked for in a special message this week—but they aren't so sure they can deliver.

They also would like to heed his request for prompt action on employment legislation before leaving town on December 20 or 21. But they aren't too optimistic about that, either.

On Calendar For Tuesday

A labor bill, not the one the President wants, is on the House program for consideration Tuesday. Written by the Military Affairs Committee, it would penalize unions striking in violation of their contracts and restrict union political activities.

Whether it is called up for a decision may depend on progress the House Labor Committee makes on a bill the President wants to set up for a fact-finding board to handle major labor controversies.

The Labor Committee starts hearings Monday. Acting Chairman Ramspeck (D., Ga.), had hoped to get the bill before the House within a week, but labor is fighting it and opponents within the committee are threatening to force long hearings.

2% RISE IN COST OF LIVING OVER '44

Bureau Of Labor Statistics Draws Comparison

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—If you're the wage earner in the average city family of three people, and you don't make at least $1.05 an hour, 40 hours a week, the Government figures you'll have a rough time breaking even on living costs this year.

Last year, the Labor Department announced today, you could just about make the grade—living "very modestly"—on a net income of $1,950 annually, after taxes—or about $1.03½ an hour. But the Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates living costs are up two per cent now compared with 1944.

Cross-Section Survey

Basing its report on a cross-section survey of approximately 1,700 consumers in 102 cities, the bureau found that, in 1944, nearly a fourth of all city families of two or more persons had net incomes of less than $1,950. And, said the bureau, these went into debt or drew on savings to keep abreast of expenses.

On the average, the $1,950 was just enough to cover living expenses, small gifts and contributions but left nothing for savings such as war bonds and life insurance premiums. However, the bureau said, families in this bracket did buy an average of $168 in war bonds, going into debt or drawing on savings to do so.

Family Incomes Highest In '44

Half of the families and single persons in the nation's cities had net incomes of less than $2,700 in 1944 — when family incomes reached their highest level in history. About one fifth were under $1,500.

Last year's $1,950 family—which, in 1941, could have gotten along on $1,475—spent an average of barely 22 cents a meal per person and $30 a month for housing, fuel, light and refrigeration. Income, personal property and poll taxes accounted for $119, the bureau said.

$3,000 To $4,000 Incomes

The report estimated that in half of the families with net incomes of $3,000 to $4,000 a year, at least two persons were wage earners.

As incomes went up last year, food expenses likewise climbed, the survey indicated. This stemmed, the bureau said, as much from eating out as from the ability to buy more expensive foods or serve greater quantities. However, it was noted, too, that retail food prices in cities rose 29 per cent between 1941 and 1944.

The bureau figured that single persons, living independently, covered expenses if their income after taxes averaged $1,150, but had no net savings. About two fifths of all single men and women were below that figure last year, it said, and ran into debt.

$5,000-A-Year Incomes

Only 12½ per cent of the nation's wage earners—single or married—had incomes of $5,000 a year or more after payment of taxes. The survey fixed the average net income in this bracket at $7,634, of which $4,324 went for food, clothing, housing, medical care and other current consumption expenses, and $2,856 represented war bonds, insurance premiums, or other savings.

Study Shows Women Are Quitting Jobs

Washington, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—The Labor Department says 25 per cent of the 4,000,000 women employed in factories last June had quit work or been laid off by the end of September.

Its information, the department's labor statistics bureau said, makes clear that many women who accepted war jobs when there was an urgent need for their services are voluntarily returning to private life.

UNION TO DISCUSS STEEL MILL STRIKE

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 8—(AP) The question of whether the nation is to have a general steel strike will come before the 175-man wage policy committee of the C.I.O.-United Steelworkers meeting here next week.

Workers voted almost five to one to leave their jobs, if a strike is called, for a general $2-a-day pay raise. Balloting conducted by the National Labor Relations board showed 402,917 for, and 84,218 against, striking.

C.I.O. President Philip Murray, who also heads the steel-workers, will preside at the session that will determine the union's policy in dealing with "big steel," "little steel," fabricating, aluminum and allied plants.

The union's 40-member executive board is expected to open the first sessions Monday, and draft a policy or recommendation to be handed the full wage committee. Meetings are scheduled during the first three days of the week.

The majority of companies have rejected the wage increase demands, but union locals were directed not to strike until and unless the committee calls for a walkout.

UNION SAYS NO G-E STRIKE DURING 1945

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Claiming the General Electric Co., the Westinghouse Corp. and the Electrical Division of General Motors Corp. "have been trying to force a strike upon our Union before Christmas," the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (UE-CIO) announced today that "there will be not strike authorized among employes of the three companies in 1945."

The Union conducts a coast to coast strike vote among approximately 270,000 G.E., Westinghouse and G.M. employes on Thursday, December 13 under provisions of the Smith-Connally Act.

The announcement was made by Albert J. Fitzgerald, UE General president and Julius Emspak, general secretary-treasurer.

UE-CIO is demanding $2-a-week wage increases for G.E., Westinghouse and G.M. employes.

The Union is asking an investigation of the electrical industry and, officials state, plans to release details of a nation-wide survey showing that "the electrical industry has been carrying on a planned hold-up on production and distribution of radios, refrigerators, irons, washing machines and other appliances from the Christmas trade."

U. S. MAY OPERATE GREYHOUND LINES

Chicago, Dec. 8 (A. P.).—An A. F. of L. union official said today there is a possibility the Government will take over operation of Greyhound buses in seventeen eastern and midwestern States where service has been disrupted by a strike for nearly six weeks.

E. W. Callahan, president of the executive joint council of the A. F. of L. Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Union, in a statement issued here said the United States Conciliation Service directed company and union officials to appear in Washington next Thursday "at which time the strike will be settled by one of three methods: arbitration, the use of a fact-finding committee, or the Government will assume the operation of the Greyhound companies in the area affected.

A union spokesman here said 6,000 operating, maintenance and terminal employees of Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound Lines now are idle in the dispute which began November 1.

JAP SUB OFFICER WILL TESTIFY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8. — (AP) A Japanese submarine commander will be called as a witness before a Navy court martial here next week in an effort to determine whether the U. S. cruiser Indianapolis was torpedoed.

The Navy announced today that Comdr. Ike Hashimoto, captain of the Japanese submarine I-58, had been summoned from Tokyo by the judge advocate in the trial of Capt. Charles B. McVay, who is charged with negligence in the loss of the cruiser.

The Japanese news agency, Kyodo, said today that Hashimoto's submarine sank the Indianapolis. The cruiser, shaken by the two explosions, was lost with a heavy toll of casualties last July 30 while en route from Guam to Leyte.

McVay's trial was recessed yesterday until Tuesday, in order to assemble more witnesses.

The Navy's announcement said Hashimoto will arrive by air Monday or Tuesday.

"He will be under guard at all times," it added.

Transfer Of Germans To Reich Under Way

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—One of the greatest organized mass movements of people in history—the transfers of at least 6,350,000 Germans back to Germany—is under way.

The State Department announced yesterday that the four major European allies have begun to bring back Germans from Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Austria.

Repatriates will continue to move into the shrunken Reich by foot, train and truck convoy until August 1, 1946, when the migration is scheduled to be completed.

Some There For Years

Some Germans have lived in their adopted countries for many years. Most, however, moved in on the heels of Hitler's aggressions.

This is the tentative schedule for transfers drawn up by the Allied Control Council in Berlin:

Poland: 3,500,000 Germans, 2,000,000 to the Russian zone in Germany and 1,500,000 to the British area. This will leave very few Germans in Poland.

Czechoslovakia: 2,500,000 Germans, most of them from the Sudetenland, which Germany annexed after the Munich Conference of 1938. Of these, 1,750,000 will go to the American zone and 750,000 to the Russian zone. This will leave only 500,000 to 600,000 Germans in Czechoslovakia.

Total From Hungary Cut

Hungary — The Allied Council agreed to admit 500,000 Germans into the American zone, but Hungarian officials now believe they will transfer a much smaller number, possibly no more than 200,000.

Austria—150,000 Germans, all to the French zone in Germany.

Atom Bomb Corps Gets Safety Award

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—The nation's highest wartime safety award was made today for an undertaking which could have produced history's most disastrous accident—the atom bomb project.

The National Safety Council's award for distinguished service to safety was presented to the Manhattan District in recognition of the corps of engineers' achievement in maintaining "outstandingly low" accident rates in facilities throughout the country.

Maj. Gen. Richard Leslie Groves, the Army's top man on the project, gave credit to all the universities and industrial organizations which "co-operated so magnificently," in accepting the award on NBC's "National Hour" program. He added:

"The Army was given a job to do. It produced the atomic bomb. The question of atomic power reaches out to every person in the country. It is a national and international problem. The War Department is keeping what it has developed in trusteeship for the American people, waiting for word from them on what they want done with the tremendous scientific and industrial triumph we now have in our hands."

Eisenhower Is Capper's GOP Candidacy Choice

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—Senator Capper (R., Kan.) disclosed today that in a broadcast speech tomorrow night he will suggest General Eisenhower, army chief of staff, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for President in 1948.

In his prepared statement, which will be broadcast through his radio station in Topeka, the Senator declared that the Kansas general has demonstrated not only his military ability, but also his qualities as a diplomat and patriot.

Capper says he regards the general "as a statesman-executive of the highest caliber with a military background, and an acquaintance at first hand with the intricacies of world politics."

Figures Give Impetus To Controls On Building

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—Unseasonal gains in construction activity were reported today as the White House worked on new controls intended to guarantee small homes a share in the building boom.

President Truman said yesterday that priorities over building materials would be restored and he said some sort of price control over real estate are needed. Otherwise he foresees inflation, especially in the cost of smaller residences.

DEC 9 - 1945

This swing to controls which were scrapped less than two months ago gained impetus from a report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Big Increase In October

It showed that a "surge" of city building got under way in October, the month when building controls were lifted, but that new dwellings accounted for little more than a third of the total new construction. The report added:

"Since there are no longer any restrictions on home construction, more houses are being built in the higher price brackets."

Mr. Truman told his news conference he did not yet know just how the restoration of priorities would be applied, but that the plan was to see that building materials were used principally for residences.

Other Government officials have stated that most materials and building labor are going into factory and commercial construction.

They suggested the priority plan might apply only to low and moderately priced houses—perhaps those costing less than $8,000, the wartime ceiling. Other types of construction would get what was left over.

The Labor Bureau's report showed that $262,000,000 worth of building construction was begun in October. The $70,000,000 increase over September was the biggest monthly gain since mid-1942, when war plant construction was at its height.

Counter To Usual Trend

This upturn ran counter to the usual building slump when fall weather sets in.

Work has begun on 19,480 new family dwellings, an increase of less than 5,000 over September when the construction controls were in force. The increase in residential permit values, however, was 50.1 per cent, partly because of the higher value per house.

Factory, store, commercial and other non-residential building climbed 40.1 per cent to an October total of $108,000,000. Work on repairs, alterations and additions increased 16.5 per cent to a total of $62,000,000.

CHINESE RED LEADER LAUDED BY REP. ENGEL

LANSING, Mich, Dec. 8—(AP) Rep. Engel (R-Mich) today told delegates to a Veterans of Foreign Wars convention here he considered Chinese Communist leader Mao Te Tung "the only man in China to whom the poor people can look."

Engel, recently returned from a 36,000 mile trip to the war fronts as a member of the congressional appropriations committee, described Tung as "the so-called Communist leader, who is really not a Communist at all," and said he believed Tung had the interest of all Chinese at heart.

"America cannot consistently support any war lord in China, whether he be Chiang Kai-Shek or any other, who continues slavery for the masses of Chinese," the Michigan congressman asserted.

Air Force Executives Get New Assignments

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 8 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, former commander of the 13th and 20th Air Forces, has been assigned to replace Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr as commanding general of Air Technical Service Command headquarters at Wright Field.

General Knerr will go to Washington on special assignment to AAF headquarters. General Twining comes here from headquarters, Continental Air Forces, Washington.

It also was announced today that Brig. Gen. H. A. Barthon, former commander of the Fairfield (Ohio) Air Technical Service Command installation, will soon take over the command of the San Bernardino (Cal.) ATSC.

General Barthon served at Fairfield from August, 1944, until November, 1945, when he was transferred to headquarters, ATSC at Wright Field. Prior to that he served for sixteen months as head of an air service command station in the Mediterranean area.

TARAWA VETERAN LEADS PRAYER ON NEWEST CARRIER

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Dec. 8—(AP) A United States Marine who survived bloody Tarawa stood on the flight deck of a new aircraft carrier here today, raised his eyes to blue skies and prayed:

"Please, God, let this ship sail on and on in a world forever at peace."

The Marine, Cpl. David M. Shoup, holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor, uttered his prayer in a hushed silence that gripped thousands of persons assembled on the flight deck for ceremonies commissioning the new Essex-class carrier Tarawa, named for the historic Pacific battle.

During the ceremonies held at the Norfolk Naval shipyard Shoup presented the ship a tattered American battle flag that was hoisted on Tarawa at the conclusion of the battle. The British Union battle flag, hoisted simultaneously on the island, was presented by Colonel Vivian Fox-Strangways, British resident commissioner of the Gilbert and Ellice islands colony, who said, "We know our colors could have no better resting place than beside the American ensign."

Captain A. I. Malstrom, the new carrier's skipper, accepted the flags on behalf of the ship and turned them over to a color guard composed of men of the Second Marine division who fought at Tarawa.

Rear Admiral W. L. Ainsworth, commandant of the Fifth Naval district, placed the ship in commission, and Vice Admiral P. N. L. Bellinger, commander air force, Atlantic fleet, delivered an address in which he expressed opposition to the proposed merger of the Army and the Navy.

The 27,000-ton Tarawa has a peace-time complement of 1,700 men compared with the 3,000 officers and men who served aboard other Essex class flattops during the war.

The carrier, which was launched at the Norfolk Naval shipyard here last May 12, was christened by Mrs. Julian C. Smith, wife of the general who led the Second Marine division in the battle for Tarawa.

Stilwell Presents D S. C. To Family of Nisei Hero

Flies From Capitol to Santa Ana to Honor Masudas

SANTA ANA, Calif., Dec. 8 (AP).—General Joseph W. Stilwell, former commander of the China-India-Burma sector, flew here from Washington today and presented the Distinguished Service Cross to the family of a Japanese-American soldier killed in action in Italy.

"I have never yet found a Nisei who didn't do his full duty right up to the handle," General Stilwell declared as he pinned the nation's second highest award on the dress of Mary Masuda, thirty-four-year-old sister of Staff Sergeant Kazuo Masuda, who died of wounds he received at Casino, Italy, in a single-handed attack on a Nazi position Aug. 27, 1944.

DEC 9 - 1945

"I feel it an honor to be delegated to make this award," the general continued. "Sergeant Masuda, in winning this, has won the respect and admiration of all real Americans."

"It is an honor we'll never forget," Miss Masuda replied and, tears in her eyes, turned and fastened the medal on the breast of her mother, Mrs. Gensuke Masuda, Japanese-born.

Also present were the dead hero's father, Gensuke Masuda, and his two brothers, Private First Class Masuda and Mitsuo Masuda.

19 Die in Plane Crash At Airfield in Montana

Dischargees Home from Overseas Among Victims of Storm Mishap.

BILLINGS, Mont., Dec. 8—(AP) Nineteen persons most of them overseas army veterans, were killed today when a twin-engined transport plane crashed as it attempted to land here in a blinding snowstorm.

Four of the plane's 23 occupants who were enroute from Newark, N. J., to Seattle, Wash., for discharge or reassignment, were in a critical condition at a Billings hospital tonight.

Two Pilots Killed

Among the dead were two Northwest Airlines pilots, George D. Miller, captain, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Vernon W. Pfannkuck, first officer, of Breda, Iowa, who succumbed in a hospital.

Names of all but seven of the dead were released tonight by Maj. G. D. Fairless of the Great Falls Army air base. Other victims, whose next of kin live in rural areas and could not be reached today for notification, will be identified tomorrow, the major said. All those identified were from west coast states.

In the early morning snowy darkness the plane came in too low to land and the control tower requested it to try again. On the second sweep, airport authorities said, a wing struck tops of trees on a boulevard and ripped off.

Wreckage Burns

The craft nose-dived to a nearby field. Flames immediately enveloped it.

The fire illuminated the vicinity and, in the glare police found six army men and one of the pilots groping about. The other pilot was found under an engine which had been torn loose. The injured screamed in agony.

Bodies of most of the dead sat in the seats with safety belts still fastened. Billings firemen put out the flames.

Federal, army and airlines officials prepared at once for an inquiry.

So heavy was the snowstorm that for most of the day planes were grounded in this eastern Montana city.

At the Minneapolis home of captain Miller, a telegram from the Navy department offering him the rank of commander if he would return to the Navy was received a few hours after he was killed.

Miller, a lieutenant commander when he was released from duty with the Naval Air Transport service Oct. 15, flew Navy transport ships in the Atlantic service during the war.

NAVY CRAFT HUNT AIRMEN

Flares Reported In Florida Swamps By Pilot

Miami, Fla., Dec. 8 (AP)—Groping through dense fog, a small army of wartime assault craft—Weasel marsh buggies, alligators and jeeps—was scouring the bleak swamplands in North Central Florida tonight in quest of possible survivors among 27 missing naval airmen.

Red flares and a camp fire, spotted by an Eastern Airlines pilot flying over the marshy wilderness between Orlando and Melbourne at 2 A.M. today, suddenly intensified the three-day-old search for the lost flyers.

Visibility Limited

Throughout the day, shuttling sweeps of Army, Navy and Coast Guard planes and a navy blimp from Lakehurst (N.J.), flew over the swamp area and patrolled far out to sea in a vain attempt to locate wreckage or still-living members of the six plane crews who vanished in the tropical dusk last Wednesday.

Fog limited the visibility of aerial searchers to almost zero, and the main hope of a rescue was centered on land parties.

Officially listed as missing were fourteen airmen who set out on a training flight over the Atlantic in five torpedo Avenger bombers at 2 P.M. Wednesday. Their last message, flashed at 5.25 P.M., said the flight had little more than one hour's fuel supply left and indicated that they were buffeted by freak winds ranging up as high as full hurricane velocity of 75 miles per hour.

Red Flares Reported

Thirteen more flyers were missing on a big Martin bomber which flew out in an attempt to find the Avengers.

The first possible clue on the fate of the 27 came from an Eastern Airlines pilot, Capt. J. D. Morrison, who reported to the Navy that he saw red flares and flashing lights "in the middle of a swamp" at 2 A.M. today about 10 miles southwest of Melbourne.

Captain Morrison, piloting a northbound passenger plane, was quoted as saying he saw a human figure standing in the light of the flares but could not discern any wreckage.

"I'm sure they were flares, not a fire," he said.

Also Reports Fire

Five minutes after making his first report, Captain Morrison reported he saw a fire burning in the dismal, sparsely populated region some 20 miles north of the spot where he had seen the flares.

A naval plane dispatched from the Banana River station reported at 2.30 A.M. that it also observed a flare about 15 miles inland.

Commodore H. H. J. Benson, of the United States 7th Naval District said the hunt was being pressed with all available forces and disclosed that farmers in the Melbourne-Orlando area reported having heard an explosion on the night the six planes disappeared.

Based At Lauderdale

"We don't want to get any hopes too high," Commodore Benson told the Associated Press in Miami, "but we are moving everything up there to find those men if they are alive."

All the missing planes were based at Fort Lauderdale Naval Air Station. The five torpedo bombers were on a training flight out toward the Bahamas and back. One theory advanced is that they were flying in wing-to-wing "dead man" formation and went down in a mass collision when caught in the stormy darkness.

Project Speeds Deployment

RIVERSIDE, Calif., Dec. 8 (AP).—"Project Transcon," organized a month ago to break the bottleneck of troop deployment, is speeding its 10,000th passenger toward home. The passenger is Private First Class William E. Stough, Mechanicsburg, Pa., en route to Newark, N. J., for separation. "Project Transcon" is operated jointly by the Army, the Air Transport Command, and four commercial airlines.

FIRST LEAD UNITED NATIONS

LONDON, DEC. 8—(AP)—SENATOR CLAUDE PEPPER (D-FLA) TOLD A UNITED NATIONS SUB-COMMITTEE TODAY THAT THE NEW INTERNATIONAL PEACE CAPITAL SHOULD BE ESTABLISHED IN THE UNITED STATES "BECAUSE IT IS A COUNTRY THAT BELONGS MORE TO THE WORLD THAN TO ITS OWN PEOPLE."

WHILE THE SUB-COMMITTEE RESUMED HEARINGS ON OFFERS FROM AMERICAN CITIES FOR THE WORLD CAPITAL SITE, THE GENERAL COMMITTEE

3024-32243

OF THE UNITED NATIONS PREPARATORY COMMISSION ARGUED THE MAIN ISSUE: WHETHER THE WORLD CAPITAL SHOULD BE IN THE UNITED STATES OR EUROPE.

THE UNITED STATES IS TAKING NO OFFICIAL PART IN THE DEBATE ON THE SITE OF THE ORGANIZATION. PEPPER REPRESENTED MIAMI, AND OTHER DELEGATIONS APPEARED FOR HYDE PARK, N.Y., THE STATE OF INDIANA, AND NAVY ISLAND.

DEC 9 - 1945

LIEUT. GOV. RICHARD T. JAMES OF INDIANA ALSO PLEADED THAT THE WORLD CAPITAL BE ESTABLISHED IN THE UNITED STATES.

"IF YOU BRING THE UNITED NATIONS HOME TO THE UNITED STATES," HE TOLD THE SUB-COMMITTEE, "OUR PEOPLE COULD BECOME FAMILIAR WITH INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS. WE ARE READY TO ACCEPT THE RESPONSIBILITY OF SEEING THAT THERE IS NO FAILURE THIS TIME. AND WE FEEL THERE IS NO BETTER WAY OF INSURING SUCCESS THAN TO ESTABLISH THE PERMANENT HOME IN THEUNITED STATES."

PEPPER DEVOTED MOST OF HIS ARGUMENT TO THE ADVANTAGES OF THE UNITED STATES AS THE SITE FOR THE CAPITAL.

"I URGE THOSE WHO ARE MAKING THE MOMENTOUS DECISION ON SELECTING A SITE FOR THE UNITED NATIONS HOME TO TRY THE NEW WORLD THIS TIME," THE SENATOR SAID. "THE OLD WORLD HAD ITS CHANCE. IF THIS ORGANIZATION FAILS, I SEE NOTHING BUT A CATACLYSM OF DESTRUCTION FACING MANKIND."

PEPPER SAID THAT DURING A RECENT TOUR OF EUROPE "I HAVE NOT NOT FOUND A GREATER ATTACHMENT TO THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION THAN I FOUND IN MY OWN COUNTRY."

"LET NO ONE HAVE ANY DOUBT THAT THE UNITED STATES WILL PUT UP ITS SHARE OF MONEY AND FIGHTING FORCES TO MAINTAIN PEACE OF THE WORLD," HE SAID.

DEC 9 - 1945

"I WANT TO EMPHASIZE THAT THE MOST SUCCESSFUL UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION IN THE WORLD TODAY IS THE UNITED NATIONS," PEPPER CONTINUED. "IT IS THE SANCTUARY OF PEOPLE OF EVERY COUNTRY. IT SEEMS APPROPRIATE TO ME THAT THE PERMANENT HOME SHOULD BE ESTABLISHED IN THE UNITED STATES."

BENSON FROST OF NEW YORK, APPEARING FOR HYDE PARK, SAID HE FELT SURE THAT IF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT "WERE ALIVE TODAY HE WOULD FEEL IT A TRIBUTE THAT YOU BRING THE UNITED NATIONS HOME TO THE PLACE WHERE HE CONCEIVED THE IDEA OF A UNION OF NATIONS OF THE WORLD."

"IN DEATH NEX NO GREATER TRIBUTE COULD BE PAID TO HIS MEMORY AND THE HUMANITARIAN WORK THAT HE DID," FROST ADDED.

CHAUNCEY HAMLIN OF BUFFALO, APPEARING FOR NAVY ISLAND, SAID "WE BELIEVE WE HAVE SOMETHING TO OFFER THE UNITED NATIONS IN NAVY ISLAND--AN INTERNATIONAL CITY."

DEC 9 - 1945

HAMLIN SAID HE WANTED TO ENDORSE PEPPER'S REMARKS, AND ADDED THAT "IF THERE SHOULD BE A FAILURE AT THIS TIME WE WILL BE FACED WITH CATASTROPHIC CIRCUMSTANCES." ##

UNITED NATIONS (175)

LONDON, DEC. 8-(AP)-PREPARATORY COMMISSION DELEGATES PLUNGED DEEPER TODAY INTO THE ARGUMENT OVER ESTABLISHING THE UNITED NATIONS' PERMANENT HOME IN THE UNITED STATES OR EUROPE, WHILE A SUB-COMMITTEE RESUMED HEARINGS ON OFFERS FROM AMERICAN CITIES FOR THE WORLD CAPITAL SITE.

DELEGATIONS FROM MIAMI, FLA., HYDE PARK, N.Y., AND THE STATE OF INDIANA APPEARED BEFORE THE SUB-COMMITTEE TO ADVANCE ARGUMENTS FOR SELECTION OF RESPECTIVE LOCALITIES AS THE WORLD ORGANIZATION'S PERMANENT HOME.

MEANWHILE, A GENERAL COMMITTEE OF THE UNITED NATIONS PREPARATORY COMMISSION ARGUED THE MAIN ISSUE: SHOULD THE WORLD CAPITAL BE IN THE UNITED STATES OR EUROPE?

ALTHOUGH 14 MEMBERS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, INCLUDING RUSSIA, HAVE RECOMMENDED SELECTION OF THE UNITED STATES, OPENING ARGUMENTS YESTERDAY GAVE EUROPEAN SUPPORTERS A THREE-TO-ONE EDGE. HOWEVER, DELEGATES SUPPORTING THE UNITED STATES WERE STILL OPTIMISTIC OVER CHANCES OF WINNING THE NECESSARY TWO-THIRDS MAJORITY.

THE SWING OF CANADA AND POLAND, ALONG WITH GREECE, TO THE EUROPEAN SIDE YESTERDAY CAME AS A SURPRISE TO MOST DELEGATES.

THE ARAB STATES APPEARED TO HOLD THE DECIDING VOTES, AND THEIR STAND IS EXPECTED TO REFLECT WHERE THEY EXPECT TO RECEIVE SUPPORT ON OTHER CONFERENCE ISSUES.

(ADVANCE) LONDON, DEC. 8--(AP)--BRITAIN'S LABOR GOVERNMENT IS FINDING OUT THAT IT IS EASIER TO TALK ABOUT SOCIALISM THAN TO PUT IT INTO PRACTICE.

THE REGIME WHICH TOOK OFFICE LAST JULY AFTER A THUNDEROUS DEFEAT OF WINSTON CHURCHILL'S CONSERVATIVES, HAS OFFERED ONLY A SMALL PART OF ITS PRE-ELECTION FIVE YEAR PROGRAM TO PARLIAMENT.

ALTHOUGH PRIME MINISTER ATTLEE HAS ASSURED COMMONS THAT THE LABOR GOVERNMENT WILL PROCEED WITH ITS PROGRAM, IT IS MOVING SLOWLY IN TWO OF THE BIGGEST FIELDS OF PUBLIC OWNERSHIP--TRANSPORTATION, AND IRON AND STEEL.

EMANUEL SHINWELL, LABOR MINISTER OF FUEL AND POWER, ACKNOWLEDGED ONE REASON FOR HIS PARTY'S CIRCUMSPECT APPROACH IN ADDRESSING REPRESENTATIVES OF THE COAL INDUSTRY, WHEN HE SAID:

DEC 9 - 1945

"I WISH I COULD CONVINCE YOU TO AGREE TO THE PRINCIPLE OF CONFISCATION. THEN MY TASK WOULD BE SIMPLE. BUT WHEN YOU GET ON THE SLIPPER SLOPE OF CONFISCATION, COMPLICATIONS--LEGAL, FINANCIAL AND OTHERWISE, COME ONE AFTER ANOTHER X X X"

SHINWELL SAID THAT THE GOVERNMENT IS ABOUT TO TAKE OVER THE MINING INDUSTRY "BUT THAT IS NOT AS EASY AS IT LOOKS. I'VE BEEN TALKING OF NATIONALIZATION FOR 40 YEARS, BUT THE COMPLICATIONS OF TRANSFER OF PROPERTY NEVER OCCURRED TO ME."

STILL ANOTHER REASON FOR THE SLOW APPROACH IS THE OBVIOUS DIFFICULTY OF COORDINATING MULTITUDINOUS OWNERSHIP, AS SUCH AS EXISTS IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION, WHERE MANY SYSTEMS ARE MUNICIPALLY OPERATED.

NATIONALIZATION OF THE BANK OF ENGLAND ALREADY IS BEFORE COMMONS AND LEGISLATION FOR NATIONALIZATON OF THE COAL INDUSTRY IS EXPE

EXPECTED SHORTLY. THE GOVERNMENT PLANS ALSO EARLY NATIONALIZATION OF ALL BRITISH AIRLINES AND ALL EXTERNAL TELEGRAPH AND CABLE SERVIC

HOUSE MAJORITY LEADER HERBERT MORRISON HAS ANNOUNCED PLANS TO EXTEND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP TO THE GAS AND ELECTRIC INDUSTRIES, RAILWAYS, DOCKS AND HAROBR FACILITIES, CANALS AND LONG DISTANCE TRUCKING WITHIN THE NEXT FIVE YEARS.

DEC 9 1945

HE OMMITTED COMMENT ON SHORT DISTANCE TRUCKING, WHICH COMPRISES A MAJORITY OF BRITAIN'S INLAND TRANSPORT--AND SAID SPECIFICALLY THAT COASTAL SHIPPING WOULD NOT BE NATIONALIZED.

MOREOVER, HE SAID THE GOVERNMENT WAS UNCERTAIN WHETHER TO NATIONALIZE PASSENGER TRANSPORTATION OR SIMPLY TO GIVE PRIVATE ENTERPRISE GREATER GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION.

HE SAID THAT A DECISION ON IRON AND STEEL WOULD BE WITHHELD PENDING A REPORT BY THE INDUSTRY ON WHAT IS NEEDED FOR EFFICIENT OPERATION TRANSPORTATION.

PASSENGER TRANSPORTATION AND IRON AND STEEL WERE NOTABLY EARMARKED FOR NATIONALIZATION WITHIN FIVE YEARS IN THE LABOR PARTY'S ELECTION MANIFESTO--"LET'S FACE THE FUTURE."

EVEN A CURTAILED PROGRAM OF NATIONALIZATION IS IMMENSE. APPROXIMATELY $8,000,000,000 WORTH OF CAPITAL IS INVOLVED IF CALCULATEDON THE MARKET QUOTATIONS OF SHARES IN CORPORATIONS DUE FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

THESE INCLUDE LONG DISTANCE HAULAGE $200,000,000; CALLS AND DOCKS $640,000,000; RAILWAYS $3,460,000,000; GAS $700,000,000; ELECTRICITY $1,400,000,000; GAS $700,000,000; COAL $1,200,000,000; CABLE AND WIRELESS $120,000,000; BANK OF ENGLAND $232,000,000. #

MIGHT LEAD FOREIGN MINISTERS

BY EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, DEC. 8-(AP)-INFORMED QUARTERS SAID TODAY THAT BRITISH AND AMERICAN CIRCLES WERE HIGHLY OPTIMISTIC OVER THE FORTHCOMING CONFERENCE OF RUSSIAN, UNITED STATES AND BRITISH FOREIGN MINISTERS, BECAUSE OF THE CAREFUL ADVANCE PLANNING FOR IT.

THESE QUARTERS SAID THAT LACK OF PREPARATION--TO WHICH MANY ATTRIBUTED THE BREAKDOWN OF THE LONDON FOREIGN MINISTERS CONFERENCE--WOULD NOT BE REPEATED AT THE DEC. 16 MOSCOW MEETING.

PREPARATIONS HAVE BEEN UNDERWAY FOR SOME TIME, IT WAS SAID, AND LITTLE, IF ANYTHING, IS BEING LEFT TO CHANCE. THE AGENDA ALREADY HAS BEEN SET FORTH IN DETAIL AND MUCH STUDY HAS BEEN GIVEN TO PROCEDURAL ROUTINE.

IT WAS ADMITTED THAT DIFFICULT ISSUES, INCLUDING THE QUESTION OF CONTROLLING THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATOMIC ENERGY, WOULD BE RAISED, BUT THIS TIME JUST WHAT THE ISSUES ARE AS WELL AS INDIVIDUAL POINTS OF VIEW WILL BE KNOWN IN ADVANCE.

THE FACT THAT IT WAS TO BE A MEETING OF THE "BIG THREE" AND NOT OF FIVE POWERS WAS SEEN HERE AS A DEFINITE RETURN TO THE THREE-POWER PRINCIPLE LAID DOWN AT YALTA AND POTSDAM--A POSITION WHICH HAS BEEN INSISTED UPON BY THE RUSSIANS.

(IN LONDON, SOME DIPLOMATS INTERPRETED THE MEETING AS A PRELUDE TO A JOINT BRITISH-AMERICAN-RUSSIAN PLEDGE TO PLACE CONTROL OF THE ATOMIC BOMB IN THE HANDS OF THE UNITED NATIONS. IT ALSO WAS POINTED OUT THAT THE THREE FOREIGN MINISTERS PROBABLY WOULD NOT HAVE CALLED A MEETING AT THIS TIME UNLESS THEY WERE CONFIDENT OF REACHING BASIC AGREEMENTS ON THE ATOMIC BOMB AND OTHER ISSUES.)

WASHINGTON,DEC.8-(AP)-DON'T SAY "PENSION", CHUM, WHEN YOU TALK ABOUT RETIREMENT LEGISLATION FOR CONGRESSMEN.

TOUCHY ON THAT SUBJECT EVER SINCE THE "BUNDLES FOR CONGRESS" MOVEMENT STARTED FOUR YEARS AGO WHEN SIMILAR LEGISLATION WAS DEBATED, THE HOUSE CIVIL SERVICE COMMITTEE ASSERTED TODAY:

"THIS IS NOT PENSION LEGISLATION--IT IS CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT LEGISLATION."

ONE OF ITS MAIN OBJECTIVES, THE COMMITTEE ADDED, IS TO ATTRACT TO CONGRESS "THE BEST BRAINS" AND "REWARD LONG AND FAITHFUL LEGISLATIVE SERVICE WITH APPROPRIATE BENEFITS OF SECURITY, THE DESIRE OF WHICH MOTIVATES AND SHAPES THE ACTIONS OF EVERY MAN."

THE COMMITTEE WAS TALKING ABOUT LEGISLATION DUE FOR A HOUSE VOTE PERHAPS NEXT WEEK. IT WOULD BRING MEMBERS OF CONGRESS AND HEADS OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS INTO THE CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT FUND.

IN A FORMAL REPORT THE COMMITTEE SAID THAT MEMBERS OF CONGRESS WILL RECEIVE ONLY "THAT WHICH THEY HAVE EARNED AND PAID FOR," AND WON'T GET "SOMETHING FOR NOTHING."

WHAT A CONGRESSMAN GETS OUT OF THE RETIREMENT FUND, THE COMMITTEE EXPLAINED, WILL BE ONLY IN PROPORTION TO WHAT HE PUTS IN, AND THE PROPORTION WILL BE THE SAME AS THAT OF OTHER FEDERAL EMPLOYES ALREADY

IT WON'T BE AS MUCH AS COMPARABLE MEMBERS OF THE JUDICIARY AND ARMY AND NAVY PERSONNEL RECEIVE UPON RETIREMENT, THE COMMITTEE ADDED.
THE COMMITTEE SAID A CONGRESSMAN MUST HAVE SERVED AT LEAST FIVE YEARS, HAVE REACHED THE AGE OF 55, AND CONTRIBUTED A MINIMUM OF $2,500 TO THE SYSTEM BEFORE HE CAN GET ANYTHING OUT OF IT, EXCEPT A REFUND OF WHAT HE HAS PAID PLUS FOUR PER CENT INTEREST.

CHICAGO, DEC.8-(AP)-THE NAMES OF HAROLD E.STASSEN OF MINNESOTA AND JOHN W.BRICKER OF OHIO POPPED UP MOST FREQUENTLY IN LOBBY CONVERSATIONS ABOUT A 1948 GOP TICKET AS THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE PREPARED TO ACT TODAY ON A CONGRESSIONAL DECLARATION OF PARTY POLICY.
A RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE HEADED BY VETERAN REP.CARROLL REECE OF TENNESSEE SCHEDULED A MEETING TO CONSIDER THE INTERIM PLATFORM, AMID INDICATIONS PARTY LEADERS ARE SET TO SQUELCH ANY POSSIBLE CRITICISM OR ADDITIONS.
CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND, ARIZONA MEMBER, TOLD REPORTERS HE WANTS THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO SUPPLEMENT WHAT THE SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES HAD TO SAY. BUT THE BETTING ODDS WERE LONG THAT HE WOULD BE UNSUCCESSFUL IN THIS EFFORT.
KELLAND HAD SOME SUPPORT IN THE MOVE, HOWEVER. WALTER S. HALLANAN OF WEST VIRGINIA SAID HE THINKS THE COMMITTEE OUGH TO HAVE SOMETHING ADDITIONAL TO SAY FOR ITSELF, AND LEW WENTZ OF OKLAHOMA TOLD A REPORTER HE FEELS THE SAME WAY.
REP.JOSEPH W.MARTIN, JR., OF MASSACHUSETTS, MINORITY HOUSE LEADER, SAID IT'S ALL RIGHT WITH HIM IF THE COMMITTEE HAS SOME ADDITIONAL SUGGESTIONS TO MAKE ABOUT PARTY POLICY.
THE DISCUSSION OF POTENTIAL PRESIDENTIAL AND VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES WENT ON APACE, DESPITE THE FACT THAT THE OFFICIAL PROGRAM HAD NO ROOM FOR ANY SUCH CONJECTURES.
GOV.DWIGHT H.GREEN OF ILLINOIS WAS CREDITED WIDELY WITH HAVING BIG DEFINITELY YESTERDAY FOR AT LEAST A SECOND-PLACE SPOT ON THE TICKET WHEN HE TALKED TURKEY TO COMMITTEE MEMBERS ABOUT WHAT THE PARTY OUGH TO DO TO WIN THE 1948 CAMPAIGN.
INFORMAL LOBBY CONVERSATIONS ON POSSIBLE CANDIDATES CONCERNED THEMSELVES TO A LARGE EXTENT WITH A HALF DOZEN MEN WHO HAVE BEEN MENTIONED OFTEN IN THE PAST, INCLUDING GOV.THOMAS E.DEWEY OF NEW YORK, WHO RAN UNSUCCESSFULLY LAST YEAR.
BUT J. RUSSEL SPRAGUE, NEW YORK NATIONAL COMMITTEEMAN AND 1944 ADVISER OF DEWEY, TOLD A REPORTER IT IS TOO EARLY TO TALK ABOUT POTENTIAL CANDIDATES.
HOWEVER, J.KENNETH BRADLEY OF CONNECTICUT SAID HE HAD HEARD A LOT OF TALK AMONG THE REPUBLICANS ABOUT STASSEN, FORMER GOVERNOR OF MINNESOTA. STASSEN SERVED AS A CAPTAIN IN THE NAVY AND WAS ONE OF THE AMERICAN DELEGATES TO THE UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE IN SAN FRANCISCO.
MRS. GEORGE T. GERLINGER OF OREGON SAID MANY IN THE NORTHWEST THOUGHT A TICKET COMPOSED OF STASSEN AND BRICKER, FORMER OHIO GOVERNOR WHO WAS THE VICE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE IN 1944, WOULD "MAKE A FINE COMBINATION." SEVERAL REPUBLICANS MENTIONED BRICKER AS POSSIBLE TOP MAN FOR THE TICKET.
THE COMMITTEE, MEANWHILE, SCHEDULED A BUSY DAY TODAY, TOPPED WITH ADDRESSES AT A BANQUET TONIGHT BY NATIONAL CHAIRMAN HERBERT E. BROWNELL, GOV. ROBERT D. BLUE OF IOWA AND SENATOR THOMAS C. HART OF CONNECTICUT.
AT YESTERDAY'S SESSIONS, THE COMMITTEE LEARNED THAT ITS FINANCE GROUP, HEADED BY JAMES S. KEMPER OF CHICAGO, HAD RAISED $550,000 THIS YEAR AND SPENT $450,000 OF IT. THE REPUBLICANS STARTED THE YEAR WITH A $250,000 SURPLUS AND THUS NOW HAVE $350,000 IN THE TREASURY.

"FOR THIS REASON," HE DECLARED, "I FEEL THAT PRESIDENT TRUMAN SOON WILL REVISE HIS ESTIMATE OF THE NECESSITY FOR BIG THREE CONFERENCES X X X OR ANYWAY, BIG FOUR CONFERENCES."

THE FORMER TREASURY SECRETARY SAID HE WAS "GREATLY DISTURBED BY THE FEARSOMELY SLOW DEVELOPMENT OF OUR NATIONAL POLICY IN DEALING WITH GERMANY," AND ADDED: "THE REAL, SOLID ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN BUILDING FROM THE BLUEPRINT OF THE POTSDAM DECLARATION HAVE BEEN PITIFULLY SMALL. IN MOST IMPORTANT FIELDS, NOTHING HAS HAPPENED.

"IF WE CANNOT CARRY OUT THIS RELATIVELY SIMPLE PROGRAM," MORGENTHAU SAID, "THERE IS LITTLE CHANCE THAT WE CAN GO ON TO BUILD A PERMANENT PEACE.

himself gave orders to admit no reporters to the hospital. He was treated by Lt. Col. O. S. Hill, a surgeon.

Patton and Gay had left 15th Army headquarters at Bad Nauheim early this morning to go pheasant hunting near Mannheim.

The text of the Army's announcement of the accident, released at Gen. Joseph T. McNarney's headquarters in Frankfurt, follows:

"General Patton was injured about noon today in an automobile accident near Mannheim and is now in the 130th station hospital at Heidelberg. A diagnosis of his injuries, which are serious, cannot be completed until tomorrow. He is suffering from a spinal injury.

"Maj. Gen. A. W. Kenner, theater surgeon, went immediately to the hospital and is remaining with General Patton.

"Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, chief of staff of the 15th army which General Patton commands, was in the automobile with General Patton but was not injured."

Patton 60 Years Old

Patton, known to his men as "Old Blood and Guts," was 60 years old on Nov. 11 and has been unofficially reported planning retirement after a colorful 41 years in the army climaxed by his spectacular Third army dash through France and Germany in 1944 and 1945.

Patton took over briefly as commander of U. S. forces in the European theater in the interim between Gen. Eisenhower's departure last month and the appointment of Gen. McNarney to the post. While he was serving as U. S. commander, Patton was asked to comment on the retirement reports. He declined to say yes or no, but added that if and when he did, he would devote himself to sailing, fishing and hunting.

It had been considered likely that he would take at least a good long leave. He explained at the time that "except for nine days I had back in July, I haven't had a good one since March of 1940."

Patton, a swashbuckling, "spit-and-polish" disciplinarian, has been one of the most colorful, most controversial, figures in the United States Army.

His most outspoken critics agreed that he proved a superb field commander and a tank and armor expert who bowed to no peer, either Allied or enemy.

But he was removed from the command of his Third army last October after he had made a press conference statement on the de-Nazification program in his occupation zone. Patton was quoted as comparing "this Nazi thing" to the "Democratic and Republican fights back home," and adding that "You always find the outs back home making charges against the ins."

On Oct. 2 Patton was relieved of his Third army command and was assigned to the 15th—a paper army whose current duty is to prepare reports on lessons of the war. His Third army was taken over by Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott.

Wife on Way With Specialist

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP)—Mrs. Patton left by plane tonight for her husband's bedside, accompanied by Col. R. Glen Spurling, neural surgery specialist of Louisville, Ky., who is being flown to Germany to attend the general.

Mrs. Patton's plane is an Air Transport Command cargo-mail plane—a bucket seat type. It took off at 9:57 P. M., Eastern standard time, on a regularly scheduled flight and is due in Paris at 5 A. M., local times, Tuesday.

The exact route was contingent upon weather conditions, although a stop is scheduled at the Azores.

Colonel Spurling was intercepted on a train at Cincinnati by Army officials and flown to Washington for the emergency mission. He arrived here at 9:20 P. M. and thirty-seven minutes later was on his way with Mrs. Patton to Europe. They were accompanied by Lieut. Col. Walter T. Kerwin of the General Staff Operations Division.

The State Department hurriedly made arrangements for Mrs. Patton's passport.

Colonel Spurling, who recently returned from Europe, where he was senior consultant in neurosurgery, was on his way here on Army business when he was called upon to make the flight.

Mrs. Patton Uninformed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP). — Mrs. George S. Patton jr. said today that she had received no information concerning the accident.

The first news that the general had been taken to a hospital in Heidelberg was conveyed to her by The Associated Press.

"When did this happen?" she asked.

Informed of the details, she asked to be kept advised of the general's condition and expressed hope that "good news" would be forthcoming.

Mrs. Patton is staying with her daughter, the wife of Lieutenant Colonel James W. Totten.

Front End of Auto Smashed in, Commander Rushed to Hospital.

MANNHEIM, Germany, Dec. 9—(AP) Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., was seriously injured shortly before noon today when his sedan collided head-on with a half-ton army truck on a superhighway near the outskirts of Mannheim.

A army headquarters statement said Patton was suffering from spinal injuries and that his condition was serious.

An eye-witness said Patton's face was covered with blood from cuts he sustained when he was thrown violently forward by the impact.

Staff Officer a Passenger

Maj. Gen. H. R. Gay, chief of staff of Patton's U. S. 15th army, the only other passenger, and the sedan's driver were found outside the car by a combat engineering unit headed by Maj. Charles Tucker of New Hamburg, N. Y.

They said they found Patton reclining in the back seat of the car. All the general said was: "My neck hurts." He did not lose consciousness.

An ambulance was rushed to the scene and made the 20-mile trip to the 130th station hospital in Heidelberg in 25 minutes.

Eyewitnesses said the accident occurred when two half-ton army trucks came out suddenly from a side road into the autobahn, cutting in front of the Patton car.

The front end of Patton's machine was badly damaged and the back seat, where he was sitting, was covered with blood.

Driver Uninjured

The driver, Pfc. Horace Woodring escaped injury and Gay was believed to have been only shaken up. The driver of the truck was identified only as Robert Thompson.

LORDS WILL STUDY HAW HAW'S APPEAL

LONDON, Dec. 9 — (AP) Britain's House of Lords will take up Monday the appeal of William (Lord Haw Haw) Joyce whose hope of escaping the gallows rests with the very body he mocked with wartime broadcasts for the Nazis.

Three or five lords of appeal, constituting a court of last resort, will listen for three or four days to arguments and then decide whether to uphold or reverse the verdict of the King's court which found Joyce guilty of high treason and sentenced him to death.

Joyce, who was nicknamed "Lord Haw Haw" by the British because of the pseudo-aristocratic accent he used on the German radio, will be judged by real peers of the realm.

To make the turnabout complete, the scar-faced little condemned man will occupy the diplomatic box-normally reserved for ambassadors and other distinguished visitors—when the lords in their traditional wigs open the hearing. The arguments will be presented in the King's robing room, the chamber used by the lords since the Commons chamber was destroyed by bombs in 1941.

In his appeal Joyce is not denying that he made broadcasts from Germany seeking to divide and frighten the British in their darkest days of the war. Neither is the Brooklyn-born Joyce claiming the protection of American citizenship, as he did during his trial.

Lawyers appointed by the court to represent him have based their appeal on the grounds that Joyce became a German citizen in 1939, even though he travelled to Germany on a British passport.

HUNGARIAN PUPPET TO DIE

McNarney Advocates Full News From Home

Berlin, Dec. 9 (AP)—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, head of United States occupation forces in Germany, today urged the expansion of the Army newspaper Stars And Stripes to include "the full report of the Associated Press and other media" in an effort to boost the morale of American soldiers.

Stars And Stripes, the general said in an interview, should "give the soldier here what he wants—news from home, who is elected mayor, who died, what goes on back there."

"We have lots of money," McNarney said, "so let's give the soldier what he wants and needs. Stars And Stripes should concentrate on lifting the morale, which has been plenty low here some times."

Gypsy Markoff Marries Capt. David L. Harter

Berlin, Dec. 9 (AP)—Gypsy Markoff, singer, dancer and leader of USO troupes, and Capt. David Lowell Harter, of Indianapolis, were married in a civil ceremony yesterday.

A religious ceremony will be performed tomorrow in the army chapel at military headquarters.

Harter met Miss Markoff, a New Yorker, two weeks ago. They plan a honeymoon on the Riviera after her show makes a brief stand at Bremen.

AWOL Soldiers Responsible For Climb in Paris Crime

PARIS, Dec. 9 — (AP) Every night a "lost regiment" of perhaps 2,000 men pours into the soldier-congested areas of Paris, swells the wave of post-war petty crime, and disappears into its secret dwellings before dawn.

They are American soldiers, but they obey no orders. They are the "AWOLS", and more than one-fifth of them in the European theater are believed to have drifted to Paris.

10 Arrested Daily

The U. S. Army is secretive about its "absent without official leave," men, but a check of individual arrests by military police discloses an average of 10 AWOLS seized in Paris every day. Mostly they are caught when they commit some kind of delinquency.

They form only a part of the element responsible for the sky-rocketing crime wave in Paris, and the often sensational Paris press has been careful not to place the blame either on the AWOLS, or on the American soldier stationed in Paris.

France Soir, in its account of a crime wave which has seen killings, shootings and beatings mount to 996 from January through October compared with 302 for the same period in 1939, emphasized that thousands wearing American uniforms are not American soldiers.

The French press when it finds it necessary to refer to Americans in its crime stories uses the terms "men in American uniform" or "a man dressed as an American soldier."

Hold-ups in the ten months period in Paris totaled 18,202 compared with 3,894 in 1939 and robberies 55,199 compared with 22,236.

The typical AWOL seems to get his start by simply having too good a time and overstaying his furlough. He then figures he might as well overstay it a week as a day.

He may encounter a street girl. Generally she is only too glad to have a soldier boy to shelter. She takes him to her home.

At bars he may be approached shortly by persons offering to serve as "fences" for goods from Red Cross clubs, where he can remove clothes or loot from pockets of other soldiers in shower rooms, gyms and sleeping quarters.

Later he may join other "AWOLS," and in gangs of from two to five they begin crimes of violence—holdups and burglaries.

A large proportion of those not caught for criminal activities are arrested because they deserted their original girl and she tipped off the police.

Mostly, however, they are caught in the act of committing crimes.

About one-third of them wear French civilian clothes.

A good proportion may never be caught. They may live out their lives in France or smuggle their way back to the United States.

Anybody AWOL for more than 20 days is automatically charged with desertion, but military courts rarely convict on that charge. To prove desertion it must be shown that the AWOL had no intention of returning to the army. That is difficult.

Nazi Alliance with Britain Was von Ribbentrop's Aim

NUERNBERG, Dec. 9 — (AP) Joachim von Ribbentrop, a pale ghost of the gold-braided figure who ruled the Nazi foreign office for seven years, declared today he had worked for a German-English alliance and had opposed war with the Soviet Union.

Answering a list of written questions submitted by the Associated Press, Ribbentrop asserted he extended peace feelers to both Hitler and Germany's enemies during the war.

He indignantly denied that he had misled Hitler in August, 1939 with information that Britain would not fight for Poland and that therefore a general war would not follow.

Says King Misrepresented

He confirmed that the notorious incident of February, 1937, when he gave the Nazi salute to King George on being presented as the Nazi ambassador to Britain, was misrepresented by "evil tongues," but that the King had accepted the salute in a friendly spirit.

He reiterated loyalty to Hitler.

The questions, transmitted to the accused war criminals by his attorney, Dr. Fritz Sauter, and Ribbentrop's carefully composed answers follow:

Q. When did you see the Fuehrer for the last time? Where? Are you convinced he is dead or still living?

A. I saw the Fuehrer for the last time April 23 in the Reichchancellery. I am convinced he is dead.

Q. Do you still believe in the principles and objectives of National Socialism?

Believer in Hitler

A. Since I was not an old party member I was less concerned with the principles of National Socialism. When I entered the party in 1932 I was convinced that only Adolf Hitler could save Germany from chaos. All that the Fuehrer did for the workers and his whole personality drew me magnetically as a patriot under his spell. For the future I have no plans. All that I would like to do would be to be of service to the German people in some form in their great misfortune and sorrow.

Q. What were the chief reasons for Germany's defeat and what is your appraisal today of Hitler?

A. The causes for Germany's defeat, in my view, were the superiority of the enemy coalition in men and material, and also the internal situation played a role in this. In my time I swore loyalty to Adolf Hitler and held to it until his end. Would it be nice if now, when the Fuehrer is dead, I spoke otherwise?

Q. Did you tell the Fuehrer in August 1939 that England would not fight for Poland?

A. The assertion that I told the Fuehrer that England would not fight for Poland is untrue. That was a propaganda invention of our former enemies. In a public speech in 1941 I made that clear. What is true is that the Fuehrer, upon news of the signing of the English-Polish pact Aug. 25, 1939, held up the march of the German army which had been already ordered. This occurred on my suggestion because I knew England would fight.

Q. Were you in favor of Germany's attack on the Soviet Union?

Opposed Attack On Russia

A. I proposed the policy of balance and friendship with the Soviet Union to the Fuehrer in 1939 and I signed the pact in Moscow that this policy should endure for the longest time. The outbreak of hostilities with the Soviet Union in 1941 caused me the deepest regret and I always did what was in my power to hinder its development. The Fuehrer believed he was forced to his decision because of military measures of the Soviet Union.

Q. What do you hope your witnesses from Germany and abroad will testify?

A. The witnesses from Germany and foreign countries will, I believe, confirm that: 1. I always stood for a policy of peace and understanding. 2. For almost nine years of my life, I worked for a conclusive German-English friendship and a German-English alliance. 3. I viewed the understanding begun with Soviet Russia in 1939 as a cornerstone of German foreign policy.

Furthermore, these witnesses will be able to testify that during the war I attempted to influence the Fuehrer and also the enemies to a compromise. But whether that would have been possible after three years of war I must, in the light of my experiences, doubt.

Q. What is your explanation of the National Socialist salute you gave the King of England?

A. At the time I gave the National Socialist salute to the King of England I wished to accord him a high honor. I know it was rightly understood. The King accepted the gesture in a very friendly fashion. Evil tongues then attempted to misrepresent the thing.

NAZI POLICE CHIEF RETURNS TO COURT

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 9 —(AP) Ernest Kaltenbrunner is expected to take his place in the prisoners' dock tomorrow with the 20 other top Nazis as the war crimes trial enters its fourth week, American authorities said today.

Kaltenbrunner, former chief of the Reich security department and head of the criminal police, has recovered from a cranial hemorrhage suffered on the eve of the trial opening. He has retained his status as a defendant despite his absence for medical treatment.

A highlight this week will be the presentation of films taken by the Nazis themselves, depicting their rise to power and showing the defendants strutting through their days of glory.

A prosecution spokesman said the film would be shown probably on Tuesday, after the American prosecutors complete the presentation of documents concerning the Axis conspiracy for waging aggressive war against the United States.

Evidence relating to the Nazi program of slave labor is scheduled for presentation beginning on Wednesday, to be followed by the prosecution's case respecting concentration camps and the persecution of Jews.

Today Goering and 12 other of the defendants attended Lutheran services in the jail, and three Catholic prisoners heard mass celebrated by American chaplains.

Hitler Enraged by Failure of Sabotage Missions in U. S., Ordered Jews Be Employed by Nazis in Intelligence Work

By GEORGE TUCKER

Copyright, 1945, By the Associated Press

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 9 —(AP) When Adolf Hitler heard how his personally ordered sabotage attempt on the United States in 1942 had failed because of action of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he yelled at Germany's intelligence chiefs: "Why didn't you take Jews for that?"

This was reported today by Maj. Gen. Erwin LaHousen, who had direct charge of German sabotage operations, in an exclusive interview with the Associated Press in Nuernberg where he is under heavy guard as a prosecution witness.

As a result of Hitler's statement LaHousen added, Jews were given jobs in the German intelligence service for more than a year.

The tall, cadaverous chief of the sabotage section through the critical early years of the war said the code name for the enterprise was "Pastorius," that the plan called for blowing up of American aluminum factories and that Hitler personally had ordered the enterprise.

(German submarines put four men ashore at Amagansett beach, Long Island, N. Y., on June 13, 1942 and landed four others near Jacksonville, Fla., three days later. The men quickly were rounded up before they could carry out their plot.

(Convicted by a military commission, six of the men were electrocuted in the District of Columbia jail. Ernest P. Burger was let off with a life prison sentence and George Dasch with 30 years at hard labor because of their assistance to the U. S. government in the apprehension and conviction of the others).

LaHousen said that while the plot was being hatched he suspected that Dasch had been planted by the Americans in the group selected for the mission.

The German general pictured Adm. Wilhelm Canaris, Greek-born head of the German army's intelligence section, as having taken a disinterested attitude toward the project. Canaris was among those executed by the Nazis following the the July, 1944 bomb plot on Hitler's life.

Gesticulating with his huge hands and leaning back in a chair while a stenographer took down his statement through an interpreter, LaHousen said that as far as he knew the 1942 submarine landings constituted the only sabotage attempt against the United States engineered by German army intelligence during the war, although the Nazi party may have attempted others. He gave this account of the operation:

"We had no agents in America before the war to do sabotage. This was in contrast to Intelligence Section One, who had people in America to collect information and intelligence. When I say 'We,' I mean Intelligence Two as I was responsible for it.

"Canaris was extremely reluctant to send any agents into any of the western countries before the war. What I mean is that he did not wish to send any agents into those countries who might have active missions of sabotage. He was very much in favor of sending agents there to find information and send it back to Germany.

"I must add here that the Foreign office, too, prohibited this form for political reasons because they did not want to give America anything that could be exploited by propagandists such as, for instance, a miscarriage of some sabotage enterprise. This was especially so after they (the Foreign office) received reports that were returning from the states that public opinion had very much turned itself against Germany after some such espionage activities had been discovered.

"I am now coming to the affair itself. It took place in the summer of 1942. The military departments that were interested in this, such as the air force or the armament office of the German army, became increasingly worried and approached Canaris repeatedly to take some action to damage American resources.

No Agents Available

"He, however, stalled them off for a while by saying he shared their opinion entirely that something would have to be done but that he had no people in America at the time because the Foreign office had forbidden him to do that sort of thing. Then—I am not quite sure whether it was in March or April, 1942—I accompanied Canaris to the headquarters of the Fuehrer, and evidently the people who were interested in this had gotten in touch with the Fuehrer and he called it to Canaris' attention that something would have to be done. The Fuehrer made a remark about this in an unmistakeable manner to Canaris and stated that the greatest activity would be necessary in America. Now here comes the interesting part.

"The first contact that we had with this affair was when suddenly one day an SS man by the name of Kappe appeared at our office and said that he had a number of people ready to undertake such a mission, that all of them had lived in America and were quite familiar with the ways of American life and that one of them was even an American citizen.

"They now demanded that something be undertaken so that they could be used. There was nothing that they would rather do than die for the Fuehrer. These people apparently belonged to some kind of German-American group. I do not know whether they came from the Association for Germans Abroad. I am not quite sure from where they came.

"But anyway the party demanded action on this matter and they sent this man to contact us who wore the golden party medal of membership.

Expected Failure

"Canaris already was in a 'glass house'" that is he already had been suspected of his secret activity and could not afford to have any more stones thrown at him. He consulted me as an expert in such things, and I told him that because of the great number of persons involved in the enterprise I would have to count on failure. But here were eight fanatical Nazis who were just itching to get to work.

"Canaris replied in his typical manner, 'Well, we will lose eight good Nazis then.' Then the affair took the course that I believe is generally well known now. Those people were transported and they were apprehended before they could ever go into action.

"From our point of view, I mean from the point of view of the intelligence service, this was the greatest failure ever. I forgot to mention before that I had at once suspected one of the eight to be an American agent.

"I mentioned that to Canaris when he discussed the thing. When you asked me before about the American counter-intelligence service I said I thought it was good. And here is proof that it was good. This affair had the code name Pastorius. The man's name who I suspected as being planted by the Americans is Dasch."

LaHousen then referred to the official intelligence diary and read:

"'Extensive radio news has been coming in since the early hours of 28th June that all participants in the enterprise Pastorius have been apprehended in New York and Chicago. The fact that the landing had been effected on two different points of the American coast by German submarines was clearly given: Also reports about the equipment as well as the training that they had received in the sabotage school in Berlin appeared to be correct.

"However, the sabotage objectives, apparently for propaganda reasons, were misrepresented and played up sensationally. For instance it is said that the sabotage action was to be directed against an important railroad bridge in New York and against a power house at Niagara Falls. Both objectives were never given for enterprise Pastorius. According to American news it must be assumed that all participants in this enterprise will be executed.'

Aluminum Plants Objectives

"The real objectives," LaHousen continued, "were some aluminum factories.

"Hitler reproached Canaris next time we went to the Fuehrer's headquarters in eastern Prussia.

"Hitler made some very critical remarks about this entire enterprise which caused a great stir and was exploited for propaganda, too. Canaris told Hitler that these people had not been trained agents but people from the party which the party had furnished. And then Hitler made the historical remark, 'Well, why didn't you take Jews for that.' He evidently thought at that time he could still find Jews to do that kind of work for him. And here is the most important after-effect of this enterprise.

"I was present when Hitler made this remark. When we left the Fuehrer's headquarters Canaris said to me, 'You were a witness when he told me to use Jews.'

"Whereupon he (Canaris) went back to Berlin and said that it was the Fuehrer's orders that Jews had to be given jobs in the intelligence service. Whereupon they used Jews in the intelligence service and thus saved them from the SS (storm troops) and people like (Reinhard) Heydrich for more than a year by referring constantly to the Fuehrer's order.

"Then he was called to Berchtesgaden again and taken to task by the Fuehrer about using Jews, whereupon he discontinued the practice."

Asked if there were any other sabotage missions which were successful but which the Americans heard nothing about, LaHousen said:

"Not as far as I know. Only this. This was the only case."

GALLOWS ERECTED FOR GUILTY NAZIS

HERFORD, Germany, Dec. 9—(AP) Josef Kramer, "the Beast of Belsen," blonde Irma Grese and nine other Nazi horror camp specialists today were ordered by Field Marshal Montgomery to die on the gallows. The British commander rejected all appeals of the Belsen gang.

In a small town in the British zone, the name of which was kept secret, a gallows already was being built for the eight men and three women sentenced to death by a British military court Nov. 17.

While no date for the hangings was announced, it was assumed they would take place before Christmas. A professional British executioner, Pierrepont, will be brought from England for the task. It was understood he would get $40 for the first hanging—probably Kramer—and a lesser amount for each of the 10 others.

In all, the court had convicted 30 officials of the concentration camps at Belsen and Oswiecim of responsibility in killing and torturing thousands of helpless victims of Nazi persecution. Prison sentences varying from life to one year were meted out to 19.

In addition to Kramer, 39, commandant at Oswiecim and Belsen, and the 22-year-old Grese, others who will hang are:

Dr. Fritz Klein, 58, who selected victims for the gas chamber; Peter Weingartner, 32; Franz Hoeszler, 34; Juana Borman, 42; Elizabeth Volkenrath, 26; Karl Francioh, 33; Ansgar Pichen, 32; Franz Starfle, 30; Wilhelm Dorr, 24.

HUNGARY DOOMS RAINISS

Death for Ex-Minister as Traitor —Szalasi Conviction Heard

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Dec. 8 (AP)—The People's Court today sentenced Ferenc Rainiss, former Hungarian Minister of Education, to death by hanging for war crimes and treason.

The Berlin radio, quoting dispatches from Budapest, said Ference Szalasi, the "Hitler of Hungary" and that country's last Premier before Hungary's collapse in the war, had been sentenced to death. There was no confirmation of this from any other source and it is possible that the names were confused.

ITALY CABINET IS ANNOUNCED

List Expected To Bring End To 16-Day Crisis

Rome, Monday, Dec. 10 (AP)—Alcide de Gaspari, premier-designate, announced early today formation of a new Italian cabinet—the fourth since the Italian armistice—and sent a list of ministers to Crown Prince Umberto for approval.

Although the Allied commission—which under armistice terms passes on the Ministers of War Navy and Aviation—must also approve the list, it was considered that the sixteen-day Government crisis was virtually at an end. The new Ministers of Navy and Aviation had previously been approved by the commission when they served in the Cabinet of Ferruccio Parri, whose resignation precipitated the crisis.

Only Three New Members

The new minister of war, Manlio Brosio, of the Liberal party would succeed Stefano Jacini, a Christian Democrat. The list contained only three ministers who had not served in the parri coali tion cabinet—those for war, treasury and transportation.

The ministry of public works, slated to go to a member of the Liberal party, was still unfilled.

In the new cabinet the six major Italian political parties would have an equal weight.

List Read By Nenni

The new cabinet list, as head by Pietro Nenni, socialist, included:

Premier and Foreign Minister, de Gasperi.

Vice President and Minister of the Constitutuent Assembly, Nenni.

Interior, Guiseppe Romita (Socialist).

War: Manilio Brosi. (Liberal).

Justice, Palmiro To Gliatti (Socialist).

Navy, Rafaelle de Courten (Independent).

Aviation, Mario Cevolotto (Labor Democrat).

Industry and Commerce: Giovanni Gronchi (Christian Democrat).

Education: Enrico Mole (Labor Democrat).

Postal and Telegraph: Mario Scelba (Christian Democrat).

Agriculture: Fausto Gullo (Communist).

Labor: Gaetano Barareschi (Socialist).

Finance: Mauro Scoccimarro (Communist).

Treasury: Epicarmio Corbina (Liberal).

Reconstruction: Ugo La Malfa (Action Party).

Transportation: Ricardo Lombardi (Action Party).

Oe Gasperi, a Christian Democrat party leader, had been conferring with party leaders throughout the crisis in attempts to reach a compromise solution, after Parri was forced out by withdrawel of the Liberal party and the Christian Democrats from his Cabinet as a result of feuds over control of election machinery and Fascist purge measures.

Italian Wives Of GI's Counseled By Pope

Vatican City, Dec. 9 (AP)—The Italian wives of 105 American soldiers were received by Pope Pius today at the completion of a special four-day "retreat" preparing them for their new lives in the United States.

The Pope spoke to each girl in Italian, asking where they would live in the United States, and giving counsel to those who requested it. He asked some to write letters to him presenting their problems. They will leave for the United States with their husbands in the next few months. Five of the GI husbands were also received by the Pope, who spoke to them in English.

Also granted an audience was Lieut. Col. Robert Woodward, Chicago, Ill., chief medical officer for the United States forces at Salzburg, Austria. The Pope referred to Woodward's assistance in restoring to Hungarian Catholics possessions taken from them by the Nazis, and the restitution to the Catholic Church in Hungary of the right hand of St. Stephen, Hungary's patron saint, a treasured relic which the Germans had taken to Austria.

CHINESE REDS TOLD TO CLEAR RAILWAY

CHUNGKING, Dec. 9. — (AP) Chinese Communists have been "ordered to evacuate" the area along the Changchun (Manchuria) railroad, a Chiang Kai-Shek government dispatch said today, but failed to specify whether Russia or the Chiang government gave the order.

If the Russians had issued such an order it would be a most important development.

The dispatch said traffic had been moving on the Changchun railroad between Harbin and Dairen since Nov. 25. If true, this would indicate the Chinese Communists do not control any part of that section.

The same account reported progress by Russia and the Chinese government in setting up boards for contemplated joint control of the railroad.

A report on conditions in Manchuria was submitted to Generalissimo Chiang today by Gen. Tu Li Ming, commander of Nationalist forces in that area who now is in Chungking.

Additional arrests of outstanding political and military figures in North China on charges of collaboration continued on orders of the Generalissimo's field headquarters, Associated Press correspondent Spencer Davis reported from Peiping.

Four generals and 27 prominent officials who held office during the eight-year Japanese regime in North China were among more than 300 suspects detained thus far, Davis said.

1,200 to Ship on Carrier

SHANGHAI, Dec. 9 (AP).—The aircraft carrier Maken Island was scheduled to depart for the United States Monday with 1,200 officers and enlisted men. The ship, which arrived here two days ago, should reach the West Coast Dec. 28.

Arrests in North China

CHUNGKING, Dec. 9 (AP)—Additional arrests of outstanding political and military figures in North China on charges of collaboration continued on orders of President Chiang Kai-Shek's field headquarters, The Associated Press reported from Peiping.

Four generals and twenty-seven prominent officials who held office during the eight-year Japanese regime in North China were among more than 300 suspects detained thus far.

China's Communist Leader Leads Hard, Simple Life

BY SPENCER MOOSA

CHUNGKING, Dec. 9—(AP) The second most important man in East Asia had a new suit surreptitiously tailored for him when he came to Chungking to see whether China could be unified without civil war.

The Chungking office of the Chinese Communist party thought the dull, ill-fitting, coarse gray suits which their chief, Maotse-Tung was wearing hardly became a man of his prestige, engaged as he was in councils with the exalted.

So, unbeknownst to him, with his measurements not taken but guessed, a suit of the finest cloth available in Chungking was ordered for him. It was the best one he ever had. But he didn't like it, and wore it only because of the entreaties of his subordinates.

His indifference to what he wears is as natural to Maotse-Tung as is his acceptance of life in a cave home in Yenan, Shensi province, without luxury or pretension or modern plumbing.

He is a realist with a purpose, and a man of consequence in this vast country second only to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Mao is about five feet 10 inches in height—tall for a Chinese. He is broad-shouldered and inclined to obesity. He has long, black hair, a lofty forehead and dreafy eyes. He is slightly deaf—a defect which he tries to hide.

He possesses a hearty appetite and especially is fond of hot foods peculiar to his native province of Hunan. He also likes foreign style food and, though he never drinks to excess he can take kaoliang wine—a strong white distillation made from sorghum—with the best of them.

All Chinese Communists are supposed to do some productive work. Mao grows his own tobacco, but admiring young Communists vie for for the honor of helping him, and his burden in this respect consequently is only theoretical.

The tobacco is Virginian, and is sent to a cigaret factory where it is rolled for him. He is one of the most furious chain-smokers in all China.

Mao is a man of strong constitution, seldom ill. As a youngster he hardened himself by long hikes, swimming in ponds in the winter, going without a shirt when others wore thick, padded overcoats and, occasionally subjecting himself to severe diet to test his hardihood.

Mao never has forgotten he is the son of a poor peasant who considered him unfilial and lazy. He began work on his father's humble farm at the age of six. Ever since his early youth, Mao has been a voracious and intense reader. When he picks up a newspaper he reads every item, even the advertisements. He likes Chinese novels, and often in his cave home in Yenan he stays up reading by the light of a kerosene lamp.

Mao likes to work at night, and seldom goes to bed before two or three in the morning. He gets five or six hours sleep.

He is a good listener. His subordinates describe him as mild, good-natured, tolerant, but decisive. He is not accessible to everyone, but he gives a guest all his attention.

A correspondent once interviewed him for 13 hours on end, but Mao gave no hint of annoyance.

Mao speaks no language but Chinese. He has never been abroad. He took his first airplane ride when he came to Chungking in September. People who saw him at the Yanan airport before the plane left said he was distinctly apprehensive.

He likes dancing, but perhaps is more keen than expert.

He attends the dances at Yenan Military or party headquarters. Young women comrades usually ask him for a dance and he always [illegible]ges.

Unlike prominent Chinese in non-communist China, Mao possesses no sleek limousine. His car is an ambulance fitted with seats which reached Yenan in 1938 before the "blockade". It bears the inscription: "To the heroic defenders of China" and was donated by the Chinese Hand Laundry Alliance, Inc., of New York.

Mao, who to all Chinese communists is simply but respectfully "Chairman Mao", is an accomplished orator. He makes long speeches which he prepares very carefully. An American who heard one of his addresses said: "He is inclined to be repetitious. He sometimes uses rather obscure phrases difficult to understand in Chinese and almost impossible to understand in English, but he is very fluent."

Mao was at one time a Communist member of the Kuomintang, but that seeming paradox was not unnatural before the split between right and left in the 1920's.

He has a good sense of humor, is witty, laughs heartily.

Never rich, he never has displayed any desire for riches. He never has owned any expensive jewelry. He has a fountain pen and a watch—both of them gifts.

Mao likes family life. He has been married three times. He has three sons from his second marriage and a daughter from the third. In 1920—the year Mao for the first time organized workers politically—he married Yang Kai-Hui, a communist like himself. She was executed about 10 years later by General Ho Chien, then Governor of Monoan province, on a charge of subversive activities. He divorced his second wife, Ho Tze-Nien, in 1937, and two years later married again.

7 Foreign Banks Open In Shanghai

Shanghai, Dec. 10 (AP)—Seven foreign banks reopened here today for limited banking operations. Foreign currency transactions will not be included.

Banks reopened include National City Bank of New York, Chase National Bank and Underwriters' Bank for the Far East, all American; Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Chartered Bank of India, all British, and the Banque Belge Pour Letranger.

Customers who had Chinese currency accounts at the outbreak of the war may draw on them. Those who converted into Japanese puppet currency after war began may reconvert into Chinese national currency at the fixed rate of 200 to 1.

American Conducts Shanghai Orchestra

Shanghai, Dec. 9 (AP) — An American conducted Shanghai's 65-piece symphony orchestra today for the first time in its 30-year history.

The guest conductor was Second Lieutenant Jonathan Sternberg, 26, a medical corpsman from Brooklyn.

The orchestra, considered the best in the Orient, is composed mostly of European refugees.

Truck Kills Two In Shanghai

Shanghai, Dec. 9 (AP)—United States Army and Shanghai civil police today sought the driver of a stolen American Army truck which ran wild last night in the crowded Rue Albert, killing two Chinese and injuring five. Witnesses were unable to say whether the driver was uniformed.

New PRO in Chinese Theatre

SHANGHAI, Dec. 9 (AP)—Col. William Mayer is the new theatre public relations officer, succeeding Col. Joseph K. Dickey, who returned to Washington for a new assignment. Colonel Mayer was formerly military attaché in China and Siam.

GANDHI WILL CONFER WITH WAVELL TODAY

CALCUTTA, Dec. 9. —(AP) Political interest of all India focused today on Calcutta, where Mohandas K. Gandhi and Viceroy Lord Wavell will meet tomorrow for the first time since their series of discussions last June and July.

There has been no indication of what subjects will be discussed.

During the past week the 77-year-old congress leader has spent four days in discussion with R. G. Casey, governor of Bengal, and has met with leading figures in the Congress party.

Casey met also with Maulana Abul Kalan Azad, Moslem-born congress president, Vallabhai Patel, and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, reportedly to discuss the release of prisoners interned during the August, 1942, disturbances, and political bans still in effect.

BRITISH BOMBER DOWNED IN JAVA

BATAVIA, Dec. 9.—(AP) Indonesian anti-aircraft fire brought down a Mosquito fighter bomber for the first time in the Java fighting, the British reported today, but in general military action remained comparatively quiet.

The plane was shot down in east Java, and the crew killed, the British said.

Some action was reported south of Soerabaja on the road between Waroe and Taman, where an Indian mobile patrol engaged a force of 200 Indonesians.

From Sumatra came word that the bodies of a British brigade major and a woman Red Cross worker, missing from a Padang swimming beach for a week, were found buried in Tabin, a village near Padang. The British said several natives were shot and others were arrested and charged with murder.

FRENCH REPLACE BRITISH FORCES IN

INDO-CHINA CITIES

SAIGON, Dec. 9—(AP) The British were preparing today to withdraw their forces from Indo-China for occupational duties elsewhere, leaving to the French the task of completing restoration of order in their colonial possession.

(Dispatches from Java yesterday said the British had decided to bring in whatever reinforcements are necessary to restore order and guarantee Dutch sovereignty in the East Indies.

(The report followed a conference in Singapore of high British, French and Dutch leaders called by Adm. Lord Louis Mountbatten, supreme commander in southeast Asia, to discuss the situation in both Java and Indo-China.

The British already have turned over virtually all guard duties to the French at Cholon, near Saigon.

The withdrawal is expected to coincide with completion of the movement of disarmed Japanese troops, some of whom already have been started on the march from the Saigon area to Cap St. Jacques, embarkation point for Japan.

Until the French can take over all guard duties, some Japanese garrisons will be maintained to protect French nationals stranded at such points as Dalat Hill station and Nhatrang.

The Japanese may remain several months at the embarkation point because of lack of transportation facilities. As a means of self-protection 10 per cent of the Japanese columns are permitted to retain their arms until they reach Cap St. Jacques.

A new incident emphasizing British desire to withdraw from Indo-China occurred Friday, when an Indian army road convoy was ambushed by snipers and grenade throwers, killing two Indian troops and wounding 10, including two commissioned officers.

A joint British-French statement today reported further progress in occupying towns in southwest China held by rebellious Annamese. The towns included Tavinh, 70 miles south of Saigon, and Omon, some 100 miles from Saigon.

60 Japanese Face Arrest For Prison Camp Atrocities

Commander of Cabanatuan in Philippines Among Those Accused by Mac Arthur

TOKYO, Monday, Dec. 10—(AP) General MacArthur today ordered the arrests of three Japanese navy officers and 57 other Nipponese accused of atrocities against Allied prisoners of war or internees.

Two of the officers ordered picked up, Cmdr. Kunito Katakeyama, attached to the naval department in Tokyo, and Lt. Cmdr. Kenichi Nakagawa, retired, are being court martialed by the Japanese. The government was ordered to deliver them to Sugamo prison on conclusion of their court martial and to provide an English translation of the proceedings.

Navy Warrant Officer Kiroku Horie, repatriated from Wake Island Nov. 1, was the third navy man ordered arrested.

Cabanatuan Head Named

Lt. Col. Banzo Mori, commander of infamous Cabanatuan prison camp in the Philippines from 1942 to 1944, headed the list of 57 accused of atrocities. He is believed to be living at his home on Shikoku island.

The arrest order also named one officer and a civilian alleged to have committed atrocities against United Nations nationals being transported aboard the Japanese prisoner of war ship, the Royoku Maru, between the Philippines and Japan.

The directive included six classifications:

Japanese accused of committing atrocities against United Nations nationals held in prisoner of war or internment camps and hospitals in the following areas of Japan: Fukuoka, Susumie Moritake Tokyo, Hakcoate, Hiroshima, Sendai and Nagoya.

Japanese accused of atrocities against United Nations nationals in Korea.

The interpreter for the Nipponese consul general at Manila.

The Japanese military police interrogator at Fort Santiago, Philippines.

Lt. Col. Banzo Mori, commander of the Cabanatuan prison camp, and Col. Gennosuke Noma, who directed Japanese gendarmerie at Hongkong from Dec., 1941, to Feb., 1945.

In the sixth classification were an army officer and a civilian named Wada accused of committing atrocities on the Royoku Maru.

Headquarters also announced that by order of the U. S. Secretary of War, final action in the case of Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita would be withheld pending U. S. Supreme court disposition of petitions for a writ of habeas corpus and prohibitions. Yamashita three days ago was sentenced by a military tribunal in Manila to hang for permitting atrocities in the Philippines.

deliberate delay to avoid commitment on the farm bill.

The Nippon Times, meanwhile, revived rumors that the Shidehara Cabinet might soon resign in a body, but Kyodo News Agency quoted an unidentified Cabinet member as saying there were "no definite indications of imminent collapse."

AGRARIAN REFORM ORDERED IN JAPAN

MacArthur Ends Absentee Ownership, Permits Tenants to Buy Farms.

TOKYO, Monday, Dec. 10—(AP) General MacArthur today laid down a sweeping program of agrarian reform for Japan to "destroy the economic bondage which has enslaved the Japanese farmer for centuries of feudal oppression."

In a tremendous move calling for abolition of absentee land ownership and making provision for Japan's vast holdings of small tenant farmers to buy their own farms on long terms at low rates, the supreme Allied commander ordered the Japanese government to carry out the order by March 15.

Emancipation For Tenants

It will mean "emancipation," headquarters declared, for tenants in a country where half the entire population is engaged in agriculture and where farmers still cultivate the overworked soil with hand tools.

The average Japanese farm family tills less than three acres, compared with an average of nearly forty-seven acres in the United States, and only 20 per cent are land owners.

The Government also was ordered to provide a program of technical education for farmers, along with an agricultural co-operative movement "free of domination by nonagrarian interests."

The present Cabinet already has proposed land reform legislation but it falls short of the broad Allied terms. In addition to these, headquarters told Japanese authorities to submit any other proposals deemed necessary to guarantee farmers a just share of the national income.

With prospects that only one of three major government reform measures would be enacted before the sitting's end, political observers looked for a one-week extension of the Diet session. The regular session is due to begin December 24.

Rumors On Cabinet Quitting

The House of Representatives is expected to pass and send to the House of Peers within a few days a measure granting women's suffrage. Deliberations are to begin tomorrow in the House of Representatives on a labor union law introduced Saturday.

Final action in the next five days is considered unlikely either on the labor union bill or the controversial farm reform measure providing for expropriation of all land holdings on Honshu Island in excess of twelve acres.

Some political circles charged the House of Representatives with

Tokyo Paper Advocates Abdication of Hirohito

By The Associated Press.

TOKYO, Monday, Dec. 10—Minpo, Tokyo's newest newspaper, created a sensation today by editorially declaring that Emperor Hirohito was responsible for the war and advocating his removal from politics through abdication. The newspaper did not advocate elimination of the Emperor system.

"It is a clear fact that hostilities were started by the Imperial Rescript declaring war," and therefore "His Majesty cannot evade responsibility for bringing about the situation wherein Japan finds herself today," Minpo said.

The tabloid asserted that the government had considered establishing a regency shortly after the surrender to provide for the Emperor's virtual abdication. The matter was allowed to die when the Government later came to believe that "Allied authorities would not be severe on the question of the Emperor," Minpo explained.

Two Yanks Lose Lives As Jap Barracks Burn

Tokyo, Dec. 9 (AP)—Two enlisted men of the United States 24th Division were burned to death as they dashed into a flaming barracks at Zentsuji Shikoku Island, in an attempt to rescue their comrades, the 6th Army disclosed today.

Their heroism proved needless; all 200 men in the barracks had escaped. The fire may have been caused by defective wiring, the Army said.

Diet in Final Session

Japanese Women Expected to Get Vote; Labor Reforms in Debate

TOKYO, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Japanese Diet (Parliament) tomorrow begins the final phase of its extraordinary session, with passage of only one major governmental reform measure considered likely before scheduled adjournment Dec. 14. Political observers consequently predicted today a week's extension of the session.

Expected to pass with only minor amendments is an election reform law granting women's suffrage. Deliberations begin tomorrow on a law legalizing strikes and encouraging labor unionism.

Ship Leaves Yokohama

Yokohama, Dec. 9 (AP)—First in a three-day series of ship departures that will transport 14,841 troops to America, the liner Uruguay left Yokohama for Seattle today with 4,100 enlisted men and 400 officers. The General Randall will leave Monday with 4,028 men and 132 officers, and the Admiral Weigel will leave Tuesday with 4,800 men and 381 officers.

Jap Sorry He Picked Japan Instead Of Staying In U.S.

Uraga, Japan, Dec. 9 (AP)—Tom Satoshi Yoshiyama, who used to be an American but didn't like it, is back in Japan today at his own request—but now he is convinced completely he should have stayed in San Francisco.

In this dreary reception center, crowded with Japanese repatriates from the United States, the Pacific islands and Singapore, he says disgustedly:

"I never realized it was as bad in this country as it is. Please do me a favor and send a message to other Japanese in the United States who are thinking of coming to Japan. Tell them in my name that I urge them to stay where they are."

Born In California

Yoshiyama, who was born in Salinas, Cal., 27 years ago, was within one-half year of being graduated from San Francisco State Teachers College when war broke out. He was put in the Santa Anita camp.

"I renounced my United States citizenship because I felt I was being pushed around," declared Yoshiyama, who had visited Japan three times before the war. "I had always thought I should be on an equal basis with Caucasian fellows. I felt that even though many times before I had run into the color barrier. I could not even use Fleishacker Pool" (a public swimming pool in San Francisco).

"Then when the war came along I felt sure democracy did not apply to me, because of the way I was treated. That hit me hard because I had always considered myself a good American. I had been a Boy Scout, Future Farmer of America, basketball captain—then all of a sudden I was shunned."

"Willing To Co-Operate"

Yoshiyama said he "does not feel bitter toward the United States and still is willing to co-operate."

He renounced his citizenship in December, 1943, and admitted today "I was convinced then that Japan would win the war. I just got mad at America, I guess."

Questioned as to why, as late as December, 1943, he still thought Japan was winning, Yoshiyama made astounding reply:

"Why, 95 per cent of those who came back to Japan on the ship with me still thought Japan had won the war. They thought it was just a bunch of American propaganda that Japan surrendered. They thought we were being brought to Japan because the Japanese had won the war and were compelling the Americans to transport us."

Iwo Jima Convinced Him

As for himself, Yoshiyama said he became convinced Japan had lost the war when he heard of the capture of Iwo Jima. Asked why he realized Japan had lost when the others still thought she was winning, he said: "Hell, I had common sense."

Incidentally, Yoshiyama was one of the bad boys of Tule Lake War Relocation Center and one of the ringleaders of disturbances there. He spent eight months in the stockade as a result. He is busy now telling other Japanese the camp officials "stole food that belonged to the Japanese and were running a black market."

His biggest cause of discontent right now is that his bride of two months is in the United States. So far, only wives of diplomats have been returned to Japan. He complains there is no way to let her know he has arrived safely in Japan, due to the ban on Japanese cables and mail.

America Looks Better . . . Now

He was asked: "Now that you are back in Japan, just how do you feel about America?"

"I admit it is a damn good country," he replied.

"Would you like to go back?"

"Even if I wanted to [illegible] wouldn't let me now," he responded.

"Yes, but what if they would let you?"

Yoshiyama looked a little wistful as he said:

"I think I would go back."

Czechs Get Five-Day Week

Prague, Dec. 9 (AP)—The Government today ordered a nation-wide five-day week for all industries and a general closing of all industries from December 22 to January 1, together with other measures, to preserve Czechoslovakia's dwindling coal supply.

Christmas Mail Chases After Returning GI's

Honolulu, Dec. 9 (AP)—Demobilization in the Pacific is a mailman's nightmare.

At Saipan, for example, 35 per cent of some 2,000 sacks of mail received at the naval base post office must be returned to the United States because the addressees already have gone home.

12 New Destroyers in Hawaii

PEARL HARBOR, Dec. 9 (AP).—Destroyer Squadron 8, composed of twelve newly-commissioned radar "picket" destroyers, is stopping here en route to join the United States 5th Fleet in the Tokyo area. Captain Frederick J. Bell, of Baltimore, commands the squadron.

The Saturna Takes G.I.'s From One Disabled Ship

Awaits Arrival of Second, Now in Tow, at Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Dec. 9 (AP).—The transport Henry Ward Beecher, disabled at sea with 541 American troops aboard, was proceeding to Bermuda in tow tonight and was expected to arrive Tuesday.

Meanwhile, 586 troops from the partly disabled transport George W. McCrary, which docked at St. George yesterday after a twenty-one-day voyage from Antwerp, were being transferred to the relief ship Saturnia. The Saturnia will await the Beecher's arrival and sail for New York with the troops of both transports.

The Beecher was en route from Marseille to Norfolk, Va., when it lost its single propeller 510 miles northeast of Bermuda. The McCrary was beset by boiler-room trouble, light ballast and heavy seas.

BIG THREE LEADERS TO SEEK HARMONY

Conference Aims to End 'Drift' in Relations Among U. S., Britain, Russia.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 — (AP) High diplomatic officials said today that the main problem of the Big Three foreign ministers conference at Moscow this week will be to put an end to "drift" on relations among the United States, Britain and Russia.

Lack of harmony among the three great powers has reached the point in recent weeks where these authorities say it threatens the effectiveness of the United Nations virtually on the eve of that organization's coming into being.

American leaders contend that unless the big powers can go into the United Nations sessions at London next month with good will and understanding as to what their problem and intentions are, the organization could turn out to be little more than a sounding board for their disagreements.

The word "drift" has come into general use among diplomats here to describe a situation in which suspicions harden while a variety of issues brings a volumnious exchange of ideas but little of agreement on a common approach.

In the probable order of their importance as estimated here, the subjects to be taken up at Moscow are:

1—Atomic energy controls under the United Nations.

2—Power relationships in eastern Europe and the Middle East.

3—Joint Allied controls for Japan for such questions as United Nations trusteeship.

4—United Nations trusteeships and similar issues already within the framework of the United Nations.

Byrnes May Attend

Also, there may be some discussion of the kind of representation which the nations should have at the opening United Nations session. Some Washington reports have it that Secretary Byrnes would be willing to attend the January meeting.

Allied diplomats here expressed the hope that Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia also had that in mind. Presumably one of them would not appear unless the others did too.

Byrnes will leave Wednesday, according to State department officials, and while it is not expected that he will get home for Christmas, it is considered certain that the Moscow sessions, opening Saturday, will end in time for all three to be present at London if they decide to attend.

Byrnes, according to informants familiar with his views, has been increasingly concerned in recent weeks over the failure of the Allied powers to make progress toward the organization of peace by joint action. Instead, the world has seen a series of events which pulled the United States and Britain constantly closer together and widened the gulf between them and Soviet Russia.

Stalin Absent from Moscow

There has been speculation that some of this was due to the prolonged absence of Premier Stalin from the topmost councils of the Soviet government. There is some hope there that his expected return from winter vacation in the next few days will help remedy this situation.

Basically, however, the "drift" is being traced back to the breakdown of the London foreign ministers conference where the United States and Britain flatly declined to agree to Russian demands for recognition of the governments of Romania and Bulgaria, for a Japanese control commission like the Allied commission for Germany, and for a Soviet trusteeship over Tripolitania in the central Mediterranean area.

HANDICAP TO ARMY SEEN IN TESTIMONY ON CODE BREAKING

Prober Fears Intelligence Service Will Have Difficult Task in Future.

HEARING TO RESUME

Marshall Will Return to Witness Stand This Morning.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 — (AP) Fear that Pearl Harbor code-breaking testimony may handicap U. S. intelligence for years was expressed tonight by a Democratic member of the joint congressional investigating committee.

As Republican members prepared to resume their questioning of Gen. George C. Marshall tomorrow, Rep. Murphy (D-Pa.) told reporters:

"I regret the necessity of breaking into the open information as to code cracking. It will in my judgment add immeasurably to the difficulty of our armed services and will contribute nothing to the actual inquiry."

Other Nations May Act

Murphy implied that other nations may tighten up their communications techniques to such an extent that American intelligence may be kept in the dark, possibly in some emergency, before counter measures to obtain vital information can be developed.

The details of how the U. S. solved the Japanese diplomatic and military code long before Pearl Harbor and kept it a topflight secret until now were unfolded during last week's questioning of General Marshall, retired chief of staff and newly appointed ambassador to China.

Marshall has been on the witness stand for 12 hours, over a three-day period, describing his role in the tense days preceding the Dec. 7, 1941 Pearl Harbor attack.

The general credited to the code-cracking such notable contributions toward winning the war as the American victories over the Japanese fleet in the Coral sea and at Midway.

Will Be Recalled Today

He will be recalled when sessions resume at 10 a. m. Monday with the expectation of concluding his testimony by nightfall. A special plane is waiting to take him to Chungking as President Truman's special envoy, succeeding Ambassador Patrick J. Hurley, resigned.

Marshall has yet to be questioned by two members of the 10-man committee, Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) and Rep. Keefe (R-Wis.)

Ferguson was taking his turn when the committee recessed Saturday afternoon.

The former Michigan prosecutor indicated an intense interest in Allied plans drawn up by British-American leaders in Washington in June, 1941. He sought to draw from Marshall that the war plans had an automatic effectiveness when some untoward incident occurred in the Pacific.

Marshall said that wasn't so because none of the war plans, based on eventualities, ever were approved by this government "and thus were inoperative."

Ferguson dwelt at length on a British intercept which quoted Admiral Thomas Hart, then Pacific commander, as messaging to Chief of Naval Operations Harold R. Stark on the day of the Pearl Harbor attack to this effect.

That Hart had heard from Singapore that the U. S. had pledged armed aid to the British in event of three or four unspecified eventualities; that he sought advice since he had heard nothing of this officially.

Demand British Message

Ferguson asked committee counsel to seek British government approval to make that message available and public.

Marshall cleared up one question of the investigation in his testimony Saturday: Why officials here, aware the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, that something big was about to happen, didn't call Pearl Harbor on the telephone but used commercial facilities in Army code instead.

Said Marshall:

1. In those days telephone conversations couldn't be "scrambled" to make them unintelligible to eavesdroppers.

2. Any such tipoff to the Japanese would have given them "the overt act" they sought to "prove that they were being forced into war."

To emphasize how telephones could be tapped, Marshall told the committee that even the trans-Atlantic conversations of the late President Roosevelt and former Prime Minister Churchill were intercepted by the Germans. The Nazis also tuned in on conversations between Mr. Roosevelt and U. S. Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, before the fall of that country, he said.

LOAN TO BRITAIN IS LINKED WITH BRETTON WOODS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9. — (AP) The proposed $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain was linked to the Bretton Woods monetary institutions today by Rep. Brent Spence (D-Ky), chairman of the House Banking committee.

"This loan and the Bretton Woods agreements," said Spence in an interview, "are part of the same picture. They both have one purpose—to do away with the practices that made for economic warfare."

Congress last July approved U. S. membership in the international monetary fund and the international bank which were tentatively drawn up by delegates from 44 countries at Bretton Woods, N. H., in July 1944.

Now, President Truman is about to ask Congress to provide a $3,750,000,000 loan to bolster the United Kingdom economically.

An additional credit of $6[illegible],000,000 has been agreed upon by the British and U. S. governments, representing final settlement on Lend-Lease and surplus property.

The $650,000,000 credit is equivalent to selling goods to the British on credit, and does not require congressional approval.

Total credits under the program would be $4,400,000,000.

Both the Bretton Woods agreements and the terms of the loan were introduced simultaneously in the British Parliament on Thursday night and are now being debated.

The British waited until the loan agreement had been signed before taking up Bretton Woods. Their attitude is that without a loan, they would be unable to fulfil their Bretton Woods commitments. But they did not wait for Congress to act on the loan. Such action is not expected until early next year.

"I am pleased that the British appear to be ratifying Bretton Woods right away, without waiting for congressional approval of the loan," Spence said.

Treasury officials say that several countries affiliated with Britain are sure to join the international bank and fund when Britain does. The Treasury is confident that the two agencies will be ratified soon by nations contributing 65 per cent of the capital. The agencies cannot come into existence until that happens.

LEWIS TO TESTIFY ON LABOR BILL AT HEARING IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 — (AP) Capitol Hill got set today for a week of explosive and far-reaching debate on labor legislation.

Some lawmakers said that action taken during the next few days in Congress may set a pattern for the government's handling of labor relations henceforth.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, is scheduled to open the proceedings Monday morning at a House Labor committee hearing.

Union Opposes Truman Plan

He will testify — presumably against—legislation requested by President Truman to set up fact-finding boards to recommend solutions for major industrial disputes. Lewis has not commented directly on Mr. Truman's proposal, but the U.M.W. issued a statement hitting it as a plan to "enslave labor."

Rep. Ramspeck (D-Ga.), acting committee chairman, told a reporter he hopes to conclude hearings during the week, after calling other labor, industry and government officials. He added, however, that some members may try "to filibuster" the measure by continuing hearings indefinitely.

Rep. Hook (D-Mich.) replied in an interview that "we do not want to filibuster, but we must give this matter thorough consideration, because what Congress does on labor legislation this week may determine the future economic relationship between government and labor."

With the Lewis testimony taking the initial spotlight, other congressional labor activities this week include:

1. The leadership has agreed to House consideration Tuesday of a Military committee bill to restrict union political activities and to penalize them for striking in violation of contracts. Chairman May (D-Ky.) announced, however, he will not insist on a vote immediately on the bill "unless the Labor committee stalls and doesn't get its legislation out promptly."

2. The Senate Education and Labor committee opens hearing Wednesday on the President's fact-finding proposal.

3. The House has scheduled action Wednesday, Thursday and Friday on a bill spelling out a government policy of maintaining "a high level of employment, production and purchasing power." It is a substitute for the "full employment" legislation requested last summer by Mr. Truman and passed in modified form by the Senate. A sharp attack on the substitute was made today by the Union for Democratic action in a letter to the President. The group urged him to fight for "full employment principles."

4. The House leadership agreed to a vote later in the week, if possible, on another labor-opposed bill—one by Rep. Hobbs (D-Ala.) to extend provisions of the 1943 "anti-racketeering" act to labor unions.

LABOR SECRETARY MAY MEET UNION IN DETROIT VISIT

Schwellenbach to Make Speech Tonight in Auto City.

AID MAY BE SOUGHT

C. I. O. Heads Plan to Ask Cabinet Member to Enter Wage Dispute.

DETROIT, Dec. 9.—(AP) Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach will make his first official visit to Detroit Monday as the C. I. O. United Auto Workers union renews its all-out 30 per cent wage rate increase drive on the big three of the motor car industry.

Although emphasizing that he will be here "merely to make a speech," C. I. O. union leaders plan to meet with him informally in the hope that he may take a hand in labor disputes that have idled 213,000 automotive employes across the nation.

Renew Wage Demands

As Schwellenbach steps off his train, the powerful U.A.W.-C.I.O. will reiterate its 30 per cent demands on General Motors Corp., the Ford Motor Co., and the Chrysler Corp.

Across table conferences are scheduled between the U.A.W.-C.I.O. and GM, pacing themselves ahead of government intervention, and the union and Ford.

Federal conciliators will shuttle between union leaders and Chrysler officials in an attempt to mend a breach created by a breakdown of negotiations.

The heads of the union will enter the latest General Motors negotiations with an almost certain "confidence vote" from 175,000 striking members to back them.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O.'s GM conference Saturday turned down President Truman's proposal for fact-finding legislation, and unanimously backed the international leadership in demands for a wage increase of no less than 30 per cent.

Result of Vote Awaited

The rank and file began balloting today on these two resolutions, with the outcome a foregone conclusion. Results of the voting are expected by Wednesday, at the latest.

Following last Friday's meeting between GM and the U.A.W.-C.I.O., both sides admitted little progress toward settlement of the 20-day-old strike. They agreed to renew negotiations during a secret meeting last week in Pittsburgh, Pa.

While the General Motors conference holds the spotlight, intense interest will follow a new conference Monday between the U.A.W.-C.I.O. and the Ford Motor Co.

The union has indicated it may have ready an answer to Ford's revolutionary "company security" demand for a $5 per day assessment against the U.A.W.-C.I.O. for every ember participating in an unauthorized walkout.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O., while admitting the value of some form of company security, has indicated it will not agree to a financial levy of the kind suggested.

Both sides have expressed an eagerness to clear the calendar of this issue and proceed to a discussion of wages.

Totally unconfirmed rumors persisted in Detroit over the weekend that Ford is ready to make proposals that will include a guaranteed annual wage.

Chrysler Conference Sought

Federal conciliators will meet with the U.A.W.-C.I.O. Monday to discuss the breakdown of negotiations with the Chrysler Corp. A meeting between the conciliators and the company is scheduled for later in the day.

Although the working contract has expired, the union has announced that there will be no walkout, at least as long as the General Motors strike continues.

President R. J. Thomas of the U.A.W.-C.I.O. told a press conference last week that the union has not forgotten the "baby" of the auto industry, newly-formed Kaiser-Fraser Corp. However, he did not indicate when the union will attempt to negotiate with the firm, not yet in production.

Another sidelight came from the Foremen's Association of America (Independent) which has announced that it will request the Packard Motor Car Co. to open contract negotiations this week.

The National Labor Relations board has ordered the company to bargain with the foreman's union.

Surplus War Plants Worth Over $1,000,000,000 Sold

Washington, Dec. 9 (AP)—Expanding private industry has taken over about $1,000,000,000 worth of surplus war plants and paid the Government 70 cents on the dollar.

More than 300 Government factories have been sold, leased, or are in an "advanced stage of negotiations" with private operators who can provide peacetime jobs, it was learned today.

A report on November's upsurge of disposal activity, soon to be completed, is expected to show a definite break in the long log-jam which held sales to a driblet this summer and fall, a spokesman for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation said.

Campaign Continues

An intense sales and advertising campaign is continuing, he added, while preliminary negotiations are under way for sales of more than 250 additional plants.

RFC estimates that 1,300 plants ultimately will have fallen into its hands for disposal. They cost the Government about $8,000,000,000 under high-cost, emergency building conditions, and represent about one fourth the productive capacity of the country, a vast potential source of private employment.

The 70 per cent recovery was rated excellent by disposal officials, who figure that 30 per cent must be knocked off the original outlay as the difference between the wartime cost of building and the cost of reproducing the plants today.

November Biggest Month

However, this record cannot be sustained for the rest of the plants in RFC's catalogue, since those already sold are the most desirable and readily convertible to civilian goods manufacture.

November evidently was the biggest month to date. The tally is expected to show 40 complete sales and ten or a dozen tentative sales awaiting approval by the Surplus Property Administration and anti-trust division of the Justice Department, in addition to several leases.

"Interim," or test-period, leases are being arranged for companies which do not want to buy until they know how much a plant costs to operate. These leases run for 90 or 180 days, with negotiations to resume before they expire.

As another means of getting plants running and avoiding breaks in employment, RFC said it was willing to write leases on a sliding scale. The rental would start at a low figure, then rise from year to year to correspond with the manufacturer's expected expansion of production.

Although neither the Army nor Navy declared any idle plants surplus until after V-J day, RFC officials now speak warmly of the cooperation given in the disposal job by the armed services.

One result of the co-operation, it was learned, is an agreement under which the Army has relaxed its stranglehold on 55 plants which it set aside previously to be held for future ordnance work if necessary.

RFC has been granted permission to negotiate for the sale of any of these plants, some of which are described as highly desirable. If a sale appears likely, the Army will seek to move its equipment to some other surplus plant less adaptable to civilian use.

SOVIET HONORS 190 OF MURMANSK RUN

21 New Yorkers Are Included Among Naval Heroes Honored for Transport Work

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP)—The Russian Government has bestowed honors on 190 United States naval heroes, including twenty-one New Yorkers, for "outstanding military activities" in transporting war goods to Russia's northern port on the famed "Murmansk run."

The honors, totaling 120 medals and seventy orders of the Soviet Union, were displayed by Charge d'Affaires Nikolai Novikov in a ceremony at the Russian Embassy.

The gold and silver decorations were entrusted to Rear Admiral Thomas B. Inglis, representing the United States Navy Department, for the Navy and Coast Guard officers and men, many of whom are still on assignment in different parts of the world.

USE OF AIRFIELDS ON ISLANDS ASKED

U. S. Proposes Commercial Use at Bases Acquired in Destroyer Deal.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9. — (AP) The United States has proposed commercial use of airfields leased to us by England in Newfoundland, Bermuda and the Caribbean for military purposes, a State department official said tonight.

A reply from London is expected shortly, said the official. It was understood this country looks for a favorable attitude.

The fields were involved in the 1940 swap of 50 over age American destroyers for 99-year leases on air and naval bases.

The United States suggested that the fields be opened to authorized airlines of this country and Great Britain and others approved by both under certain conditions.

Already, the official said, the 99-year bases in Newfoundland are in use on such a basis provisionally together with the Gander military base which was not involved in the destroyer deal. Others elsewhere are available for emergency use commercially.

BROWNELL PROMISES 'CONSTRUCTIVE' PLANS

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—(AP) The Republican party will offer a "constructive" 1946-48 election platform to replace its New Deal "carping," National Chairman Herbert Brownell said in a radio broadcast today.

He hailed the mid-term "platform" of G.O.P. principles just adopted here as a separate, distinct program to be offered by the party "instead of carping about the opposition policies."

Speaking with him were Clarence Buddington Kelland, Arizona National committeeman, and Arthur E. Summerfield, Michigan committeeman.
